Good work is being done in the 21st A. D. New members are being enrolled each week. Regular street meetings are now being held, with excellent results, and a systematic effort is being made to reach and teach the trade unionists of the district. A number of comrades have pledged a stated sum weekly for carrying on this work. The enrolled Social Democratic voters of the district will also be personally visited and as many as possible aroused to activity in the party. All this means hard work and considerable expense and the members of the district are not all doing all that they might for the cause. It is not fair that all the trouble and expense should fall on a few members. All Social Democrats in the district should attend the meetings and take part in the agitation. Readers of The Worker in the district are invited to communicate with or call on the Secretary, E. M. Martin, 817 Columbus avenue, for information regarding party organization.

The 23d A. D. holds a public meeting Friday evening, June 20, at Beckmann's Hall, northwest corner of One Hundred and Forty-second street and Eighth avenue. Algernon Lee will speak on the Coal Strike.

The last meeting of the 28th A. D., to which all readers of The Worker and all registered SoSocial Democratic voters in the district were invited by postal card, was very well attended. After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, addressed to the strangers in the audience, Comrade Bowerman spoke on "The Progress of Socialism in the West." He treated the subject well and his remarks were listened to with profit by all present. A general discussion followed, in which most of the members participated. Comrade Butscher also took part in the debate. Five new members were gained for the district organization. It was decided to hold a similar meeting at the same place, 1497 Avenue A, on Friday evening, June 27. Comrades Guenther and Sussmeyer were elected to the Entertainment Committee for the party picnic, and the following district officers were chosen: Corresponding Secretary, Richard Bock; Financial Secretary, John Kalnig; Treasurer, F. Mareck; Delegate to the General Committee, H. C. Bowerman, Britting, and Bock; to Yorkville Agitation Committee, J. Obrist, Bowerman, Otto Knoll, and Guenther; Auditing Committee, Obrist and Reinecke. Regular meetings are held on the second and fourth Fridays of each month.

All Socialists living in the 34th A. D. are invited to join the party organization, which meets every Friday evening at 380 Willis avenue. The organization is steadily growing and is doing good work; but more members are needed to do the work that ought to be done. At the last meeting the delegates to the Bronx Borough Committee reported their plans, which were endorsed.

The 35th A. D., Br. 2, met at 3509 Third avenue on June 12. The attendance was deplorably small. The regular routine business was gone through, and under the head of new business it was decided to hold an open-air meeting on Saturday, June 28, at One Hundred and Forty-eighth street and Willis avenue. At the next business meeting, June 26, the election of officers for the new term will take place, and it is urgent that all comrades be on the spot and insure the election of efficient and faithful workers. As the organization of the 34th A. D. has reduced the membership of the 35th, Br. 2, from thirty-five to twenty-two, the presence and activity of all the remaining members is indispensable.

The Socialist Educational League will hold its annual ice-cream festival Saturday evening, June 21. Comrades can enjoy themselves after attending the primaries.

The last meeting of the Speakers' Club was well attended. Comrade Bowerman spoke on the Coal Strike from a capitalistic standpoint and an interesting discussion followed. The subject for the following week was chosen—"Issues of the Campaign." Comrade Fielding has promised to be the leading speaker. Each meeting shows an increase in attendance.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville, at its last meeting, appropriated $5 to be used in sending Socialist literature to the Pennsylvania strike field. This is the first party organization in New York City to take such action. Election of officers in the Club resulted as follows: Recording Secretary, E. C. Paul; Financial Secretary, Florence Lee; Treasurer, Geo. Friedl; Sergeant-at-Arms and Literature Agent, Robert Sprotte; Ticket Agent, Pauline Bering; Delegates to Yorkville Agitation Committee, Louise Obrist, Otto Oerter, and Charles Oerter; Auditing Committee, Herman Fölgner, Chas. Friedrichsen, and John Lenz. The club meets every Thursday evening in the W. E. A. Club House, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street. All young Social Democrats in the Yorkville districts are invited to join.

NEWARK JEWELERS.

Jewelers' Union No. 2, of Newark, N. J., which had planned to hold an outing at Cranberry Lake, has decided to cancel the arrangements and find some other place. The reason for this action is that in order to reach Cranberry Lake it is necessary to travel over the Lackawanna road, and the union feels that, in view of President Truesdale's attitude in regard to the miners' strike, it is the duty of workingmen, so far as possible, to avoid paying any profits to this road. Resolutions were adopted severely condemning President Truesdale and extending sympathy to the miners.

FOR THE NATIONAL PROPAGANDA FUND.

An Appeal by the National Committee to All Party Members and Sympathizers.

To the State and Local Organizations of the Socialist Party.

Comrades:—At the meeting of the National Committee in this city on January 24, 25, and 26, 1902, the work that has thus far been accomplished by the national organization and the means of continuing the same were taken under advisement, and after due consideration, we decided to issue this appeal to the state and local organizations and to all of the comrades of our party for such amounts as each may be able to contribute as donations to a National Propaganda Fund.

The purposes of this fund are to enable us to continue the great and far-reaching task already begun of giving the greatest possible degree of general publicity to the aims and methods of the Socialist Party; to extend the influence of our party as a vital political factor, especially in the various economic organizations of the working class; to be the means of communicating advice to and co-operating with comrades in their efforts to agitate, organize, and educate the proletariat; and to assist the local and state organizations and the Socialist press in general in extending the scope of their respective activities.

Official records show that 470,000 pieces of printed supplies, especially intended for party organization, have been used throughout the country since the Unity Convention designed by and supplied through the agency of the National Committee. The National Secretary's report, showing an increase of membership in good standing of 50 per cent. since the Unity Convention, is eloquent evidence of the splendid achievements of our comrades in the townships, cities, counties, states, and territories.

During the past six months the demands of all kinds upon your National Committee from every section of the country have been far beyond our resources, and we have been repeatedly handicapped by lack of funds. At this writing, while the business of the party is increasing heavily from day to day, our financial receipts are not sufficient to enable us to meet the most important requirements of the party work, and it is urgently necessary that the comrades render immediate financial aid to the national organization.

As a means to this end we again call the attention of the comrades to the National Propaganda Fund. Donations to this fund should be sent to the National Secretary, and will be acknowledged weekly in the Socialist press.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

Comrades Bock and Mayes presided in the last meeting of the General Committee of Local New York. Twenty-six new members were admitted to the party.

On roll-call, the following subdivisions were shown to be absent: 7th and 9th; 11th; 12th; 13th; 14th; 19th; 20th; 26th, Bohemian; Annexed IDs-tricts. These districts should see to it that their delegates attend, as the work of the districts suffers greatly when they are not kept in communication with the whole Local by regular attendance at the meetings of the General Committee.

The 4th A. D. was reported in good condition, but greatly in need of Jewish speakers. Delegate Josephson stated that it was easy to get interested audiences among the Jewish workingmen of the District, but that most of the speakers in that language refused to helped in the work. He asked that the Executive Committee use its influence to secure Jewish speakers; granted.

The 6th and 10th A. D. reported having taken up a collection to help in the work of agitation in the Pennsylvania strike field. By instruction of the District, Delegate Slobodin moved that the Local inquire of the National Committee why that body was not doing more for agitation in Pennsylvania at this favorable opportunity and urge that every effort be made to that end—and especially that Polish speakers and literature be provided; carried.

The 16th A. D. reported renting a hall and arranging for more vigorous work in the future.

The 18th and 20th A. D. reported that outdoor meetings had been started and would be kept up steadily.

The 21st A. D. is holding successful outdoor meetings and gaining new members.

The 24th A. D., Branch 2, is working well; holding outdoor meetings, selling The Worker, distributing large numbers of leaflets, and steadily gaining in membership.

The 28th A. D. reported holding a discussion meeting on Friday night; to which all enrolled Social Democratic voters in the district were invited by postal card. Comrades Bowerman and Butscher led the discussion, which was very interesting, and five new members were gained.

The 30th A. D. is also adding to its membership and will hold discussion meetings.

The 35th A. D., Branch 2, reported that a good start has been made for outdoor agitation in the Bronx.

On the report of the Executive Committee, steps were taken to get more speakers to work for the outdoor summer campaign.

On the request of Local Kings County that Local New York join in the establishment of an Executive Committee for the whole of Greater New York, the recommendation of the Executive Committee was concurred in, to request Local Kings County first to submit the proposition to a general vote of its own members, with the assurance that, if carried there, the matter would at once be submitted to general vote in Local New York.

The rules and regulations for primaries and conventions as outlined by the Organizer were, with some small amendments, concurred in.

LOCAL KINGS COUNTY.

At last Saturday's meeting of the County Committee, Comrade Feitner presiding, the reply of the Executive Committee of Local New York to the proposition to form a committee for the whole city was read, and it was decided to postpone action in the matter till after election.

The General Organizer's call for primaries was endorsed and the district organizers instructed to arrange all details in regard to the primaries to choose delegates to county, congressional, senatorial, and assembly district conventions.

Five applicants were admitted to membership.

Comrade Holzer gave notice of a motion to amend the constitution by abolishing the separate office of Corresponding Secretary.

It was reported that a speakers' club had been formed and all members desiring to assist the party by public speaking should communicate with General Organizer Atkinson.

The following subdivisions were absent: 1st, 2d, and 3d A. D.; 15th; 18th; 20th, Br. 2; 21st, Br. 1 and 2.

CHASE'S TOUR.

Comrade Chase reports to the National Secretary as follows for the week ending June 6:

During the past week I have addressed meetings in Cape Girardeau, Dexter, Poplar Bluff, De Soto, and St. Louis, Mo.

All of these meetings were more successful in the way of attendance than in any week during my trip in Missouri. This is particularly gratifying, because of the fact that in Southeastern Missouri there has been a serious lack of organization among the working class and wages are at a low standard. I found wages and condition of the working class there worse than in any other part of Missouri. The meetings there, in consequence, did much good at this time, to wake them up to their conditions and to the necessity of organization, industrially and politically.

In Cape Girardeau, I spoke in the court house for the Federal Labor Union, and the following night I spoke for the Socialists in the same place. Nearly every man who attended the first meeting came also to the second, to receive a good dose of Socialism. The two meetings there will undoubtedly do a deal of good for our local. In Dexter we had a large meeting in the open air under the auspices of the Federal Labor Union, and at the close of the meeting there were many who expressed their eagerness to join the union and to look into the subject of Socialism.

I spent all of the following day in the place, and the comrades told me that there was great talk going on in the shops about the meeting, and a desire among the workers to hear more about unionism and Socialism.

The meeting in Poplar Bluff, under the auspices of the local of the Socialist Party and the Labor Union, was interesting because of the fact that the union joined hands with the Socialist organization in the arrangements for the meeting. It was significant, as well as interesting, for the reason that it illustrates the feasibility of our policy in working hand in hand as sister organizations.

The meetings in St. Louis were under the auspices of the Machinists' Union Friday night and the Bakers' Union, Saturday. At the Bakers' Union, which was an open mass meeting, twenty or more new members were secured as a result of the meeting. About 90 per cent. of this union are Socialists.

At De Soto there was a large audience of workingmen and the place is ripe for the organization of a local of our party. Several good union men came to me after the meeting and said they wanted to organize a local of the party. I have made arrangements to have an organizer go there and get them into shape in the near future.

The places in which I speak in the next few days are Carthage, Springfield, Higginsville, Sedalia, St. Joseph, and Stanberry, Mo. I will reach Omaha, Neb., on Sunday, June 15. From this point begins the long trip through to the Pacific Coast.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

At the meeting of the State Committee last Monday evening a charter was granted to Local Coudersport, which starts with twenty-fivfie members. Communications were also received from Pittston, New Brighton, and Red Hill, asking information as to how to start locals.

Comrade Collins reported good meetings at Coudersport, Austin, and Black Lick. At Williamsport he found the comrades active; he addressed the Machinists' and Teamsters' Unions here and spoke also from the Court House steps.

Preparations being made for county conventions in Montgomery and Lycoming counties, Luzerne convention will be held at Wilkes Barre, June 23. Comrade Collins was directed to attend and to work in that county for a week or more, with the advice of the local comrades.

The Connelsville comrades report that the landlords are class-conscious, and will not rent halls for Socialist meetings; but this does not discourage them or prevent them from taking in new members.

Rapid growth of the membership is reported in Erie, Wilkes Barre, Austin, Black Lick, Cokeville, Spring Forge, Royersford, and Reading.

Many inquiries were received in reference to the filing of nomination papers for local candidates, and the law pertaining to the same. It was decided to print the following in the party press as a reply to all such:

FILING NOMINATIONS.

Nomination papers for Congressmen, Judges, Senators, and Representatives to the Legislature must be filed with the Secretary of State in Harrisburg at least thirty-five days before the election; papers may be mailed to the Secretary's office.

Nomination papers for all city and county candidates (except Judges) must be filed in the office of the County Commissioners at least twenty-one days before the election.

Nomination papers for township and borough candidates must be filed in the office of the County Commissioners at least fifteen days before election.

The number of signers required on all nomination papers (except those for state officers) is 2 per cent. of the largest vote for any officer elected at the last preceding election in the electoral district or division for which the nomination papers are designed to be made.

Each elector signing a nomination paper shall add to his signature his place of residence and occupation.

There is an affidavit form on each nomination paper; this must be signed by five persons who have signed that paper, and they must take affidavit to it before a notary public or other civil officer.

Permit no (") ditto marks on the paper, as they will invalidate the paper; everything must be written out in full.

If papers are mailed to Secretary of State or County Commissioners, it is advisable to register the letter.

Do not wait for the last day to file papers; get them in as early as possible.

THE AGITATION FUND.

Contributions for the purpose of sending Socialist speakers and distributing Socialist literature in the strike field have been received as follows: Previously acknowledged, $39.20; Warren Atkinson, Brooklyn, $1; Eldeston comrades, $2; Mr. Barclay, Newport News, Va., $1; Max Schneider, Burmont, $2; Jul. Weber, $1; And. Levice, Footdale, $4.20; F. Mulac, Vanderbilt, 50 cents; S. Cooke, Brooklyn, $10; 31st and 33d Ward Club, Philadelphia, $3; Friend, 50 cents; M. H. Lonengston, Boston, $2; total, $66.40. Send contributions to J. Zeltman, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
State Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

MAINE NOTES.

Comrade Roland T. Patten of Skowhegan addressed the Madison comrades Friday evening, June 13.

Comrade D. A. White of Saco will speak in Bath, Saturday evening, June 21.

Since writing last, the following dates for Comrade Carey have been assigned and accepted: Berwick, July 22; Springvale, 23; Portland, 24; Lewiston, 25; Dexter, 26; Dover, 28; and Bridgewater, 29.

Mass meetings will be held in Portland at City Hall, Sept. 5, with Carey and MacCartney as the principal speakers, and open-air rally Sept. 6 on Monument Square, with Carey and Comrade D. A. White as speakers.

Comrade Wilshire has placed ten dates in August at the disposal of the Knox County comrades, half of which are already taken.

The writer was in Skowhegan two weeks ago, and from a careful survey of the field would estimate the chances decidedly more than even that the Socialists elect their candidate to the state legislature from that town.

For the first time on record the Republican ranks are split into factions, and partizan feeling runs high. The comrades realize the opportunity thus opened, and will push their advantage to its full extent. Truly the pot is beginning to boil. F. E. I.

I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia as long as I can remember. I had no appetite, and the little I ate distressed me terribly. All day long I would feel sleepy and had no ambition to do anything. Since taking Ripans Tabules I feel decidedly better. In the morning I am fresh and sound and my appetite has improved wonderfully.

WORKMEN'S
Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 15 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruptions. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00, respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member and the wives and unmarried daughters between 18 and 45 years may be admitted to the third class in payment of an initiation fee of ... Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members ... 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. ... at large are not accepted, but all ... use have to join existing branches. In ... and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

AMERICA'S NEW PRECEDENT.

BY HORACE TRAUBEL.

President Roosevelt thinks that our history with Cuba "establishes a new precedent." So it does. But we have been the first to offend against our own precedent. We came up against our own precedent in the Philippines and flunked. Mingling the glory and the shame, mixing the moral pro and con, we have no basis for self-glorification. We invited ourselves to a task. We then forgot our engagement.

America is not geographical area. America is not an army or navy. America is not even the extension of trade. America is a dream. America is an ideal struggling for practical utterance. America is a new advance of the spirit. America is achieved in so far as its dream is fulfilled. America may have its greatest successes under some other name. That race which best fulfills democracy is America. If America defaults in the test America is dead. It may subscribe to what creed it chooses. The spirit is departed. No victory can be victory if it is won only in the interest of the letter of our compact. Such victories are defeats and shames.

We have but one precedent. That precedent is freedom. We honor our precedent in the proportion that we subserve the requisites of the free life. It is nothing to have added one more example of rulership to the ancient list. It is everything to have effected departures towards the open where liberty may be granted its expanding opportunities. And the opportunities of liberty are not of plunder but of life.

Two countries in especial put on airs at the Hague Conference. These countries were the two grandees of the Anglo-Saxon alliance. The first offenders against the articles of the conference were these moral upstarts. If anything adds to the emphasis of crime it is the apostasy of the hypocrite. Our worst offense is not in conquest. Our worst offense is in hypocrisy. It is consistent enough for the old regimes to go about the earth seeking lands they may devour. But it is in violation of all our history and our ideals for us to enter ourselves for the race of the robber.

America does not make a splendid robber. As robber she is clumsy, not picturesque. America as robber is tawdry and without assurance. She has the look of guilt. That is both her mockery and her salvation. As long as America confesses judgment by this realizing suspicion of guilt America may retrieve her moral disasters. What amount of material glory can atone for a spiritual default? America as magnate does not excite respect. But America as the right and left wings of democracy could enjoy the leadership of states and would transfigure the tyrannies of the world.

America should not be rulership. America should be renunciation. America should not exist by virtue of a tyranny but by the sufferance of freedom. That one virtue which all governments so far existing have missed should be the one prerogative which America should assume. America should not discover and enact precedents. America should be a precedent. America should not receive sanction by one act of gracious fatherhood. America should be that fatherhood in symbol and act.

COAL STRIKE.

average house. The rooms have low ceilings and the windows are small, often with broken panes. These shanties look more like overgrown rabbit hutches than the residences of human beings. In the several camps I have visited some of the houses show up better than others. In Nanticoke, where I was told many of the miners own their own homes, the houses made quite a brave appearance. In Luzerne, a double row of small houses called Paynes Patch defied adequate description for decrepitude and ugliness. For these the miners paid $7.50 a month, with coal thrown in—about a ton a month.

Work and Wages.

ver one goes the same story ... es, excessive docking, un... t is heard until it be... and monotonous. One ... t the next place vis... hange, some im... ry the madden... es of injustice. ... r comes; the last ... plements the one be... ces the dismal series more ... It causes a man to wonder how these people can retain their cheerfulness, for they do. It is as well for their masters perhaps that they can still smile through it all. And I am told I have not seen the worst yet!

It is difficult to strike an average of the wages received. This varies in the different localities, according to the number of shifts worked and the price paid per car. At Ashley I was told the miners averaged $20 every two weeks; at Sugar Notch $30 a month; at Nanticoke $25 a month, and at Luzerne the average would hardly reach $30 a month. House rent ranges in these places four places from $3.50 to $8 a month, according to the size of the house. Coal for which the miner receives $1.05 a car of three tons costs him for home use $2 to $3.50 a ton delivered by the company. This is not good coal either, the docked or cast off coal called "honey" being supplied to the miners. The price of coal has also been increased since the 1900 strike.

An ordinary shift of nine or ten hours is supposed to consist of six cars on the average. These cars hold three tons at some places, which means four with "topping." When the company claims a car holds one and a half tons, means two and a half and three with topping. While a miner and laborer may be in the mine all the from six to ten hours, a full shift cars is rarely had. More often any three or four cars are loaded. The laborer receives 35 and 40 cents a car, as the rule may be, while the miner receiving the remaining two-thirds pays all expenses of the two. The miner may sometimes work only six hours, for when he has enough coal on hand for the laborer to fill the shift, he can go home.

When the miner demands eight hours he does so more especially for the laborers and the other men and boys paid by the day than for himself. He argues that with proper regulation the same number of cars can be supplied as now, and if not, then more men can get employment to facilitate operation. It appears to be true that the laborer frequently comes out ahead of the miner, because of the expense the latter incurs, though this is not the rule. Conversing with different sorts of workmen, I find the story of an organization of laborers separate from the miners is a canard.

The demand for coal to be weighed is the most important one. The mine cars are supposed to hold by cubic feet measurement, from one and a half to three tons, according to size of car and height of vein. But they always hold much more. In order to save himself from being docked when the car reaches the top, the miner heaps up "topping," which will mean half a ton more. If there is a rough road the car may reach the outside without the "topping"—knocked off on the journey. This will mean perhaps a whole car, or a half, docked by the company for "light weight."

Docking for slate is the most irritating grievance. How much the miner loses by this is incalculable. At some places, 5 per cent. is allowed the operator for dirty coal, but it reaches 10 per cent. more often. Miners calculate upon losing at least five cars a month through this. There is no system of judging "dirty" cars, docking being done by guesswork. Sometimes one car is selected and unloaded and for every one hundred pounds of dirt the miner is laid off a day. It is impossible to keep all the dirt out of the loaded cars. At Luzerne before the strike two years ago, at one mine the average docking per month amounted to 15 and 16 per cent. At another it amounted to five cars a month. At both places it is less than half that now. When a man is known to have a "clean" place, his checks are lost from time to time in a mysterious way and he loses pay for the cars. The miners demand tonnage weight and checkweighmen on the tipples.

Child Labor.

There are reported to be fewer boys at work in the breakers now than two years ago, but the stranger would not think so. Nearly every boy appears to be either a door boy, a breaker boy or something else around the mine. The age limit is 12, but it is admitted on all sides that boys much younger than that, ten, nine and sometimes eight years old, are employed. I saw several who appeared hardly big enough to be able to carry their dinner pails. They are thin little fellows, and they seem to be enjoying their vacation. Their wages run from 50 cents a day up to $1.10 cents, according to class of work. This means a day of ten hours—less than that (which often occurs) reduces their wages in proportion. There is a farcical attempt to educate them at night school, farcical because the boys are not able to imbibe education after working all day. Few of them are therefore able to read and write very much.

The parents, through necessity, falsify their boys' ages in order to have them at work. I asked one man why he allowed his children to go to work so young? (ten years).

"When a man has five children and only gets 80 cents to $1.25 a day, how can he help it?"

I didn't know and I said so.

The day workmen paid by the day—truckmen, pumpmen, etc.—receive more than the miners, sometimes $60 a month, because they usually work every day. But they have their grievances also, of which more later.

The culm piles surrounding the mines are veritable mountains, and at a close distance, obscure the foliage covered hills lying beyond. These piles of cast off coal represent unpaid labor of the miners ever since the mines opened. This inferior coal, for which the miner was docked, is used to fire the boilers at the collieries, and is the bane of the firemen who are forced to use it. But it is frequently run through the washers by the operators and sold in the Eastern markets as buckwheat and similar grades, so the operator makes a profit out of what cost him nothing. I saw one culm pile from which coal for this purpose had been taken daily for two years at the bare labor cost of running it through the washeries.

Company stores no longer exist at many collieries. Where they do, there is no absolute rule compelling employees to trade in them, but the man who does is favored accordingly. The prices are usually 10 per cent. higher than in other stores. The one place where I learned that dealing in the company store was compulsory was at the Chauncey mine near Nanticoke—run by an individual operator, who is in turn run by the railroad companies.

At Nanticoke conditions seemed better than anywhere else I have been. This is attributed to the fact that the miners here were the first to organize in the anthracite region after years of disorganization. A five months' strike in 1899, which ended successfully in an increase of wages, started the organizing boom in the region which resulted in the 1900 strike. The dockage system in Nanticoke was reported in good shape, there being checkweighmen on the tipple protecting the men's interests. But the union has bettered conditions, more or less, everywhere, bad as they are now.

A Sign of Progress.

The majority of those on strike are non-English speaking, Poles, Hungarians, Austrians, Slavs and Italians predominating. It is admitted that these constitute the most determined among the strikers. They say they will never yield. And these are the men, and the sons of men, that came into the region durinfi the last thirty years and worked for lower wages than those already here. They have progressed and demand more now—a sign that the working class should be glad to recognize.

The support of the Wilkes Barre newspapers is of the usual sort, half hearted and insincere. They are afraid to take the other side openly, excepting the "Leader," a Democratic paper, which was dying, like its party, when it was revived, report says, by the receipt of 60 tons of coal from a local coal company. Now it is the special organ of the mine owners against the strikers.

The miners receive the Socialists cordially, and are eager to hear our speakers and read our literature. Of both these we have not near sufficient in the field. I have had to go out twice without any papers, and as there is plenty of opportunity for distributing them, we should take advantage of it. Whatever the miners may do at the ballot box in November they will listen to and read about Socialism now, and that is what we are after. The State Committee can make good use of every cent received, and while the strike is on and we can reach this 150,000 workmen so easily, for the sake of the cause do not let the Socialists in the field wander forth empty handed.

WILLIAM MAILLY.

THE MINERS' GRIEVANCES.

False Weighing and Docking the Chief One.

Systematic Frauds by "Operators"—Relations of Miners and Laborers—Reports of Friction Unfounded.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., June 12.—The miners have many grievances, so many that it is somewhat difficult for an outsider to settle upon which is the principal one, but the odds seem to be in favor of the demand to have coal weighed. This is a mighty grievance and means much in profits to the mine-owners and in wages to the miners. Before the strike coal was paid for by the car, which was usually supposed to hold three tons, but which actually held much more. The car was paid for acoording to the thickness of the vein worked in, but the dockage system practised by the o perators made the amount paid for much less than the amount really mined.

The Dockage System.

This dockage system consists of taking off the miners' car one-quarter, or sometimes one-half, either for supposed light loading or for slate and dirt in the coal. Through this a miner would lose from four to as high as twelve cars a month, the "operators" having the sole power to judge of weight and dirt, and thus receiving for nothing the coal docked from the miners.

The miners, in addition to the weighing of coal, desire the right to have a check-weighman at each mine, who will be paid by themselves and will protect them from unjust docking and false weighing. It can be imagined how bitterly the "operators" oppose the introduction of a system that would so materially affect their profits.

Miners and Laborers.

The report spread broadcast throughout the country that the mine helpers or laborers were organizing against the miners seem to have been a false one, or else the effort instigated by the mine-owners, proved abortive. It is not likely that such a movement would succeed, if, indeed, it would ever reach proportions that would make success or failure a question. The fact is that the helpers and miners are members of the same organization and there seems to be no friction of any sort between them.

The laborer system, however, is one that exists in coal mines all over the country and for years its abolition or re-adjustment has been a vexed one. It varies in detail according to the conditions in vogue in each mine or locality.

In this, the upper anthracite region, the laborer is employed by a miner and they work a chamber together. The laborer receives one-third of each car loaded, the other two-thirds going to the miner. If, therefore, the miner receives $1.05 a car (of three tons) the laborer receives as his share 35 cents, which at a full shift with five or six cars to the turn, would bring the laborer $2.10 or $2.45 a day. But the turn rarely reaches that amount, for often only three or four cars are loaded in a day.

In return for his wage the laborer loads the coal into the cars; the miner mines it, drills the holes, fires the shots, sets the timbers, and provides the skill and experience. The miner also pays for the powder, oil, lamp-wicking, shovels, picks, machines, tool sharpening, and all other expenses. These expenses go on, no matter how many cars are loaded, and so it frequently happens that when the turn runs slow, the laborers come out ahead of the miners on pay day. In the event that the cars are docked by the mine-owners the miner bears the brunt of the docking, which amounts sometimes to a considerable sum.

Hours of Labor.

The charge against the miners that they only work from four to six hours a day, while their laborers work ten, holds good only when the miners have an "easy" place—that is to say, one where the coal can be got out easier than in others. These places are much rarer than they used to be, and that miner is accounted fortunate who can get out under eight or nine hours. The demand for eight hours will mostly affect the workmen around the mine, who are paid by the day and who are also members of the miners' union, as well as the miners' laborers. This will enable the latter to do the same amount of work in less time underground.

In many mines in this locality laborers are not employed by the miners where the height or thickness of the coal permits.

When, two years ago, the miners succeeded in securing a ten-cent increase, the laborers received it also. The latter are usually new-comers, who serve their apprenticeship as laborers and eventually become miners themselves. The miners are not contrac... in the sense of the word that they make contracts with the operator to load a certain amount of coal in a given time. The miner simply takes what cars are given him in the course of a day, the laborer receiving his share, whatever that day may bring. I learned of one case of an old miner who had $11 left after paying his laborer and all expenses, for two weeks' work—and this was nothing unusual.

THE MINE FIREMEN.

Secretary Mullahy Gives a Statement of Their Reasons for Striking.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., June 16.—Secretary-Treasurer J. F. Mullahy of the stationery firemen unions in the anthracite field speaks as follows regarding the conditions of these workmen:

"That the firemen are justified in striking for an eight-hour day is plainly proven by considering the hardships they have to endure. A fireman works twelve hours every day in the year, while his work is proportioned according to the number of boilers he is tending, yet in no case has he less boilers than should rightfully require the attention of two men.

"They are obliged to use culm for fuel and this culm has lain from five to twenty years, all the life is burnt out of it, and this makes a great difference to the firemen who have to use it. The work itself is very trying. The temperature of a fireroom in the summer is 180 degrees, and in the winter is seldom under 100 degrees, which, taken in connection with the heat of the fires makes the work very exhausting. The majority of the boilers are fitted with steam blowers, which are turned on full blast and are therefore deafening and disagreeable.

"Firemen receive on an average of 14 2-3 cents an hour, which is less than many unskilled laborers receive.

"In many cases the firemen are unable to eat from breakfast time until late in the afternoon, because in the large firerooms there are from eighteen to twenty-seven boilers for two men, and they cannot draw their fires until noon, when it requires two hours to do that. They seldom get fifteen minutes to eat their lunch.

"It should be remembered that the fireman assumes the responsibility for the lives of all those working in and around the colliery and if he should, through overwork or any other cause, neglect his duty, the results might be disastrous. For this reason alone, we should have an eight-hour day and we're going to have it."

Taken in connection with the stories published about the easy jobs and big wages of the firemen around the mines, the foregoing statement is of interest, as illustrative of what in the capitalists' opinion constitutes an "easy job"—when the workman has the benefit of it.

MOTHER JONES IN VIRGINIA.

Mother Jones is performing valiant service for the cause of unionism in the Virginia mining districts. The operators in the Virginias are the most brutal exploiters of their kind to be found anywhere. They look upon miners as being no better than slaves or dogs, and any person who attempts to organize them is threatened with imprisonment or death. Recently the scoundrelly operators and their hirelings threatened Mother Jones because of her great success in organizing the men. She called a meeting and before a tremendous audience denounced the bosses and their infamous methods, declaring that she had arranged matters in such a way that if she was killed two prominent operators would accompany her to the great beyond. Instead of frightening her, the threats only served to increase the ardor of Mother Jones, and it is largely due to her determination and pluck that nearly twenty thousand miners were brought out on strike in districts where such industrial independence has been unknown.—Cleveland Citizen.

Mother Jones is a Socialist and a trade unionist in every fibre, and she is not afraid to say exactly what she thinks and feels. The miners have learned to respect and love her and, although it is hard work to introduce new ideas of freedom and manhood among workers who have been systematically oppressed and deceived for so many years, her work in Virginia and West Virginia is last beginning to bear fruit.

FATHER HAGERTY.

The Cleveland "Citizen" gives the following account of Father Hagerty, the Catholic priest who, like Father McGrady, of Bellevue, Ky., is agitating for revolutionary Socialism:

"Father Hagerty, the Catholic priest who has given up his pulpit to take the platform to advocate Socialism, has already become a great favorite with the working people of the West and is being deluged with invitations to speak. He first became interested in labor affairs about 1896, when he gave up his charge in Chicago and went to Cleburne, Tex., where he revived the spirit of trade unionism among railway and other workers, and it was largely through his persistent efforts that the Texas State Federation of Labor was formed. Father Hagerty has likewise done some organizing in New Mexico, and, as he masters eight languages, he spends his spare moments in translating the best things on Socialism from the English, German, and French into Spanish for the Mexican working people. Father Hagerty, besides being a natural orator, is a scientist and possesses a wide knowledge of medicine. He is 37 years of age."

Father Hagerty took a prominent part in the work for Socialism at the recent convention of the Western Labor Union in Denver. We learn from the Denver "Post" that he is still in the church.

PLAN TO BEAT CAREY.

Republican Politicians of Haverhill Detail Democrat to "Fix" List of Voters.

The Haverhill politicians are trying hard to prevent Carey's re-election in November. The Massachusetts law puts it practically in the power of the Assessors to fix the polling lists and so to disfranchise voters by "neglecting" to put their names on the list.

The Assistant Assessor for Ward Five, Carey's district, is Charles H. Morrill, a Socialist. Although no charge of partiality has been made against him, the Board of Assessors, a majority of whose members are Republicans, has detailed a Democrat to "assist" him, taking a part of the work in the ward completely out of the hands of the official to whom the voters of the ward entrusted it.

A vigorous protest has been made against this arbitrary action by the voters. About a hundred signed a written protest which has been presented to the Board; but, as a local daily says, the list of signers "contains but a small number of the TAXPAYERS of the ward and its effect is slight." In the eyes of old-party politicians, only tax-payers—and tax-dodgers—are entitled to consideration.

MISSOURI CONVENTION.

Full State Ticket Nominated—New Headquarters at Sedalia—Resolutions Inviting Farmers Adopted.

The Missouri state convention of the Socialist Party at Springfield was in every way a success. Thirteen points were represented, as follows: Liberal, Sedalia, Kansas City, St. Louis, Springfield, Aurora, Galena, Joplin, Bevier, Greenfield, Monett, West Plains, and Poplar Bluff.

Geo. H. Turner of Kansas City and Caleb Lipscomb of Liberal presided, with H. Ballard Dunn of St. Louis as Secretary.

The Platform Committee made a report in line with the general policy of the party in Missouri, which is to use the national platform with local variations. The platform as thus reported was adopted, with an additional declaration, demanding the election of Labor Commissioner, Factory and Mining Inspector by direct vote, instead of by appointment.

Among the other resolutions adopted was the following:

"Whereas, The development of capitalism has practically reduced the farmers of this country to the condition of the wage working class; and

"Whereas, The speculation and investments by the larger capitalists directly and indirectly in farm lands and improved machinery renders the farmers' position more and more precarious; and

"Whereas, The conditions tend to bring the farmers to the same state of economic dependence occupied by the warge working class; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we call upon the farmers of this state to study the labor question and ally themselves with the wage workers under the banner of the Socialist Party."

"Whereas, The experience of organized labor in the past ten years demonstrates beyond doubt that the present state militia is nothing but the instrument of the capitalist class to protect and avance its interest and also to crush organized labor in all its efforts for better conditions; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we demand the disbandment of the present state militia and especially call upon all organized labor in the state of Missouri to join with the Socialist Party in its efforts to abolish the militia system."

E. Val Putnam resigning the position of State Secretary, J. H. Rathbun of Sedalia was chosen in his place, with E. T. Behrens, John O. Fisher, F. P. Hunefelt, James Knuas, and M. J. McCabe as members of the Local Quorum.

The state ticket was nominated as follows:

For Judges of the Supreme Court—J. W. Gibbens, James A. Slanker, and F. P. O'Hare.

For Railroad and aWrehouse Commissioners—W. I. Phifer and Pearl Thompson.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Dr. A. H. Hull.

For Judge of the Court of Appeals, Eastern District—George Bullock.

Two record-breaking mass meetings were held, one under the auspices of the Central Labor Council in the opera house and the other at the ball park.

"WHO'S PAYIN' FOR IT ALL?"

Most every day we hear about some rich chap with a daughter
Or mebby an ambitious wife to take across the water;
He buys a yacht that costs a lot and hires crews and cooks
And loads his women folks with gems supposed to help their looks,
And mebby he may think the price the splurge'll cost is small,
But still I can't help wonderin' who's payin' for it all.

The man who heads the steamship trust or some big corporation
Has planned to blow a million in to see the coronation.
He'll be away all summer long and travel like a king,
While I'll be workin' on the crops I planted in the spring;
He'll rent a castle from some lord
that's crowded to the wall,
And I can't keep from wonderin'
who's payin' for it all.

The man whose mines are closed to bring the miners to submission
Will go on buyin' everything for which his heart keeps wishin';
He'll take his women folks to court,
and, Moses, how they'll blaze
With diamonds strung across their shapes in forty-seven ways!
They're goin' in their costly yachts;
they won't come back till fall,
And I can't keep away the thought,
"Who's payin' for it all?"

LAW AND ORDER IN PUERTO RICO.

Trade Union and Socialist Meetings Attacked by Riotous Mob—Authorities Connive at Persecution.

The trade unions and Socialist organizations of Puerto Rico are being severely persecuted by the agents of the capitalists who control the island. Press dispatches—mostly suppressed or garbled by the American papers—state that numerous labor meetings have been broken up by riotous Republican mobs, and the Federacion Libre, the central labor organization of Puerto Rico, has cabled to President Gompers of the A. F. of L. in these words: "More than six assaults have been made upon Federationists within a week, seriously wounding unprotected men. Protest to President Roosevelt."

The United States authorities have utterly failed to give the labor organizations protection against mob violence.

GOOD VOTE CAST IN WATERTOWN.

Workingman on Social Democratic Ticket Polls 27 Per Cent. of Votes—Old Parties Combined.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 12.—A city election was held here Monday, to choose a Water Commissioner for a term of five years. John C. Knowlton, the old incumbent, ran for re-election, supported by Republicans and Democrats alike. Against him was the candidate of the Social Democratic Party, Charles Byron, President of the Trades Assembly, an iron-molder in the foundry of the New York Air Brake Company.

Mr. Knowlton is a very good man, as capitalists go. But he is a capitalist and stands for capitalism, and on that basis the campaign was carried on. Comrade Byron stood clearly for uncompromising Socialism and the working class.

Many workingmen did not have a chance to vote, as the polls were open only from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. and not every workingman can afford to risk his job by taking time off on Election Day—especially if it is suspected that that he votes for his own class.

When the ballots were counted, both sides were surprised to learn that we had polled no less than 27 per cent. of the votes—Knowlton having 805 and Byron 293.

The local "Daily Times" complains bitterly of our action in nominating a candidate against such a "good man" as Mr. Knowlton, which, it declares, was "an uncalled-for thing," as "Mr. Knowlton has always been the best friend the workingmen have had in this town." The "Times" cannot understand how it is that three hundred workingmen in the city should choose to have one of their class rather than a friend of their class to administer their public affairs.

The "Times" admits that "any citizen has a right to aspire to an office," but finds that Comrade Byron's action in running against Mr. Knowlton was "revolutionary and anarchistic." In other words, the "Times" would say, any citizen has a legal right to run for office, but a workingman has no business to do so except at the dictation of "eminently respectable citizens."

The "Times" is welcome to its opinion. The workingmen of Watertown are coming to the point where they can form opinions of their own, without the help of capitalist newspapers.

A MEXICAN WHO KNOWS.

The witless wit who penned the following sub-editorial in the New York "Press" of May 20 thinks he is real funny, but he is not half so knowing as the "Aztec organ of enlightenment" which furnishes his theme:

"Another ray of light is sent forth by a Mexican paper which chronicles the rapid growth of a great Socialist party in the United States, which is ultimately to play the part of Aaron's rod to the other political organizations. Already the multi-millionaires are so scared by it, the paper says, that they are 'contributing their vast fortunes by many millions of dollars to the establishment or support of libraries, universities, hospitals, technical schools, and the like.' This is a point well worth the consideration of that free-handed liver and celebrated bon vivant, Uncle Russell Sage. But the discovery of the Aztec organ of enlightenment which touches us most nearly is that the newspaper offices of the United States are simply swarming with editorial writers who are avowed Socialists, but who are forced by tyrannical and plutocratic editors-in-chief to write the other way.

"This really is a serious condition of affairs. Suppose all the editorial writers in the country should band together, and, rising simultaneously some day, bind and gag their editors-in-chief and turn every newspaper in the country into a Socialist organ the next morning! The possibilities recall the very worst excesses of the French Revolution."

THE AGRICULTURAL PROLETARIAT.

Many writers, particularly among Socialists, have considered the "hired man" of the farm as analogous to the city wage laborer and as therefore the one to whom an appeal must be made for any change in the social conditions in agriculture. A little closer understanding of the situation will remove this impression. The ordinary farmer hires a man only during seed time and harvest—perhaps for three or four weeks altogether. During many other weeks in the year the farmer himself lies idle. Instead of making any "surplus value" from the laborer whom he does employ, and whom he often drives to such extreme exertions, a more rational way to consider it is to look upon the farmer as little more than an employing agent and resident supervisor for the exploiting class who are really extracting "surplus value" from both the farmer and his "hired man."—A. M. Simons, in "The American Farmer."

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end:

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

SOCIALIST EDUCATION FOR THE CHILDREN.

The mind of every human being at birth is a blank. The brain of the infant is ready to receive whatever impressions of the world its immediate surroundings choose to make upon it. Let every one remember that no one is born with his entire nativity stamped upon his physiognomy except in a limited sense. In other words, no one enters this world with an American, English, German, or any other nationality. Assuming that all human beings were endowed with the gift of speech with their advent into life, it is safe to say that not one would utter the creed of the Protestant Church, declare its allegiance to the Pope, profess its undying faith in the Koran nor pledge to sacrifice itself for Old Glory or any other standard. This is only too well recognized by Church and State, and both bodies not only suffer little children to come unto them, but employ every stratagem, use every and all means to attract and influence the minds and hearts of the impressionable innocents. The result we know. This is the method responsible for the world as we now find it, and a similar method adapted to our reasoning will secure us the future, the near future.

The rising generation now five to fifteen years old will be entitled to suffrage within the next short period ranging from six to sixteen years. What an opportunity offers itself to Socialists! Within one generation an army of thoroughly trained voters imbued with the Socialist spirit will march to the polls, to demand its own rights.

At present the boards of education are more easily captured for our purposes than the legislative chambers, and in my opinion are more desirable. Committees may call at board meetings, especially our sister comrades, and object to this or that taught in the schools and offer, or even demand substitutions. A member in the board with progressive ideas is of course a consummation devoutly to be arrived at. Our children may be induced to ask perplexing questions at school and Sunday-schools. Open-air speakers should not ignore the juvenile audience, on the contrary they should address them exclusively until a large adult assemblage is attracted. They can teach them truths which they never learn at school. The children in turn will mention much of what they have heard to their parents. I have found this manœuvre to be quite effective, as children afterward have frequently accosted me on the street asking when I shall speak again. Above all we must either publish, without delay, juvenile literature in hand-bill form or devote a column or two to this object in our party papers or magazines. These few suggestions afford sufficient food for reflection and if some active comrades, and above all our sisters in the movement, will hasten to cultivate this most important field of propaganda the harvest will be bountiful and the seeds obtained for still further and more successful dissemination.—Frederick Krafft, in the Socialist Spirit.

Questions from "Life."

Some questions which "Life" suggests as suitable to be asked by President Roosevelt's proposed superintendent of trusts:

1. Where did you get it and what is the difference between a dividend and a "divvy?"
2. What legislatures do you own?
3. What is the average of the combined salaries of your president and office boy?
4. Why did the grand jury fail to indict you?
5. What time is your president allowed for lunch?
6. How many persons have you run over, ruined, or otherwise killed during the year? Why?
7. Who is your judge?
8. Do you pay him by the job or by the year? Of what church is he a member?
9. State all sums paid during the last year for false witnesses?
10. Are your contributions to both political parties dictated by love for mankind or for business considerations?
11. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"
12. How much of the total consumption do you control, and why can't you tell.
13. Do you believe in Socialism or in Anarchy?
14. How were the books lost?
15. Why don't your directors know something about the business?
16. Where do you expect to go to when you die?

THE TWO WAYS.

Young men, life is before you. Two voices are calling you—one coming from the swamps of selfishness and force, where success means death; and the other from the hilltops of justice and progress, where even failure brings glory. Two lights are seen in your horizon—one the fast fading marsh light of power, and the other the slowly rising sun of human brotherhood. Two ways lie open for you—one leading to an ever lower and lower plain, where are heard the cries of despair and the curses of the poor, where manhood shrivels and possession rots down the possessor; and the other leading off to the highlands of the morning, where are heard the glad shouts of humanity and where honest effort is rewarded with immortality.—John P. Altgeld.

ESSEX COUNTY STIRRED UP.

Whole Branch of Socialist Party Arrested.

Newark Police Overreaching Themselves — Tremendous Indignation Aroused—Will Be Remembered on Election Day.

NEWARK, N. J., June 23.—New Century Hall was crowded yesterday afternoon with workingmen who came to join with the Jewish branches of the Socialist Party in protesting against the outrages committed by the police.

On Tuesday of last week, while Branch 9 of Local Essex County was quietly holding its business meeting, a squad of police, with revolvers drawn, burst in, informed the comrades that they were all under arrest, and led them off to the station house. Seventeen in all were arrested—five of them charged with being "Anarchists," while twelve were accused of criminal libel, on the ground, it is stated, of reports published in the Jewish "Forward," with which some of the comrades were connected. Bail was fixed at from $500 to $1,000 and was soon secured.

The raid, it is said, was instigated by the same Captain Edwards who unsuccessfully attempted to stop our open-air meetings in Newark last year and got exposed as a rowdy and a bully in the attempt.

Great Protest Meeting.

Jacob Lawn presided at Sunday's protest meeting, at which there was present a delegation from the County Committee of the Socialist Party, consisting of Comrades E. T. Neben, Fred. McIntosh, and Jas. E. Billings. The chairman, in opening the meeting, vigorously denounced the conduct of the Sheriff and the police, and his denunciation was applauded to the echo.

Samuel Levine, one of the victims of the arrest, was the first speaker.

The Real Anarchists.

He was followed by Fred. McIntosh, our candidate for mayor, who reviewed the outrages committed by the authorities against free speech and all the rights of citizens, in their attempt to break the silk workers' strike. He declared that if there were any Anarchists in the affair, they were the old-party politicians, who trampled upon the very laws they had sworn to enforce, in order to help greedy capitalists fleece the poverty-stricken weavers.

The Real Libellers.

Meyer London of New York followed in a vigorous speech, which roused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm. He scored the combination of capitalists, politicians, editors, and preachers who are trying to crush the workers. These people had brought a charge of criminal libel against Socialists for daring to speak on behalf of the working class. Their own utterances were the vilest and most wanton slanders that had ever been uttered.

The chairman at this point announced the contributions made by a number of unions, lodges, and workingmen's societies, and by individuals, for the defense fund, which already amounted to over $1,000. The case will be fought to the last, to test the question whether the workers of New Jersey are to be reduced to a level with those of Russia in the matter of political and civil rights.

Old Parties Indicted.

County Organizer E. T. Neben was the last speaker. He cited the lying reports of both Republican and Democratic newspapers of New Jersey and of New York in regard to the silk strike as well as to the Socialist movement, to show that the two old parties were one in the enmity to the working people, and appealed to his hearers to make use of the Socialist press in English, German, and Jewish to spread the truth.

He then showed the difference between the theory and practises of the Socialists and the Anarchists—whether the theoretical Anarchists who are being persecuted along with us, or the practical Anarchists who occupy public office and use their power against the people. When he held up the charter of Branch 9 of Local Essex County of the Socialist Party, the audience broke into loud applause and cheering.

The Newark police have made a big mistake this time. They have gone so far that they have roused indignation among the workingmen of all trades and their conduct will be remembered on Election Day.

ESSEX COUNTY COMMITTEE.

The Essex County Committee of the Socialist Party will hold a special meeting Saturday, June 28, at 7:30 p. m., at Headquarters, 124 Market street, Newark. Every delegate is expected to be present. The present state of affairs demands prompt and vigorous action.

E. T. NEBEN, Organizer.

THE CAUSE OF MINE "ACCIDENTS."

Great indignation exists throughout British Columbia over the Fernie mine disaster, in which 150 men lost their lives by an explosion. Everybody calls for an investigation into the cause. But after all, there can be but one cause. Poor ventilation. Spend money enough to put pure air into every nook and corner of every coal mine and you will never have an explosion, and that is all there is to it—The Socialist, Seattle.

The remark applies equally to the Fraterville "accident," which occurred in the same week. The profit-grabbing capitalist is at the bottom of every such affair.

NEW YORK STATE.

Report of Meeting of State Committee.

Spring and Vail at Work in the State—Preparations for State Convention on July 4—Four New Locals.

A convention of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, for the purpose of nominating a state ticket and transacting such other business as may come before it, will be held in the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, New York City, on Friday, July 4.

Each local in the state is entitled to one delegate for every fifty members or major fraction thereof in good standing. Every local should make an effort to be represented.

For the State Committee of the Social Democratic Party,

LEONARD D. ABBOTT, State Secretary.

At Tuesday's special meeting of the State Committee correspondence was received from the National Secretary and from many locals and comrades in the state—Buffalo, Ticonderoga, Kings County, Port Chester, Gloversville, Rome, Rochester, Johnstown, and others.

A charter was granted to a new local at Highland Falls. At last week's meeting charters were granted to Gouveneur, Dexter, and Niagara Falls.

State Organizer Spring reported good meetings at Tarrytown, White Plains (Carpenters' Union), Peekskill, and Highland Falls. On Wednesday he was billed to speak in Newburg, and would work in that vicinity for three or four days. He will remain in this part of the state till after the convention. Meanwhile, he is arranging to send another speaker out to follow Vail and locals desirous of holding meetings should at once address F. J. Spring, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

Rochester reported good work being done; headquarters a great success; five thousand Meat Trust leaflets distributed within the last few days; a big meeting addressed by Comrade Vail on Monday. Sends two delegates to the convention. Other locals reported election of delegates.

The vote of the state on candidates for delegate to the International Bureau is as follows: Bandlow, 16; Herron, 115; Hillquit, 106; Hoehn, 43; Mills, 30; Morgan, 45; Simons, 73; Untermann, 19; only ten locals reporting.

Locals are called on to send in their financial and membership reports at once. The report of the Financial Secretary showed receipts from May 21 to June 24, $134.20; expenditures from May 10 to June 16, $209.96.

Comrade Vail has held very successful meetings during the past week at Watertown, Dexter, Corning, Hornellsville, Buffalo, Rochester, Utica, and Rome.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

A convention of the Social Democratic Party of the County of New York to elect delegates to the State Convention of the Social Democratic Party of the State of New York, and to nominate candidates for the general election, will be held on Saturday, June 28, 7 p. m., at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, in the city and county of New York.

All delegates are requested to come promptly, as the General Committee is to hold a meeting the same night.

By order of the General Committee of the Social Democratic Party of New York.

J. GERBER, Secretary.

NOTICE.

Subdivision of Local New York are called upon to elect delegates to the General Committee for the term beginning Saturday, July 12.

Financial Secretaries of subdivisions are called upon to send in their membership reports at once.

J. GERBER, Organizer.

WHY NOT?

The following editorial appeared in the New York "Sun" of May 15:

"The proposal emanating, with the best of intentions doubtless, from the Merchants' Association to induce Mr. John R. Freeman to become the chief engineer of the Water Department by paying him a salary of $10,000 more than the city can afford to pay is simply grotesque in its discordance with our system of government. Such an arrangement would make Mr. Freeman not an employee of the city only, but an employee of the Merchants' Association, something not to be thought of.

"If this precedent were adopted, why should not the Chamber of Commerce pay additional salaries to the Rapid Transit Commissioners? Why should not the Bar Association pay the Corporation Counsel an additional salary? And why should not the Chamberlain and the Comptroller be paid in part by our various banking institutions?

"The Merchants' Association will be able to pay the Water Department engineer or any other public official his salary when they own the town."

This proposal is perfectly reasonable and charmingly frank. Our public officials are the tools of the capitalist class and serve its interests alone. Many of them receive additional salaries, we might say tips, in the form of bribes. Why should not the capitalists directly pay the salaries of their servile tools? The proposal of the Merchants' Association is plain proof of the fact that the government is simply a committee to further the interests of the capitalist class.

ARE ALIVE AT DAYTON.

County and Congressional Tickets in the Field.

Account of Socialist Activity in Lively Ohio Town—Wilshire Speaks at Picnic on July 4.

DAYTON, O., June 22.—The Socialists of Dayton, who have been apparently stunned by the several rapid and overwhelming defeats of organized labor, have awakened from their slumbers and have arranged for propaganda on a very large scale, which will be systematically worked from now on. Leaflets and party papers will be circulated and regular agitation meetings carried on in the different sections of the city.

Picnic on July 4.

A picnic and general good time has been arranged to take place at Woodsdale Park, July 4. Cincinnati, Hamilton, Middletown, Sidney, Piqua, Xenia, and Chillicothe comrades will join in making this the gala day of the year. Many attractions have been secured at a large expense and Comrade Wilshire of Toronto will speak upon his favorite theme, "Let the Nation Own the Trusts." Besides this there will be boat races, swimming races, fireworks, two bands constantly playing, and a hundred other features of amusement. Trains leave Dayton at 8, 10:05, 11:40 a. m. and 1 and 3 p. m. Tickets will be sold on platform at depot at 50 cents round trip (children 25 cents) including admission to the park.

Congressional Ticket.

For the second time we have met in Congressional convention and nominated a candidate to oppose the old party men. Jacob A. Hemler of Hamilton was the unanimous choice of the convention and his platform is the reaffirmation of the national and state platforms. He is a machinist by trade and is held in high esteem by his fellow workmen. Comrade Hemler is a good talker and speaks German as fluently as English. He will undoubtedly make a tour of the district during the campaign. The Socialists of this district are proud to have so able a candidate to present to the working people of Preble, Montgomery, and Butler counties, which comprises this district, for their suffrage this fall. This is largely an industrial district, especially Dayton and Hamilton, and the working people now have a golden opportunity to break the unwritten exclusion act—the one which excludes labor representatives from Congress. Will they do it? Will the working people of this district vote for one of their own class to represent them in Congress?

Montgomery County.

The Montgomery County convention has come and gone and it was certainly a most harmonious occasion. The state platform was adopted to use for the county and the following candidates were nominated: Sheriff, Thos. Anderson, machinist; Clerk of Common Pleas Court, Albert M. Huss, woodworker; Coroner, Gus. Haas, salesman; County Commissioner, Thos. Fisher, electrician; Infirmary Director, John Maley, paper maker; Prosecuting Attorney, Dan P. Farrell, advertising manager. This is without a doubt the strongest ticket ever selected in this county. Each candidate has been selected carefully and with a view to his ability to fill the office and his advocacy of clear-cut Socialist principles. The comrades are making great preparations for a strong campaign, and every effort will be put forth to arouse the workers of this country to action next November. The ineffectiveness of the strike and boycott is slowly becoming apparent to the organized workers, owing to their experiences of the past eighteen months. The only hope that is now left is to unite solidly upon the political field, and in doing this no blacklists can be used, as we have the secret ballot. No time will be lost in striking and the results obtained will be more far-reaching and permanent than by any other method.

Candidates' Resignations.

In accordance with a section of the new Ohio constitution, we have caused each of our county candidates and the congressional candidate to place on file at the headquarters of the Socialist Party, 26 Pruden Building, Dayton, his resignation from the office for which he is nominated, and in case they are elected and do not faithfully serve the interests of the working class, their resignations will be handed in for acceptance. This guarantees to the workers the allegiance of their candidates. The resignations can be seen at above address by anyone concerned.

Local Business Meetings.

The business meetings of Local Dayton are held every Friday evening at 8 o'clock in the headquarters, 26 Pruden Building. Although these are the business sessions, they are not in any sense closed meetings. All interested persons are cordially invited to be present and take part in the discussions which follow the regular order of business.

Agitation Meetings.

The first of the agitation meetings for the fall campaign will be held on Fourth street, near Main, on Saturday, July 5. H. Gaylord Wilshire will be the principal speaker, and he will undoubtedly have a large audience. His lecture here last Labor Day was well received by his two thousand hearers, and on every hand we find expressions of pleasure at his announced visit

THE COMING MINERS' CONVENTION.

Impossible to Predict at Present What Action May Be Taken.

Good Reasons Both for and Against a Strike of Bituminous Miners—President Mitchell's Advice Likely to Be Followed.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

HAZLETON, Pa., June 27.—The call issued by President Mitchell for a national convention of coal miners has set speculation rife throughout the region as to whether a general strike will be called or not. The miners themselves believe that the convention will result in complete suspension, but there is a difference of opinion among those not directly concerned in the strike, but who claim to be in a position to prophesy what action will be taken.

Just what will happen, in the event that the present situation in the anthracite field does not change, no one can predict confidently. Only the convention itself will be able to set all doubts at rest, but some opinion can be formed from actual knowledge of the situation, within and without the strike area, and consideration of the internal conditions existing within the miners' national organization.

Of course, so far as the anthracite miners are concerned, they expect their brothers in the soft-coal fields to strike, the wish being father to the thought. They believe they have made a fight to preserve their organization that entitles them to the utmost limit of recognition, and they believe if that recognition is not forthcoming, in the face of the forces against them, any victory they might otherwise gain would be meagre indeed, if they win any at all. They expect a general strike, therefore, and they will be bitterly disappointed if one is not called.

But what position will President Mitchell take in the convention? That is the question that creates the most conjecture, because it is believed that whatever he advises will pretty nearly settle what the convention will do. It is impossible for anyone to say, outside his immediate advisers and trusted lieutenants, what President Mitchell will suggest or advocate, and there is doubt whether even they really know. He is the one man that can settle all doubts. He is so incommunicative, so cautious, so deliberate that few people, if any, ever know where John Mitchell stands until he definitely declares himself. Probably no other labor official in the country is so completely master of himself under all circumstances.

Perhaps Partial Suspension.

It is safe to say, however, that Mitchell expects a national suspension of work to be declared, if not to take effect immediately, then on a general scale. The convention may declare for a suspension of two days a week, and failing that, for four days, a total suspension being reserved for a final blow. It may be that the more radical step will be taken immediately, but this will depend upon the temper of the convention. Experience would show that the miners of the country are not likely to take half-way measures, should any action on their part be required. It is altogether likely that as the conditions in the anthracite field become better known and the strike situation, with all that means to the organization, more thoroughly understood, the feeling for a general strike will grow until no power could prevent a majority vote in its favor.

It was probably for this purpose, and also to give ample time to admit of the election of a full representation from the large territory covered by the miners' organization, that the date of the convention was set four weeks off.

Mitchell's Attitude.

There can hardly be any doubt that President Mitchell wishes to have the anthracite strike won, no matter what legitimate measures should become necessary to reach that end. His heart is in this strike, and all the more so, perhaps, since it was ordered over his advice and desire. Whatever elements of statesmanship he may possess are being exerted to the utmost to bring success to his people. That he feels deeply the confidence the anthracite miners have in him cannot be gainsaid and he is striving faithfully to deserve it. For that reason, he is almost certain to go all the way in an effort to achieve victory.

On the other hand, must be considered his natural conservatism, which, it must be admittted, has guided him successfully so far in his administration of the miners' affairs. His declaration last year, during the steel strike, that contracts with employers should not be violated is still remembered and worthy of consideration at the present time. Whether he would still hold to the letter of that declaration in the face of existing circumstances, or whether he deems that these circumstances, involving as they do the life or death of a very large and important portion of the miners' organization, justify extreme measures, is a question.

Interstate Agreement.

The abrogation of the interstate agreement of the soft-coal operators and miners is a very serious matter. This agreement was secured after much fighting and manœuvering, and it has worked so satisfactorily to the soft-coal miners that there will naturally be strong opposition to prejudicing its continuance. And it must be remembered that it was through Mitchell's advice that the agreement of 1901-1902 was accepted by the miners to extend over the present year, instead of their insisting upon the new demands they had presented to the operators.

All this serves to complicate the situation. The soft-coal miners secured an interstate agreement entirely through the strength and compactness of their organization, and they will be jealous of their reputation for observing contracts. Nevertheless, the reservation of the right of national conventions to abrogate all agreements was probably provided for in the case of just such emergencies as the present one. This reservation was known to the operators when they signed the agreements, so that they should be prepared to accept the consequences. This is a point worthy of remembrance by all those interested in the miners' cause.

It would seem, therefore, that if President Mitchell desires the convention to declare a general suspension, he can advocate that without laying himself open to just censure as stultifying himself. And I think it altogether likely this is the course he will take, not willingly perhaps, but as the only one fitting the occasion—the most critical that ever confronted any labor organization in this country. The miners were never so well organized and never so well officered as now. Whatever their political opinions or affiliations, and no matter how much their past acts may subject some of them to criticism, yet it is doubtful if another labor organization in America can produce a more capable set of officers than the miners have to-day.

West Virginia an Element.

West Virginia presents an interesting figure in the situation. The success or failure of the strike there will determine to some extent the decision of the national convention. Heretofore, this state has been the hardest problem the miners have had to handle. It was largely responsible for the indifferent success of the soft coal miners strike of 1897, when its miners almost wholly refused to strike with those in the other states. The task of organizing there has always been most difficult and the favorable condition of the strike there now is largely due to the efforts expended by Mother Jones and others. That the injunctions against the leaders were enforced, including even Mother Jones herself, testifies to the success of the strike in that state. Should this extend until the national convention, the chances of a general suspension will be stronger, as West Virginia will then be acting in consonance with the other states.

Miners Will Act Together.

From this, it will be gathered that the coming convention will be an exceedingly interesting and important one. Should a general suspension be desired by the majority of the miners, and I think this likely, events have so shaped themselves to make such a movement most propitious. If President Mitchell and his co-workers had planned the present campaign and arbitrarily arranged events, they could hardly have arrived at better results. This much is certain: If the convention orders a wholesale tie-up, be the majority large or small, the miners everywhere will obey the call. Those who believe differently know little of the miners and their history.

I have attempted to write this resume of the situation calmly and without prejudice, with an eye single to making it clear to the workers, and Socialists especially, who are. I know, acutely interested, in the present struggle and watchful of its development and probable results. It is my own view acquired through some acquaintance with the miners organization and direct knowledge experienced in the field.

I think there will be a general strike, should nothing intervene between now and July 17. In the event of a total suspension of miners in the United States, the working class would be confronted with a serious situation, and Socialists everywhere should prepare themselves to take advantage of every opportunity to make the occasion one for working class victory and advancement.

WILLIAM MAILLY.

SOFT COAL MINERS HELP.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., June 21.—Patrick Gilday, President of District No. 2, United Mine Workers, yesterday issued a notice that bituminous coal is being shipped to points east to aid in breaking the strike in the anthracite region. In order to prevent this, it is ordered that the output of northern and central Pennsylvania be restricted, and the miners are notified not to work more than four days a week. If this does not suffice, it is announced that a further restriction will be ordered.

THE FUTURE STATE.

Oh, men and women true, once more take hands,
Join hearts and heads, and clear the crooked maze,
Set love and justice up o'er these our lands,
Let truth be honored, honest work have praise,
When each and all are workers, hand and brain
Divorced no more; no toll to bear the brand
Of degradation; when the common gain
Is each one's good—fast then our state shall stand.

THE RUSSIAN OUTRAGES.

Crimes of Czarism Against the Working Class.

Socialist International Bureau Communicates the Terrible Story to the Workers of the World.

To the Socialist Parties of All Countries.

Comrades:—A year ago International Socialism pointed out to the world the attacks being made by Czarism alike upon science and upon the Russian proletariat.

In spite of the loud protests of the working class of all nations, in spite of the cry of indignation of the European press which followed from these protests, tyranny still prevails in Russia.

It imprisons, it tortures, it murders in masses all those who, through organization or through science, aspire to better conditions and desire the liberation of the working class.

The recent communications to the Socialist press concerning the bloody repressions which took place in Russia on May 1, are confirmed by reports which come from labor organizations and by other investigations made by our comrades, B. Kritschevsky and G. Plechanoff, Russian delegates to the Socialist International Bureau.

In Vilna, the Cossacks and the police dispersed the crowds celebrating May Day, killed the bearer of the red flag, imprisoned thirty-seven workingmen whom the governor, von Wahl, ordered to be flogged until they lost consciousness.

In Kief, young girl students, arrested in the course of a demonstration, were undressed and compelled to submit to most revolting humiliations. Mothers were arrested in great numbers and they were forced to inform the police and to betray their own children.

In the government of Poltava, the rebelting peasants were led into churches, where, after formal services, they were flogged until they fainted.

In the prisons of Ekaterinoslav, the political prisoners are starving voluntarily rather than longer submit to maltreatment by their keepers.

The Ekaterinoslav committee of the Social Democratic Party of Russia has called public attention to these odious facts.

A starvation revolt (refusal to take food) has broken out in the prison of Bouterki, in Moscow, in consequence of barbarous treatment inflicted on political prisoners.

In Odessa those who celebrated May Day were flogged; the peasants of Charkoff were fortured as atrociously as those of Poltava.

The "Bund," or the General Union of Jewish Workingmen of Lithuania, Poland, and Russia, in its communication, corroborates the reports of the atrocites committed by Czarism, in the following words:

"The manifestation of May 1 passed in Vilna as usual. The police and the Cossacks, with their customary ferocity, lashed with their heavy whips (nagaikas) every manifestant on the street. The bearer of the red flag was most ferociously ill-treated; all his clothing was cut and his blood flowed in streams. Several dozen workingmen arrested at the place were beaten on the street and again in the station house.

"But all these savageries were only a prelude to the bloody scenes which took place next day. By orders of Governor von Wahl, bundles of sticks, soaked in water, had been made ready before the manifestation. The torture took place on May 2, in the stable of the station house, in the presence of a commission of executioners consisting of Goernor Von Wahl, Chief of Police Naslmoff, a physician, Michailoff, Police Captains Snitko and Kontchevsky, Brigadier Martynoff, and Sergeants Cyboulsky and Milioucha.

"The arrested were called out one by one. With cynical irony the Governor began congratulating each prisoner on the festival of the First of May.—'And here is a pleasant surprise for you,' he added, pointing to the rods. 'How old are you?'—'Forty years.'—'Give him forty blows.'—'And you?'—'Fifty.'—'Give him fifty blows.' And so on.

"One prisoner answered stubbornly that he was a million years old. He got one hundred blows; and, when he lost consciousness, he was revived by pouring water on his head, so that the torture could be continued.

"The doctor was there to say how many blows each victim could endure. Governor von Wahl saw to it that the rods were applied vigorously and, if the executioner inadvertently gave a lighter stroke, the Governor ordered that this blow should not count.

"The flogging continued until the victim lost consciousness. If he was able to rise to his feet they began again. And, in order to aggravate the humiliation of the torture, when the victim again became conscious, they held out to him, with mocking laughter, the placard bearing the words, 'Hurrah for the First of May!' which had been distributed on the eve of the demonstration by the local committee of the Union."

The bearer of the red flag and another workingman were FLOGGED TO DEATH.

The committee of the Bund, and the Vilna committees of the Social Democratic Party of Poland and Lithuania and of the Socialist Party of Lithuania, and the Vilna group of Russian Social Democrats have, in lview of these revolting and ignominious tortures, joined in issuing a proclamation in ten thousand copies in Russian, Jewish, and Polish, reciting the names of the executioners responsible for the outrages and ending with these words:

"Vengeance will fall on each of you and your names will be cursed forever."

The White Terror is raging ever more ferociously in Russia. The events of Vilna form, unfortunately, but one particularly savage episode.

The International Socialist movement, stirred with profound indignation by the atrocities daily perpetrated upon the Russian workingmen, appeals to enlightened public opinion to condemn these abominations.

Deeply moved, International Socialism sends its greeting of solidarity to the Russian workmen, who struggle, with unexampled heroism for their political and economical emancipation.

We call upon the Socialist Party of all lands to inform the people of the horrible crimes committed against the working class of Russia, and without delay to give expression to their protests, by such means as they may find proper, against Czarism, which, in its official harangues, talks of peace but which, in fact, carries on the most implacable war against the people who are demanding only their right to existence and to liberty.

READ THIS AND PASS IT ON.

LET US PUT AN END TO THIS CIVIL WAR.

In Pennsylvania a private standing army, called deputies and coal and iron police, numbering several thousand men, many of them desperate criminals, are being held in readiness, at any pretext, to shoot down miners in order to break the strike.

The "operators" do not dig coal nor run trains. But they make profits on the coal industry and without their consent miners and railroad men may not work.

In Rhode Island, the other day, the state militia were out to "maintain law and order" against striking street-car men.

Here are the facts, briefly: The trade unions asked the Legislature to pass a law to protect women and children in the cotton mills from overwork. As a pretext for killing that bill, the Republican and Democratic politicians passed a ten-hour law for the street-car men. But they carefully avoided putting in a penalty clause. As a result, the trolley companies defied the law. And when the men struck for its enforcement, the militia were ordered out to help the capitalist law-breakers.

The Rhode Island capitalists do not spin nor weave cotton nor run street cars. But they make profits by the labor of women who have to neglect their homes and children who ought to be in school, and by the killing overwork of the trolley employees. Neither spinners and weavers nor conductors and motormen may work without their consent.

In West Virginia, where coal miners are on strike against a system that dooms them to lifelong slavery to the company store and the company landlord, a judge has forbidden the strikers to march on the public roads or to meet within sight of the "operators'" property. For violating this injunction they have imprisoned Mother Jones, along with other union organizers.

These West Virginia gentlemen do no useful work. But they make profits by the labor of others, and they would force the workers to obey them under penalty of starvation.

In New Jersey the silk workers are on strike. The New Jersey mill operatives in this and other industries, are among the most badly paid workers in the country. Their wages are far lower than they were ten years ago. In order to defeat the strike, the bosses and their hired editors and their political tools have got together to raise a hue and cry about "Anarchy." They have taken some disorders, instigated, perhaps, by agents of their own, as a pretext for enforcing martial law, for clubbing and shooting right and left, for arresting men and women and throwing them into jail at the sweet will of drunken deputies or corrupt police captains. No constitutional guarantee of liberty counts for anything with these irresponsible armed loafers. Quiet business meetings of labor organizations are raided and the members hustled off to jail. A placard merely calling on the strikers to "stand firm" is branded as "inflammatory" and "incendiary" and its author sent to prison.

The New Jersey capitalists do not make silk. They make profits, rich profits, out of the blighted lives of children and the ruined lives of young girls driven by hunger to the hell of mill life. They are lords. They will be obeyed, at whatever cost of sweat and tears and blood from the workers.

These capitalists are organizing "to wipe out the Anarchists." Let them! wipe out themselves then. For they are the real Anarchists, the enemies of peace, of order, of human happiness.

These capitalists have power thus to tyrannize over men, to insult women, to exploit babies, because they own the mines, the mills, the railroads, all the means of production that the wage-workers have made and must use.

Do you not think, workingmen of Pennsylvania, of Rhode Island, of West Virginia, of New Jersey, of every state where capitalism rules, that it is time you united at the ballot-box to abolish this system of robbery and civil war, to declare that the workers shall have the full product of their labor, to declare that the land and mines and mills and railroads shall be held as public property for the good of all, no longer as private property for the profit of a few?

That is what the Socialist Party proposes. You can elect its candidates, men of your own class, to carry out that program, if you will.

OREGON'S GAINS.

Straight Vote More Than Doubled Since 1900.

Average Vote for Candidates on State Ticket Shows Gain of About 250 Per Cent.

ALBANY, Ore., June 22.—Complete returns for the election held in this state on June 2 show an immense increase in the vote of the Socialist Party.

In 1900 the state gave 1,466 votes for Debs and Harriman, our candidates for President and Vice-President.

In the election which has just been held our vote stands:

For Governor, R. R. Ryan, 3,532.

For Secretary of State, C. W. Barzee, 5,576.

For State Treasurer, W. W. Myers, 5,465.

For State Printer, J. E. Hosmer, 5,269.

For Congress: First District, B. F. Ramp, 2,523; Second District, T. D. Gerdes, 2,724.

Even taking the vote for Governor as the standard, we have gained about 150 per cent. Our average vote in this election is 5,018—a gain of 250 per cent.

A proportionate gain in 1904 may be expected. Certainly the Socialists of Oregon will work for it.

MOTHER JONES IS ARRESTED.

Intense Indignation Aroused in West Virginia.

Brave and Gentle Woman Led to Jail for Disobeying an Infamous Injunction—Time for All Workingmen to Awake.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 20.—This afternoon Mother Jones was arrested under an injunction issued by Judge Jackson of Parkersburg. She was addressing a mass meeting composed of miners and other citizens. Perfect order prevailed, and she stood while speaking on ground rented by the organizers of the United Mine Workers—belonging, therefore, for the time being, to the organizers.

Mother Jones spoke in no uncertain words or tones of the robbery of the toilers, but she urged those to whom she appealed to be law-abiding, to use peaceful and constitutional means to defend their rights.

The bosses have been eagerly waiting for riotous conduct on the miners' part, that would give them an excuse for clubbing, imprisoning, and shooting, but the strikers have refused to give them a pretext.

The injunction under which Mother Jones is arrested is an infamous one, forbidding the miners to march on the public roads or to assemble, even in the most peaceable manner, anywhere within sight of the mines, no matter though it be at their own rented headquarters.

This high-handed conduct of the bosses and the authorities creates great indignation here, and will do [illegible] among all the tens of thousands of [illegible] miners who know and love Mother Jones.

People here are saying: "It is idle to talk now of losing our freedom. All our vaunted liberties are lost. It is time we considered how to win it back."

The workingmen of West Virginia appeal to their brothers all over the land to awake, to join hands, to unite their power to overthrow this growing tyranny.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

Our "reform" Aldermen seem to be very good at framing ordinances so that they cannot be enforced.

WORK VERSUS ETIQUETTE.

We observe that the Illinois State Committee has formally protested against the action of the National Committee in sending to the locals a circular asking for contributions for the strike propaganda fund.

We do not profess to be able to understand the action of the Illinois State Committee. We cannot fathom its motives. We know the members of the Committee to be Socialists, yet their present action seems to us to be utterly inconsistent with common sense and Socialist principles.

The coal strike, throwing some 200,000 miners out of work, bringing them into organized conflict with Morganism, and thus at once giving them leisure to listen, to read, and to think and giving them the strongest reason to accept Socialist principles. The field of agitation thus opened to us is frequently of national importance and magnitude, although it happens to be almost entirely limited to the geographical boundaries of the single state of Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania State Committee is doing its utmost to present our principles and purposes to the striking miners, through our speakers and literature, without neglecting its other duties. Its financial strength, however, is not equal to the task or the opportunity and it appeals to the National Committee for aid.

The National Committee has also burdens and a limited income, "topping"—knows cheerfully responded to the ney. This will mean its means would allow. car, or a half-more, it has appealed directly for "light we local organizations throughout Rocking f country, stating the facts, and inlosses by this them to make such voluntary places, donations as might to them seem adator forcible. ent. And this is the flagrant violation of state autonomy of which the Illinois State Committee complains. Now, when the National Committee is laboring to improve such an extraordinary opportunity for Socialist propaganda—this is the moment the Illinois State Committee chooses to hamper its efforts, to check its work, to render it helpless and useless.

We repeat, we cannot conceive the motives of such an act. For us, we are more concerned about Socialist propaganda than about official etiquette and red tape. We shall always stand by a National Committee that works for Socialism, whether it be located in New York, in St. Louis, or in Chicago.

A Richmond comrade writes: "Coal shipments from the Virginia coalfields to the seaboard through Richmond have fallen to almost nothing. The daily papers here are suppressing all but the barest mention of the strike situation whether in this state or elsewhere." It is evident that the strike in Virginia and West Virginia is far stronger and more general than the capitalist press admits. In these states, where the labor movement is still comparatively young and weak suppression is much easier than in the North. Only the growing power of the working class can command any respect from the capitalists and their tools; and the working class grows in power in proportion as it throws off conservative traditions and learns to depend upon itself and bravely to oppose the masters of industry.

LAW AND POWER.

The "Chicago Socialist" makes the following significant editorial remark:

"In a debate in the Massachusetts Legislature the fact was brought out that Illinois has a law hich provides that when the bosses advertise for men to take the place of strikers, they shall state that fact in the advertisement. Our great law-abiding packers overlooked that law when they advertised for men to take the places of the striking teamsters. So did the department-store owners. Labor laws passed by the capitalists to catch votes are of little value while the capitalists hold the machinery by whic. they are enforced."

This is perfectly true. A law, in itself, has little or no power. In order to effect its purpose, the administration of it must be entrusted to men who have a class interest in its enforcement. A labor law passed by Republican or Democratic capitalist legislators and left unenforced by Republican or Democratic capitalist officials is a mere mockery of the needs of the working class. To protect the working class from the rapacity of the capitalist masters it is necessary to have class-conscious chosen representatives of the working class itself in the legislative halls to frame the laws, on the judicial benches to apply them, and in the executive chambers to compel obedience to them.

The two Socialists in the Massachusetts Legislature have done more than all the Republican and Democratic "friends of Labor" in all the legislatures ever have. The latter have loaded the statute books with laws worth no more to the workers than so much waste paper. Carey and MacCartney, though they have not secured the passage of any important measures, have aroused public attention, strengthened the self-reliance of the working class, and frightened the capitalists and their political agents into comparative decency.

If the working-class voters of Massachusetts let it rest at that, they will have gained little. If they use the advantage that the work of Carey and MacCartney has won for them, they can send ten such fighters to the State House next term in place of two and within a few years they can have the Commonwealth governed by and for the class whose labor sustains all its burdens.

Some of our contemporaries are saying that "this is an off-year in politics." We should like to know why. There are three hundred and eighty-six congressmen to be elected, besides executive officers and legislators in forty-two states and territories, and innumerable judges, sheriffs, mayors, and city and town councilmen. It is safe to say that the Socialist Party will have tickets in at least two hundred and fifty of the congressional districts and twenty-six of the states and territories. That hardly looks like "off-year" politics. This year's election is very nearly as important as that of 1900 or 1904 and the Socialist Party has an exceptionally good opportunity for making its power felt. So, comrades, fall to work.

The plutocratic press of Montana is greatly concerned over the warm greeting given to Comrade Debs at Butte the other day and the rapid growth of Socialism all through the Rocky Mountain region. The Republicans and Democrats are each accusing the other of having something to do with stirring up the trouble. These journalistic servants of the mine owners are so trained in venal duplicity, it is so long since one of them has dared to express an independent thought or feeling, that they cannot conceive the possibility of any man being actuated by honest motives in public life; and they have repeated the stale lies about "harmony between Capital and Labor" so often that they have befuddled their own brains and cannot understand a spontaneous movement of the working class to emancipate itself from wage-slavery.

DISUNION MEANS DEFEAT.

The New York "Evening Post" of last Friday published a special dispatch from Pittsburg on the possibility of a sympathetic strike of bituminous miners. The dispatch stated that if such a strike were ordered by the convention of July 17, "the miners of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana would withdraw in a body, and the organization would probably be disrupted." The dispatch closed with these significant words:

"Another feature that must be weighed is the latent jealousy between the soft and the hard coal men in the organization. With the men of the competitive field favoring secession rather than a strike, there is little danger of the great interests, like the United States Steel Corporation and the Western railroads, suffering."

The "Evening Post" is a capitalist paper, published for the gilt-edge respectables of Wall Street, and all its sympathies are with the owners of the world as against the workers of the world. In the dispatch which we quote it is very likely that "the wish is father to the thought." Whether or not a bituminous strike will be ordered The Worker does not pretend to guess, any more than it presumes to advise in the matter. But if the convention decides upon such a strike we believe it will be found that the "Evening Post" has lied in alleging the existence of such criminal jealousy between the two branches of the coal mining craft. So far the soft-coal miners have loyally aided their brothers of the anthracite field in this strike, and we both wish and believe that they will continue to do so at whatever necessary cost.

The lesson of the paragraph we have quoted, however, is the same, whether the statement of fact contained in it be true or false. The lesson is this:

JEALOUSY, HOSTILITY, DIVISION OF ANY SORT AMONG WAGE-WQRKERS MEANS SAFETY FOR THE CAPITALIST CLASS.

That is a lesson which cannot be impressed too deeply on every workingman's heart and brain.

It is true and important on the purely industrial field—the field of the trade union, where the strike and boycott and label and the lockout and blacklist and injunction are the weapons used.

We have rival organizations in the metal trades, in the building trades, in the clothing trades, even in the powerfully organized printing trades. These organizations refuse to recognize each other's boycotts and labels; they even go so far as to scab in each other's strikes—for a scab is a scab, even though he carries a union card; if the union men take the place of striking non-unionists they are just as truly scabs as when the case is reversed.

Even when there are not rival organizations in a single trade, we often have the unions of different trades in the same industry bitterly quarreling over questions of autonomy and jurisdiction—as in the cases, recent or present, of the printers and the machinists, the brewers and the coopers, the brewers and the brewery engineers and firemen, or the miners and the mine engineers and firemen.

Every such quarrel between trade unions, whether rival unions in one trade or unions of related trades, redounds directly to the benefit of the master class, the capitalists. Sometimes, as in the "Evening Post" dispatch we have quoted, they openly exult over the divisions among their wage-slaves. Oftener they are wise enough to say nothing for publication, but stealthily to do all in their power to foment trouble, fan the fires of jealousy and prejudice, and put obstacles in the way of union among the workers.

The great employers and exploiters of labor have been very active, of late, in trying to promote harmony between Capital and Labor, and their daily press has lent them its aid to the fullest extent. But has anyone caught the Civic Federationists trying to bring about an amicable settlement of the quarrel between the brewery workers and the engineers or to unite the rival factions of carpenters? Not a bit of it! On the contrary, they have pitted these organizations against each other, the hireling press has sought to increase their mutual hatred by publishing false or garbled and exaggerated accounts of their troubles, and there is good reason to believe that spies and paid agents of the employers' associations are secretly working within many of the unions to keep up the antagonisms by which the masters profit.

The Worker does not attempt the hopeless task of judging between rival unions or unions quarreling over jurisdiction. We know that the unions must settle these questions for themselves and that some internal fights are as inevitable as they are disastrous. The only advice we give is this:

Let every trade unionist—and every workingman should be a unionist—remember that his whole class is at war with the capitalist class; that the interests of the two classes are fundamentally opposed, and that this struggle cannot, therefore, be permanently settled by any compromise; let him remember also that the essential interests of the whole wage-working class are identical, that its divisions and causes of quarrel are only incidental matters, matters of detail, and that they can, therefore, be satisfactorily adjusted if the attempt is made in the right spirit; let him observe that capitalists forget or postpone their internal quarrels when at war with the workers, and that they rejoice to see the workers divided on the field of battle.

If the members of the trade unions bear these things in mind they will easily find common ground on which to settle their internecine strife, in order to concentrate all their forces in line of battle against the capitalist class.

What we have said of the need of harmony among the workers on the industrial field is equally true in the field of politics.

The capitalists are keenly conscious that their political interests, whatever minor differences there may be among them, are all diametrically opposed to the real political interests of the workers. So long as the workers continue to divide their forces on capitalist issues—true or false—the capitalists are well pleased. They do not wish to disfranchise the workers, if one-half of the workers will vote against the other half and let the capitalists draw platforms and choose candidates for both.

The capitalists do not disapprove of labor politicians—that is, of labor leaders in capitalist politics. On the contrary, they patronize and encourage them—often the same group of capitalists patronize labor leaders of both old parties at once.

The only thing the capitalists fear in politics is the union of the workers on a platform of their own and with candidates of their own. That is the only thing in politics from which the workers have anything to hope.

That is why the capitalists hate the Socialist Party. And that is why the workers should join and work in and vote for the Socialist Party.

In Terre Haute they have an anti-boycott boycott. That is, the "good citizens," who think boycotting very wicked, have got together to boycott every one who joined with the workingmen in boycotting the trolley company. This is as it should be. The sooner both sides recognize that we are living in a chronic state of war between producers and exploiters, the sooner that war will be ended by the victory of the producers. We are not of those who cry "Peace! Peace!" when there is no peace.

Any errors or omissions in the list of state secretaries and of the subdivisions of Locals New York and Kings County in this paper should be called to the editor's attention at once.

RIOTS SHOW NEW ASPECT.

Commenting on the riots accompanying the recent strike of teamsters in Chicago, the "Chicago Socialist" says:

"It is not strange that the tremendous economic changes which have taken place in the past few years should produce a corresponding change in the modes of thought and action of the people influenced by them.

"Even the recent street riots, incident upon the dispute between the packers and teamsters, showed some peculiar features, probably indicative of this change.

"A personal contact with the crowds participating in them showed conclusively that it was by no means the so-called 'tough element,' the 'hoodlums,' that preponderated. It may seem strange, but it is certainly undeniable that most of the sympathizers who took an active part in the disturbances were well dressed people, many of whom from their appearance belonged to the little middle class.

"A canvass of the small store keepers undertaken by some of our party members showed that this class was almost unanimous in favor of the strikers. In previous strikes this element was always the most bitterly opposed to the workingmen and never failed to display its hostility.

"The unwillingness of the police force to use harsh measures with the crowds was also significant, as was also the criticism of individual acts of police brutality and the apologetic tone of the capitalist press thereon.

"Members of the Socialist Party mixed freely with the crowds and their comments upon the struggle were generally accepted. More than one unfortunate who had felt the weight of a police club was told that he had received exactly what he voted for, by some Socialist spectator, and the bystanders invariably supported the assertion.

"If there is any such thing as 'public sentiment,' it was undeniably on the side of the teamsters. The packers had the unpopular end of the dispute. No doubt the general outcry against trusts and combinations was to no small extent responsible for this.

"Socialists expect nothing from rioting that can in any possible manner advance their cause. If the sham attacks upon the trusts in the capitalist press encourage rioting, when a trust gets at outs with its employees, it is the business of the capitalists to exorcise the devil they have conjured up as best they can.

"But the changed character of the riot is nevertheless good evidence that class antagonisms are becoming more distinctive and gradually approaching their culminating point."

—F. Marion Crawford, the well-known novelist, in an interview in New York recently, said he believed the world is drifting into Socialism. "I hope and believe," he declared, "it will be brought about by peaceful means and without resort to violence."

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

When I saw no display headlined columns any morning during the week about the miners' strike (i. e., the plutocrats' strike against the rest of the world's right to organize) I knew that the enemies of American manhood had no victories to record. Surely this hot-blooded hatred of oranization by American editors, varied by their intervals of cold-blooded unsympathy, is a clear proof of how entirely America's great experiment of democracy is left to be wrought out by the working people through Socialism.

One morning a cry went up in Pennsylvania that a heavy fall of rain, by threatening flooded mines, would help the high-toned sons of avarice to reason with the rest of the world and bring them to honest terms with their men, and so restore peace and decency to the iron state. I therefore listened, on the next Sabbath, to hear of public prayers being offered up in all the churches for an Elisha rainstorm, but no prayers went up from the churches. How is this, Elisha? Do not the miners pay your salary? It is hard to serve two masters, my fellow slave, Elisha.

Not all the arts of soiled rhetoric and spoiled patriotism combined can evermore give the dignity of old ideals to modern wars and warriors. Commercialism stifles greatness; the soul of the modern hero, grown under the bargain counters of trade, is a soul that can only bargain for a bargain, even with sword in hand, and a soul that will never draw a sword as long as it can draw a cheque. Gomez of Cuba was slain with a cheque, Palma is chained with obligations to sugar, alias the United States; and from the first tear up to the last lie that we have expended on Cuba it has been all sugar, except for those who shall work in the corn fields to pay up the bribes.

I can now well remember when the great (?) daily papers began to praise Gomez. I am also instructively impressed with the eulogies bestowed upon Palma by the same old prostitute drabs of capitalism. It was when the military power of Gomez was chequed and when a safe first President was chequed into office. This chequered close of the Cuban war, with heroics piled upon our late adversaries, so closely resembles the closing of the Boer-British war as to suggest analogies between "perfidious Albion" and Columbia, her sister. They cannot help it; it is the way they were brought up.

Considering all the centuries through which professional priesthoods have been teazing the human race with sin studies, it is amazing with what ease and success a modern capitalistic scribbler, crookedly born and crookedly brought up, can float lies out upon the public mind. So insidious and finished is this art of the daily lie-floating, beginning with "It is said," "We have reason to believe," "The public interest demands," etc., etc., that it would require a college of specialists in tergiversation to purge our dailies of that microbe. It is now "rumored" that King Edward's rheumatism is only the first symptom of not being coronated on account of the omniscient anarchist. "Behold how great a fire a little spark kindleth."

If I were a Carnegie wanting to dispose of millions, I would spend them for one rational definition of the phrase "our country." In the present economic war of civilization, a phrase that would be as useable to all as the word regiment is to a military man; a definition not idealistic but real, representing the human life on this continent. To make such a definition possible is the mission of Socialism.

"Be sure your sin will find you out when the chickens come to roost," is strangely verified in the case of the late President Cleveland, Presbyterian, now hobnobbing with O'Brien, the Jesuit injunction judge, and Fitzgerald of the same bench of lay bishops, getting a degree of jurisprudence from the cowled authorities of Catholicism. Considering that government by injunction commenced with Cleveland, and that government by injunction and appeal is likely to take the place of government by public consent and congress in this much-sat-upon democracy; it is fitting that Cleveland should break bread with the executioners. "The chickens have come home to roost." Workmen of America, keep your eye on the judges at the ballot boxes; see what school they hail from. Your country's darker days are in their hands.

It will certainly be a very much straighter business to the end, if as in Pawtucket, the depraved deputy hitherto picked up by capitalism to menace the public safety and to put down Labor, shall be permanently succeeded by the military. Deputies selected by the law and order class apparently for no other reason than that they are of the strenuous criminal class who dodge jail, have added to their infamy the curse of irresponsibility. Not so the military. The statesmen must stand at the ballot boxes for their crimes.

The professional newspaper incendiary, with whose work of incitement to violence and repression the laboring world of America has been so long acquainted, is again loose. Readers of the New York dailies were face to face with this false and malignant spirit when they read the other morning the reports of the Paterson dyers' melee. Not a syllable of balanced thought, but a wild skreed of denunciation. Not one word of perspective, of antecedent, of the right before, or the wrong before, but an attempt at a scribbler's assassination of Labor. If those reporters were avowedly engaged in making war at all times upon labor these flashes of fury would be only incidents of a chronic madness. But these fellows pose as "the public," and send their editorials or reports out as "bulls," ex-cathedra, of public opinion. These are the public opinion men who advise the miners not to do anything that may estrange public opinion (?)—their public opinion. What could the unions of America do to secure that sympathy? Disband and die. The veil recently lifted on the murder of the Paterson mill girl and which revealed the libidinous orgies of the mill-owning gentry, also revealed the source of this sort of reporting. Yet Labor will organize and save America from its enemies.

One of the advantages of a great army being controlled by commercial warriors is the guarantee of peace it gives. These officers will not expose the officers by sending the army unnecessarily forth to danger. In this one instance at least the law of self-preservation is the law of others' preservation. Thus also it is a guarantee against being wholly swallowed up at once that we have our government consisting of beet sugar men and the other sugar men. In this one instance, at least, ours is a government by two parties, and we are saved by it. When the house of greed is divided against itself, and sugar has lost the sweetness of its gilt coupons, wherewith shall patriotism be savored and what will become of the Republican party?

There is a sweet simplicity and directness of purpose in the court presentations to be made a few weeks hence before the Emperor of China. One hundred of the crack "butes" of China's entire empire of mandarinesss are to appear before the imperial child of the Sun, and he is to select out of the number an additional spouse. It is to be regretted that the offer was not extended to the ladies of other countries. My what a rush we would have had! Never mind, a lot of us will be on a similar racket at King Edward's coronation.

It seems so preposterous to the business man of America that the votes of a lot of miners should be permitted to disturb them in their contracts. Votes are well enough for electing mere governments of the United States; but to think of them being permitted to decide whether a man's income next year, out of his mill and coal investments, shall not be greater than last year, if he wants it, is too exasperating for anything, don't you know. That is just how the Socialist use of the vote hits 'em on the spot. Give it to them on the economics if you want to see them have fits.

Bourke Cockran has been plucking one Mr. Lamb, a lawyer, too. This is not the only lamb that Bourke Cockran has plucked. He plucked the financial anti-silver lambs of America during the Bryan campaign as never they were plucked before in orators' bills. He has been plucking the holy Roman Irish anti-British lambs for some years, and the pro-Boer lambs; and he is now ready for the Tammany, or any other old lambs that want plucking.

As capitalism carries its own dissolution in the characteristics of its public men, the profit monger's unstableness giving instability to all that is based upon it, so also such a governments as that of Russia, based upon the spy system and upon force, finally falls through the characteristics of the spy it has nourished and brought up; or it falls before the military force it has created to crush others. You may give life, but you cannot make it live the way you want it. Colonel Grimm, one homemade traitor alone, will now cost Russia some twenty million roubles for new forts, and in every one of her own spies she has a trained traitor. So does this inexorable law of God hold good, even against holy Russia.

It always puzzles me to understand how labor union men can sincerely expect a city like New York to employ union labor only. Corporation Counsel Rives has rightly decided that it is unconstitutional to attempt it, as any labor leader will also decide if he put on his considering cap. What agreement can there be between righteousness and Mammon? How long would American capitalism, of which New York is the breathing center, endure if the right of labor to better itself by unions were recognized? No business institution or business government will ever recognize the right of slaves to organize and fix their own daily value.

Talk about ideal conditions! The Socialist has his ideal in a democratic commonwealth based upon industry alone. The doctor has his ideal in a suburban district of very well paid annuitants or pensioners with large families of daughters. The ecclesiastic has his ideal in a teeming population constantly requiring all the sacraments. And the capitalist has his ideal in a tunnel contract under a great city which he can sublet to sublettors who can hire swarms of laborers not knowing enough of the language to protect themselves. It now transpires that these jolly contractors underground in New York City have been changing plans to suit themselves beautifully. But, having hurt Mr. Barney's house on Park avenue in their fun, there is going to be law about it.

—The labor which is the right of every man to have and to do is that which gives him the chance to express in material form the joy of his own soul. That is the chance to live. And the task of securing for every man and woman that opportunity is the best definition of religion I know.—Wm. T. Brown.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries

(and OTHERS)

New Era, Philadelphia.

All the efforts of the American Federation of Labor to induce Congress to pass a law that would exclude Chinese laborers failed. President Gompers, in the June "Federationist," tells the story of the failure of the A. F. of L. legislative committee to make Congress believe a labor organization that is afraid to go into politics can punish any congressman or senator who refuses to vote for a law in the interest of workingmen.

The Iconoclast.

Mark Hanna recently made the assertion from his senatorial toadstool that he desired no greater monument after death than to have the American people remember him as one who assisted in the abolition of the strained relations existing between capital and labor. Poor Mark has recently been suffering from insomnia because of the laboring man. Every time the strikers gain a victory over capital, dear Marcus has a three-cornered cramp in his abdomen—one corner sticking in. But he derives comfort from his recollections of the Spring Valley massacre.

Advance.

It is now (in view of the action of the Denver conventions) up to every Socialist trade unionist to use his utmost endeavor to see that Socialists are elected to the A. F. of L. convention this fall. Only by capturing that body for Socialism can a destructive interunion war be avoided. Socialists have not sought it. But Gompers has decreed that no trade union endorsing Socialism shall be allowed to exist. He has declared war against Socialism. Let us take up the gauntlet and put out of the presidency of the Federation of Labor the friend of Hanna the labor crusher. Then the American Labor Union and the A. F. of L. may unite or work together in peace and solidarity.

Cleveland Citizen.

The "Miners' Magazine," organ of the Western Federation of Labor, published at Denver, delivers the A. F. of L. a hard uppercut. It is pointed out that at the last convention of the Federation at Scranton, Pa., eight unions with 32 delegates had 3,686 votes, while 233 unions with 278 delegates had only 3,583 votes. The "Magazine" wants to know how the Federation can be reformed "under such a system of ring rule." We know of no other way except that those who desire to infuse new ideas into the big organizations should continue to advocate them until they become popular. The fact is that the delegates from the large unions are not always in accord on important questions, no more than those from the smaller organizations. Of course, it cannot be denied that the representation tends toward monarchism, instead of democracy, and there is a growing demand that a change should be made.

Colorado Chronicle.

"Blown about by every wind of doctrine." That is the condition of every Socialist until he sees the class struggle. After seeing that, "next step" propositions have no charms and no power to sidetrack from clean-cut working-class party action. Even the "Appeal to Reason" is not grounded in the doctrine or it would never have allowed a recent issue to deal exclusively with direct legislation, suggestions, for pledging candidates of all parties, etc., etc.

Direct legislation is the cornerstone of Socialism, but no one who sees how capitalism vitiates everything it touches can expect anything from its operation until the people are free. Nothing gained to-day can be more than an unused rusty tool until a class-conscious party of workers arises to free the people and then to use for the first time in history the full machinery of democracy.

Chicago Socialist.

It happens now and then that some faint glimpse of the class struggle breaks through the thick heads of our politicians, especially the sort that are prone to discover dangers that menace the community. Such a one is the governor of Iowa, who in a recent speech at Denver, declared that the government must lay its hand upon the combinations of capital. "What I have said of associated wealth," he continued, "I may repeat with respect to associated labor."

In the light of recent events in Denver where "associated labor" has just declared for Socialism, it is not difficult to fathom the reason for Governor Cummins' alarm. His idea that the government is something that holds the balance of power between capitalist and laborer is one that every supporter of the present system must pretend to believe, at least until "associated labor" makes it plain that the struggle is really for the possession of the government itself.

Piano Workers' Journal.

Compulsory arbitration, with its usual penal features, has found its way in another part of the Antipodes. The Legislature of New South Wales last December enacted a law creating a court of arbitration. Some of the provisions of this law are that no strike shall be inaugurated before a "reasonable" time has elapsed for a reference to the court of the matter in dispute, or during the pendency of any proceedings of the court in relation to an industrial dispute, or to take any act or do anything in the nature of a strike or discontinue work. Anyone who instigates or aids in any way the inauguration of a strike or suspension of work is guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction is liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding two months.

This is the goal to which some would have the labor movement tend, but against which, with pugnacious tenacity, the American trade unionists have protested and will continue to protest.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

Among all the exchanges that come to our table none is more illustrative of the international character of the Socialist movement than is the "Labor World, The Sole Organ of Labor and Socialism" in Japan. The "Labor World" is edited by Sen Katayama, the most active of the Japanese Socialists, and is now in its sixth year. Several months ago Comrade Katayama started a daily, and after publishing it for one month "lost everything but hope in Socialism." A Social Democratic Party was formerly founded in Japan, but was suppressed on the first day of its existence. The "Labor World" is a magazine of good size and appearance, containing a few pages of quaint English and the rest in Japanese. The "Labor World" professes to be class-conscious, but as far as we can tell from the few pages in English, the movement in Japan is not very clear, as is to be expected in its first stages, especially in a country such as Japan where capitalism is just reaching full development.

Some time ago Editor Katayama remarked that: "We have the labor fakirs also in Japan." And the following account of "The Miserable End of the Kyoseikwai," from a recent number of the "Labor World," reminds us very much of our own "Industrial Peace Conferences" and shows how capitalists everywhere pursue the same methods in their attempts to disrupt the labor movement:

"We have many times warned the members of the Kyoseikwai, the Engineers Union, not to betray their interests. They were at last played into the cunning and meanest hands of the Company and the Union was dessolved entirely. On the 11th and 12th the Company called together some thirty engineers representating about one thousand three hundred engineers and firemen, to discuss their interests and improvement. These representatives came up to Tokyo to be well treated by the company. It is reported that they were well supplied with drinks, appetizing dinner and beautiful girls and maids to wait on them that could be obtained at the first class restaurant in the Uyeno Park and more over they were well treated at their hotel. Thus these heroes of the former strikers now returned to their respective post well satisfied with themselves, for they had enough drinks and feasted on dinner and beautiful women! But what became of those thirteen hundred workers who are now entirely disorganized and spent all the money they saved? Alas they are sold to the company by those Kanji. Who is to blame for such manner of degrading faithful working men? The company and its officers whose purpose is to bribe them in order to crush the bone and sinew of our industry so that they could do whatever they wish to do with their employees."

The above incident would delight the managers of the Civic Federation.

That capitalism is rapidly developing in Japan and taking the same course there that it does everywhere else is shown by the following items from the pages of our Japanese contemporary:

"Trust fever just began to rage in Japan. A match trust of 12,000,000 was formed by American capital. It is reported that the Goulds tribe is the chief investor while a high collar gentleman Mr. Shizuo Kondo promoter."

"The Uraga Ship Building Co. bought up the branch factory of the Ishikawajima Ship Building Co. Ship Owners Trust was to be formed."

"The Kanegafuchi Spinning Factory is trying to swallow up the Kiushiu Spinning."

The following is typical of the attempts of the ruling class in all lands to sidetrack the revolutionary movements by palliatives to quiet discontent:

"There appeared series of articles in the Osaka daily during latter part of January last. They were stenographic opinions told by Hon. Funio Yano, late minister to China, on the subject of social reform. These articles came out now in a book form which was sent to us by the author. The book deals with the author's scheme of social reform and the author professes himself as a moderate socialist in contradistinction to a social democrat. The ideas and principles of the author's scheme are originated in the Prince Bismarck's working man's insuranse schemes, and they are modified to suit the present condition of our society."

Brother Katayama does not seem to see through these Bismarckian tactics and takes occasion to "congratulate the proletariats of Japan in finding such a noble champion in Hon. Funio Yano!" Bitter experience will doubtless give our Japanese comrades a clearer conception of the class struggle and teach them to beware of all reforms proposed by the capitalist class. The machinations of this embryo Bismarck would seem to show that the ruling class of Japan is keenly alive to the dangers of a revolutionary movement and anxious to divert it from its purpose and quell discontent by surface concessions.

The "Labor World" reports that "Socialism in Japan is becoming more and more influential among all classes. The Socialist Association has been ever so active that its members are increasing. The Socialist literature and books are studied more and more. Oppressive measures adapted by the existing authority are so stimulating to the movement."

We stretch out a hand across the sea to Comrade Katayama and wish more power to his pen.

—President Roosevelt has denounced lynching in the South, but up to the present has not found occasion to say a word about the murderous system of child labor in that part of the land. No capitalists are drawing a profit from lynching.—Chicago Socialist.

PARTY NOTES.

John C. Chase spoke this week before locals and trade unions at Omaha, Neb., Council Bluffs, Fort Dodge, Perry, and Boone, Iowa.

The Labor Lecture Bureau is negotiating for the services of one or two of the best German speakers for a tour under its auspices.

Comrade Nic Geiger commences his tour among the miners' unions of Pennsylvania, June 25, at Carbondale.

The Colorado state convention will be held at Colorado Springs on July 4.

Carl Thompson is following up his agitation work in Oregon with a tour of Colorado.

Father Hagerty met Rev. David Utter, a Protestant minister, in debate on the subject of Socialism in Denver on June 15. If the reports of the local dailies can be believed, Father Hagerty made a clear case for Socialism and carried the audience with him.

Local Seattle, Wash., is still "booming"—took in fifteen new members at the last meeting.—Comrade Burgess is at work in the state, speaking at Everett, Mt. Vernon, Burlington, Wooley, Fairhaven, Whatcom, and other places. —Three new locals have recently been chartered and six others are awaiting the next meeting of the State Committee.

Third Assistant Flunkey General Edwin, C. Madden has apparently regretted that he tried to choke off the Seattle "Socialist." He found he had blundered into a hornet's nest and has now retreated. The "Socialist" has been informed that "until further advised" its right to second-class mail rates will be respected.

The report of the California State Committee shows fifty locals, of which forty-three are in good standing. Locals Alameda and Oakland recently combined into one body. Nomination papers for the state ticket are about to be filed. 15,000 signatures having been secured, while only 9,000 are required by law.

California Socialists are planning a monster picnic at Long Beach on the Fourth of July, with Walter Thomas Mills as speaker at three great meetings. They do these things on a large scale out West.

The "Los Angeles Socialist" is keeping up its war against child-labor in that city. It is a hard fight, but the increase of the Socialist vote this fall will have its effect on the exploiters of babies.

The "Undercurrent," the Socialist weekly of San Bernardino, Cal., is making lively war upon the local traction company for its disregard of all public interests, and is, at the same time, vigorously championing the cause of the striking boilermakers.

H. C. Darrah, formerly of California, is now in Utah, having passed through Arizona and New Mexico on his agitation tour.

Oklahoma Socialists held territorial convention on June 21 at Oklahoma City.

Arrangements are being made by the Connecticut State Committee to send an organizer around the state for a month or more. It is expected that Comrade Caldwell of Philadelphia will be secured and will begin work in Connecticut about the middle of July. During the week ending July 6, W. E. White will visit the towns of Meriden, Southington, New Britain, Middletown, where it is expected that branches will be organized. Readers of The Worker in these towns who can help the organizer in any way should write the State Secretary.

A mass meeting will be held at Bayonne, N. J., on Sunday, June 29, at 8 p. m., under the auspices of the Socialist Educational Club, in the new headquarters of the Club, corner of Avenue C and Nineteenth street. All readers of The Worker are invited to attend and to bring their friends with them. Comrade Chas. Ufert of West Hoboken will speak on the subject: "What Shall We Do about the Trusts?"

State Secretary Barnes of the Socialist Party of Pennsylvania has received the following letter from Secretary Wassman of Garment Cutters' and Trimmers' Union No. 110, Philadelphia:

"At the regular meetnig of L. U. No. 110, held on June 16, a resolution endorsing the candidates and the platform of the Socialist Party in the state of Pennsylvania was adopted.

"Our members were urged to work earnestly for the candidates between now and Election Day. We sincerely hope that the party will, if not able to elect its candidates, make such a showing when the vote is counted, that it will strike fear in both of the old parties."

The Socialists of Luzerne County held their county convention last Sunday, with a hundred delgates present, representing Wilkes Barre, Nanticoke, Pittston, Luzerne, Edwardsdale, Duryea, and Plymouth. Charles F. Quinn was nominated for Congress, with a full county ticket headed by Nym Seward for Treasurer.

Comrade Collins held five meetings in and around Carbondale, Pa., last week, with the best of results. Comrade Monaghan writes: "Collins has done good work. He is just the right kind of man for the people in this section. We were at Jermyn, a little town two miles below here, first, and had an audience of about three hundred. Collins' speech got their full approval. We can start an organization in that place soon. He then spoke at Simpson, above this city, and had a similar crowd there. They will start a local. At Duffie's Field there was a big crowd and thirty-eight men gave in their names for the party. The largest meeting of all was at Archbald, seven miles below Carbondale. They will calll a meeting next week to form a local. The workmen about here are red-hot for the movement. They are reading the papers, leaflets, and pamphlets sent us from the office of The Worker, and we can make use of as much more literature as you will send. We are going to work hard and stick to it till we get every workingman and boy in the place."

Comrade Haywood had an effective little communication on Socialism in the Philadelphia "Bulletin" of June 16. Many daily papers publish communications on questions of public interest, and comrades should make use of such opportunities. Write briefly, clearly, and to the point, use ink, and write on only one side of the paper, and you will have a good chance of carrying some suggestions about Socialism to a large number of people whom you cannot reach otherwise.

The State Committee acknowledges the receipt of 50 cents from Philip Bauer and $1 from four Oneida comrades, whose names cannot be mentioned on account of the tyranny of the local bosses who have determined to crush all workingmen who show any manly independence.

The General Committee of Local New York meets at the Labor Lyceum Saturday evening, June 28. This is the last meeting of the present committee, and all delegates should be present.

The Kings County Committee meets at the Socialist Club, near Ralph avenue and Fulton street, Saturday evening, June 28.

The last meeting of Speakers' Club was well attended and unusual interest was manifested. Comrade Fieldman took the lead in a debate on "Issues of the Next Campaign," speaking from a capitalist standpoint. A protracted discussion followed, twelve speakers replying for the Socialist side. Until further notice meetings of the Club will take place Tuesday evenings at 64 E. Fourth street. The next debate will have for its subject "The Philippine Question." All comrades interested in the next campaign are requested to be on hand.

The Brooklyn Speakers' Club will hold its second meeting Monday evening, June 30. These meetings are preparatory to open-air agitation work. All interested in such work are invited to attend.

The Entertainment Committee of Local New York met the last two Mondays to complete arrangements for the party picnic to be held on Sunday, June 29, at Sulzer's Westchester Park. Nearly all the delegates of subdivisions were present. All necessary committees were elected. The report of the arrangements committee shows that all has been done to make the affair enjoyable. There will be fun for young and old, prizes for those who bowl, and other games. Those who have accepted on committees and all those who are willing to help out on the day of the picnic are requested to report at the committee room at the park at noon. There are a few places vacant and volunteers are wanted.

Local Richmond, N. Y., and Local Waterbury, Conn., are arranging to hold picnics for the benefit of the Socialist Daily Fund.

All organizations in or near New York in sympathy with the project of a Socialist Daily are requested to leave open the dates from Mar. 28 to Apr. 6, 1903, as a grand fair will be held for the Daily Fund at that time.

At the last meeting of the 34th A. D. the agitation committee reported the outdoor meeting a great success. Comrade Fieldman held the closest attention of the crowd from beginning to end. Comrade Elges sold fifty copies of The Worker and a dollar's worth of books and pamphlets. It was decided to hold another meeting Saturday evening, June 28, at One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street and Willis avenue. Business meetings of the District are held every Friday at 380 Willis avenue.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville held a well attended and interesting meeting last Thursday, at which the new officers took their places. The quarterly reports showed the Club in excellent condition as to membership and finances. The picnic of Jan. 15 was a complete success, financially and socially. At last week's meeting the subject for discussion was the question whether Socialists and trade unionists ought to join the militia or army. Comrades Friedl, Sprotte, Günther, Herbert, C. Oerter, Deyerberg, and others spoke, and the discussion was found so interesting that after the time had been extended fifteen minutes it was decided to take the matter up again at the next meeting, June 26. During July and August the Club will meet only on the second and fourth Thursdays of the month; but in September weekly meetings will be resumed.

The Young Men's Social Democratic Club of the 19th and 20th A. D., Brooklyn, holds its first annual outing at Grauer's Woods, Myrtle avenue, Glendale, L. I., Sunday, June 29. In order to make the affair a success all the efforts of the members and comrades are required, since the Club is young and its financial strength does not yet come up to its needs. There will be amusements for young and old. The grounds are large enough to accommodate all comers, so no one need fear overcrowding. To reach the place take the surface or elevated cars to Ridgewood and transfer to Richmond Hill cars. Come and bring your friends.

The Club meets every Monday evening at 238 Central avenue. H. Koenen is the Secretary. All young men in sympathy with the Socialist movement who live in the vicinity are invited to join.

Local Peekskill has elected E. L. Holmes and John J. Heleker, Jr., as delegates to the State Convention of July 4. A. F. Simmonds, John F. McGovern, and Charles H. Hahn are the delegates to the Westchester County Convention. The officers of the Local, elected at the last regular meeting, are: Organizer and Literature Agent, Simmonds; Financial Secretary and Treasurer, Heleker; Recording Secretary, McGovern. The Local is in thriving condition.

The Local held a very successful meeting on June 21, with Comrade Spring as speaker. He held the crowd to the last. Two hundred copies of the Meat Trust leaflet and one hundred and fifty of the leaflet on the New York Central crime were distributed, and a number of pamphlets sold. The Local now has thirty members in good standing; most of them hard and steady workers for the cause.

A new local of the Social Democratic Party was organized at Highland Falls, Orange County, N. Y., last week with eight charter members—three carpenters, two masons, a painter, a tinsmith, and a tailor—all of them intelligent and class-conscious workingmen. G. J. Lindboe is Organizer, with F. M. Dennis as Recording Secretary and Literature Agent and Frank E. Brechbiel as Financial Secretary. Comrade Lindboe has worked for the cause of Socialism in past years in Norway and he and his comrades propose to make Socialism thoroughly known in their portion of this state before next Election Day.

STRIKE PROPAGANDA FUND.

The National Secretary acknowledges donations for the Strike Propaganda Fund as follows: C. R. Mitchell, Geuda Springs, Kas., $1.20; W. I. Phifer, California, Mo., $1; Local Springfield, O., $1; G. S. Klepstad, Hillsboro, N. D., 75 cents; Local Ashtabula, O., $4.50; Local Peekskill, N. Y., $1; J. W. Hanson, East Las Vegas, N. M., 20 cents; B. F. Ordway, Peoria, Ill., $1; Local Orlando, Fla., $5; 21st Ward, St. Louis, $1.20; total, $16.85.

All moneys contributed to this fund are to be used in furthering the propaganda of Socialism among the striking miners. Send contributions to Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary, Emilie Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

"Unconditional surrender" is the reply of President Geo. F. Baer to the striking miners.

"The only settlement that can take place will be for the strikers to return to work. That is what we are waiting for. There can be no outside interference. All the king's horses and all the king's men cannot effect a settlement in other ways. I cannot say when the strike will end, but it can only end in one way—by the strikers returning to work."

Another president adds: "If there are any real grievances, the operators will be willing to confer with their own employees when they return to work."

The operators will, of course, decide themselves whether there are any "real grievances."

Exactly! A slave-holder addressing his runaway slaves could not size up the situation more neatly: Come back and submit yourselves to my will and authority. I will then decide whom to punish and whom to forgive. To some who claim they have not enough to eat, the lash will be applied. Others who have protested that their work was too heavy, I will send to the auction block. Those whose services are valuable to me will be returned to the fields of labor as long as I choose they shall stay there."

Let us admit that as the capitalist surveys the industrial situation all over the country—the increasing number of strikes and the alarming persistence of the laborer's claim for "a little—just a LITTLE more" of the wealth he creates—the striking advantages of the old chattel slavery system must stand out before him, tantalizingly, in bold relief. The present wage system is getting just a little shaky. The bare possibility of the laborer's ever being able to sell their labor upon their own terms is enough to fill his soul with abhorrence and dread. This must be prevented at any cost.

The Union is responsible for the growing insolence of these men. Therefore, this Union must be crushed, and unionism all over the country must be wiped out. Why, it is a worse institution than the "Underground Railroad" during the days of chattel slavery! "If these men are allowed to ask for 'a little more' and still 'a little more' every year, what will become of OUR PROFITS?" cry operators, railroad magnates, and manufacturers in chorus—for well enough they know that their profits represent what the men ask for and have really earned.

We have reason to know that the miners and other wage-slaves are beginning to have their faith shaken in the present glorious system of "free labor." Their eyes are not turning back to chattel slavery, but forward to real justice and freedom. From end to end of this state, it is every day becoming easier for our Socialist speakers to gain a hearing, while among the miners only the size of the halls or the reaching power of the speaker's voice limits the number that eagerly listens. Comrades Spargo and Mailly have already given their testimony on this point.

Three charters were granted in the week—to New Brighton, Pittston, and Carbondale; the latter place forming two branches, one with sixteen members and the South Side branch with thirty-eight.

County conventions were held in Wilkes Barre for Luzerne County and in Reading for Berks County, and full tickets nominated in each.

Several other counties are preparing to hold conventions. There will be about twice as many county tickets in the field this year as there were last.

Austin has secured permanent headquarters, where meetings are held every week, and many new members added to the roll.

Comrade Collins held splendid meetings in Scranton, Carbondale, Jermyn, Simpson, Pittston, and Archbald. The last named place will apply for a charter. Collins is now in the strike district, speaking twice a day, and some days holds three meetings. He complains that the amount of literature at hand is insufficient, and our literature fund is exhausted.

Contributions have been received as follows: Socialist League, Philadelphia, $11; L. Wettenberg, Philadelphia, $5; Mathilden Well, Kennebunkport, Me., $10; E. N. A NEW BRANCH IN THE ORANGES.

Organizer Neben of Local Essex County, N. J., has made arrangements for the formation of a branch covering Orange, East Orange, West Orange, South Orange, and Orange Valley, to be called Branch 9 of Local Essex County. A suitable meeting place has been found at the hall used by the Orange Trades Council, 18 Cone street, near Main; the Orange and Passaic Valley trolley passes the door.

The first meeting, for organization of the branch, will be held at this hall on Thursday evening, June 26. All party members in the Oranges or sympathizers there wishing to join the party are called upon to be present, so that a strong working branch may be organized at once.

Comrade Neben reports that in addressing meetings of carpenters, hatters, and other trade unionists, a number of these told him they were pleased to hear that a branch was to be formed in the vicinity and promised to do all in their power to make it a success.

There is a good field for Socialist propaganda here, which has never been properly cultivated, and now is the time to bring the ideas of Socialism to the minds of the wage-workers in the Oranges in such a thorough manner as to ensure early victory at the polls.

IN NEWARK UNIONS.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Press Committee of Branch 4 have been so absorbed lately in preparing for the coming campaign that they have neglected to inform The Worker of the good work that is being accomplished in the various labor organizations of this city. We are happy to report progress all along the line—a progress that has a definite meaning.

At the present time we have good loyal comrades from fourteen organizations in the trade union movement enrolled upon the books of Branch 4 and they are invariably men of ability and power in their respective unions.

Branch 4 will be well represented at the convention of the State Federation of Labor to be held at Trenton in August, as no less than six comrades have already been slated to represent their various unions there. Reports from various parts of the state show very plainly that the Socialists will be more strongly represented in the State Federation this year than ever before. An effort will be made to send a man to New Orleans from the state of New Jersey who will represent the trade union and working class movement at the convention of the American Federation of Labor. Heretofore the man elected to represent the workers of the trust-ridden state of New Jersey in the A. F. of L. convention has invariably been a tool of one of the capitalistic parties, a man who was considered "safe," a man who would consent to be handled by the oily clique, headed by President Gompers, a man whose opposition to Socialism was pronounced. This year, however, they will be up against an organized fight. The political heelers in the labor movement at this coming convention will run up against clean and honorable men who will be well prepared with facts and figures to refute their specious arguments, and who will appeal to the honest intelligence of the assembled delegates, instead of resorting to the cheap chicanery of the politician. Then, if we win a victory, it will be a clean and honest victory, and that is the only kind that a Socialist wants.

An organized effort is being made by Essex County Socialists to bring before the various unions the proceedings of the recent conventions of the American Labor Union and the Western Federation of Miners. It is safe to say that there are at least 30,000 organized workers in Essex County who have not even heard of those conventions. Why? Simply because the Newark dailies have studiously avoided mentioning the subject at all, and the "conservative" leaders are making every effort to suppress the glorious truth. Only the workers who are subscribers to Socialist papers are aware of the great events going on in the labor world. However, special literature is being prepared bearing upon those conventions, and in another month every local body of labor in Essex County will know just what happened in Denver, why it happened and how it happened. In this we are especially indebted to Comrade George N. Wright, formerly of Branch 4, but who is now located in Denver, and who was a spectator at both conventions. Comrade Wright has furnished us files of all the Denver papers bearing on the question, also the news from Trinidad, Colo., that the State Federation of Labor endorsed and adopted the Socialist platform in spite of the agents of the A. F. of L., who were sent to head off such action.

Comrade E. C. Wind is doing heroic work among the Jewelry Workers. He has called two mass meeting recently, which has had a tendency to strengthen the local greatly.

The hirelings of the Democratic party are already trying to create "issues" in order to fool organized labor, and then dump them if victorious. For instance, they propose to make a grand-stand play regarding the violation of child-labor laws and the attitude of Governor Murphy in ignoring the protests of the Glass Workers' Union. But a year ago, when those same hirelings were crawling in order to get the Essex Trades Council to endorse Seymour, it was the Socialists in that body who proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that Seymour, the so-called "friend of organized labor," was employing in his machine shop non-union men. It was the Socialists who went to a mass meeting of machinists in Lyric Hall and proved their statements true, and the Socialists will combat the trickery of the Democratic pluggers in the labor movement in the coming campaign. It indeed looks very blue for the Committee of Fifty this year. They will not get the rake-off they did last year, unless they can find some way of squelching those wicked Socialists.

But the Socialists are in the fight to stay, and the vote in November will mark the doom of some men who are pleased to pose as the "safe and conservative" leaders—aye, leaders who would lead the workers to the trough of the Democratic party and preach to them the virtues of Grover Cleveland, the acting president of the A. F. of L.

THE COMMITTEE.

CHASE'S TOUR.

Comrade Chase makes the following report of his work to National Secretary Greenbaum, under date of June 19 at Perry, Ia.:

"During the last two weeks I have addressed meetings in Sedalia, Higginsville, St. Joseph, and Stanberry, Mo., Omaha, Neb., Council Bluffs, Fort Dodge, Perry, and Boone, Ia. The meetings in Higginsville, St. Joseph, Omaha, Council Bluffs, and Fort Dodge were all well attended. The others were not what they should have been. Two of the latter were under the auspices of railroad men—one the locomotive engineers, the other the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Both of those meetings were miserably handled, there being no one seemingly, to take interest enough to do any work for the success of the meetings.

"The Omaha meeting was very good. I spoke in the park until rain interfered, then we took the crowd to the Socialist headquarters, where we continued the speaking to about four hundred people.

"The Fort Dodge meeting was under the auspices of the Carpenters' Union. They secured the opera house, hired a band, and paraded the streets, and turned out a good audience.

"I find that public meetings of this kind are something new to most of these places in Iowa, and they hardly know how to manage them. They are well pleased, however, with the idea of holding meetings, and future speakers among them will find it easier.

"There is more conservatism here among union men, and more speakers are needed among them to wake them up. Next week I have dates in Des Moines, Winterset, Albia, Ottumwa, Keokuk, and Van Horn."

The National Secretary makes a report of the receipts and expenditures of the Labor Lecture Bureau from March 24 to June 7 as follows:

EXPENSES.

Railroad fare, Chase	$95.99
Hotel, do	82.80
Salary, do	118.00
Printing advertising matter, special letter heads, envelopes, cards, etc.	50.75
Postage	49.63
Payment to addressing company	3.55
Total	$481.72

RECEIPTS.

From eight locals, Socialist Party	$36.00
From forty-eight trade unions	333.25
Profit on literature sold	7.33
Deficit	$105.14

This statement does not include the time of the National Secretary and office force nor a proposition of other operating expenses of the National Headquarters, of which the Labor Bureau is a part. On the other hand, it includes expenses of starting the work, in excess of what will regularly be incurred in any similar period, now that it is under way.

ART UNDER CAPITALISM.

The world is full of entertainers. They paint pictures—write books—make music—sing songs—blacken their faces and contort their bodies—all to amuse an idle class of parasites, a class of men and women who have managed to separate themselves from work and their fellowmen, and who must therefore be amused. These authors and painters and actors and contortionists call themselves artists, and they dance and parade before the idle public to buy a portion of the ill-gotten wealth that is extorted from the labor of the poor. * * *

The leisure class, supported by the ceaseless toil of human slaves, must be amused. This class has all the wealth and favors of the world. It must read books, hear music, see pictures, attend the theater and speculate upon the world to come. It must hire a great army of artists who give their time and energies, not to the highest creation that their souls conceive, but to producing those objects that will amuse and satisfy the ruling class. The artist lives from the labor of the poor, and to them he can give nothing in return. All the creations of his brain and brush must go to adorn the mansions of the rich. The author must write the books that pander to the things that are, else there are none to read and buy; and the church must teach that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to miss the kingdom of heaven. * * *

No true art exists that does not have as its fundamental purpose the desire to better and to serve mankind. The prophets and seers and saviors of the earth have given freely of their power and genius to help their fellowman. Ever and ever again have the rulers of the world taken them to the top of a high mountain, and pointing to all the kingdoms of the earth have offered these in payment for their souls. Few have been so brave and strong as to resist the proffered bribe. Few have cared to stand with the outlawed and oppressed against the powerful and the great.—Clarence S. Darrow, in an essay on Tolstoi, in The Rubric.

R·I·P·A·N·S

A year ago last June I was troubled greatly with indigestion after meals. Often upon retiring at night I would be seized with dizziness, which often kept me awake for hours. I was recommended to take Ripans Tabules by one of my friends who had himself found use for them. I immediately found relief in their use and have since had no return of my complaints.

DEBS STAYS IN DENVER.

Has Decided to Make His Future Home There and Is in Great Demand as a Speaker.

BUTTE, Mont., June 17.—Eugene V. Debs spoke here last night to a crowd of trade unionists that filled the Auditorium. He gave them straight Socialism from A to Z, and they responded with ringing cheers. Last night's meeting has attracted great interest.

He has gone on to fill a number of engagements in Washington and British Columbia, after which he will give Butte a return visit.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 19—Eugene V. Debs spoke to an audience of more than a thousand workingmen at McKinley hall last night. The audience was with him, if we may judge by applause. Comrade Joseph Gilbert presided.

Comrade Debs has decided to make his home in Denver, and will be actively engaged in the Socialist and trade union movement there, which shows such remarkable signs of increased activity. The "Colorado Chronicle" says:

"The announcement that Eugene V. Debs will in future make his permanent headquarters in Denver is received with satisfaction by the laboring men of this state generally. Mr. Debs has lecture engagements that will require at least months to complete, and hence for that length of time will be in the city very little. However, he expects to take an active interest in the coming political campaign in Colorado, and will visit most of the larger towns in the state and address the people."

Comrade Debs will undoubtedly be kept busy in Denver and the neighboring states and the workingmen of the region are to be congratulated on having the benefit of his services. The comrades of the east of the Mississippi willl have to make up the loss by increased activity—and they will look to Colorado and Idaho for inspiration in the shape of a large Socialist vote next fall.

CONTRASTED POLICIES IN LABOR MOVEMENT.

The following item of news from the "Colorado Chronicle" sets in vivid contrast the policy of the American Labor Union and that of the American Federation of Labor:

"The United Association of Hotel and Restaurant Employees of Salt Lake City are out on strike to help the Bakers' Union in support of their contention for better conditions. They are affiliated with the Utah State Federation of Labor, which is the local central body of Salt Lake City, and were ordered out by that body. The Bakers' Union is a subordinate union of their international union which is affiliated with the A. F. of L. The Hotel and Restaurant Employees is a subordinate of a national that is affiliated with the American Labor Union. The local situation demanded that they stay together, and the central acted for that purpose. There is a dual union of Cooks and Waiters in Salt Lake City instituted by the A. F. of L. for the avowed purpose of disrupting the original union. This dual union is not recognized by the central body, and the A. F. of L. adherents are now busily engaged in filling the places of the strikers. This shows that the A. F. of L. people are attempting to break the strike, and break the Bakers' Union in order to get at the American Labor Union. This seems to be the attitude of the A. F. of L. in labor affairs throughout the West."

The A. L. U. supports the strikers even of unions which are not affiliated with it. The A. F. of L. takes advantage of strikes to force the unions that are in trouble to obey its mandates.

THE WALL STREET PIT.

I see a hell of faces surge and whirl
Like maelstrom in the ocean—faces lean
And fleshless as the talons of a hawk—
Hot faces, like the faces of the wolves
That track the traveler fleeing through the night—
Grim faces, shrunken up and fallen in,
Deep plowed, like weather-eaten bark of oak—
Drawn faces, like the faces of the dead,
Grown suddenly old upon the brink of earth.
Is this a whirl of madmen, ravening
And blowing bubbles in their merriment?
Is Babel come again, with shrieking crew,
To eat the dust and drink the roaring wind?
And all for what? A handful of bright sand
To buy a shroud with and a length of earth?
Oh, saner are the hearts on stiller ways!
Thrice happier they who, far from these wild hours,
Grow softly as the apples on a bough;
Wiser the plowman, with his scudding blade,
Turning a straight, fresh furrow down a field;
Wiser the herdsman, whistling to his heart,
In the long shadows at the break of day;
Wiser the fisherman, with quiet hand
Slanting his sail against the evening wind.
The swallow sweeps back from the south again,
The green of May is edging all the boughs,
The shy arbutus glimmers in the wood,
And yet this hell of faces in the town—
This roar of giddying madness surging on,
Surrounded by the quiets of the hills;
With great calm star forever overhead
And, under all, the silence of the dead!
—Edwin Markham.

——Are you looking for the eternal world? It is here and now. Are you seeking for contact with the power that makes for righteousness? It is you; you are it. Not the individual trying to find salvation from the hell of a theological nightmare, but the citizen and state and nation ministering bravely and reverently to the needs, not of dollars, but of men.—Wm. T. Brown.

ANOTHER UNION FOR SOCIALISM.

International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Adopts Socialist Resolutions and Elects Socialist Delegate to American Federation.

In the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in New York City, the following resolutions, introduced by the Manhattan Knife Cutters' Association, were adopted by a large majority:

"Whereas, The experience of the labor movement in this country during the past two decades proves beyond a doubt that our great republic is controlled by a small class of capitalists whose chief aim is to pass such laws and interpret them in such manner as to make it natural and inevitable for the many to be exploited by the few;

"Whereas, After many years of organized effort on the economic field, the working class has failed to arrest the oppressing tendencies of the capitalist class, and is therefore to-day more than ever dependent for its existence on the caprice of those who own and control the mines, factories, shops, railways, mills, the bulk of the land and all the other means of production, as well as the legislative halls, the executive mansions and the judicial chambers;

"Whereas, Under such a condition of affairs the workingmen must ever struggle bitterly for a mere pittance, in order that their masters or employers should be surrounded by all kinds of imaginable luxury—the workingmen toiling from morning till night, with no rest, no pleasure, no family life worth speaking of, no home deserving of the name, living in a most unwholesome atmosphere, breathing the germs of deadly disease, sapping their life-energy, dying a slow death at an early age, all because the capitalists of the land, in their greed for political, social, and economic power, demand profit;

"Whereas, Better conditions cannot be hoped for through the aid of those who oppress and live upon the back of Labor, past history corroborating the poet's famous saying: 'Who would be free, himself must strike the blow;'

"Resolved, That we, the delegates assembled at the convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, declare that the time has arrived for the workingmen of this country to organize themselves as a class politically, on a platform voicing the interests of Labor as a class, for the purpose of restoring the United States to the people of the United States; the country to be collectively owned and controlled by all and for the benefit of all the people."

Peter Schlesinger of Chicago, a member of the Socialist Party, was elected as the delegate of the International Union to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor. The Union has a membership of about ten thousand.

It is evident that there will be a larger proportion than ever of progressive trade unionists at the New Orleans convention.

HAYES IS ELECTED.

Runs Second and Carries Forty Per Cent of Vote for Delegates of I. T. U. to Federation.

The official statement of the canvassing board of the International Typographical Union confirms the report that Comrade Max S. Hayes of Cleveland has been elected as one of the three delegates of the I. T. U. to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor.

About 25,600 votes were cast for delegates, with nine candidates in the field, and Hayes ran second on the list. Wm. M. Garrett of Washington led with 12,697; Hayes followed with 11,141; and Frank Morrison of Chicago received 10,940, winning third place over M. P. Walsh of Milwaukee by a plurality of 325 votes.

The New York Typographical Union, No. 6, had two candidates in the field, August McCraith, who received 9,299, and Eugene F. O'Rourke, who polled 7,384.

No. 6 gave Hayes 1,040 votes out of a total of 4,300.

Cleveland, No. 53, gave Hayes practically its full vote. He had 286 and the other eight candidates, combined, had 443.

Hayes has already been in several conventions of the Federation, but only as a delegate of the Cleveland Central Labor Union, and with a single vote. The three delegates of the I. T. U. will divide among them about three hundred votes in the New Orleans convention.

"BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS."

It is a very hopeful sign of the rising intelligence of the Union Traction employees that they are becoming alive to the true character of the so-called "benevolent association" which the bosses are trying to force upon them as a substitute for the union. The demand for its abolition on the part of the men is a practical recognition on their part of the falsity of the declaration that the interests of Capital and Labor are identical. There's no sentiment in business, no room whatever for disinterested benevolence, Capitalism isn't built that way.—Chicago Socialist.

Tolstoy has well said that the rich are ready to do anything for the poor except get off their backs. The capitalists will get off the workers' backs only when the workers resolve that they will no longer be beasts of burden to be clubbed or pelted at a master's whim.

The "benevolent associations," "workingmen's clubs," and other institutions of the sort, in which capitalists embody their pretended love for the workers, are actually nothing but devices for distracting the workers' attention from their real interest and making them into willing slaves. The only workingmen's organizations that are useful to the working class are the ones that the capitalists hate.

MICHIGAN STRIKE MAKES SOCIALISTS.

Virtually a Lockout, Aimed at Workmen and Small Capitalists—Morgan May Overreach Himself.

The Cleveland "Citizen" quotes John McGarvey, a prominent member of the Mine Workers' Union in the Saginaw, Mich., district as saying, in regard to the present strike in that region:

"The Pere Marquette Railway controls most of the large mines in Michigan, and the magnates are trying to kill two birds with one stone. They forced us on strike for the purpose of destroying our organization, and in keeping us out they also expect to drive the small mine-owners into bankruptcy and grab their possessions for a mere song. J. P. Morgan is said to be behind the scheme.

"You would be surprised to learn the change of political opinion among our people in and about Saginaw. They are beginning to understand that there is a class struggle, and the result is that the boys are cutting away from the old political hacks and coming out for Socialism. Watch and see if our people don't break into the offices in Saginaw and other mining centers of Michigan."

The growth of the vote of the Socialist Party in Michigan in the state and local elections of the last two years certainly justifies Comrade McGarvey's prediction. The Michigan miners are setting a good example for their brothers now on strike in Pennsylvania and the Virginias to follow. Morgan may overreach himself, as grasping tyrants generally do.

WILL APPEAL TO KNOX.

The convention of the National Plumbers' Association—the employing plumbers' organization—at its meeting in Atlantic City two weeks ago adopted a resolution pledging every member not to give employment to any one of the three journeymen plumbers now on strike at New Castle, Pa.

On the ground of this action and of a resolution, providing that all master plumbers outside of the Association shall be charged 20 per cent. more for supplies than is charged of members, the striking plumbers have decided to call upon Attorney-eneral Knox to say whether or not the Plumbers' Association has violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

It is safe to say that the honorable ex-attorney of the Steel Trust and present Attorney-General of the United States will either pay no attention of the query or will give the journeymen plumbers a learned justification of the master plumbers' action.

PIANO WORKERS IN BROOKLYN LOCKED OUT.

The local Piano and Organ Workers' Union furnishes the following statement in regard to the lockout of the employees in O. Wissner's factory in Brooklyn:

At a meeting of Wissner's employees on Thursday evening, June 5, it was voted to send a committee to Mr. Wissner in regard to some slight grievances.

Some person not authorized to do so seems to have given Mr. Wissner a wrong account of the grievances. Wissner then refused to see any committee of his employees. On the following Monday he called all the employees together, informed them that they were all discharged, and that he would not deal with them as a body, but would take them back only as individuals—which meant that he would not further recognize the Piano and Organ Workers' International Union.

The employees then left in a body and went directly to their meeting room, where they voted to consult the Greater New York Executive Board. On the advice of the Executive Board they applied to the International headquarters at Chicago for authority to resist the lockout, which was immediately granted. Pickets were accordingly appointed to patrol the vicinity and warn applicants for employment of the facts.

On roll-call, 97 out of 128 employees responded to the call of the Union. Ten more had come out at the date of the statement, June 19. The only men remaining were mill hands.

The men are determined to fight the matter to the end. Their brothers in the trade have promptly responded to a call for funds, and as yet no scabs have gone to work.

All piano and organ workers will please stay away from Wissner's till further notice.

A MISLEADING ADVERTISEMENT.

The Typothetae or employing printers' association of Denver, Colo., has inserted in the "Inland Printer" and other papers an advertisement to the effect that there is "plenty of work for job compositors, linotype operators, pressmen, feeders, bookbinders, and bindery girls" in that city. Denver Typographical Union No. 49 officially denies the truth of the statement and warns workmen of the printing trades against being deceived by it.

A NEW MORNING WILL DAWN.

A new order of thought is abroad in the land. While at the top the corporations are strangling justice and robbing the people, underneath there is growing and rapidly spreading a general demand for more equitable conditions. All classes are expressing discontent with existing wrong, and a condemnation of the degrading commercialism of our time. An entirely new literature which breathes the spirit of human brotherhood is filling the land. The pen of the age is on the side of truth. Only the hired scribblers for the press and the capitalistic magazines are on the other side. The immediate future seems dark with much tribulation, but the hirelings who now torture labor and assassinate liberty will be buried in their own infamy. A new morning will dawn, radiant with the splendor of freedom, and the children of toil will come into their inheritance.—John P. Altgeld.

FOR THE DAILY.

Report of Progress in Gathering Funds.

Board of Management Meets and Prepares Recommendations for General Meeting of July 7.

Pressure of other work compels us to postpone for one week the publication of the list of pledges, payments, and contributions for the Socialist Daily Fund.

The new pledges for the week ending June 23 amount to $165.80, bringing the total pledged up to $6,260.80.

The week's payments on pledges amount to $178.65 and the cash contributions to $11.50. The total of cash in the fund is thus brought up to $1,858.10.

The Board of Management met last Monday, with Comrade Clarke in the chair. The question of name was first taken up and after full discussion it was decided to submit to the general meeting of the Association on July 7 these four names: "Advance," "Record," "Sentinel," and "Globe."

The Board decided also to recommend that it be a morning paper.

Other important recommendations will be brought before the meeting.

Reports ewre made on the collection of funds and other work. Comrades who have made pledges are urged not to wait for the collector, but to forward their instalments promptly.

The New Labor Paper.

The Trades Council of this city has lately started a fight against the old official organ of that body, and in its stead established a new paper called "The Union Picket." This has been widely heralded as a Socialist Paper and even the dailies are devoting columns to tirades against this "Socialist paper." Upon investigation we find that it is in no sense a Socialist paper. It is advocating trade unionism from a pure and simple standpoint, compulsory arbitration for the workers, and a labor party a la Hartford, Bridgeport, and San Francisco. All in all, it appears to be a "reformer," with the emphasis on the "er." We wish them every success, as it is a vast improvement over the old paper, but we ask these questions of them:

Why advocate compulsory arbitration when the compulsion part is in the hands of the employers?

Why advocate a labor party after the experiences in San Francisco, Hartford, and Bridgeport?

Why not support an already organized labor party—the Socialist Party?

The State Secretary

reports that he will not have the state nomination petitions ready for a few days yet, as they were obliged to have them printed in a local establishment, while previously they were furnished in legal form by the state of Ohio. He also reports new locals at Akron and Findlay, that the organizing work in the state is pushing forward rapidly, and that new locals and members are the order of the past week. This is encouraging and will certainly stimulate the Socialists in this city to activity.

The Dayton Headquarters

at 26 Pruden Building are open every day and evening and all persons are cordially invited to call at any time they desire. Literature, party papers, and magazines are always on hand. All party members are requested to keep in touch with those in charge and help to distribute the leaflets and papers and other propaganda. C.

MINERS HEAR MAILLY.

William Mailly is meeting with a cordial reception at the hands of the striking miners. He spoke at a union meeting at Freeland, near Hazleton, on Friday of last week, with the result that a mass meeting was arranged for Monday last.

The affair turned out a splendid success, and the miners were much enthused accordingly. The meeting was preceded by a parade with nearly three thousand miners in line. A band and two drum corps furnished the music. Charles Jacquot was chief marshal and also presided at the meeting.

The Opera House was packed to the doors, the windows, fire escapes, and stage being crowded. About two thousand persons were present. Burgess John F. Boyle, who is a union brewery driver, spoke first and was followed by William Dettrey, district board member and active strike leader, and who poured hot shot into the Coal Trust. John Straka, a Slovack miner, next spoke briefly in his native tongue. Followed by Comrade Mailly.

Another meeting was held at McAdoo on Tuesday afternoon, also preceded by a parade in which twenty-five hundred strikers took part. The meeting was held in Brennan's Hall, and every inch of available space was occupied. Mr. Dettrey again spoke, and Peter G. Gallagher, national board member, touched on the local situation. Mailly spoke for over an hour and was closely listened to by the audience. His advice to the miners to vote for the Socialist Party was especially well received. He also advertised the Socialist candidate for Governor, J. W. Slayton, and showed that when the workers vote for their class interests they would need have no fear of the government, local, state, or national, being used against them.

At both meetings the rush for The Worker resembled a stampede to a bargain counter and Mailly had not nearly enough to go around.

HOW TO ORGANIZE.

Instructions for Forming Locals of the Socialist Party.

1. Five or more persons may organize a local branch, provided they subscribe to the platform and constitution of the Socialist Party, and sever their relations with other political parties:

2. The officers to be elected are:
   a. A Chairman at each meeting.
   b. Recording Secretary.
   c. Financial Secretary.
   d. Organizer.
   e. Literature Agent.

2. Order of business—
   a. Reading of the minutes.
   b. Admission of new members.
   c. Communications and bills.
   d. Report of Organizer.
   e. Reports of Committees.
   f. Unfinished business.
   g. New business.

4. A monthly payment, computed on a basis of five cents for each member, for the maintenance of the National organization, shall be paid to the National Secretary. Local branches may levy dues if they so choose, or may raise funds altogether through voluntary contributions and pay National dues out of their general funds.

5. A full report of the meeting in which organization was decided on, the names of persons participating, together with five cents for each member, should be sent with application for charter; after receipt of which, upon approval of National Committee, charter will be granted.

6. Each local branch should hold a meeting at least once a week, for the transaction of business or the discussion of political and economic questions.

7. Semi-annual reports of the membership and the financial condition of each local branch, as well as upon the progress made by the Party and its prospects in the locality, shall be sent regularly to the National Secretary.

8. Any person living in a city or locality, where no local branch exists, may apply directly to the National Secretary for admission to the Party, inclosing one month's dues, and will be enrolled as a member-at-large.

9. For further information not contained herein, address Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary, Room 427, Emilie Building, St. Louis, Mo.

MULE AND WORKINGMAN.

It was near the close of the nineteenth century, after having spent the best part of my life in the service of civilization, that I found myself without means of subsistence and out of a job.

Men in like condition were all around me. Some were young, robust, hopeful; some were old, despondent, and despairing. Some sympathized and some hated.

In my younger days I had worked incessantly, but of late no one seemed to have need of my services, and my substance had been consumed in the interim between jobs.

It was the Age of Machinery. A pulley, a belt, a dozen shafts and bearings superseded a hundred workmen.

To my joy one morning, I read a sign, "Men Wanted," on an office door of a great corporation. For an instant my spirits bubbled over in the realization that I was a "man," and perhaps was wanted.

On entering the office I was met by a porter, who escorted me to a room where I was placed in the rear of a long line of men, awaiting turn at a door which led to an inner sanctuary, where the word "Men" was being thoroughly sounded and exemplified by a great doctor, named Physical Examination.

My turn came in a couple of hours and I passed in. A being whose visage rivaled many of the likenesses of Satan I had seen in youth met me with a cold smile, which reminded me of my vanished overcoat, and a piercing eye which stirred up my rheumatic pains, so deep was its penetration.

In youth I had been a splendid specimen of manhood—strong-limbed, broad-shouldered, keen of sight, and ready of hand. A shadow of my former prestige remained, but in my hair age had sprinkled his tell-tale tokens, and my eyes, though strong, showed they had pored over the history of too many years.

The Great Doctor felt of my muscular arm, adjusted his glasses, and peered into my face with great wisdom. He turned me slowly around, as one would a revolving chair and looked at me closely, up and down. As yet neither of us had spoken. He mechanically pushed me on a pair of scales, and peered through his glasses at the beam.

"What! what!" he exclaimed, looking closer and feeling my arm with more pronounced gripe.

"Only 158! Good girth, fine arm, full chest, but two pounds short; and hair a trifle gray, and eyes declining in power of vision. Please pass out, sir!" and he opened a door into the street.

But I did not move. I was bewildered by his actions. "I would like to have work," I said, by way of explanation, but cutting me short he said hurriedly, "Our weight standard is 160 pounds; you weigh only 158—"

"But that is a small deficiency—"

"A million words will not bring you up to our standard," said he.

"I have letters of service from—"

"If you had testimonials from all my beloved ancestors, you are still two pounds light," he replied.

"I have had twenty years' experience in my calling—"

"If you were a golden Colossus, you are not of standard weight, and your hair shows you to be over the age limit," he replied.

"My friend," I said, "give me a trial; I need work; my family—"

"Sir, your usefulness is past for us; you are a back number; we want men, we need men, we will take only men. You are not up to our standard of a man, and belong to the scrap pile. One must be young, sound, good sight, hearing, and health, of proper age, weight, height, and habits—please pass out. Time is money!"

I stepped out into the street rejected, just as on old mule limped out of an alley on the other side. The stock yards were near by, and all day another Great Doctor had been sorting and buying mules. They must be young, sound, gentle, strong, true to the collar, free from bad traits, of proper age, weight, color, and disposition, and this old veteran which met my eye had failed to pass. He bore many visible tokens of disqualification. His left ear drooped. His right fore foot was full of corns. His tail had been broken, in a wreck, years ago. His under lip, hanging so low, gave him an unseemly aspect; and the copious flow of tears from his single eye bore witness that he had passed life's golden meridian.

We walked down the road together, lamenting over our mutual unfitness for earth.

Presently a butcher overtook us, and drove my companion away to the cannery. The grewsome thought, too dark for utterance, flashed through my mind—how long ere the cannery, instead of the almshouse, will be the refuge for wornout workingmen?—Bert Huffman, in Boot and Shoe Worker.

VOTING FOR "GOOD MEN."

Voting for "good men" regardless of parties is an old saw that has cut little ice in the way of helping the workingman. Public officers are the servants of their parties, and while occasionally one will betray the men who control the party that elected him, such exceptions are only frequent enough to prove the rule. The men nominated and elected by the Democratic party always bow to the wishes of the men who control that party—the capitalist class. The men chosen to office by the Republican party respond to every sign of the men who control that party—the capitalist class. —Commonwealth.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end:

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

INCREASE IN COST OF LIVING.

The cost of living continues to rise, and with butter, eggs, milk, potatoes, vegetables of nearly all kinds and fuel at the highest prices known in years, people possessed of small incomes must be having difficulty in making both ends meet. Only in rare cases, if at all, have wages increased in equal proportion. "Dun's Review" publishes its index number of commodity prices for March 1, showing an increase from $90.576 on Feb. 1 to $101.593. This is the highest point reached in many years, and is to be compared with the index number of $72.455 as it stood at the bottom of the decline in prices which was reached in July of 1897. In other words, the breadstuffs, meats, dairy and garden products, other food products, clothing, and necessaries of food generally, which cost $72.45 in 1897, now cost $101.59. This represents an advance of 40 per cent. in the cost of living and a corresponding depreciation of the dollar.—Springfield Republican.

DON'T BLAME MORGAN.

Morgan buys all the railroads, makes the people pay for them in the shape of fares and rates, then proclaims himself the sole owner of them and pretends to do whatever he likes with his property, as he said himself in court lately. We can't blame him; I admire him. He is consistent with the anarchistic system the workers uphold by their votes. Morgan is a great and brainy man. He deserves all he can get. We want brainy men. But what we don't want is a system by which the wealth produced by the laborers be taken away from them. If we don't want such an order of things, why do you vote for it?—L. A. La Tour, in Miners' Magazine.

FOR THE DAILY.

General Meeting in Labor Lyceum on Monday.

Important Matters to Be Acted Upon—Progress in Raising Funds—Workers Needed.

A general meeting of the Workingmen's Publishing Association will be held in the Labor Lyceum, 64 East Fourth street, on Monday evening, July 7.

Important matters of business will be brought up on report of the Board of Management, including the recommendations of the Organization Committee in regard to the relations of the Association to the trade unions.

Admission of new members and proposal of names for membership will come early in the order of business. Those who have been proposed at a previous meeting and whose applications are to be acted upon must be present in person.

The conditions of membership in the W. C. P. A. are: First, the applicant must be a member in good standing of the Socialist Party—called in New York the Social Democratic Party; second, he (or she) must buy one share of stock for $5—$1 to be paid on the proposition of his name, $1 on his admission, and the rest within one year.

Communications have been sent out to trade unions in the city and elsewhere in regard to the movement for a Socialist Daily and comrades who belong to unions should attend the meetings of their respective organizations in order to give any necessary explanation of the matter when these communications are read and to see that proper action is taken.

Any comrades who are willing to act on committees to visit unions should so inform Secretary Butscher at once, as their aid is greatly needed.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

Opens on the Fourth of July at 10 A. M.

Full State Ticket to Be Nominated, State Committee Elected, and Plans Made for Campaign.

The State Convention of the Social Democratic Party of New York will be opened on Friday, July 4, at 10 a. m., in the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street. All delegates are requested to be in the hall promptly at that hour.

The convention has to nominate candidates for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Engineer and Surveyor. It has to elect a State Committee to serve for the next two years. It has to adopt a platform on which we shall appeal to the workingmen of the state to support our ticket. And it has to take all measures in its power to provide for an energetic campaign during the following four months and a steady propaganda of Socialist principles throughout the two following years.

When the convention has adjourned our political campaign of 1902 will be under way. Each Socialist in the state must then feel himself personally responsible for its success.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

The New York County Convention of the Social Democratic Party was held at the Labor Lyceum last Saturday evening. Delegates were present from every assembly district. Comrades Mayes and Kanely presided.

The following were elected as delegates from New York to the State Convention: Job Harriman, Morris Hillquit, Henry L. Slobodin, Edward P. Clarke, James N. Wood, Algernon Lee, Julius Gerber, Alexander Jonas, I. Phillips, H. C. Bowerman, Edward M. Martin, Emil Neppel, L. D. Mayes, Julius Halpern, N. S. Reichenthal, and William Edlin, with H. Schlueter, Wm. Ehret, J. S. Kanely, Ph. Schmidt, J. A. Goldstein, and Chas. G. Lane as alternates.

The Executive Committee was instructed to call a nominating convention for the purpose of nominating candidates for the next general election. The convention then adjourned subject to the call of the Executive Committee.

KINGS COUNTY.

William Butscher presided over the Kings County Convention, which was held at the Socialist Club last Saturday. Joseph Wm. Dooley was secretary. Thirty delegates were present, representing ten assembly districts. By unanimous vote William Butscher, C. L. Furman, Jos. Wm. Dooley, Thos. A. Hopkins, Warren Atkinson, Joseph A. Weil, and Peter Larsen were elected as delegates to the State Convention.

QUEENS COUNTY.

The Queens County Convention of the Social Democratic Party was held last Saturday evening at 63 Myrtle avenue, Ridgewood, with Chris Bub in the chair and Frank Bessen as secretary. C. Barge of Long Island City, C. Bub of Woodhaven, and Frank Bessen of Ozone Park were chosen as delegates to the State Convention, with John Conrad and Victor Fahrenfeld as alternates.

VAIL'S TOUR IS VERY SUCCESSFUL.

Meetings Unusually Large and Enthusiastic and General Outlook for New York Pronounced Good.

Comrade Vail, who has just completed a tour of the state, reports that it is the most successful tour he has ever made in New York—the meetings having been unusually large and enthusiastic, the questions asked indicating an increased interest in Socialism, and the general outlook in up-the-state districts most encouraging.

The meetings at Peekskill and Cold Spring, the first on the list, failed on account of bad weather, but at Newburg more than four hundred people gathered to hear the speakers. This was the first public meeting held by the S. D. P. in Newburg, and it was most satisfactory.

At Catskill the next night fully three hundred turned out and, in spite of very inclement weather, an audience of about the same numbers gathered at Troy the following evening.

Schenectady, which was the next stop, outdid itself, with an enthusiastic audience of about seven hundred persons. The Fort Edward meeting was not so large, but there were at least one hundred and fifty in the audience and much interest was shown.

Gloversville and Johnstown gave audiences of about three hundred each, and at the latter place the interest was so great that Comrade Vail was invited to speak from the pulpit of the Baptist Church on the day following his meeting (Sunday), but had to decline because he needed a day's rest.

At Utica, although the audience was not so large as some of the others, it was very enthusiastic and one of the best meetings of the whole series was held. The meeting in Rome was smaller than was expected, but several persons expressed their intention to join the party, so the results were evidently good.

Watertown always gives a good audience and so it did this time. A somewhat informal debate had been arranged between Comrade Vail and John D. Gill, a prominent local lawyer. Reports from Watertown comrades indicate that the hearers were pretty well agreed that Vail had the best of it and good Socialist propaganda was made. The neighboring town of Dexter also brought out a large and appreciative audience.

From Corning, Comrade Arland writes: "Vail held an audience of about three hundred for nearly an hour and a half. Judging by the questions asked at the close of the meeting, the sale of literature and the favorable comments on the address, the meeting was the most successful that has been held in Corning. Comrade Vail will always receive a warm welcome when he comes this way. Many adverse conditions tend to hinder the movement here, but we are gradually getting things into shape and expect to poll a hundred votes this fall, a gain of eighty over the last presidential election."

At Buffalo a small indoor meeting was held on Sunday afternoon, but in the evening several hundred were gathered on the street. Comrade Allman spoke first, followed by Vail. The audience was obviously with the speakers.

Attorney Thayer, who distinguished himself by running away from Comrade Spring last month, evaded all the attempts of the Buffalo comrades to arrange for a debate with Vail. The latter announced that he was ready to meet Thayer or any other defender of capitalism, but the opponents of Socialism thought it best to keep quiet.

Comrade Vail's tour closed with a rousing meeting at Rochester, the ninth he has addressed in that city, which quite satisfied him and upheld the good reputation of Local Rochester.

PICNIC POSTPONED.

Rain Defers the Outing of Local New York—Tickets Are Good for September 7.

On account of the continuous rain last Sunday it was decided to postpone the picnic of Local New York to Sept. 7. The tickets sold for June 29 will be honored at the later date and those who have bought tickets will therefore preserve them. Meanwhile, the comrades should take advantage of the two months' delay to sell more tickets, as a great deal of money will be needed in the campaign, for which purpose the picnic is to be held.

The committee will make preparations for a greater crowd than was expected on Sunday last, and will see that all comers will have an opportunity to enjoy the day. New hangers have been printed to advertise the affair and comrades are requested to see that they are got out at once.

Comrades and organizations are requested to settle now for tickets they have already sold and to get a new supply of tickets if they have none left. The campaign is opening and money is needed at once.

IN THE PHILIPPINES.

American "Liberators" Determined to Rule and Exploit Country at Whatever Cost.

The Manila "American", declares that, if the United States government should decide to recognize the independence of the Filipinos, the Americans who are already there would intervene and that, "whatever may happen, Americanism will remain dominant in the islands." It publishes an article written, we are assured, "by a man prominent in business circles in Manila"—it is always the "men prominent in business circles" who assume to determine policies for all the people—from which we take this extract:

"Now in that event"—that is, in case of the granting of Filipino independence, with an American protectorate—"what are we Americans, who have adopted this as our home, to do.? It is apparent to all that the Filipinos are not ready for self-government, and to put them in control would mean anarchy.

"There would then be but one thing to do, and that is for us to take the reins into our own hands and give the islands an American government.

"Could we do it? Why certainly. We come of a race which has the governing instinct in stronger degree than any on earth. Moreover, we have had actual, lifelong training in a government by the people; and, what is just as important, we are used to taking the initiative. Consequently, at a moment's notice, as the Stars and Stripes come down, we would be prepared to run up a flag of our own and proclaim the Philippine Republic.

"There are something like twelve or fifteen thousand American civilians in the islands; most of them ex-soldiers with the best of training in the style of warfare prevalent over here. They are filled with the spirit of adventure or they would never have left home. Let a leader get out in the park facing the Ayuntamiento and make a speech calling upon Americans to rally around the new flag, and within two hours he would have a well-armed regiment of the finest soldiers the world ever saw. Within twenty-four hours there would be three or four regiments and as fast as the news could fly those in the provinces would begin to come in so that within a week or two the main points of the islands would be well garrisoned. As soon as the cable carried the news to the United States, those who love adventure would turn this way, and within two months we could muster an army of 50,000, if needed.

"But they wouldn't be needed. The Filipinos haven't the faculty for rapid organization and action, and before they could do anything the Americans would be in power. There would probably be attempts at an uprising, but with several flying columns of a battalion each, the American commander-in-chief could strike and break up all attempts at mobilization on their part."

SWEETLAND'S ACCEPTANCE.

Address to Working-Class Voters of Connecticut.

Socialist Candidate for Congressman-at-Large Bases His Appeal to Voters Solely on Socialist Principles and Class Interest.

To the Comrades of the Socialist Party of Connecticut.

Having been unanimously nominated as your candidate for Congressman-at-Large, I hereby accept the nomination, with a deep sense of the honor and distinction conferred, as well as of the trust and confidence reposed in me by my comrades and fellow workers in the field of Socialism. As one of the great common people who toil with hand and brain that they may exist, while the greater portion of the wealth created by our class is appropriated by an idle, parasitic, non-producing class, I deem it a great privilege to be accounted worthy of selection as a standard-bearer of international, revolutionary, class-conscious Socialism.

It is idle to assert that there should be no conflict between the capitalist class and the working class, for these classes are arrayed against one another by the present social system. The conflict exists between them that has existed in every age of human history, the conflict between master and slave, exploiter and exploited, robber and robbed. This struggle can end only when the working class becomes conscious of its power and its class interests, and arises in its strength and registers its decree at the ballot-box for the collective ownership of all the means of production and distribution, for the full products of its labor, to every one according to his deeds.

It is the historic mission of the working class to emancipate itself from capitalist domination, and to that end we, the class-conscious Socialist workers of the world, are bending our energies and giving of our time, talent, and scanty means. We have nothing to lose but our chains, we have a world to gain. We should be less than men if we did not enter protest against the injustice of the present capitalist wage slave system, and fight for better conditions for ourselves and families.

Those Siamese twins, the Republican and Democratic parties, the two political wings of the capitalist class, and their numerous progeny, the various "reform" movements, stand self-indicted before the working class of America. Their record is a damnable one of broken promises and treachery to the toiling masses. The laborers have begged for justice, and have received bullets and prison sentences, while a venal judiciary seeks to crush them and their labor organizations by the arbitrary application of the injunction process. They add insult to injury and injury to insult, and will continue so to do as long as the presnt system exists.

Therefore, it is our sacred duty as Socialists and lovers of humanity, to work for the downfall and overthrow of the present inhuman cannibalistic capitalist system, and upon its ruins to build and erect the Co-operative Commonwealth, where none shall be denied the right to work and enjoy the full fruits of their toil, and where they who will not work, neither shall they eat.

Yours fraternally,
GEO. A. SWEETLAND.
Bristol, Conn.

HIS HIGHNESS J. P. MORGAN.

A world-wide transportation trust has long been Morgan's dream. English newspapers are making comically pitiful pleas to Morgan to let England come into the new trust. The fact that Morgan is addressed in tones of supplication shows that he is absolute master.

Not Alexander, in all his glory; not Cæsar Augustus, not even Napoleon, with all his mighty armies, was such a conqueror as J. P. Morgan, with his little "yes" and "no" that makes or unmakes.

No king is one-tenth so powerful as Morgan. Edward VII, Emperor William, Nicholas of Russia—any one of these is a pigmy in real power compared with Morgan.

Almost every kind of man who labors works for Morgan through some of his companies. Rudyard Kipling, Lew Wallace—all of the geniuses who in fine frenzy dash off poetry and write stories for "Harpers" are working for Morgan. The patient scientists are digging out minute facts for Morgan to scatter to the world. The artist with pencil and brush draws and paints, and Morgan pays him.

So absolute has he become that while he is personally worth perhaps not more than $100,000,000, corporations over which he has control possess more wealth than there is gold on earth.

The total capitalization of all the companies he controls is $5,210,903,380—and all the gold, coined and uncoined, in all the nations, including the populous East, is estimated at $4,841,000,000.

There are in the whole known world about 1,320,000 human beings. Morgan controls enough to give each $4.

More than a million men are employed by the companies Morgan controls. This means that 5,000,000 men, women and children are dependent on him for a living—or rather that 5,000,000 persons contribute to his comfort.—Exchange.

NO JEALOUSY OR DIVISION.

Soft and Hard Coal Miners Have No Quarrel.

Reports That Bituminous Men Would Secede Rather Than Strike Unworthy of Credence—Question of Interstate Agreement—Reports of Weakening Also Unfounded.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 29.—I observe that the New York dailies, in discussing the probabilities of a strike in the bituminous fields to help the anthracite miners are making such statements as the following:

"Another feature that must be weighed is the latent jealousy that has existed between the soft and the hard coal men in the organization. With the men of the competitive field favoring secession rather than a strike, there is little danger of the great interests, like the United States Steel Corporation and the Western railroads, suffering."

These predictions of a secession of the soft-coal men from the United Mine Workers in case of a general strike being ordered are based rather upon a desire for division among the miners than upon any known facts. As between secession and a strike, there need be no fear but that the soft-coal miners will choose the latter.

The miners throughout the country will abide by the decision of the national convention. Perhaps no other craft contains workmen so loyal to each other as the miners, and I think it will be shown that when the convention meets the sentiment reflected there through the delegates will be in favor of radical action.

The "latent jealousy" said to exist between the soft and hard-coal men is greatly exaggerated. If jealousy did exist to any extent, it was mostly on the part of the soft-coal miners and then mainly because of the fear that the anthracite men were trying to steal their (or rather the capitalists') market, and this fear has no longer reason for existence. At any rate, it will be found that jealousy will cut little figure in the question.

Interstate Agreement.

The question will resolve itself into one concerning the violation of the interstate agreemnt existing between the bituminous miners and operators—whether the occasion makes it expedient or judicious that be broken. In whatever way that question be settled, the miners will stand together, and the operators that expect differently will be as sadly disappointed as they were when the anthracite miners quit so unanimously eight weeks ago.

In view of the fact that the miners' National Executive Board has the power to call a genral strike, if necessary, it will be seen that President Mitchell and his colleagues, in leaving the matter to a national convention, have guarded against dissatisfaction or division by placing the matter in the hands of men fresh from the rank and file. And, inasmuch, as the impression prevails that Mitchell considers national suspension necessary, there can be little doubt that the rank and file will act accordingly.

Taking into account also the state of feeling prevailing regarding the anthracite strike, I think a general strike is almost certain. And the nearer draws the convention, the greater does that certainty become.

My attention has been called also to dispatches such as the following, alleging dissension within the union:

False Reports of Weakening.

"SCRANTON, Pa., June 20.—Considerable dissatisfaction exists in the ranks of the striking coal miners of this section. Some of the men who voted against a strike are using their influence to persuade all conservative miners to leave the ranks of the union and make application to the coal companies for reinstatement. It has been known for some time that all was not serene in the local unions, and after a number of secret meetings a large number of striking miners have decided, in the event of the strike continuing for several months, to make a break and secure their old places again.

"A very small percentage of fire bosses, driver bosses, and watchmen have responded to the call of the United Mine Workers to cease working, and a number of those who did respond have gone back to work."

As a matter of fact, there is no reason to believe that the strikers in the Scranton district are any more dissatisfied and "ready to revolt against the union" than those of any other district; and so far I have not encountered anything of the kind in any locality. In fact, there should be less reason to expect it, for it was that portion of the upper district that demanded the strike in the first place.

These reports have been circulated about every district in turn and they should be given little credence. They are disseminated for a purpose, and are without foundation in fact. The remarkable feature about the strike is the unanimity existing among the strikers. This, along with their quiet demeanor, has chagrined their opponents mightily.

There will be time to believe the strikers are weakening when a break is made. At the present writing, judging from personal observation and reports received from different quarters, it will be some time before that happens. The general expectation on all sides is that as the situation stands now the strike could last for some months to come.

MURDEROUS WORK BEGUN.

Striker Shot in Cold Blood from Stockade.

Indignation Prevails in Wilkes Barre, but Miners' Union Officials Prevent Disorder.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

POTTSVILLE, Pa., July 1.—By long-distance telephone from Wilkes Barre I learn that the shooting of the striker, Winezia Luigi, at the William A. mine at Duryea this morning is regarded there as a cold-blooded murder. The man was peaceably walking along the highway when the shot that killed him came from behind the high stockade that surrounds the mine. His skull was completely blown to pieces.

The murder has aroused much feeling in the vicinity, but miners' officials Fallon, Reese, Llewellyn, and Rascavage have been on hand all day and succeeded in preserving order.

Reports of men weakening generally are untrue and sent out to misrepresent the situation. Heavy rains have caused great damage to mine property. I learn from Hazleton that the situation is unchanged there and no men have accepted Pardee Company's offer to return to work.

THE NEWS FALSIFIED.

A Sample of the Perversion of Facts in Regard to Strikes Published by Capitalist Dailies.

Under such emphatic headlines as "Susquehanna Strikers Give In" and "Caretakers of Pennsylvania Mines Going Back to Work," the New York dailies published the following dispatch:

"WILKES BARRE, Pa., June 24.—The Susquehanna Coal Company, which is controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad, scored a partial victory to-day when it succeeded in getting several engineers, firemen, and pump-men to return to its collieries at Nanticoke. The men held a secret meeting yesterday, and most of them decided to return. The exact number who went to work is not known at this time, as the company officials will not discuss the matter. The men were distributed among the four or five collieries located in and about the borough. Most of those who went back were members of the union."

The Worker applied to Comrade J. G. Roth for a statement of the actual facts in the case and received this reply:

"WILKES BARRE, Pa., June 26.—It is true that several engineers went back to work. However, this signifies nothing, as these fellows are what Collins calls 'natural born scabs.' They were the last to quit and ever since they did quit they were aching to get back to work.

"If we consider the character of these men and the large inducements the companies have been offering, it is a wonder they didn't go back sooner. However, it is fortunate that they are only an insignificant number compared with all the steam men employed by the company. The firemen stand solid, and they together with the other engineers, pumpmen, etc., are now making a concerted effort to get the scabs out again."

It thus appears that the dispatch was partly false (in that it included firemen and pump-runners among those who had deserted the strikers) and that it greatly exaggerated the importance of the break.

Workingmen should be on their guard against such falsifications in the dailies, especially those of the large cities, most of which are partly owned or mortgaged or subsidized by the same capitalist clique that controls the Coal Trust, the Steel Trust, and the railroads. Some day we shall have a daily in New York owned by workingmen and then workingmen will be able to get true reports from day to day of the events of Labor's battle.

LABOR QUESTION IN CHURCH.

The New York "Times" publishes this special dispatch:

"SCRANTON, Pa., June 29.—At the Olyphant Catholic Church this morning a striker arose in the congregation, and declaring that a 'scab' workman was present, asked all fair men to quit the services. The striker left the edifice and sixty union men followed him."

This is an example of what Socialists call class-consciousness. Call it what you like, it is "the real thing." It is this spirit that will carry the labor movement through to success.

MORE EVICTION NOTICES SERVED.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., June 27.—The Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company has served notices upon forty tenants of the company at Locustdale to quit the premises occupied by them within ten days.

MAILLY IN STRIKE FIELD.

From Hazleton, Comrade Mailly went to Mahoney City, where he addressed a meeting of Miners' Local 866. Preparations were being made here to give Comrade Geiger a large audience on Monday. Mailly stopped over at Shenandoah and Mt. Carmel and got the Socialists in each place woke up. In Mt. Carmel much interest in Socialism had been aroused through Geiger's speech, listened to by over 2,000 people the day before. At each of these places Comrade Collins should get a cordial reception and hold good meetings. On Monday last Mailly addressed a meeting of the striking engineers, firemen, and pumpmen in Shamokin. He left for Pottsville that evening. He will go through the Panther Creek Valley and visit Mauch Chunk, going thence to Scranton and Carbondale, where he will probably close his trip in the anthracite region.

ORGANIZER COLLINS' WORK.

Comrade Roth of Wilkes Barre writes under date of June 29 that Organizer Collins had been addressing immense meetings of miners and other workingmen in the Wyoming Valley throughout the preceding week. At Pittston, Wilkes Barre, Sugar Notch, Nanticoke, Luzerne, Edwardsdale, Maltby, Plains, and Duryea large audiences listened to and applauded his exposition of Socialism. On Sunday a meeting was arranged to be held on the river front at Wilkes Barre, the same place where Spargo spoke last month, but at the last moment the Mayor sent the police to prevent it. Comrade Collins and those who had gathered to hear him crossed the river, getting outside the city limits, and there a most successful meeting was held, the Mayor's interference only adding to the interest. On Monday Comrade Collins spoke at Ashley and on Tuesday at Hazleton and put in the rest of the week in that vicinity.

WILL THEY DO IT? HIT.

Will the twenty-four non-union members of the Civic Federation demand union-made goods, smoke union cigars, or use label goods bearing organized labor's emblem of fair conditions?

Will they exhibit a friendliness toward organized labor by patronizing union barbers, calling for union clocks, and getting hauling done by union teamsters without submitting it first to arbitration?

Will anyone of the noble twenty-four non-union civics recognize organized labor and will their clothing be made by the Garment Workers?

Will they demand the bakers' label on their bread, is the hatters' label in their hats, and the shoe workers' label in their shoes, when they purchase these articles of every day use?

Of course they chew and smoke these friends of organized labor, but do they ask for and insist on the cigar-makers' blue label? When they gather together to discuss the momentous questions of labor strikes and the meal comes, do these twenty-four non-union sympathizers of organized labor insist on the organized workers in hotel or restaurant waiting on them? Well, hardly.

They are said to be anxious to settle the miners' troubles. It is not a matter of record that they, and their big-hearted friends of Labor, demand coal mined by these same miners? Ask John Mitchell, he ought to know whether these generous philanthropists consistently carry out the things they preach to others.—Union Picket, Dayton.

SOME CAPITALIST TEXTS WITH A SOCIALIST MORAL.

The following is an extract from the London "Morning Leader" of June 12:

"If anybody wishes to observe the spirit of Toryism pure and undefiled he cannot do better than study the 'Rules and regulations for letting and managing land, belonging to the Right Honorable the Earl of Normanton, in allotments to the agricultural laborers belonging to and in the parish of Crowland.' Let us give, from the 'Midland Mail,' a few typical examples of this private penal code:

"(10) 'No occupier shall work on his own land after six o'clock in the morning, or before six o'clock in the evening, without the written consent of his master when in employment, nor when out of employment if he has refused or neglected to obtain work, or began to work and then left it.'

"(11) 'Each occupier shall, with his family, attend some place of worship, once at least, every Sunday, and shall enforce the attendance at Sunday school of all his children of a proper age.'

"(19) 'Occupiers keeping their families regularly at home when capable of servitude ineligible.'"

Along with this we may quote the words of a canon of the English Established Church, speaking on the new Education Act, which places the public schools of England practically under the control of the Established Church and the Catholic clergy. This eminent churchman says:

"The safety of the state could best be secured by giving the lower classes that instruction which renders them patient, humble and moral, and relieves the hardship of their present lot by the prospect of a bright eternity."

To these significant bits of news and opinion from our English cousins, we add a few from this side of the water.

The following words were uttered in private conversation last week by a young capitalist living in New York:

"This miners' strike is nothing but a big farce. There's no use of talking, we ought to have government ownership of all the mines. As it is at present the government can't interfere, but if all the miners were government employees and they became dissatisfied with their wages, the government could clear them out of the mines in double quick order with the help of the militia."

The New York "Commercial Advertiser," discussing the coal strike, says:

"There can be no further room for doubt that the coal operators are fighting the battle that the steel mill owners fought last summer, to determine whether they shall have the right to control their own business or whether they must turn over this control for all time to an arrogant labor union. With this vital point at stake it is idle to think of arbitration or compromise, and whoever works to accomplish this mode of settlement simply encourages the miners' resistance and prolongs the struggle."

The New York "Times," "Post," and other capitalist papers are now vigorously urging the "operators" to begin work with scabs, and to call on the Governor of Pennsylvania for "protection." What that word "protection" means we know from the memory of Lattimer and from the example set at Duryea last Tuesday.

Read these things and think about them.

Remember how the American capitalists flocked over to England to fraternize with the Right Honorable the Earl of Normanton and his ilk at the expected coronation of King Edward. Remember how the American capitalists, statesmen, politicians, editors, and preachers overflowed with sympathy when the King got sick. They haven't wept very many tears over that striker who was murdered by their police.

In the face of all these things, can you doubt that capitalist class rule is essentially the same, the world over? Can you doubt that the capitalists are living by your toil and suffering? Can you doubt that the capitalists of every country are the enemies of the workers of every country? Can you doubt that it is your interest and duty, for your own sake and for the sake of your wives and children, for the sake of liberty and manhood, to unite and fight this international capitalist class?

And how shall you fight them? We answer with one more quotation—from an editorial of the Philadelphia "Record" this time:

"When Labor shall learn to make its strike at the polls it will have everything its own way. In this country the sovereignty rests in the hands of the voter."

The owners of the "Record" probably do not expect you to take that seriously. If you are wise you will take it seriously. At the polls, and there only, each of you, if he acts with and for his class, is as powerful as Mr. Morgan himself.

COATES JOINS PARTY.

Lieutenant-Governor of Colorado Breaks Old-Party Ties and Becomes a Member of Socialist Party in Denver.

Lieutenant-Governor Coates of Colorado has authorized the following statement published in the "Rocky Mountain News" of Denver, in regard to his affiliation with the Socialist Party:

"In answer to a general inquiry he said: 'Yes, I sent in my application about a week ago, and on Sunday night was made an active member of that party. I shall be found fighting for those principles. I admit that I have been advised against it and have heard much talk about political errors, but I mean to take the stand and to stick to it. I am more anxious than anything else to do some good in this world, and believe in a man following his convictions, first of all. I have believed in Socialism for years, as the only means of elevating the working classes to a place of independence and to that position they should rightfully occupy. Having taken this stand long ago, I shall not turn back from it now, and do not want to. I would far rather retain my convictions than to hold any office.'"

He is further reported in the Denver "Times," the day after his joining the Socialist Party, as saying he would not be a candidate for any office on any ticket this year.

David C. Coates was elected Lieutenant-Governor in the fall of 1900 as a Populist candidate on the fusion ticket. He is a printer by trade and a member of the International Typographical Union.

MONUMENT TO MURDERED STRIKER.

DENVER, Colo., June 27.—Lieutenant-Governor David C. Coates and John M. O'Neil, editor of the "Miners' Magazine," will deliver addresses at Telluride, July 3, the occasion being the dedication of a monument erected to John Barthell by Miners' Union No. 63 of that place. John Barthell was a member of the union and was shot and killed July 3, 1901, during the Smuggler-Union mine trouble while trying to settle the strike amicably. The monument has just been completed.

THE MINERS' WAGES.

The New York "Times," summing up the first six weeks of the Pennsylvania coal strike, estimates the loss to the mine workers in wages at $7,770,000. This is the sum, which, according to the "Times," the men would have got in wages, had they worked. There are over 150,000 men out. The wages per man for six weeks amount, then, to the munificent sum of $51.80, or $8.63 a week. And yet the "Times," with other capitalist papers, says these men were prosperous, and blames them for striking.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

TO NEW READERS.

This and several following issues of The Worker will go to a large number of persons who have not subscribed for it. To all such we would say: Some friend of yours has asked us to send you a few sample copies of the paper. You are requested to read it and then pass it on to a neighbor or shopmate. If you like it, if you think it is working for a good cause, you are invited to subscribe for it. The price is 50 cents a year or 25 cents for six months. If you cannot spare a quarter now, make a note of it and subscribe as soon as you can afford to.

The Worker, like most labor papers, is not rich. It needs the support of all sympathizers. It is owned by a Publishing Association, composed of workingmen. It is not published for profit, but for the purpose of championing the cause of Labor and spreading a knowledge of Socialist principles. Not a cent of the income has ever been appropriated as profit by the Association. The whole income is spent in improving the paper and extending its circulation.

This being the state of affairs, we feel justified in calling upon every workingman whom this may reach to give us his aid: First, by subscribing for himself, if he has not already done so; second, by inducing his friends to subscribe.

The Worker begins this week the publication of the state tickets of the Socialist Party or Social Democratic Party in the various states and territories. This list will be filled out as more nominations are made, and will be kept standing until Election Day. State and Territorial Secretaries are requested to call our attention to any omissions in the present list and to any additions to be made in the future. Our space does not permit us to include in the standing list the congressional district and local candidates, but only those whose names appear on the state tickets, but we wish to make this list accurate and complete, as The Worker is largely used for distribution and it is desirable to advertise as widely as possible the names of the chief candidates of our party.

The old-party papers of the smaller cities and towns throughout the country are beginning to echo the editorials of the capitalist dailies of Buffalo against Socialism—repeating, of course, all the falsehoods to which the Bishop of Buffalo has given his sanction, as that Socialism and Anarchism are practically the same, that Socialists want to destroy religion and the family, that the Social Democratic Party advocates riot and assassination, and the like. Our comrades in the various cities and towns can do much to combat this campaign of organized lying in two ways: First, by circulating The Worker and the leaflet "To the Catholic Workingmen of New York," issued by the State Committee, and by holding public meetings as often as the State Committee can supply them with speakers; second, by writing short, calm, letters for publication in their local papers, stating the true position of the party; it is comparatively easy to get such communications published in the press of the smaller cities and the rural districts and it will reach many people who cannot be reached otherwise.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Existing conditions and the probabilities of the near future justify us in calling especial attention to the appeal which we here present and in urging a hearty response to it:

"FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

"Comrades:—Every Socialist throughout the world will realize that at present the battlefield of the class war is in the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania. One hundred and forty-seven thousand mine workers are on strike, with no truce in sight. The fight is to be a fight to a finish. The object of the capitalists is to reduce them to absolute wage-slavery by destroying their organization. They are taking advantage of the workers by using the law, issuing injunctions, enforcing anti-boycott laws, and every other means of legal coercion. The men are beginning to realize that in order to win they must gain control of the government, which is now controlled by the enemy. They are resolving to use the ballot, their strongest weapon.

"The Socialists of Luzerne County, the heart of the strike field, realize the importance of the situation. Now is our opportunity. If we may judge by the looks of things there is a chance to elect some Socialists to office from Luzerne County this year. The strike is making Socialists of hundreds who never gave the matter a thought before. Our speakers are listened to and cheered by eager multitudes. The strikers are hungry for our literature. Organization is going on fast. We have a full ticket in the field, congressional, legislative, and county, which will command the respect of all workingmen, each candidate being a hard worker in the labor movement and well qualified to perform the duties of the office for which he is nominated.

"The local comrades are hard at work, but financially we are crippled. Our success will depend upon the help we receive from comrades outside the strike field. Money, literature, and speakers will be gladly received.

"Send contributions to either of the following:

"The Worker, 184 William street, New York City;

"National Secretary Leon Greenbaum, 427 Emilie Building, St. Louis, Mo.;

"J. Edelman, Treasurer of Pennsylvania State Committee, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia; or

"Fred Schade, Sr., Treasurer Luzerne County Committee, 487 South Grant street, Wilkes Barre, Pa."

Comrades, a very little money from each local in the land may mean the making of thousands of Socialists this year. Be it much or little that you can spare, do not delay.

And in responding to this call, do not fail to take note of the communication from the National Secretary, published in the "Official" column.

This is no time to relax our efforts. There is work to be done. It is for you, comrades, to see that is is performed.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin last week decided that the state law which prohibits an employer from discharging an employee because he belongs to a labor organization is contrary to the employer's constitutional right, and is, therefore, void.

In the same week, Judge Haney of the Illinois State Circuit Court held that the Illinois Anti-Trust Law of 1891 is unconstitutional and void in all its parts.

All of which goes to show that we must have judges elected on a platform that pledges them to maintain laws for the especial benefit of the working class—the platform of the Socialist Party.

"Shipping Trust Plans—Sweeping Changes and Economies Coming Soon." Such are the headlines. Do you suppose those "economies" will hit Mr. Morgan's pockets? No, they will hit the pockets of workingmen and fill Mr. Morgan's fuller yet. If the nation owned the trusts, every economy would mean more leisure and comfort for the workers.

The Cleveland "Citizen" reports that while Debs attended the conventions at Denver he was constantly "shadowed" by Pinkerton detectives in the pay of the employers. However, Debs has had that experience before, as has many another man who have done valuable service in the labor movement. Detectives constitute a sort of guard of honor in such cases.

Our attention has just been called to an article by W. H. Stuart in the April number of the "Railroad Trainmen's Journal," entitled "Revolution or Evolution—Which?" which professes to give a sketch of the history and the principles of the Socialist Party. The statement of facts in regard to the party history of the last three years is so grossly incorrect that it is evident we should attribute the writer's other mistakes to ignorance rather than to malice. Some of our comrades in the Brotherhood should take it upon themselves to set the matter in a true light through the pages of their "Journal," or, if this privilege is denied them, should undertake a thorough distribution of The Worker and Hanford's "Railroading in the United States" among their brothers of the craft.

A Michigan comrade suggests, as a brief Socialist platform, "Make the workingman's pay equal to his product," and adds: "We need a concise epigrammatic statement of the Socialist contention; I propose this and ask for improvements on the suggestion." The phrase is a good one as stating, from one point of view, the aim of our party. But if the comrade means that we should drop our party platform and adopt this or any other simple phrase in its place, we should consider that a great mistake. It was suggested, last year, that Comrade Wilshire's phrase, "Let the nation own the trusts," would be a sufficient platform; but the National Convention did not approve of the suggestion. A party platform must state the reasons for the party's existence—the conditions which it proposes to change; it must state the purpose of the party—its ideal; and it must state the means by which the party proposes to reach this ideal. All this our present party platform does. Doubtless it is far from perfect; but, on the whole, it is an excellently written statement.

It is reported that someone threw dynamite into a coal mine at Duryea the other day. "The Coal and Iron Police," say the dispatches, "were unable to find the persons who threw the dynamite." Perhaps they were not anxious to find them, for fear of finding themselves. Such things have happened in other strikes.

The Philadelphia "North American," organ of Holy John Wanamaker, announces with all due gravity that the spread of Socialistic doctrines among the workingmen of York, Pa., is responsible for the organization of a band of boy thieves in that neighborhood who are said to be expropriating sundry grocers and cigar dealers and confiscating eggs, melons, and bakeshop delicacies in a most revolutionary manner. If Holy John keeps on he will find that in fact the spread of Socialistic doctrines is at the root of the brutality now being practised on the Filipinos, of the frauds committed by the Steel Trust magnates, of the murderous propensities of the Coal and Iron Police, and even of his own sanctimonious chicanery.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST.

By Anne Throop.

He seats him at his table
Mine hearty host and free,
With all about him right and left
Gallant and fair to see.

Softly the wit and laughter
Falls on the perfumed air
In the midst of the lights and the gleaming wine—
But somewhat else is there.

Mine host lifts up his sparkling glass
But his laughter hollow falls
For at either hand a gruesome throng
Creeps out about the walls.

Around and 'round they come and stand
Wan forms with sunken eyes
Palsied and shaking in bitter rags
Through the rosy lights' disguise.

An unfelt wind their garments blows
And lifts their faded hair
Famishing parents and children
A pageant of despair.

These wasted apparitions—
These are the wraiths of those Whose fingers weave the beauties
To pamper wealth's repose.

Who sweat through deadening hours
For joys safe-locked from them;
Joys? They are smothered from God's free air;
Pushed from his garment's hem!

Which guest could carve the table?
Which cut this shining glass?
Yet from the toilers in the street.
They shrink back as they pass.

So is this deathly throng about
A writing on the wall
That houses built on blood of lives
Must haunted be and fall.

And though his laugh rings louder
Right jovial is our host—
A soundless wail is in his heart,
And by his side a ghost.

WORKINGMEN'S FREEDOM.

We crouch at the feet of our masters
And whine for a crumb of their spoil;
We grovel in humble submission,
Begging leave of our tyrants to toil;

Begging leave to earn back a pittance
Of the profit our labor has won—
And this is the freedom we boast of,
Handed down from father to son!

The freedom to strive with our fellows
For a chance to work early and late,
To pinch and starve our poor bodies
And broaden the rich man's estate.

This, then, is the freedom we boast of,
And deem it so sacred a thing
That for it we'll shoot down our brothers
At command of the state or the king.

Why, we know not the meaning of freedom,
And we shall not until we can see
That each must have all he produces
Before we are equally free.

BUY UNION LABEL GOODS.

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES.

Should I ever be called upon by the ancient governments of Europe, or their admiring pupils at the head of our own republic, to write a treatise on "The Beauties of Monarchy," I would have much to say—and no thanks to me, for is not monarchy a beautiful thing!

To Socialists, who are always dreaming of the day when men shall be united together by a community of interest, what can be more idealistically charming than the community of interest felt by the whole British Empire in one vermiform appendix? By what other human device could you get that vast multitude of mutual devourers to interest themselves in one appendix than by putting it inside of a person who is totally outside of trade, and then by putting a crown upon it?

It has been King Edward's part through all his princely life to play the rôle of moral understudy to her late most secretive and melancholy Majesty. That he played it modestly and bore it well has won for him a peerless reputation as "The Coming King," a reputation which would have been spoiled by the behavior of a king. For the kings of England were all good men, except those who touched church property and made enemies of the relentless churchmen who write history. Edward had been, taking him all in all, a very fair sort of an Edward, as Edwards go. But to play the two parts of naughty prince and good king well is too much for one man.

That great era of middle-class hypocrisy which spread its smug philistudinarianism over the English world, made a shield for its monarchy out of the harmlessness and womanhood of the late monarch. But the next occupant of the throne will find the "fierce light" once more beating upon that ancient seat. The natural strife between democracy and monarchy, postponed by gallantry, is surely coming between England and its coming king.

In all the regrets expressed concerning the postponement of the coronation, nothing has been so much in evidence as the tears shed over what the sharks have lost. (Sharks always seem to count as lost everything they meant to swallow but didn't get at.) But amidst the general lamentation over the victims that have escaped and money spent in useless preparation I hear no regrets for wasted labor. Even the workingmen reason about it with the middle-class mind and are nowhere complaining of the useless labor they have been set to do. Labor has as yet cultivated no sense of its own sacredness. What, were we not paid for it? say these yahoos.

Money was put in circulation, and what more do you want? say these yahoos. It seems a long way off from this yahooism which says, "Sufficient for all possible waste and degradation of labor is the wages thereof," to that self-respect which must develop in the world of Labor before Socialism comes; and which without reference to personal compensation, will distinguish virtuous and vicious labor.

The Republican state convention of Vermont has just gathered into its butteries all the moral cream produced by many years of temperance skimming. As she has done everywhere else, Mrs. Prohibition, throughout her whole line of costumes kept, in Vermont, a boarding house for politicians, conducted on temperance principles, but gave latch keys to her drunken friends of the Republican party, who never fail to "get in" after a vigorous campaign against the liquor men. Vermont has swallowed its whale after long straining over its Jonah.

Limited, politic, and tactical as its scope was, President Mitchell of the miners affords, in his recently issued reply to the "operators," an able, practical refutation of President Roosevelt's claim made before Harvard, that a university course enables its recipients to do better service than other men can do without it. The combined college powers of the railroad presidents have produced an anti-strike statement for public consumption out of which Mitchell has fairly knocked the bottom. For whom does the college education enable a man to do better service, Mr. President? If you mean the property despots, you're all right.

How much attention has been concentrated upon the practice of our religious orphanages here in New York sending helpless children trustfully committed to them, out to a life of brutal bondage among half-caste Indians? Whether they call themselves Sisters of Mercy or Misery who do this thing matters little; the unoffending lives of moneyless childhood should not be left at their irresponsible disposal. These orphans may be given away as a sort of Catholic grip on the Indians; but the inhuman grip on the children may be too high a price to pay for the proselytes.

Among the many things characteristic of class blindness of which a former eccentric commissioner of police in New York, now our beloved President, was the author, there is still with us a vagrancy squad of policemen, whose business it is to rid the city of beggars. Whenever a beggar is caught red-handed, "help is provided for him, IF POSSIBLE"—the capitals are official. As it is, of course, not possible, "the mendicant is given the alternative of adopting an honest business or leaving the city." Just think of it! After this specimen of social impotence and stupidity how much Teddy had to learn before he was really fit to be President!

Just think of what a multitude of such offers must pass out from a member of that squad after a year's faithful discharge of duty! In the event of the beggars not choosing an honest business (you see beggars are choosers sometimes) they are requested to leave the city; and then New York's Police Commissioner was satisfied. But whither are they wending? New York is not all the United States. What can the Commissioner enlarged do with the enlarged beggars? Shall I tell him? Let the army of parasites, of which he and his friend Cleveland are right and left centers, get out of the way of national prosperity.

When the New York Electric Light Company dickered our recent municipal agitation for cheap gas altogether out of the newspapers and altogether into its own pockets by consolidating with the menaced gas shares, the brilliant Bourke Cockran had to get an unknown lawyer to take his side against one of these big companies, "because," says the foxy orator, "we could never get any old or prominent firm to take the case, for the reason that any lawyer opposing such a great corporation would run up against difficulties with banks and corporations down town and socially as well." Let us think how hard it is to be an honest and successful lawyer; and let us wonder at how many of that sort have become senators—yea presidents. It is an age of miracles.

Certainly the art of mutual admiration (in public) by which aristocrats, in all ages, have kept the shrines of hero worship open to the gaze of the hordes of benighted mediocrity beneath them, is not likely to become one of the lost arts during the time of the present Republican administration; not while the English language has an adjective or the President of the United States can find a Joss among his political pals. Read his speech at Harvard and let us call the Pope over for a canonization.

Although one of the first tricks and "airs" that a professional writer of editorials in the great New York dailies has to learn and put on is the phrase and manner of impartiality in discussing public matters having their friends on both sides, yet they are wholly unable, even to seem fair, when discussing questions that have only Labor on one side of them. If our workmen were really keen and intelligent the editorials of high-class papers could drive them into revolt against the mental debauchery so shamefully and impotently present in every paragraph turned out by these poisoned scholars. Hardly a wholesome sentence worthy of American democracy has appeared editorially in the great conservative and scholarly papers of New York since the coal strike began.

For the sinister purpose of buttressing up the immobility of the stupified life, all the aristocracies and governments of our time are re-nursing old superstitions, or new forms of them among the people. No shrine cure or holy-bone story is too thin for our public press. One of the penalties of this playing with holy fire is the growing superstition among the wealthy classes themselves. They are handing their souls over to the black arts to torment them. It is clear from recent disclosures that from royalty to plutocracy the money masters of the world are bewitched by palmists and all sorts of occult fakirs.

The Anarchist game is being played by the "old timers" of Paterson, N. J., for all it is worth. Any man that ever kept school and knows the restless energy with which a bad boy of the degenerate, cunning, active type diverts attention from "the present subject" to any kind of irrelevency that may draw another boy into it, will understand the Mayor of Paterson's Anarchy yap. With something of a faculty almost like genius, if it were not so otherwise, they turn the public attention from Paterson's old, old skeleton in the closet by that "Hi! Hi! Mad dog! There goes an Anarchist!" From Paterson's genteel Republican-Democratic broadcloth criminality of labor oppression, whatsoever else you gaze upon, keep your eyes away.

Now what is this strike about, Mayor Hinchcliffe? If you have a band of capitalists in your city of Paterson who cannot conduct their business without exposing to public view so many examples of inefficiency, public disorder, and moral irregularity, don't you think they should be put in the same conveyance with the Anarchists who supply you with fighting phrases and a maternal apron under which to play your baby trick? Why don't you Paterson respectables come out like men and deal with the daily oppression in your mills instead of playing off fire-crackers over a few contemptible or non-existent Anarchists?

LIVING FOR "OTHERS."

"May the Lord deliver us from all cant," especially the cant of the millionaire. Here is a bouquet from the latest bunch handed out by that slimy prig, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to the pious ninnies who imbibe his disgusting drivel at Sunday-school:

"The man who is poor, with only just enough money for the necessities of life, may use his life for the good of others, and that man is a true success."

He may use his life for the good of others! He's got to. It was by using the lives of such people in return for bare necessities that the Rockefeller millions were made possible. This specimen of cant is merely a variation of the old assertion that the capitalist is a benefactor and philanthropist through "giving employment," as by so doing he assists the "poor man" to achieve a "true success" after the manner described by young Rockefeller. A life spent piling up wealth for others is certainly a good thing from the point of view of the "others."—Labor Review, Williamsport, Pa.

MR. WRIGHT IS WRONG.

United States Labor Commissioner Lays Himself Open to Criticism in Many Ways.

The devil-fish of capitalism has at least eight powerful arms. They are: The legislative, executive, and judicial departments of government, the lobby, the military, the press, the schools, and the church. The three great departments of government make, interpret, and execute laws in its interest. It keeps the lobby on guard to watch the three just mentioned. The military is its bludgeon. The press spreads far and wide its sophistries. The schools inoculate the minds of our children with its age-worn fallacies. And the church rolls its blood-shot eyes upward and tells us that God ordained it.

The last three arms are purely educational. They are insidious purveyors of falsehood. While equally willing, the press is far the strongest.

The "Youth's Companion," in its issue of June 5, stepped dutifully up to the fighting line and fired a heavy charge in the direction of "the enemy." Its issue of that date contained an article by Carroll D. Wright under the caption, "The Young Man's Opportunity."

Mr. Wright denies strenuously that the opportunities for young men are being restricted and that there is an unemployed problem growing out of the present industrial system. He says: "I believe the reverse is the truth and that at the present time a properly equipped young man has a much better chance to secure an independent and lucrative position than at any previous time in our history." He says the "top" in industry has been greatly enlarged and that consequently there is always "room" there for young men who are "properly equipped." He instances the growth of the electrical industry, in which there are now 600,000 persons employed in this country, as a case where "the top" has been enlarged. He admits, by implication, at least, that the chances for young men to succeed by themselves initiating business enterprises have greatly diminished, but that their opportunities to secure high salaried positions in the great businesses already established as experts and specialists have multiplied. Mr. Wright's idea of "the top" is a high-salaried position in a trust business as expert chemist, superintendent or something of that sort.

As to unemployment Mr. Wright says: "But it is not a fact that there is an unemployed class growing out of the present state of affairs, for statistics prove two things; first, that the proportion of the whole people in the country engaged in remunerative employments is constantly increasing; and, second, that the margin of increase is among persons of higher skill and not among those who are at the bottom of the industrial ladder."

Everybody knows that the number of skilled employments has greatly increased, but to prove that unemployment is not a chronic disease of the capitalist system Mr. Wright would have to juggle desperately with his figures. It is significant that he does not cite any of the statistics he mentions to prove his contention. Of course, if he compared a period of great activity like the present with one like 1893, when three millions of men hunted in vain for work, or if he took no account of irregularity of employment or the wages received he might make a showing. But to prove that new avenues of employment fully compensate in the long run for the labor "saved" by new inventions would tax the skill of even such an expert defender of capitalism as our "labor" commissioner.

I would emphasize two points here. First, Mr. Wright seems to assume that the present stage of industrial development and the commercial supremacy of the United States, which he enthuses over, is a permanency. He seems to think that the present system, like a petrified forest, is to last forever. He apparently makes the same mistake the old political economists made, viz., he takes no account of the great law of development—of growth. He admits that there have been great changes, but he implies that there are to be no more changes. He admits that the firm of a half century ago has become the great corporation of to-day; but he assumes here a case of arrested development, and that something is to call a halt to progress. Mr. Wright graciously admits there has been a past, but he cannot see any future. Time was when the home market afforded ample field for the reinvestment of accumulated profits. That time is past forever. The world market is now the field for the reinvestment of piled up profits. But with improved mechanical appliances constantly aiding the hand of labor, with production constantly outrunning consumption, how long will this new field last? Let Mr. Wright answer if he can. He gave no hint of it in his article.

Second, when Mr. Wright talks about "The Young Man's Opportunity," what young man does he mean? The young man of the working class? Hardly. He means the young man of the capitalist class and of the great gullible middle class.

He says the young men who are to "reach the top" must be "well equipped," that "the standard has been raised," etc. He emphasizes technical education and even recommends a complete college training.

If the reader will examine the bulletin lately issued by the Census Bureau, detailing information relating to the 183 "industrial combinations" named, he will find that these trusts employed during the census year 1,470 salaried officers, and paid them an average of $15.65 per day. That they employed an average of 342,464 men wage workers, and paid them an average of $1.70 per day. That they employed 45,461 women toilers on an average of 83 cents per day and 11,267 children at 57 cents per day.

Now the problem for the young man of the working class is to climb from his present position, where he gets $1.70 per day, to "the top," where, as a salaried officer, he will get $15.65 per day, or more. He will find it a heart-breaking climb, even with the help of his mother at 83 cents per day, and of the small children at 57 cents per day each. For, on Mr. Wright's advice, he must first go through a college course; then through some technical school, and then begin at the bottom of the business and learn the machinery and all the details. This is certainly an alluring prospect to tempt the ambition of the working class boy. The bulletin mentioned gives in round number $1,600,000,000 as the value of the output of the 183 trusts. About $200,000,000 were paid in wages to the workers. Thus the creators of wealth are paid one-eighth of their product. Does Mr. Wright expect the working class boy to climb the ladder with this load on his back?

Again, the Commissioner says: "Granting the foregoing statements (as to better equipment) to be true, it may be said at once that there must be a crowding out of men not equipped to meet modern conditions. This is partially true, especially as regards men forty-five or fifty years old. The constant demand is for young men. The question as to what shall become of the old men is a problem which great corporations, like railroads and others, are considering, and which in all probability they will meet successfully."

Now note that the old men are necessarily to be "crowded out;" and, second, that their fate is in the hands of the great corporations who "are considering what to do with them." God help them!

But there is still another class for which Mr. Wright holds out no hope. Again I quote: "The young men who are not equipped stand in a different relation to the whole matter. I know of no sadder spectacle than that of a young man of fair abilities and keen ambition to succeed in life who has not the knowledge or the natural attainments equal to his ambition. This class must be content with what is left for they are, in a way, left-over men."

Left-over men! God help the "left-over men" and the "old men" and the "unfortunate" and the "unsuccessful" and the "failures."

All hail, the "successful!"—those who were strong enough to beat their fellows down in the mad struggle and who finally with panting breath and bloody garments reached "the top." For them the plaudits and the wild acclaid! And they call this civilization! Bah!

AMERICAN COMMUNITIES. By William Alfred Hinds. Revised edition. Chicago, Charles H. Kerr & Co. 1902. Cloth, 433 pages. Price, $1.

THE LAST DAYS OF THE RUSKIN CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION. By Isaac Broome. Chicago, Charles H. Kerr & Co. 1902. Cloth, 183 pages. Price, 50 cents.

Nothing could more vividly impress us with the progress of Socialism in this country within the last three or four years—a progress not, in general, fully realized by those working from day to day in the movement—than our own feelings in taking up these recently issued books. Even three years ago we were kept busy explaining that "communities" and "co-operative colonies" had little or nothing in common with the Socialist movement. To-day, Socialism is becoming so well understood and the colony idea has so completely fallen into the background that we are rather surprised at the publication of these two books.

"American Communities" was first published in 1878. In its earlier form it was much inferior to the two other similar works—Noyes' "History of American Socialisms" and Nordhoff's "Communistic Societies in the United States." The present revised edition, however, is practically a new work, and is so nearly complete, within the limit of its place, that it will hardly be worth the while of any other investigator to enter the field.

"Within the limits of its plan," we say; for Mr. Hinds has not attempted either a synthetic history of the communistic and co-operative movements in themselves or a critical treatment of their relations to Socialism and to industrial development. He has merely collected the material for such history and criticism; but this—although the presentation and arrangement of the material is not as good as we might wish—he has done about as fully as it is worth doing.

Fruitless as, in any large sense, the communistic movement has been, it was a not uninteresting or unimportant phase of the social history of the last century. To students of that history Hinds' "American Communities" will be welcome. That we can now speak of it thus, simply as a contribution to history, without being drawn into discussion and polemic, is a most pleasing consideration. "Fuit Ilium."

The interest of Professor Broome's book is of the same sort, though the book is of a very different quality. It is a document, one of the "exhibits" in the indictment the communist-cooperative movement (we cannot sharply distinguish the two) has passed against itself—or, perhaps we shall better say, it is a part of the epitaph which that futile because essentially individualistic attempt at social regeneration has written for itself.

Professor Broome was one of the Ruskin colonists, active in the affairs of the colony, active in its factional disturbances. He does not write with the impartial calm of a historian, but with the animus of a partizan in the dissensions he records. Doubtless he means to be just. Evidently he has tried to restrain his indignation—what he feels to be his righteous indignation at the wanton misconduct of the opposite faction, to which, as he thinks, was due the failure of Ruskin. It is not for us to judge between the factions. We could not if we would and we would not if we could. We can see a cause for Ruskin's failure deeper than any personal faults of any or all of the colonists.

If there be any for whom colony schemes still have charms, we commend to them Professor Broome's "Last Days," as a sure antidote.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

The Coming Nation.

The New York "Herald" prints a picture—"The Real Sufferers"—in which a big burly miner is shown pushing the operator, who in turn is pushing the dealer, who is shoving the the consumer, who is braced against a gaunt looking wolf labeled "Starvation." Just in front of the wolf is a woman surrounded by a group of children, supposed to represent the miners' family. The artist who drew this illustration pictured a lie. The editor who printed it knew it was a lie. Deep down in the heart of every person who looks at it lies the knowledge that it is a lie. That the woman and the children are real sufferers is true, but that the men who are fighting for the bare right to exist are the cause is not true. The real cause of it all is the profit system—the "divide up" system in which the capitalist does the dividing. The average wages of the miner is $248 per year, out of which he must pay $96 for rent, $5 for oil, $14 for powder and $6 for the company's doctor. This leaves $187 for food and clothes—50 cents a day. Does that look as though he was pushing the operator very hard? And remember these figures are official, they cannot be disputed. How about the president of the Lackawanna Railroad, who recently got an increase of $10,000 in his salary? Looks as though he might be doing a little of the pushing, doesn't it? I have not the figures at hand, but it is safe to say that the mine owners make a clear profit of not less than $500 on each man in its employ. The New York "Herald" has got the miner in its lying picture at the wrong end of the string, that's all. But it is no secret what class the "Herald" represents.

New Castle Tribune.

Samuel Gompers says Congress has just passed a Chinese Exclusion bill that is not exclusive, but absolutely vicious, and dangerous to Labor and threatens civilization itself and he now talks as though we ought to begin to vote as we strike.

We are glad you are awakening, brother, but beg to say that during your long political Rip Van Winkle sleep, Labor has sought and found a live and wide-awake affiliation into which you are welcome to come; but don't try to divide by starting a "labor party" and don't try to make Labor believe that Capital is its brother, nor that it can get any relief from those who would perpetuate in any degree, rent, interest, and profit.

Congress will not pass an eight-hour law, because it is more profitable to the commercial interests (that it alone represents) to have us work, nine, ten or twelve or more hours, as it is also more profitable to have little children in the factories than in the schools. Congress will not pass a Chinese exclusion act that will exclude because it is more profitable to our "brother," Capital, to have the Chinese come here.

The Undercurrent.

We have been requested to give our views of the outcome of American Labor Union's political program. We are aware that the Socialist press is, with few exceptions, expressing itself variously in regard to the matter, but it seems that the question is not properly up to us.

The movement cannot but result in an inestimable advantage to the cause of Socialism. It is known to be in the hands of competent men. That the purpose is eventually to compel the adoption of a progressive political program by the unions of the country seems certain. Just what method will be employed to accomplish this end has not as yet been given out. There are many different methods of accomplishing it and the method of attack on the personnel of the American Federation of Labor seems to us to be the poorest of them all.

Of one thing we are certain, and that is that the so-called leaders of the A. F. of L. are, with notable exception, far in advance of the rank and file.

Understanding that the real power rests with the mass, the action of the executive body in refusing to adopt political action has been, to say the least, easily defensible. Now, since a rival organization has entered the field with a more progressive program, this defence will be lacking, but judgment should be withheld until the elder organization has had opportunity to take its stand.

The present law of the A. F. of L. does not forbid political action, but does, on the contrary, lay a splendid foundation for such action. That it will not become reactionary is to be hoped, and much will depend upon the attitude of the rival organization and the Socialist Party. We are members of the A. F. of L. and are not particularly restive as such.

Labor News, Cheyenne, Wyo.

At no time in the history of the United States has there been such a social unrest as at the present moment. There are more strikes and more men out than at any other period. If this is one of the signs of prosperity please give us the other thing. But even this is not without its benefit. The laboring people are everywhere being forced to the conclusion that they must capture the political power of the state, and they will make great progress along those lines this fall.

Springfield Republican.

This forcing of little children no more than ten, eleven, and twelve years old into the mills, stunting their growth in every way, is a terrible thing which appeals to every humanitarian instinct for correction. The Massachusetts capital that is making such labor productive of gain has a responsibility in the matter quite as great as that resting upon Alabama capital, for it is the product of an older industrialism into which some progress has been made in forcing a conscience. It knows better, in other words.

——The progress of democracy seems irresistible because it is the most uniform, the most ancient and the most permanent tendency which is to be found in history.—De Tocqueville.

PARTY NOTES.

National Secretary Greenbaum has issued a circular calling attention to the brewers' strike at Boston and at Cincinnati and calling upon comrades in the vicinity of those cities to do all in their power to assist the United Brewery Workers in bringing the bosses to time.—Another circular calls attention to the fact that before this month has passed the coal miners' strike will probably have extended to the bituminous fields and pointing out the duty of the Socialists to take active measures in co-operating with the strikers.

The party in California has, by general vote, elected N. A. Richardson as National Committeeman.—Santa Barbara has a thriving Women's Socialist Club.—Tulare County, Cal., has a full Socialist ticket in the field, nominated last week.—Comrade Helppingstine put in the latter half of June speaking at San Jose, Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Paso Robles, San Luis Obispo, Santa Maria, Lompoc, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Oxnard, and Los Angeles.

Socialism has struck Arizona. J. Stitt Wilson has been invited there to address a series of meetings.

"The Alliance of the Rockies" is another Colorado weekly supporting the Socialist Party.

Comrade Mills will speak in Colorado during the month of September, giving one week to Denver.

Kansas Socialists celebrate the Fourth by holding a state convention.

Chicago comrades have a dramatic company which is giving successful entertainments for the benefit of the campaign. "Out on the Streets" and "Under the Lash" are two original Socialist plays which they have put on the boards.

The Socialists of Covington, Ky., will hold a picnic for the benefit of the Congressional campaign fund on July 27 at Diamond Star Grove, formerly called Bushelman Grove. Rosedale cars reach the grove.

Local Toledo, O., will hold county and congressional convention on Tuesday, July 8, at Harmonia Hall. All members are urged to be present.—At the regular meeting of June 24, an able paper on "Scientific and Sentimental Socialism" was read by Comrade Thos. A. Bragg.—The following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Resolved, That Local Toledo places itself on record condemning the Right Reverend James Edward Quigley, Bishop of Buffalo, for attempting to array the Catholic Church against Socialism and connecting Socialism with Anarchy."—In response to appeal of National Secretary Greenbaum, a motion was carried to contribute $5 towards carrying on the educational work in the anthracite coal district.

The Socialists of Richland County, Ohio, held a convention at Lexington on June 15. Dr. R. H. Smith of Lexington was nominated for Probate Judge; E. E. First of Lucas, for Clerk of Court; Wm. Kyner of Lexington, for County Commissioner; and H. C. Frickman of Mansfield, for Infirmary Director. L. R. McIntire and A. J. Stoerck, both of Mansfield, are Chairman and Secretary of the County Committee. The convention sent its greeting to Comrades Carey and MacCartney, the Socialist members of the Massachusetts Legislature, in the following words: "We take pride in your stand for Labor as against capitalism and tyranny, and we assure you that we are in hearty co-operation with all Socialist work. We hope that the time is not far distant when other comrades will be with you in your bravely fought legislative battles."

Socialists of New Castle, Pa., have challenged the Republicans to a public debate. It won't be accepted, though. The Republican politicians know their business.

Comrade Harris of Edwardsdale, Pa., writes: "Comrade Collins was with us on Saturday. We easily got up a grand meeting. C. F. Quinn, our Congressional candidate in Luzerne County, spoke first and gave the people some wholesome truths. Collins followed and held the close attention of the audience for three-quarters of an hour. He was liberally applauded. Thirty men then gave in their names to form a local of the Socialist Party and more are coming at the first meeting. We thank the New York comrades who have sent us bundles of The Worker and leaflets and pamphlets. These have been distributed and are being read with interest."

Comrade Lee addressed a large meeting of silk workers in West Hoboken last Saturday, urging upon them the need of solid organization in the trade union and of voting for Socialism in November. Comrade Ufert spoke on the same line in German and the editor if "Il Proletario" in Italian.

Comrade Vail had a fairly good indoor meeting and a very successful open-air meeting at Buffalo. Several subscriptions for The Worker were secured and a number of books and pamphlets sold.—The clergy are renewing their attacks on the Social Democratic Party and the daily press is aiding in the attack with all manner of lies and misrepresentations.—The comrades will hold three open-air meetings a week from now on.

Frederic M. Dennis, Lock Box 38, Highland Falls, N. Y., is agent for The Worker and "Vorwärts" in that place. Comrades and sympathizers there should do all in their power to help him work up the circulation of the party papers.

The General Committee of Local New York at its last meeting admitted twenty-eight new members. It was decided to engage Comrade Sol. Fieldman to speak every night in some part of the city and to assist the Organizer in other ways. Comrades in the various districts should bestir themselves to take advantage of Comrade Fieldman's services.

The Financial Secretaries of the following assembly district subdivisions of Local New York are called upon to send in to Organizer Gerber before July 12 the membership and financial reports for their respective bodies: 2d and 8th; 4th; 6th and 10th; 11th; 13th; 14th; 19th; 23d; 24th, Br. 1; 26th, Bohemian Branch; 32d and 33d; 34th; 35th, Br. 1; Annexed Districts.

The 1st, 3d, and 5th A. D. will meet on July 5 at 8 p. m., at Comrade Mayes' house, 249 W. Eleventh street. Every member is expected to attend. Important business will come up. All enrolled S. D. P. voters, and any who believe in Socialism are invited.

The 12th A. D. has elected William Halpern and William Edlin as delegates to the General Committee; Sarah B. Edlin, Recording Secretary; Halpern, Financial Secretary; Sumkin, Treasurer. During July and August the district will meet on the first and third Mondays of the month at 241 E. Broadway.

Comrades Fishman and Panzer were elected to the General Committee at the last meeting of the 16th A. D. J. Middleman was chosen as Recording Secretary, Panzer as Financial Secretary, and Panzer, Alter, and Fiegenbaum as delegates to the Agitation Committee. Steps were taken to bring all Socialists in the district into the organization. Meetings will be held on the first and third Tuesday of each month. Comrades should attend regularly, as open-air meetings are to be started and workers are needed.

At th eregular meeting of the 31st A. D. June 24, Comrade Wilkins presided. John A. Kilgus and J. Wilkins were elected delegates to the General Committee; Eugene Meyer, Financial Secretary; Sidney Kahn, Recording Secretary; Kilgus, Wilkins, and J. Hillquit as delegates to the Agitation Committee. Two dollars was donated to the Pennsylvania State Committee.

Two new members were taken in at the last meeting of the 34th A. D., members of Typographical Union No. 6 and Carpenters' Union No. 309, respectively.—Comrade Cantor was received on transfer card from the 28th A. D. The Agitation Committee reported a public meeting to be held Wednesday evening, July 2 at the corner of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street and Willis avenue. Officers were elected as follows: Financial Secretary, Wm. Brand; Recording Secretary, H. Reich; Delegates to General Committee, Robert Shaw and Brand; Agitation Committee, Herter and Weiss; Chairman for outdoor meetings, Reich. The next meeting of the organization will be held on Friday evening, July 11, at 380 Willias avenue.

The 35th A. D. met at 3309 Third avenue, with Comrade Anderson in the chair. One new member was accepted. The Financial Secretary made his report as follows: On nand, January 1, $4.11; income to July 1, $43.94; expenses, $47.30; balance, 75 cents. Comrades Bergwald and Kohle were elected as delegates to the General Committee; Anderson as Recording Secretary; Eiges, Corresponding Secretary; Von Deffi, Financial Secretary; Bernauer, Treasurer. A committee of two was chosen to visit Comrades Froehlich and the Wright brothers. It was decided to invite all registered Social Democratic voters and readers of The Worker to the next meeting, to be held in the same place on Thursday, July 10. Ernest Spranger volunteered to do the work of sending out circulars. A speaker will be secured for the meeting and it is hoped that comrades who have been absent from the branch for some time will come back and renew their activity. The open-air meetings so far held have been very successful and a few more earnest workers could bring the Bronx well to the front in the Socialist movement. An open-air meeting is to be held Saturday evening, July 5, at One Hundred and Forty-eighth street and Willis avenue, and all should be present.

During July and August the Young People's Club of Yorkville will meet only on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of each month, at 206 E. Eighty-sixth street.

The outing of the Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn at Grauer's Woods, Glendale, which could not be held last Sunday because of the rain, will take place on Sunday, July 6. All comers are welcome.

State Organizer Spring held three highly successful public meetings in Newburg, N. Y., last week with about three hundred hearers at each. The local comrades are greatly pleased with his work and are encouraged for the future of the Social Democratic movement in their city.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—On account of the pressure of work it has been found necessary for the Pennsylvania State Committee to meet weekly for the present. Meetings are held every Monday evening at 1022 Arch street. Charters were granted this week to locals at Duryea, Maltby, South Carbondale, and Edwardsdale, with forty-two, twelve, forty-eight and thirty-two members respectively.

The Allegheny County Convention meets at Pittsburg on July 5. Montgomery, Lackawanna, Lycoming, and Potter Counties hold conventions in the near future. A meeting to form a local at Pottstown has been called for July 4 and locals are also being formed at Nanticoke, Archbald, and Plains.

J. W. Slayton, City Councilman in New Castle and Socialist candidate for Governor, addressed the convention of Railway Trainmen and was well received. He has been invited to speak before the United Labor League of Pittsburg.

All locals are reporting increase in membership.

The Socialists of Berks County have nominated Alfred Brown for Congress; Miles Williams and James H. Maurer for the Legislature; Newton Herr for City Treasurer; Robert Ringler for Registrar of Wills; I. Miller and David Oswald for County Commissioners; J. George Hill and Daniel Trumbore for Prison Inspectors; and William Booser for Poor Director.

Philanthropist Carnegie is building a $300,000 library at Duquesne. The local comrades say that Carnegie's wage-slaves there, who work only from seventy to ninety-six hours a week, will not learn Socialism from the skin-bound volumes in the library, but from the skinflint methods of Carnegie, whom the April "Comrade" rightfully pictured as part saint but more devil.

Literature in large quantities is being distributed and many subscriptions taken for party papers by Locals York, Lehighton, Austin, Wilkes Barre, and through the coal district.

Miss Johanna Dahme of New York addressed an overflow meeting at the Philadelphia headquarters last Thursday. It is hoped that she will make an extended visit to the city later in the season.

A wagon will probably be got out for the Philadelphia campaign, to distribute literature from house to house during the day and serve as a speaker's stand in the evenings.

The State Committee has arranged for the sending of ten thousand copies of The Worker, seven hundred a week, to selected addresses throughout the state.

Spring Forge nominates A. F. Strambach for fraternal delegate to the Canadian Socialist Party convention; the Nineteenth and Twentieth Ward Club of Philadelphia nominates James F. Carey; the Thirty-first and Thirty-third Ward, A. M. Simons; Central Branch, Edward Kuppinger; New Castle, C. H. Vail; Delaware County and Wilkes Barre, J. Mahlon Barnes.

Comrade Collins has been doing splendid work in the coal strike field. He says there should be at least six speakers there. If he should accept all the invitations he gets he would have a meeting every hour. He has spoken at Pittston, Sugar Notch, Nanticoke, Luzerne, Plains, Wilkes Barre, Maltby, Duryea, Edwardsville, and many other places, organizing locals at the three last named.

Comrade Mailly is also doing yeoman service for Socialism among the miners. A hearty welcome is given him everywhere and he has more invitations to speak than he can fill.

Contributions for agitation in the strike field have been received as follows: Sixth and 10th A. D., New York, $2; 18th and 20th A. D., New York, $5; 21st A. D., New York, $2; J. G., New York, $1; Julius Weber, Philadelphia, $1; Local Pittsburg, $5; previously acknowledged, $24.65; total, $111.65. Never before has such a favorable hearing for Socialism been afforded. We urge upon the comrades everywhere to make the most of it. Send moneys to J. Edelman, 807 West Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
State Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

OKLAHOMA NOMINATES.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., June 23.—The territorial nominating convention of the Socialist Party was held here to-day in Labor Union Hall. The attendance was light, but little more than half of a full representation of delegates being present. Comrade T. S. Smith of Newkirk, editor and publisher of the "Oklahoma Socialist," was nominated as candidate for Delegate to Congress. He is a speaker of ability and is ready to meet his opponents in public debate. He will conduct an aggressive campaign. The convention re-adopted the platform of two years ago. Plans were discussed and steps taken for the campaign. Oklahoma has thirty locals in good standing, which represent but a small part of the voting strength of the movement. We hope to see the vote of 1900 more than trebled at the next election.

J. W. McF.

PASSAIC COUNTY TICKET.

The Socialist Party of Passaic County, N. J., held its county convention at the Second Ward Labor Lyceum, 100 Sheridan avenue, Paterson. The national and state platforms were endorsed as stating the position of the party and its candidates.

The following resolution was adopted:

"We recognize the necessity of conducting the class struggle upon the economic as well as on the political field, and we therefore recommend the organization of the working class into national and international trade and labor organizations.

"But we warn the working class not to be misled by so-called labor leaders who pretend a desire to promote the best interests of the working class by keeping politics out of the unions.

"We are aware that the majority of these leaders are opposed to class-conscious and independent political action on the part of trade and labor organizations for the sole purpose of advancing their own political aspirations, to the detriment of the working class; and we further claim that such conduct on the part of the leaders of trade and labor organizations is responsible for the many defeats that organized labor has suffered; and we furthermore hold them responsible for the many brutal acts of the hirelings of the capitalist class, in the so-called courts of justice as well as on the economic battle field of organized labor."

The congressional and assembly ticket is as follows:

For Congress—William H. Wyatt of Rutherford.

For Assembly—Wm. Glanz, Paul Hueck, Arthur Berthold, Theodore Siccoma, Ernest Reidel.

All workingmen in Passaic County are called upon to support this ticket and platform, which represents the interests of the working class.

NEW BRANCH IN ESSEX.

E. T. Neben, Organizer of Local Essex County, N. J., has succeeded in forming a strong branch of the party in the Oranges, which will meet on the first and third Thursday of each month at 48 Cone street, Orange.

The organization meeting was held last Thursday, and an interesting incident occurred in connection with it. The Teamsters' Union was holding a meeting next door and some of the members who had heard Neben speaking for the party moved that the branch be invited to come to the union hall in a body as soon as its business was completed and that Neben address the two organizations together. The motion was readily carried, and the invitation sent and accepted.

Comrade Fred McIntosh, Socialist candidate for Mayor of Newark who was a visitor to the newly organized branch, was introduced as the first speaker. He talked on unionism and explained the position of the Socialist Party as the party of the working class. Comrade Neben followed with a strong appeal to the workingmen to study Socialism, to join the party, and work for its success. Comrade Killenbeck, formerly of Clinton, Mass., also spoke briefly, supporting what the previous speakers had said. All were very favorably received.

Steps were then taken, on the suggestion of one of the teamsters, to call another meeting on the following Wednesday to which other workingmen should be invited for the further discussion of the subject.

The reception of the Socialist speakers here is certainly a good indication for the future of the labor movement in this part of the state.

LOCAL ESSEX COUNTY.

The quarterly meeting of Local Essex County, N. J., will be held at the headquarters, 124 Market street, Newark, Tuesday, July 8, beginning at 7:30 p. m. sharp. It is important that every member should be present at the opening of the meeting. There is a great deal of work to be taken up and the meeting cannot be delayed for members who are late. Election of officers and reports of important committees are on the order of business.

E. T. NEBEN, Organizer.

HUDSON COUNTY COMMITTEE.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hudson County Committee will be held at headquarters, 324 Central avenue, Jersey City, on July 7, at 10 a. m.

Officers and committees should come prepared to make a complete and final report, as the Local meeting and County Convention will be held the following Saturday evening and all books, papers, and accounts should be in condition for immediate transfer to officers and committees elected.

Branches that have not turned in registration forms will please endeavor to so do at the County Committee meeting, as the Organizer is desirous of rendering a complete membership report to the Local as soon as it convenes.

H. R. KEARNS, Secretary.

KINGS COUNTY NOTICE.

The Kings County Committee desires to remind the branches of Kings County, S. D. P., which have not already done so, to elect officers for the coming half year, as provided in the constitution and by-laws of this local. The officers to be elected are, delegates to the County Committee, officers of the branch, an agitation committee, and a literature agent for the branch. It is further provided that when the branch elects new officers it shall immediately send their names and addresses to the County Committee.

WARREN ATKINSON,
Organizer.

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—Secretary, Leon Greenbaum, Room 427, Ewalie Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

NEW YORK STATE COMMITTEE.—Secretary, Leonard D. Abbott, 64 E. 4th st., New York. Meets every Tuesday at 8 p. m., at above place.

NATIONAL SECRETARY'S NOTICE.

To All State Secretaries of the Socialist Party.

Dear Comrade:—Circumstances oblige us to urge you to send us national dues at the earliest possible date, and we also suggest that you issue a special request to your locals to pay up for June as promptly as possible. Extraordinary circumstances existing at this time call for a general rallying movement, which cannot be accomplished without the co-operation of the respective state committees. There are several state committees at this moment who have not remitted national dues for May.

A crisis exists in the labor movement owing to the great miners' strike, which is putting our national organization to a very severe test. The Pennsylvania State Committee has not sufficient means at its disposal to meet the requirements of the strike situation in that state, and is appealing for funds through the party press has solicited an inadequate response. They have appealed to us to assist them by sending additional speakers into that state, which we are most willing to do, but regret that just at this time so many committees are desirous in sending in national dues. We cannot, therefore, see our way clear to continue contributing $10 per week towards Comrade Mailly's expenses in Pennsylvania, and we have gone to considerable expense to arrange for a lecture tour for Comrade George in the same state, which he begins on June 25. At the same time we have been to quite a heavy expense in arranging Chase's tour through the trade unions and party locals. We have also gone to considerable expense in maintaining Comrade H. C. Darrell as a propagandist through the states of Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah.

We respectfully submit, that we are doing all that can be expected of us with the very limited resources at our disposal. We have sent out special appeals to every local in the country for contributions to special strike propaganda funds. We are already beginning to receive results from this. Our cash receipts during the past few months have not averaged much over $500 per month. Were it not for the fact that the trade unions are contributing so heavily to the expenses of our propaganda, we could not possibly carry it forward on the scale that has been and is being maintained. I beg to remind the comrades that the average receipts of this office per month would not much more than pay the rent, office and salary, for one month, of one first-class organizer in A. F. of L. In conclusion, I again urge that you co-operate with us and meet the national crisis in the gravest issue that has ever confronted the party. The past two weeks has wavered between $6 and $8, and I have had to borrow money today to pay the salaries of our office help.

Yours fraternally,
LEON GREENBAUM,
National Secretary.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, SOCIALIST CLUBS.

Meeting called to order at 8:20 p. m., with Page, Goldstein, Sherman, and Porter present, and Page in chair. Minutes of last meeting read and accepted after correcting omission in inserting the following: "Voted to instruct Goldstein to visit Leominster the following Friday evening, June 13, for the purpose of inquiring with reference to the recent election, advising with the Leominster comrades, and to report to this committee."

Referendum vote on candidates for Secretary to International Socialist Bureau filed from Fitchburg, Haverhill, Rockland, Clinton, Salem, and Quincy.

Voted to send Ward 9 vote card to Secretary of Boston Central Committee and to request Ward 9 to send future reports through the Central Committee.

Treasurer instructed to inquire regarding Lawrence membership report. Financial and membership report from Rockland filed. Communications filed from Lawrence, Brockton, Wilkes Barre, Haverhill, Malden, Fitchburg, Salem, New York, Rockland, Clinton, Taunton.

Bills approved as follows: Postage, 50 cents; expenses of Goldstein to Leominster (car fare, loss of time, etc.), $5.15; mimeographing letters, $1.25.

Goldstein's report of his Leominster visit was endorsed and accepted and ordered published in The Worker, one hundred copies of which the Secretary was instructed to procure.

Secretary instructed to communicate with William Mailly with reference to a proposed pamphlet embodying a history of the work of Carey and MacCartney in the Legislature.

Adjourned at 10:05 to meet Friday, June 27.

W. P. PORTER, Secretary.

Boston, June 19.

THE LEOMINSTER CASE.

To the Executive Committee, Massachusetts Socialist Clubs.

Comrades:—Upon arrival at the meeting of the Leominster Socialist Club, held Friday, June 13, I found by investigation that the act of participating in the citizens' caucus of the town by one of the club members was due to a lack of understanding of Socialist tactics by the member himself and by the Club; and, too, their failure to know that the following caucus resolution was enacted at the last convention, a copy of which I presented to the Club: "Resolved, That the Secretary of the State Committee be instructed to notify all city and town committees that they shall, under no circumstances, allow its members to take part in any citizens' or capitalistic caucus, or to have their names used on the ballot by any capitalistic party."

The town of Leominster has never been divided in local elections on Democratic and Republican party lines. It was at the celebration of the Carpenters' Union, of which Comrade Stuart is a member, that he accepted the candidacy for Selectman.

After listening to their statement of the case, I reminded them of the fact that the first essential of a Socialist political organization is to gain the confidence of the voting public by cultivating the integrity of our movement; that our ability can only be kept clean by political action absolutely divorced from affiliation with other political parties.

I found that a misunderstanding existed as to the Socialist interpretation of what constituted a political party, which was largely due to the fact that citizens' caucuses are conducted in a democratic manner, and that they have no legal standing as a political party.

I made the point that, although the Massachusetts Election Act declares a political party to be an organization whose candidate for Governor polled 3 per cent. or more of the total vote cast—that is to say, "a political party," in the legal sense of the term, could only apply to an organization or subdivision of an organization that nominates gubernatorial candidates—the officials consider a political party to be an association of persons whose object it is to place public officers, whether it be in town, city, district, state, or nation. This position is officially voiced by the resolution relative to citizens' caucuses passed by our State Convention.

Considering the fact that our constitution fails to specify any penalty for such a misdemeanor, and being fully satisfied of the honesty of purpose of the comrades of Leominster, my first purpose being to maintain a united organization upon the basis of integrity, I presented the document herewith subjoined for their endorsement, it being a guarantee of Socialist tactics in the future politics of the town of Leominster.

"LEOMINSTER, Mass., June 15, 1902.

"To the Executive Committee, Massachusetts Socialist Clubs.

"We hereby reaffirm our allegiance to the Socialist Clubs of Massachusetts and the Socialist Party of the United States, and pledge our honor to uphold its principles, policy, and tactics and to take part only in caucuses of the Socialist Party.

"After mature deliberation, which was most fraternal in spirit, the pledge was signed by all members present, fourteen in number.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) DAVID GOLDSTEIN.

STEEL TRUST'S "GENEROSITY."

Growth of Profits and of Wages Compared.

This Year's Profits $44,000,000 Above Last Year's—Wage Increase Only $4,000,000—Total Profits Nearly Double Total Wages—"Distribution of Ownership" Analyzed.

It is announced with a great flourish of trumpets, as an illustration of the generosity of the capitalists and the "brotherhood" of Capital and Labor, that the United States Steel Corporation or Steel Trust has voluntarily advanced the wages of two-thirds of its men 10 per cent., increasing the annual pay-roll by about $4,000,000. About 100,000 men are affected by the increase.

The splendor of the Steel Trust's generosity is rather dimmed when we look at another item of news published much less conspicuously a day or two earlier. This is to the effect that the "net earnings" or profits of the Trust—after paying cost of materials, wages and salaries, wear and tear, insurance, taxes, and all other expenses—for the three months ending June 30, is about $38,100,000, an increase of more than $11,000,000 over the figures for the same quarter of last year.

Net profits, created by the labor of the employees, will be, at this rate, about $44,000,000 greater this year than last. The Trust munificently gives back $4,000,000 of this in the form of increased wages, and pockets the other $40,000,000.

Total Profits and Wages.

The figures give a basis for some interesting calculations. The wage increase of 10 per cent., we are told, affecting 100,000 men, amounts to $4,000,000. That means that the total wages of those men amounted, at the old rate, to $40,000,000, or an average of $400 a year and, at the new rate to $44,000,000, or $440 a year.

There are about 50,000 other workmen employed, we are told, who are paid on a "tonnage scale." Making the liberal assumption that these men are paid twice as high a rate as the others, we find that the total pay-roll of the Steel Trust is from $80,000,000 to $85,000,000 a year.

That is what goes to the hundred and fifty thousand wage workers—the men who make the steel.

The profits—"net earnings"—of the Trust last year were about $110,000,000 This year, after making allowance for the increased pay-roll, they will be over $150,000,000. That is what goes to the stockholders and bondholders—the men who make the steal, so to speak.

"Distribution of Ownership."

In connection with the legal contest between majority and minority stockholders over the "stock-conversion plan," an attempt is being made through the daily press, by the publication of partial lists of stockholders, to create the impression that the stock of the Trust is not to any great extent owned by millionaires, but that it is mostly held by thousands of poor people throughout the land.

To convince the public of this (alleged) fact would be a great point gained for the capitalists, as it would tend to obscure the class struggle and hypnotize the workingmen into the belief that they, too, are capitalists. But the falsity of the claim was exposed almost as soon as the attempt was made to bolster it up with figures.

Last Friday the agents of the Trust gave out a statement that there were at least fifteen thousand different persons holding the eleven million shares of $100 each; and they published a list of about sixty-five persons or corporations, alleged to be the largest holders, with their several holdings, amounting in all to about 3,165,000 shares. Thus it appeared at once that sixty-five out of the alleged fifteen thousand members of the Trust hold 28 per cent. of the stock.

The Fake Exposed.

This, however, was not the worst. A daily largely read on Wall Street naively remarked, in commenting on the list, "It must be remembered that many large holders of corporation shares keep them in the name of clerks or other people." Three days later, the same paper, the "Evening Post," published in an obscure place, the following paragraph:

"BERTRAM CUTLER IDENTIFIED.

"Bertram Cutler, owner, according to the lists of the United States Steel Corporation, of 123,975 shares of the common and 25,365 shares of the preferred stock of that company, is a clerk, it was learned to-day, in the office of John D. Rockefeller, and a resident of Prohibition Park, S. I."

That is enough. We do not need to ask how many more of Mr. Rockefeller's clerks, how many of Mr. Morgan's, how many of Mr. Schwab's, how many of Mr. Carnegie's, are lending their names to their masters, in order that the latter may try to conceal the extent of the wealth they have accumulated from the hard labor of the iron and steel workers. We do not need to ask how many of the fifteen thousand stockholders are "dummies" for the trust kings. The single instance shows the methods used and exposes the whole argument about "wide distribution of ownership" in the Trust, "community of interest" between the Wall Street lords and the poor widows and thrifty laborers, and all the rest of the "prosperity" argument that the Republican politicians will give us this fall.

This plain fact remains: The hundred and fifty thousand iron and steel workers are producing a net value of over $235,000,000 a year and getting back but of it only $85,000,000 at the most; the surplus is going to people who perform no useful part in the industry; and if a part of the workers are now to get 10 per cent. higher wages, they have to work 20 or 30 per cent. harder in order to hold their jobs.

The Socialist's conclusion is: "Let the Nation Own the Trusts."

——The King of Belgium has just bought 150,000 acres of West Virginia coal land. How do you like it, 150,000 acres of coal the Creator placed in the earth for everyone, gobbled up by one man—nice system, isn't it?—Colorado Courier.

GOMPERS TELLS A TALE OF WOE.

Second Chapter in Record of Failure.

Impotence of American Federation's Lobbying Policy Again Demonstrated—Emasculation of Chinese Exclusion Law Followed by Perversion of Anti-Injunction Bill—Eight-Hour Bill Will Probably Die in Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29.—Two weeks ago, under the headline, "Still a Record of Failure," The Worker commented upon the futile efforts of the Legislative Committee of the American Federation of Labor in the matter of the Chinese Exclusion Law, as told in the June number of the American Federationist."

The July number of the "Federationist" adds another chapter to the story, and still a third will have to be told in August.

The feature of the current issue of the official organ of the Federation is an editorial entitled "An 'Anti' Changed to a 'Pro' Injunction Bill." Under this heading President Gompers relates once more the old, old story of a labor bill, prepared by the A. F. of L., lobbied through the House by the Legislative Committee, and then amended in Senate Committee in such a manner that the Legislative Committee will have to lobby for its defeat and, if they succeed in their efforts, will find themselves at the end of the whole process just where they were at the beginning.

"There was a king of France who had ten thousand men;
"He marched them up a hill and marched them down again."

Gompers Tells a Tale of Woe.

We may tell the story in President Gompers' own words:

"The bill * * * was prepared by the attorneys for the American Federation of Labor—Bill H. R. 11000—and * * * passed the House of Representatives recently by an almost unanimous vote. The bill as drawn is the result of years of deep study and experience of lawyers, laymen, and statesmen, and in the form as passed by the House meets the entire approval of those who stand for the bill.

"The Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate, however, reported the bill with an amendment which superficially appears plausible and reasonable, but is absolutely at variance with the very purpose of the proposition. The amendment is in these words: 'Not involving injury to property or breach of the peace.' The language in which the amendment is couched is an implication that workmen engaged in a dispute are guilty of injury to property or breach of the peace, an insinuation entirely unfounded. But even if true, there are laws now upon the statute books of the United States and of the several states providing punishment for those who are guilty of injury to property or breach of the peace. If any workmen should be guilty of either offense he would be amenable to those laws and punished accordingly. There certainly is no necessity, therefore, for such a provision in a bill designed to prohibit the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

Purport of Bill Reversed.

"As a matter of fact, the amendment of the Judiciary Committee not only defeats the very purpose of the bill itself, but indeed instead of prohibiting the issuance of injunctions WOULD, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE HISTORY OF OUR LEGISLATION, PROVIDE A STATUTORY STIPULATION BY VIRTUE OF WHICH INJUNCTIONS WOULD BE AUTHORIZED."

President Gompers then quotes the opinion of Messrs. Ralston and Siddons, the attorneys of the A. F. of L., on the amendment in question. The attorneys point out that the laws provide ample penalties for violations of property rights and public order, providing, at the same time, for jury trial of persons accused of such offenses; that the use of injunctions in labor disputes to deprive strikers and boycotters of jury trial, has been in effect a judicial usurpation unauthorized by the law; and that this Senate amendment to the Anti-Injunction Bill supplies just this heretofore lacking authorization by statute law of the very abuse which the bill as originally drawn was intended to abolish.

President Gompers concludes:

Must Beg for Defeat of Bill.

"Now, in view of this opinion of these eminent attorneys and also the purpose to secure a law that shall rid us of the most injurious, unfair and prejudicial condition of affairs, which grossly violates the fundamental rights of our working people, we must oppose the amendment and insist upon the enactment of the bill into law as it originally passed the House of Representatives.

"We are anxious for the enactment of the bill, first, because the interests of the wage-earners of our country demand it, and secondly, because when a grave injustice is done to a large body of our people, its evil effects must permeate the whole body politic of our country. But with equal earnestness and emphasis we declare that rather than have a law upon the statute books which will, for the first time, give to the judiciary the legal, statutory authority for the issuance of injunctions, WE WOULD PREFER, AND SHALL WORK FOR, THE DEFEAT OF THE ENTIRE PROPOSITION BEFORE THIS CONGRESS, and bide our time when we may be enabled to induce the Congress of the United States in the future to take a more favorable view of Labor's claims."

Another Chapter Coming.

The third chapter in the history of the failure of the lobbying policy in the present session of Congress, which will doubtless be told in the next issue of the "Federationist," will relate to the shelving of the Eight-Hour Bill. This bill, which provides for an eight-hour day on all government work, was, like the Anti-Injunction Bill, passed in the House practically without opposition. Its passage in the House was, like that of the Anti-Injunction Bill, heralded through the country as a great victory for the "practical, conservative, non-partizan" lobbying policy of the Federation. It is now lodged in the Senate Committee on Labor, and, although several hearings have been given, it is practically certain that it will not be reported in the present session and very probably not in the next. POSITION OF THE BREWERY WORKERS.

Will Probably Carry to New Orleans Convention the Question of Locals Affiliated with American Labor Union

Julius Zorn, writing in the "Brewers' Journal" of June 28, while expressing the greatest satisfaction with the action taken by the American Labor Union at Denver, denies that it is the intention of the United Brewery Workers to leave the American Federation of Labor and join the A. L. U. He says:

"We have proven in the past that we were always loyal to the A. F. of L. and have always shown our solidarity to every bona fide labor organization affiliated with the A. F. of L.; we have always fulfilled our duties as true union men and will continue to do so in the future. It never has been, nor is it now the intention of our National Union to discontinue our membership in the A. F. of L. On the other hand, we cannot nor will we demand of our western local unions, who are affiliated with the American Labor Union, to sever their connections with that body, which has achieved such extraordinary results for our locals in the far West.

"We appreciate the valuable services which the American Labor Union has rendered our national union; we congratulate that organization on the stand it has taken in the political field, and sincerely hope that a like spirit may soon predominate in the A. F. of L. for the good and welfare of the American labor movement."

As the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. demands of the Brewery Workers' Union that it compel its western locals to withdraw from the A. L. U., virtually threatening that otherwise the national organization will be suspended by the A. F. of L., the whole question will probably come up in the New Orleans convention and will be one of the leading issues on which the conservative and progressive forces will divide there.

BREWERY WORKERS AND AMERICAN FEDERATION.

The "Brauer-Zeitung," organ of the United Brewery Workers, requests friendly papers to copy the following statement:

"The daily press of the country published last week a certain decision of President Gompers in the controversy, 'United Brewery Workmen, Engineers and Firemen.' On account of these 'decrees' more fights with capital will develop, and the one to be held responsible for these onslaughts on labor by capital will be Gompers. Shortly before going to press with this edition we notice a new 'decree' of Gompers, where he, in consideration of the difficulties in the anthracite coal regions, retracts and contradicts his former decisions, and states that he never denied the mine workers or the brewery-workers the jurisdiction over engineers and firemen working in those industries. While all progressive elements in the labor movement are at a loss to understand Gompers' attitude and motives, the National Union of United Brewery Workers has already taken an appeal against the last unwarranted decision to the next convention of the A. F. of L., on the very good grounds, as we have material on hand to prove, that one of the grossest violation of principles and rights of organized labor has been perpetrated."

WORK AMONG POLES.

Comrade William Fischler has made a very successful agitation tour among the Polish workingmen of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, speaking to audiences of from fifty to three hundred persons at New Bedford, Taunton, Fall River, Chicopee, Chicopee Falls, Huntington, Adams, Greenfield, Boston, Salem, Lynn, Lawrence, and Haverhill, in Massachusetts, and at Central Falls and Warren, R. I. The best meetings were at Chicopee, Chicopee Falls, Adams, Salem, and Lawrence. Comrade Fischler's meeting in Greenfield was the first Socialist meeting of any sort ever held in that place.

The success of his tour may be judged partly by the fact that he sold two hundred Socialist Party emblem buttons, two hundred and fifty copies of the Polish translation of McGrady's "Socialism and the Labor Problem," and fifteen dollar's worth of other Socialist literature. The first edition, 5,000 copies, of the translation of Father McGrady's book has been exhausted and a second is in preparation.

There are Polish Socialist clubs at Fall River, New Bedford, Chicopee, and Boston, all eager to co-operate with the party.

HUDSON COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Socialists of Hudson County, N. J., will hold their nomination convention on Saturday, July 12, at 7 p. m. sharp, in Central Hall, 342-350 Central avenue, Jersey City. A meeting of Local Hudson County will be held after the convention, where much important business is to be transacted, including election of officers for the ensuing term, and preparation for this fall's campaign. In view of the great importance of this meeting, it is earnestly hoped that every member of the Local will be present and help to make the convention and meeting a rousing opening of the 1902 campaign.

C. KRONENBERG, Organizer.

URGE POLITICAL ACTION.

The Alabama State Federation of Labor has instructed its delegate to the next American Federation of Labor convention to present a resolution declaring "it is absolutely necessary for organized workingmen to take steps to increase the spirit for political independence, to foster political action by the organized men of the United States."

HISTORIC GROUND.

Letter from the Scene of the Lattimer Massacre.

William Mailly Writes of Men and Things in and About Hazleton—The Crime of 1897 Still Remembered.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

HAZLETON, PA., June 22.—Looking down the main street that divides Hazleton, the view is not an unpleasant one. The street is wide and well paved, shade trees line the sidewalk, and the houses and stores are passably neat—some houses even handsome and picturesque—mine owners live there. On this sunny Sunday morning, a brighter, quieter city of its size could hardly be found anywhere. Least of all, does it bear the appearance of the center of a district where thousands of workmen are on strike. Newspaper readers the country over would be surprised could they see the places so luridly described by the facile "war correspondents at the front."

But a few yards away another scene is revealed in vivid contrast to that presented by the pretty main street. There you will see a valley as ugly as that of the Wyoming, two hours distant, is beautiful. A greater change could not be imagined. A bleak panorama, covered with gray rocks and furze, and cut by great gaps and gullies that make the earth appear as if it were in pain. These gigantic scars on the face of Nature are man's doing, showing also that his handiwork has changed for the worse. And there are the same breakers, the same culm piles, more misshapen and grim than ever.

This can be said, however. Here Nature is in harmony with the aspirations and deeds of those who claim proprietorship of the valley and the souls therein. Their aspirations are as bleak as the scene itself, their deeds as rank as the untrammeled vegetation, their consciences as hard as the rocks lying bare to the sky. Man has joined with Nature to make the Conyngham Valley the dreariest, bitterest spot in the whole anthracite region.

The country around Hazleton is replete with tragedy. Nature has set the scene for tragedy. You see and hear it on all sides; in the Lattimer story of blood, the unjust imprisonment of innocent men, the recital of weary marches of determined strikers, of stormy meetings and anxious exhortation, in the treachery of fellow workmen, the cunning and cruelty of employers and in the faces of men and women struggling to overcome that which has weighed them down and made them old before their time.

It was in Hazleton where Father Phillips became celebrated for his activity during the strike of 1900, and which only ended in his death in New York. You can learn all the details of that activity from the day that John Mitchell met the head of the Markle company in joint debate upon the steps of a little school house before a meeting of wrangling miners and sent that gentleman home a humiliated and defeated man. From that time Father Phillips sided with the miners, and helped them, so they believe, as well as his power enabled him.

Here it is, too, where "Mother" Jones cemented the workers together, organized them of times in the face of their own opposition, counselled and directed them during the day and marched with them through the night, knowing neither rest nor sleep until they had secured victory. Then she left them to go elsewhere to do it all over again, until she lies to-day in a West Virginia prison, giving her freedom that the working people she loves may win theirs. Here it is where her name spells solidarity and the example she set inspires sacrifice and hope.

A few hours spent among the strikers in the mining towns around Hazleton soon convinces you that the blood spilled at Lattimer in 1897 was not shed in vain. You learn that it was responsible for the successful strike of 1900, and, better still, that the existing situation in this vicinity is directly traceable to it. Diligent agitating, secret and open, kept alive the feeling of indignation and resentment, crystallizing it finaly into a successful resistance. There were exciting times during the conflict of 1900, but it was won and a livelier faith in each other is the result.

Accompanied by sturdy Tom Duffy, president of District No. 7 ,and indefatigable Pete Gallagher, national board member, I walked over to Lattimer, on our way back from Freeland, the other day. Freeland is twelve miles away, and is an old settled mining town. Here nearly all the miners own their homes, bought in the palmy days years ago, but rather ramshackle and worn-looking now. The best building in the place is the borough hall, erected upon a plot of land donated by the defunct Knights of Labor. It looks strangely out of place among the wooden houses of the town, which, by the way, contains the most radical men in the district. Good men, who are always the most active in resisting oppression and in making it effective. They should become good Socialists, and they will when they learn more about Socialism.

I heard the whole story of the famous massacre from the lips of men who know the truth, who saw the bodies of the slain, and helped to bury them, nursed the wounded and tended the widows and orphans left penniless. In Hazleton there are three survivors to-day living on the beneficence of their fellow workmen, maimed and ruined for life.

I saw the fence where the deputies stood, with Sheriff Martin at their head, and waited for the crowd that, unarmed and unaware, walked to death. Heard how the Sheriff read the riot act, how the crowd, not understanding the purport of his words, turned aside and walked into the street car track, how suddenly one shot was fired, then another, then a volley and how men fell where they stood while others, pursued by bullets, ran through the furze and laurel bushes, staggering, fear-crazed, bloody and shot-riddled, into the woods beyond, behind the little school house, into the school house cellar, anywhere to get away. A mile from the scene I stood upon the porch of a house where, gashed and bleeding, one of the victims fell. Yes, I heard it all, and I rejoiced nevertheless, for I knew that the blood of those poor workers was the seed that will yet blossom into flowers of freedom for their kind throughout the world.

The two school teachers, a man and a woman, who saw the tragedy and bravely told the plain truth at the trial, are no longer here. They have gone elsewhere—into other states, it was said. That term was their last in that township. They were turned down at the next election—because they dared tell the truth and refused to be intimidated into doing otherwise. All honor to them, wherever they may be!

The Pardee Company owns Lattimer, that is, the mines, the houses, machinery, and all accessories, except the men. They own themselves at present. They are all on strike. The houses near the scene of the massacre do not look so bad as others elsewhere, but further away, beyond the stripping, there are hovels that are among the worst anywhere.

The ground around Lattimer looks as if an earthquake had ruptured it. A wide and deep gash runs along, in a jagged line, as far as the eye can reach, extending for miles, like many others in the valley. This is a stripping. This means that the coal has been worked from the inside to the outcrop, which is then cleared off and dug up from the outside. This stripping follows the vein, and results in laying the country open like a huge animal under the knife. Its entrails in the shape of massive dirt piles, tree roots and rocks are strewn everywhere. In the gaping wound itself are black holes, like sightless orbs, where the human beings have burrowed painfully from the inside. It is a fearsome sight, this relentless devastation by man for profit's sake.

For, of course, there is profit in it. The coal is gotten with little expense, the principal labor being that of diggers, who are paid by the day, ten hours, for $1 two years ago, but now receive $1.28. They demand eight hours. Steam shovels do most of the loading. The men running these are also on strike—they want the union scale for their work—$125 a month. They were only getting $60 before, a big difference, but they are worth it and more, for the work is arduous.

Yesterday I visited Oneida, ten miles away, set in as desolate and forlorn a spot on the mountain top as I have ever seen. Evictions were expected to take place, but did not, for some reason. The company had the notices served ten days ago. The houses are all owned by the company, and it looks as if it would be a kindly act to evict the tenants, if they had anywhere else to go. Coxe Bros. & Co. own the mines both here and at Drifton, and have the reputation of being the worst exploiters in the valley, and all are bad. The conditions in both places are the same.

The miners here work as "butties"—two in a breast. There are no laborers, as in other mines. They receive 82 cents a car of 87 cubic feet, so the company claims. The price remains the same, be the breast 3½ feet thick or 25 feet. In the latter case, more money can be made than in the former, when it is almost impossible to make anything. The miners' wages average under these conditions 87 cents a day in a year of 187 days work.

The day laborers in the gangway receive $1.64 for ten hours, but other laborers receive no more than $1 a day. Should a miner's butty not come in to work, he employs a laborer and pays him $1.50 a day, besides expenses. It is reckoned that the day laborer at one dollar a day comes out ahead of the miner at the year's end. The dockage system is not so bad as before the last strike, when if any anyone made good wages, he lost it in docking. The union has regulated this better.

How do the people live upon such wages? Well, they huddle in the company houses, most of these built to hold four families. One moderate family would hardly have breathing space in them. These houses measure 44 feet by 24 and contain 16 rooms, four for each family, two rooms upstairs and two down. Each family pays $4 monthly. I heard of one case of thirteen people inhabiting a four-room house. Sometimes if the head of the family becomes disabled or gets killed, the wife and children "double up" with another family, probably relatives, in an already overcrowded house.

There are babies scrambling all over Oneida. The place seemed to ooze children—yards, porches, streets, windows, swarmed with them. It is heart-rending to think of them being raised in such an environment. It was said that a family of four could live on $15 a month and eat fairly good food at that. Its a problem how it is done, but it is. A single man can board for ten and twelve dollars a month. Where the boarders find room in some of the houses is another mystery in this land of mysteries.

Jeddo is seven miles from Hazleton and the mines are owned by J. B. Markle & Co., which is not as bad as the Coxe Company, simply because it hasn't got the same opportunities. Here is the story told of Jeddo:

Previous to 1900, the miners worked on an average of two and a half and three days a week. Since then, five days a week has been the average. This was due to the clearing up of the market by the strike of 1900, the floods of December, 1901, and February, 1902, which laid the mines idle for awhile, and the stocking of coal by the operators in preparation for this strike. The average wage is computed at $35 a month. One of this the miners pay $9 a month rent in Hazleton, where most of them live, and $2.50 a car fare to and from their work. They leave home at 5 a. m., and usually arrive back at 6:30 or 7 p. m. If they miss their street car, they have to stand in their damp clothes and wait half an hour, with the air at zero in winter. The breaker boys get 30 cents a day and upward for ten hours.

It is true that the prices of necessities of life have risen, as President Mitchell has stated, 35 per cent., while wages were only advanced 10 per cent. We all know beef went up. Coffee that formerly cost 8 cents now sells for 14 to 15 cents, and so on. Notwithstanding this, the miners have saved some money. How did they do it? By hard economy and self-denial. One thing that helped them was the abolition of credit at the company store, through the settlement of 1900. This compelled the miner to live on nothing (not hard for him to do) for two weeks until he drew pay. Then he bought for cash and, though the prices are high, he has been able to keep on buying for cash in the city and saved something besides.

Even then that does not explain how the miners have been able to reserve what they have. How much it has meant for them to do it they alone can tell. But they saved and for this struggle, especially. They were advised to do so and they followed the advice. That explains why there has been an unprecedented absence of complaints of distress or demands for food. It is one of the most remarkable things about a wonderful strike of which I wish time and space would permit me to tell more.

The miners' organization has given the miners confidence in themselves, ensured them greater independence, awakened new aspirations, kindled new desires, checked exploitation, strengthened their self-reliance, and taught them patience and sobriety. This is potent on all sides. At the Catholic Church this morning, out of a crowded congregation of miners and miners' children nearly all wore the button signifying the wearer had taken the pledge during the strike. The children, with their clean frocks and sweet faces, proudly showed the buttons, pinned where all could see.

The miners' organization has certainly done a great work during two years, a work which entitles it to our respect and consideration. This work has to be seen to be appreciated. Through it the miners are able to enter upon the seventh week of the strike with unbroken ranks and unwavering courage. It is a good thing for Socialists to see.

You smile ,and I say I am enthusiastic. You are right. I am enthusiastic. For I think I see in the revolution that has been wrought here in two short years, the beginning of a mightier revolution that will transform even this greed-wrecked valley into one of loveliness and eventually fill the waking world with love and glory.

Notice to Contributors.

Pledges should be drawn and checks and money orders made payable to the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association. All communications should be addressed to the newly elected Agent of the Association, Wm. Butscher, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

The Worker will contain, each week, a list of contributions received up to Monday preceding the date of issue.

If any contribution sent is not promptly acknowledged the sender should at once inform Comrade Butscher, that the matter may be investigated and set right.

Those who have made pledges should remember to send in the monthly instalments promptly, saving the trouble and expense of notifying them. Let each one feel his personal responsibility for the work we have undertaken and his power to hasten the coming of the Socialist Daily.

MARINE WORKERS UNITING.

A movement to consolidate all the workers directly connected with the marine industries in one body is being got under way in Chicago. It will include the Longshoremen's Union, Steamboat Firemen, Water Tender's and Oiler's Association, Tugmen's Association, Linemen's Union, etc., and will be extended to every port on the great lakes, and is expected to amalgamate in a great offensive and defensive alliance over 25,000 men.

——Political friends of labor are growing too numerous to count. There will be a different tale to tell when some of these friends float into office on the votes of workingmen. Then consideration for the industrial and commercial interests will make them turn a deaf ear to Labor's appeal for justice.—New Era.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

TO WOMEN SOCIALISTS.

Women Who Are in Sympathy with the Movement Invited to Organize and Work for the Cause.

There is a great amount of work to be done in the field of Socialist propaganda, and the workers are very few. It may be that you think you are doing your share by speaking a word occasionally in conversation with your friends, but as you are Socialists, believers in the benefit of co-operation and organization, I do not need to remind you that such accidental and occasional remarks, although useful, are not so valuable as a regular, systematic method of promoting a knowledge of Socialism.

To all women who are Socialists, and anxious to see the cause of Socialism advanced, I would say: Organize yourselves into local unions and affiliate with the Woman's National Socialist Union. The fee to the national organization is only nominal, ten cents a year per member, and you will have the advantage of corresponding with women who are at work in various localities, from whom you can no doubt gain information that will aid you in your work, while you will also have the pleasure of giving aid and information to others.

If you feel that you cannot undertake very extended propaganda, you can at least gather together a small library of books tending to open the eyes of the reader to present conditions and awaken an interest in Socialist principles, and can industriously circulate those books among your acquaintances.

Much more can be done in an organization than by individuals working without knowledge of each other. The benefit to the worker is also not to be overlooked. We learn from each other, and fit ourselves to do better work. We keep up with the times, and have the pleasure of congenial companionship.

Our organization aims at the most democratic methods, and each local is at liberty to follow out its own lines of work, be they literary, social or otherwise, with perfect freedom. There is no interference, but only the effort at mutual assistance.

Many plans are already on foot which will be of help to small, scattered locals, as for instance a new collection of songs, a new series of lessons for young people, plans for the publication of literature of a nature likely to appeal to women, etc.

It is desired to hold a convention of the Women Socialists of the state of California, affiliated with the W. N. S. U., in San Francisco in the fall, immediately after the convention of the Socialist Party of California, and we therefore urge scattered groups of women throughout California to organize themselves into locals and affiliate with the national organization, that they may be prepared to send representatives to the convention when it takes place. The women now organized need your aid, and are ready to give you their help in return.

Assistance in the work of organization will be given if desired. The outline of a local constitution will be furnished, which may be modified to suit the local requiring it. All inquiries will be gladly replied to. Will you not take hold and do your best to promote the cause of Socialism. Remember what Socialism promises to woman. It is a cause that deserves woman's earnest co-operation.

For national or local constitutions or information, please address Mrs. Wenonah S. Abbott, Oak, Shasta Co., Cal., President; Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington, Iowa, Secretary, or Josephine R. Cole, San Jose, Cal., representative for California.

J. R. C.

SOCIALIST CANDIDATES.

Below is given a list of the candidates of the Socialist Party for state offices in the various states that have thus far made nominations. These are the candidates of the working class.

Connecticut.

Governor—John W. Brown.
Lieutenant-Governor—Anton Frank.

St. Louis Trades Council Works for Socialist Party.

Police Outrages Against Strikers Spur Central Body to Action—Support Not Limited to Resolutions—Campaign Committee Chosen and Literature Printed.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 28.—The outrages committed by the police in attempting to crush recent strikes in this city has thoroughly aroused the organized workingmen and led to action on the part of the Central Trades and Labor Council which will undoubtedly have great effect in strengthening the Socialist Party here.

The central body, after taking the crimes of the capitalist authorities into full consideration, elected a committee, consisting of T. J. Burke, Frank Ujka, Eugene Sarber, J. J. Bauer, and M. Ballard Dunn, to investigate the matter further and prepare recommendations for appropriate action.

At last Sunday's meeting this committee presented a report, to the effect that such conduct on the part of the governmental authorities was to be expected so long as the government remained in the hands of any party supporting the capitalist system of private ownership of the means of production, and recommending, accordingly, that the Central Trades and Labor Council take active measures for the support of the Socialist Party at the coming election, that being the only party which stands distinctly for the interests of the working class and against the presnt system of class rule and exploitation.

Report Printed as Leaflet.

The report was adopted by an overwhelming majority in the C. T. & L. U. and fifteen thousand copies were ordered printed for general distribution.

The report makes an excellent Socialist propaganda leaflet and will do much to set the workingmen thinking.

The central body of the organized workers of St. Louis is thus pledged to active co-operation with the Socialist Party from this time forward, and there are many who think that the results will go far beyond the ten thousand votes which the committee in its report predicts.

Following are some extracts from the report, following upon a clear explanation of the fundamental antagonism between the interests of the capitalists and those of the wage-workers:

"We find in the Socialist movement of the world a political party which has been built up through the sacrifices of our fellow wage-workers, until it is to-day founded in every country of the world and musters in its voting power eight million workingmen. Wherever the trade union movement is organized there we find the Socialist movement, for the causes which bring forth the one are also the parent of the other.

"In our own city we find this movement strongly entrenched, organized in nearly every ward and in many of the precincts, with two weekly newspapers, English and German, which voice the demands of the party.

Auxiliary Campaign Committee.

"As this body already knows, the Socialist Party has nominated its ticket for the coming election and has set in motion a vigorous campaign. We find that on Sunday, June 29, there will be a general committee meeting held for the purpose of outlining the further work of the campaign, and in furtherance of our opinions expressed above we recommend that a committee of five, to be known as a 'campaign committee,' be elected from among our membership, whose duty it shall be to attend this meeting and do everything in their power to aid in carrying on the work there outlined.

"We find this action necessary for the following additional reasons: Our capitalist governments, whether Republican or Democratic, have existed solely for the purpose of furthering the interests of our masters. For the past quarter century especially has this been apparent; organized labor has on every hand borne the brunt of their power; they have been arrested, starved and shot down; they have stood as targets for the injunction, the state militia, the posse comitatus, and the standing army. Their martyrs lie on the fields of Hazleton, Cœur d'Alenes, Buffalo, St. Louis, Virden, Pana, and a hundred other spots which mark the massacre of helpless workingmen. • • •

Ten Thousand Votes Predicted.

"Thus, brothers, it behooves us, if we wish to prevent these awful conditions, if we wish to prevent such outrages as were recently visited upon our striking fellow unionists by the police of this city, to take action which we hereby recommend, and we safely predict that ten thousand votes ing election will mean the end of such conditions and the beginning of the time within which wage slavery will be destroyed forever, and the liberty of the working class will be an accomplished fact."

WHO WILL HELP.

A comrade who has on hand numerous sample copies of The Worker and other propaganda literature would like to co-operate with another Manhattan comrade who is similarly situated, in making a house-to-house distribution of the literature. Address, "Co-operation," care of The Worker, 184 William street, New York City.

ANTI-BOYCOTT BOYCOTTERS.

"Citizens' Alliance" Formed to Fight Strikers.

Middle-Class People in Coal Field Help Trust against Workingmen—The Work of the "Press Ring."

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

WILKES BARRE, July 7.—Two excrescences have developed upon the strike situation, and each of them disfigures the city of Wilkes Barre. One of these is the Citizens' Alliance, organized to fight the boycott declared by the union men upon all business men who work against the interests of the strikers. The other is a "press ring," composed of several reporters and special correspondents, who concoct ghost stories and scare yarns to send to their respective newspapers and keep "public interest alive."

The "Citizens' Alliance" is patterned after a movement with a similar name started by Scranton business men last winter, when the unions were making it hot for those who gave aid, shelter, or encouragement to the street-car company or its agents during the long street-car strike. The Scranton Alliance proved abortive, but it has been revived through the present strike, and it is largely responsible for the many unjustifiable arrests of strikers in that city recently. The Wilkes Barre movement is engineered by the coal operators and has among its members lawyers, mine superintendents, and business men.

Middle Class Again on Record.

This counter-movement arises from the effectiveness of the boycott levied by the union men, who have followed out a course of placing upon a blacklist everyone who manifested any sympathy for or gave succor to the Coal Trust, its Coal and Iron Police, deputies and scabs since the strike began. The boycott has been pushed vigorously and no one was spared. And the middle class has again demonstrated its selfishness and historical antipathy to the workers by arraying itself with the big capitalist class. The operators in the movement are there to represent the Coal Trust's interests.

The "Alliance" holds its meetings in secret, has a pass-word, and, more interesting still, its members have to pledge themselves to fight the union labels. This is deemed the surest way of fighting the union, besides shielding the members from open identification with the Alliance.

Politicians Participate.

What emphasizes the class character of the movement is the participation in it by several local politicians whose principal occupation heretofore has been "protecting the downtrodden workingman from the greed of capital." Chief among these patriots is one J. Ridgway Wright, who resigned his positions as chairman of the Democratic County Committee, to lead the Citizens' movement. Along with him are many other political busco-steerers whose careers of perfidious trafficking extends over many years in both parties.

There are no political lines drawn in the organization. By common consent these parasites upon Labor band together to fight the workers at a time when the workers need friends the most. It shows again that the working class need never expect assistance from any other class in the struggle for freedom. That the lesson will not be lost we may feel sure. The Mayor's action in forbidding the use of the river front for Comrade Collin's meeting has aroused so much unfavorable comment that, together with the Citizens' Alliance, a better understanding and appreciation of the events arising from a conflict like the present one may be set down as certain.

Bureau of Misinformation.

The evil influence of the "press ring" extends much further than that of the Citizens' Alliance, because its opportunities are greater. As in every strike of similar character, when sensational happenings are expected, special correspondents from the metropolitan papers arrive upon the scene. At the beginning Wilkes Barre, as strike headquarters, was inundated by special writers and "war correspondents," but as the strikers inconsiderately continued to observe the peace, "copy" got scarce, and many "specials" were recalled. Those who remained have had a hard time getting "stories" every evening, and failure so to do lays them liable to censure from the "old man," or perchance, even to recall. As a consequence, the "press ring" was formed.

Now the members thereof make up in imagination what they lack in veracity. They are out for news, and failing its discovery, they do not hesitate to manufacture some. In thus degrading themselves they are actuated by a double motive—anxiety to please their masters and to weaken the strikers.

It was from this press ring, which attempts to monopolize the strike news, that two bogus statements purporting to be given out by the operators, emanated. One statement was to the effect that only two-thirds of the strikers would be re-employed when the strike was settled, and was widely quoted, though it was repudiated next day by the operators themselves. Most of the reports about breaks in the strikers' ranks and about rioting are concocted by this ring.

It was from this group that the malicious story about President Mitchell's family relations first came, when he went to Chicago over a week ago. Of course, there was absolutely no truth in the report, but it was in line with the other endeavors of the "gang" to keep up the excitement. However, it is just probable that they went too far this time, and their imagination ran away with their caution, for some heavy libel suits are likely to result.

It can be judged from this how the facts are distorted and the workers' cause misrepresented in a time like this. In justice it must be said that not all the correspondents are to be classed with the above, the particular exceptions being the Associated Press, Publishers' Press, and Philadelphia "Inquirer" representatives. Nearly all the others belong to the ring.

The Duryea Murder.

Excitement over the murder of the Italian laborer at Duryea last week has subsided in that locality, but the strikers are none the less indignant over the affair. It is probable that the murderer will never be caught, because the bullet which lodged in the poor fellow's brain has not been found, though the attendant physicians say they have searched diligently for it.

It was first reported that the hole was made by a 44-calibre bullet, and as the Coal and Iron Police within the stockade, are said to use 38-calibre weapons, it was argued by the company officials that the shot must have been fired from another direction. But the bullet cannot be found, and as the body lay for several hours in the roadway before the strikers reached it, the charge is that some of the university students employed as deputies by the company extracted the bullet to avoid comparing it with those used by the deputies. So it is probable that the murderer of the laborer will never be discovered and the deed will be unavenged.

WILLIAM MAILLY.

A GRAND STAND PLAY.

The Trust Magnates Show by Their Actions How Little They Fear the Republican Administration.

The Republican national administration is making a grand-stand play against the trusts, just as it did before the election of 1900, when the Ray Anti-Trust Bill was rushed through the House and then allowed to die in the Senate after Election Day.

How much confidence is to be put in the sincerity of the government in its prosecution of the Meat Trust may be judged from the calmness with which the trust kings go on with their work—not only strengthening the Meat Trust, but laying the foundation of the future Food Trust, as shown by the following dispatches:

"PACKING HOUSE COMBINE.

"CHICAGO, June 26.—Work on the proposed consolidation of the great packing house concerns is progressing slowly because it is an enormous undertaking, and there are so many different propositions to be considered in connection with the unification of the interests. It is claimed that the stock yards at Chicago and Kansas City will have to be taken over with the packing houses, for the reason that the latter practically control the greater part of the business at the yards, and can and will carry the trade with them if they move away from the yards.

"Should the packing house combine be carried to conclusion the succeeding corporation could abandon the Union Stock Yards, destroy the plants, and leave the yards for good and all. Here are the big packing house concerns, their capital, and their business as estimated for 1901:

Swift & Co., capital stock, $25,000,000; bonds, $5,000,000; annual business, 1901 (estimated), $190,000,000.

Armour & Co., capital stock, $20,000,000; annual business, 1901 (estimated), $250,000,000.

Morris & Co., partnership, annual business, 1901 (estimated), $100,000,000.

Hammond, capital stock, $3,600,000; bonds, $1,550,000; annual business, 1901 (estimated), $50,000,000.

S. & S. Co., capital stock, $4,500,000; annual business, 1901 (estimated), $50,000,000.

Libby, capital stock, $1,000,000; annual business, 1901 (estimated), $20,000,000.

Cudahy & Co., partnership, annual business, 1901 (estimated), $40,000,000.

The yards are owned by the Vanderbilts and it is not improbable that they may undertake the formation of the combine and carry it to a successful conclusion with the packers and their interests allied."

"A FOOD PRODUCTS TRUST.

"CAMDEN, N. J., June 27.—Articles of incorporation were filed to-day by the Association of Manufacturers and Distributers of Food Products, no capital stated. The capital of the firms in the corporation is $30,000,000.

"The incorporation to-day is said to be preliminary to the organization of a combination to embrace a number of the largest pickling and preserve companies in the United States. A meeting of representatives of these companies will be held in New York on July 29.

"The firms which are members of the association are: Max Ams of New York; A. A. Knight & Sons of Boston; Perfection Jar Closure Company of Philadelphia; Curtis Bros. of Rochester, N. Y.; Cruickshank Bros. of Allegheny City, Pa.; George K. McMechan of Wheeling, West Va.; Anderson Food Company and the Campbell Preserve Company of Camden, N. J.; Logan & Johnson of Boston; J. Weller Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio; Exley, Watkins & Co. of Wheeling, West Va.; Williams & Brow of Dertoit, Mich.; Ritter Conserve Company of Philadelphia.

"The officers of the new corporation are: President—William B. McMechan, Wheeling, West Va.; Vice-Presidents—L. M. Friley of Camden, Frank Cruickshank of Allegheny City, Pa., and W. H. Ritter of Philadelphia; Secretary—W .A. Williams of Detroit, Mich.

"The incorporators are L. M. Friley of Camden; John T. Coxe of Moorestown, N. J.; Josiah Buck of Crosswicks, N. J.; L. J. Link and John Wiseman of Philadelphia."

SCHEME FAILED.

Futile Attempt to Disfranchise Haverhill Socialists.

Republican Board of Assessors Forced to Recede from Their Position—Canvass of Ward Five by Legal Officer Shows Crooked Work of the Board.

HAVERHILL, Mass., June 30.—In the issue of June 22 we mentioned that a scheme was being carried out by the politicians of Haverhill whereby they hoped to prevent the re-election of Representative James F. Carey. We are now able to give fuller particulars in relation thereto, and incidentally compare the work of a militant Socialist with that of an old party politician who works "for the money that is in it."

Ward Five, Carey's district, is divided into three precincts. Precinct One is about evenly divided in strength between the Socialists and Republicans. Precinct Two, composed mostly of farmers, is strongly Republican. Precinct Three is overwhelmingly Socialistic. The Democratic party has practically disappeared from the Ward.

The voters of the ward elected Comrade C. H. Morrill as Assistant Assessor. He was doing the most thorough work ever done in the Ward. This was well known by the three Assessors, all Republicans, elected by the city government.

They also knew that he had covered hundreds of extra names in Precinct One, which, of course, required a few days longer to secure. While he was working in Precinct Two, the Assessors detailed the Assistant Assessor of Ward Four, a Republican, who had worked overtime to complete his ward, to do the work in Precinct Three, claiming as an excuse that Comrade Morrill was slow. Their action was illegal, being in defiance of the city charter, which provides that, "the Assistant Assessors shall furnish the Assessors with all necessary information relative to persons and property taxable IN THEIR RESPECTIVE WARDS."

Action Illegal.

When a protest was made by Comrade Morrill and the Assessors found that they had violated the provisions of the city charter, they claimed that the Tax Commissioner of the state had given them permission to do so. The Tax Commissioner, at Boston, when questioned by Comrade Carey, denied that he had given permission and acknowledged that he had no right to grant such permission if he had desired to do so.

After a protest signed by about one hundred indignant voters of the Ward, regardless of party, had been presented to the Assessors, Comrade Morrill secured the Precinct Three book soon after he was ready for it; the Assessors withdrawing their man and surrendering the book. They tried to make him promise not to cover the territory which had already been illegally covered. This, of course, he refused. He completed the entire Ward on June 21, being about five days later than usual, having covered 354 extra names, besides doing thorough and impartial work in other directions. He also prepared the books carefully, so that as few voters as possible would be dropped.

The Object Exposed.

In the territory which had been illegally covered he found about fifty names which had been missed. Twenty-six of these were voters. Twenty were Socialists; three others vote part Democratic and part Socialist, and three were Republicans. Other names of Socialists were fixed in such a manner that they would probably have been dropped from the voting list by the Board of Registrars. The number of names "missed" and "fixed," added together, exceeded the plurality given some of the Socialist candidates at the city election last December, although it did not equal the plurality given Carey in November.

Comrade Morrill also discovered taxable property to the amount of $674 which had been skipped by the Republican substitute in the portion of a precinct covered by him.

All the names and items of taxable property have been entered in the books and will have to be accepted by the Assessors.

The Republican chairman of the Board of Assessors is "hopping mad" over the failure of their scheme, and the only way he can think to get revenge is to declare that Comrade Morrill shall not be paid for the work done in the territory covered by the man whom the Board illegally assigned. He claims it was not necessary for the legally elected Assistant Assessor to cover this field again and proposes to "hold up" $32 of his pay. The reason it was "not necessary" is, he says, that "the Board had secured all the information they required."

A protest signed by fifteen of the most active Socialists of the city has been presented to the Committee on Accounts and another to the Auditor, insisting that no money be paid from the city treasury for the work illegally done. Comrade Morrill has been advised by attorneys that he can compel the payment of his just claim.

The fair-minded voters of the Ward, of all parties, condemn what has been done, and many promise to resent it at election time.

GAINS IN INDIANA CITIES.

Elections were held in eleven cities in Indiana in the month of May. These cities gave the candidates of the Socialist party 2,365 votes. In 1900 the whole state gave but 2,233 votes for our national ticket. The party has locals in over thirty cities. This gives an idea of what we may expect from Indiana in November.

FORWARD TO VICTORY IN NEW YORK STATE!

Social Democratic Party Chooses Its Candidates and Is Ready for the Fray.

Benjamin Hanford Again Heads the Ticket, with William T. Brown at His Side—Delegates Spend the Glorious Fourth in Planning for Working-Class Independence.

Here is the ticket of the working class, the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, for the state of New York, the ticket for which we have to work with all our power from now till November 4:

Governor—Benjamin Hanford.
Lieutenant-Governor—Wm. Thurston Brown.
Secretary of State—Leonard D. Abbott.
Attorney-General — Lawrence D. Mayes.
Comptroller—Warren Atkinson.
Treasurer—Joel Moses.
Engineer and Surveyor—Everitt L. Holmes.
Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals—John Franklin Clark.

The Socialists of New York have joined with those of several other states in celebrating the Fourth of July by holding their state convention, putting in the field candidates to represent the interests of the working class, and preparing for an active campaign to bring to the workers of the state a knowledge of the movement which is to make them as a class "free and independent."

At 10:45 a. m. last Friday, State Secretary Leonard D. Abbott called the delegates to order in the large hall of the Labor Lyceum. Job Harriman was chosen as Chairman and Henry L. Slobodin as Secretary pro tem. Committees were then elected as follows: On Credentials—Hopkins, Lane, Holmes, Newman, Reichenthal, and Dooley; on Rules and Order of Business—Hillquit, Furman, Atkinson, Edlin, Slobodin.

After a short recess the Credentials Committee reported forty delegates presenting credentials in proper order and recommended that all be seated, which was done. The delegates were as follows:

Personnel of Convention.

Rochester—Wm. T. Brown and Chas. R. Bach.
Newburg—Wenzel Meyrowsky.
Johnstown and Gloversville—Leo. Grinnell.
Schenectady—Charles Newman.
Troy—Wm. Nugent, Chas. Gasson, and M. M. A. Field.
Peekskill—Everitt L. Holmes.
Yonkers—Paul J. Bauerberg and Godfrey Lehner.
Mt. Vernon—Comrades Beardsley and Hutchinson.
New Rochelle—Jas. Gagan and Alfred E. Dixon.
Richmond—Christian LeGrand and Herman Fischer.
Queens—Chr. Bub, Frank Bessen, and C. Barge.
Kings—William Butscher, C. L. Furman, Jos. Wm. Dooley, Thos. A. Hopkins, Warren Atkinson, Joseph A. Wells, and Peter Larsen.
New York—Job Harriman, Morris Hillquit, Henry L. Slobodin, Edward P. Clarke, James N. Wood, Algernon Lee, Julius Gerber, Alexander Jonas, I. Phillips, H. C. Bowerman, Edward M. Martin, Emil Neppel, L. D. Mayes, Julius Halpern, N. S. Reichenthal, and William Edlin.

The temporary organization was then made permanent, with the addition of Holmes as Sergeant-at-Arms.

A committee from the Workingmen's Educational and Home Association was granted the floor and extended an invitation to the delegates to visit as guests the club rooms of the Association in Eighty-sixth street. The invitation was accepted for Saturday, July 6.

After the report of the Committee on Rules had been heard and accepted further committees were elected as follows: On Platform—Butscher, Furman, Brown, Mayes, and Slobodin; on Constitution—Hillquit, Gerber, Dooley, Nugent, Bach, and Newman; on Agitation and Finance—Barge, Wood, Hopkins, Edlin, and Lehner; on Press—Phillips, Bowerman, and Clarke; Auditing Committee—Lane, Lindboe, and Bessen.

Fraternal Greetings.

At this point the following telegram was read and received with cheers:

"State Convention of the Social Democratic Party: Absence makes the heart grow fonder. Revolutionary spirit, all hail!"—Local Watertown.

Another telegram, from the "Voice of Labor," which was received with loud applause, was in the following words:

"Hearty greeting. Three cheers for the S. D. P. Onward, comrades, to victory!"

State Secretary Abbott then read a report covering the work of the State Committee during the two years of its existence, which was recived and referred to the various committees. Treasurer Neppel presented his report, which was referred to the Auditing Committee. State Organizer Spring also made a report of his activity since his engagement by the State Committee.

A recess was then taken until 2:30 p. m. On reassembling, the Convention received the report of the Committees on Constitution and on Platform, both of which were exhaustively discussed, taking up the whole afternoon session. The party constitution as finally adopted will be printed in The Worker next week.

The draft of a platform as presented was, after discussion, referred back to the committee with certain instructions, and a recess was taken till 7 p. m., it having been decided to take up the platform immediately on reassembling.

The new draft of platform presented at the opening of the night session was adopted in substance and referred to a committee on style for revision. In its finished form it will be found elsewhere in this paper. This committee was also instructed to add the usual immediate demands.

A number of resolutions were reported and adopted, which, together with the immediate demands, will be published in the following issue, as will also the recommendations of the Committee on Agitation and Finance.

The Ticket Named.

Nomination of the state ticket being next in order, Delegate Dooley of Brooklyn presented the name of Benjamin Hanford. Delegate Reichenthal of New York followed with the nomination of Frank R. Sieverman of Rochester. Delegate Bach of Rochester stated that Comrade Sieverman could not accept the nomination. Delegates rose in all parts of the hall to second the nomination of Comrade Hanford, which was carried by acclamation.

The chosen standard-bearer of the party was then called upon, amid enthusiastic applause, to address the convention. He responded in his characteristic soul-stirring manner, picturing the opportunities presented and inspiring every hearer with ardent determination to work for the cause as he had never worked before.

Delegate Hillquit next offered the name of William Thurston Brown of Rochester as candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, which was carried by acclamation. Comrade Brown accepted in a brief and earnest speech, pledging his devoted service to the movement, which was received with hearty cheers by the delegates and visitors, who knew how faithfully he has served it in the past.

The ticket was then completed as given above, and the State Committee was authorized to fill any vacancies that might occur.

It is the general consensus of opinion that the ticket is an unusually good one. Every man in the list is thoroughly competent to fulfill the duties of the office for which he is put forward, every one of them has worked faithfully for the cause and won the esteem and the respect of his comrades and of all workingmen with whom he has come in contact. It is a ticket that the Social Democratic Party can present with pride and confidence as embodying the aspirations and representing the demands of the working class.

Election of a State Committee for the ensuing term of two years was next in order and resulted in the choice of I. Phillips, Henry L. Slobodin, Herman Reich, Chris Bub, Leonard D. Abbott, Charles L. Furman, James N. Wood, Warren Atkinson, H. C. Bowerman, and Emil Neppel. Six of these have served on the outgoing committee; Furman, Wood, Atkinson, and Bowerman are the new members.

For the Press.

The report of the Press Committee was the last order of business. The Committee submitted a statement made by the Socialist Co-operative Publishing Association on the condition and progress of The Worker, and on the recommendation of the Committee, locals throughout the state were requested to furnish The Worker with reports of their activity and to work for the increase of its circulation, and instructions were given to the State Committee to take measures for the same end.

It was nearly midnight when the Convention arose. After a day of hard work in the sweltering heat, the delegates parted, tired but satisfied with the results accomplished and hopeful of the successes yet to be achieved.

CAMPAIGN PLANS ARE UNDER WAY.

New York State Committee Meets and Takes up its Work, Full of Hope and Energy.

The newly elected State Committee held its first meeting Tuesday evening, July 8, in the Labor Lyceum, with Comrade Bowerman in the chair and Comrade Abbott serving as Secretary. Those answering the roll were: Comrades Herman Reich, Henry L. Slobodin, Jas. N. Wood, H. C. Bowerman, I. Phillips, Emil Neppel, Leonard D. Abbott, and State Organizer F. J. Spring.

The following were elected as officers of the Committee for the ensuing term: Henry L. Slobodin, Corresponding and Financial Secretary; James N. Wood, Assistant Financial Secretary; H. C. Bowerman, Recording Secretary; Emil Neppel, Treasurer; Herman Reich, Literature Agent.

Comrades Wood and Slobodin were elected a committee to prepare rules for the government of the Committee.

The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to notify the nominees of the State Convention of their nomination and prepare for publication in leaflet form any letters of acceptance suitable for agitation purposes; and to make inquiries as to the best method to be pursued in the publication of campaign leaflets and pamphlets.

The proceedings of State Convention were referred to this special committee for compilation.

It was decided to print and send out postal cards to those who have received campaign subscription blanks, urging upon them the necessity of securing all financial assistance possible, as the expenses of this campaign will probably be much higher than ever before, inasmuch as we have decided to make a more thorough canvass of the state of New York than has hertofore been attempted.

The Committee decided to have printed and circulated one thousand subscription blanks for the different local bodies in the state, trade unions, sick and death benefit societies, and all other progressive bodies.

State Organizer Spring reported the organization of a local in Middeltown, with an active membership.

The Committee instructed the Organizer to make a six weeks' tour of the state, stopping at the principal cities between New York and Buffalo, and working from them into the smaller industrial towns in the surrounding country districts, and to make all possible arrangements for the campaign tours of the different state candidates.

Comrades Abbott and Spring were elected as a committee to arrange for two complete tours of the state, in August and in October, by Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor; for a tour by William T. Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor; and for a tour by Alexander Jonas, speaking in German. This committee was also instructed to secure the services of at least one Socialist speaker of prominence from without the state for a complete canvass of New York State.

It was further decided to make arrangements to hold two grand ratification meetings in Manhattan, one in Cooper Union and one in the open air, during the campaign; also a ratification meeting on a large scale in Brooklyn.

A committee was appointed to secure permanent headquarters for the State Committee during the campaign. The Committee then adjourned to meet Tuesday evening, July 22, in Labor Lyceum, at 8:30 o'clock sharp.

LEONARD D. ABBOTT,
Secretary.

BUY UNION-LABEL BREAD.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or governament ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

ORGANIZER SPRING'S WORK.

During the ten days preceding the convention, as reported last week, State Organizer Spring visited the newly organized local at Newburg and gave welcome assistance to the comrades there, who bid fair to take an honorable rank among the Social Democratic organizations of the state when the votes are counted next fall. Three very successful meetings were held in Newburg and the comrades were much encouraged.

He next visited Poughkeepsie, interviewing a number of unaffiliated Socialists and workingmen who are favorably disposed toward the party, taking several subscriptions for The Worker, and making arrangements for a meeting in the near future, at which a local will probably be organized.

At Middletown he held a meeting and succeeded in organizing a local with six charter members, which will soon add more to its ranks.

At Tarrytown Spring addressed a meeting and consulted with the comrades on plans for future work.

White Plains was the last stop on this trip. A street meeting was held there with about two hundred listeners. Thence he returned to the city in time for the convention.

Last Saturday he spoke at an open-air meeting on Fifty-seventh street; on Monday he addressed the Newark Trades Council, by invitation; and on Wednesday he visited Astoria, where it is hoped to form an English-speaking branch.

Comrade Spring is now making arrangements for a tour of the state, either by himself or by some other good speaker. All locals not already in communication with him on the subject should at once address F. J. Spring, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

NEW YORK STATE, ATTENTION.

All official communications to the New York State Committee must be addressed to the Corerresponding Secretary, Henry L. Slobodin, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

FORWARD, MARCH!

Our ticket is in the field in the state of New York. A better ticket never was nominated. There is not a man on it for whom we have need to apologize, not one of whom we are not proud, not one in whom we have not the fullest confidence.

Our platform is formulated. It states our position so succinctly that "he who runs may read," so clearly and strongly that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot err therein." For that platform, for every word and phrase in it, we stand.

Our State Committee is elected and has begun its work. It is a most judiciously chosen committee. Every member is a worker and an intelligent worker for the cause.

The campaign is opened. From now till Election Day, the capitalists and their Republican and Democratic tools will busily, though unknowingly, put opportunities in our way.

Comrades of the state of New York, it is for you to say how those opportunities shall be used, how thoroughly that platform shall be brought to the attention of the working class, how loyally that State Committee shall be supported, what vote shall be rolled up for that ticket.

Fix your ideals high, comrades. Expect an unexampled gain in our vote. You have every reason to do so. More than that, resolve that there shall be an unexampled gain. Fall to work now, this week, to get it, and keep at work till the votes are counted. We are face to face with the enemy from this day on. Neglect of duty on the field of battle is treason to the flag—and our red flag is the noblest to which men ever owned devotion.

THE HAVERHILL EXPOSURE.

Our Haverhill correspondence this week is most significant. That such a bare-faced attempt at partizan disfranchisement should be perpetrated in staid old Puritan Massachusetts, in a city like Haverhill, which is still far above the average in its respect for old traditions of common honesty and political decency, is most conclusive evidence of the depths of dishonor to which the capitalist class must inevitably sink when it finds itself confronted with the young but growing giant of Socialism.

The respectable gentlemen of Haverhill have been wont to talk of the Socialists as enemies of law and order. That phrase, which they never had a right to use, is now forever taken from their mouths, for in their desperation at the evident awakening of the working class they have brazenly practised the methods of Quay without any of his skill.

It is only the Socialists that can afford to be honest in politics. False in one, false in all. The essential dishonesty of the capitalist system of economics infects every phase of capitalist life and makes political honesty in a capitalist party a mere "iridescent dream."

THE "UNITY CONSPIRACY" BUGABOO.

We are not going to be dragged into a quarrel, nor even into a controversy, with the "Social Democratic Herald" at the present time. Quarrels we desire to avoid at all times; and, although controversy within the party, at the right times and conducted in the right spirit, is often not only unavoidable, but positively beneficial, we do not feel that this is the time for it; the state and congressional campaigns are opening and our columns will be crowded and our energies overtaxed with the work of fighting external enemies of the party, so that we must pass over internal questions as lightly as possible.

Inasmuch, however, as some comrades have repeatedly taken The Worker to task for having criticized other Socialist papers (particularly the "Appeal to Reason" and the "Social Democratic Herald") or even for having ventured to express dissent from some of their opinions, we take this opportunity to advise all such comrades to procure and examine the issue of the "Social Democratic Herald" for June 28.

The issue referred to contains a letter attacking the party by a former comrade in New Hampshire who has deserted the party and joined a hostile political organization; it contains an attack on the National Committee, couched in vague and general terms and carefully timed, it would seem, to injure the National Committee just when its services are being most called for in the great labor crisis now prevailing; and it contains an editorial attacking "the faction that was thrown off by the S. L. P.," characterizing them as "the little minds of the movement," who perpetrated the "unity conspiracy" to "put the (original) S. D. P. out of business."

We advise all comrades, of whatever "faction" (for us, we do not care to cultivate factions within the party), especially all comrades who either were concerned in or were "put out of business" by the "unity conspiracy" (for us, we are not afraid of conspiracies, because we do not think that a real Socialist party can be "put out of business" by conspirators)—we advise them all to read this issue of the "Social Democratic Herald" and form their own opinions. We are not afraid to leave the matter to their judgment, without further comment.

TRUSTS, "INDEPENDENTS," AND WORKING-CLASS POLICY.

There is one passage in Comrade Mailly's very interesting correspondence from the strike field this week to which we would call especial attention. Writing from the lower anthracite district, he says:

"While the Philadelphia and Reading is so omnipotent here, bad as conditions are at its mines, they are much worse at those managed by individual operators. This comes about through the dependency of these 'independent' small capitalists. They are under obligations to the Coal Trust, have to pay heavy royalties, and compete both in transportation and in the market with the monopoly. This compels the use of methods the Trust can afford to ignore, through its impregnable position. So it is that company stores, outrageous docking, higher rents, inferior ventilation are more in vogue at these 'independent' collieries and in a worse form than under the Reading company."

This statement, attested as it is by all who are familiar with the region, and supported by similar observations in other places and in other industries, is worthy of the careful consideration of all those who are inclined to prefer the Democratic or Populist program of "smashing the trusts" to the Socialist program of socializing them.

No one can deny that the trustification of industry—that is, the concentration of ownership and control—greatly reduces the cost and increases the efficiency of production. That is, indeed, the chief motive for the formation of trusts at the present day. "Corners" and "pools," whose object is simply to raise selling prices or to maintain them in the face of conditions that would otherwise cause them to fall, are seldom altogether successful, never permanently successful. The corner and the pool were the primitive stages of combination. They were designed only to control the market, to regulate the selling of the product after it was created, not to control the process of production itself. These crude forms of combination have, with some exceptions, fallen into disrepute within recent years and are condemned as "illegitimate" and "immoral" even by the great trust magnates. The capitalists' test of the morality and legitimacy of any business method or political institution is its profitableness to the capitalist class. When a Carnegie condemns pools and corners as immoral and illegitimate, he simply means that they are, on the whole, clumsy and relatively unprofitable methods of capitalist combination.

The modern trust, combine, or consolidation—such as the Standard Oil Company, the United States Steel Corporation, the American Sugar Refining Company, or the Consolidated Tobacco Company—is a very different sort of thing. The old-fashioned pool in the steel industry was simply an agreement among several independent steel capitalists not to sell below a certain price or to divide the territory and not compete with each other. It did not make any change in the methods of production. The various forms of waste incident to competition continued, even though competition was suspended. The result was that conditions inevitably arose, sooner or later, which either forced or tempted some of the members of the pool to break their agreement—for, while there may be honor among lawless thieves, there is very little among capitalists—and then "the market was demoralized," as the phrase goes, and the demoralization of the market reacted disastrously on the various capitalists, forcing the weakest into bankruptcy and compelling the others to suspend or curtail production, thus throwing thousands of employees out of work.

The present Steel Trust does not work in this way. It is one great proprietary company, holding a controlling share in the stock of all the subsidiary companies, and thus actually owning iron mines, coal mines, limestone quarries, coking and smelting furnaces, foundries, iron and steel mills, warehouses, and railway and steamship lines. The whole process, from the extraction of the raw material from the earth to the marketing of the finished product, is unified and organized. To a greater or less extent the same may be said of all the great trusts of the present day.

The object of such a trust is not primarily to raise prices. It may raise prices or maintain them against adverse conditions, but very often it cuts prices heavily in order to conquer new markets, domestic or foreign—as the Tobacco Trust is now doing (in regard to cigars) at home and the Steel Trust abroad.

If the modern trusts can thus reduce prices and yet increase profits, as compared with prices and profits before consolidation, it is because the unified control and organization of the processes of industry greatly reduces the cost of production. The trust does not have to spend nearly so much money in advertising and soliciting as the individual capitalists did; the work of management, superintendence, accounting, and the like can be done by a force much less numerous than the sum of the forces necessary to the separate enterprises before consolidation; it knows the market and never allows its employees to produce more than can be sold, as the blindly competing independent capitalists often did; and it can afford to introduce so-called labor-saving (more properly labor-displacing machinery), at an initial cost too great for any of the constituent concerns to instal independently. By all these means it is enabled to lay-off or discharge a large proportion of the men formerly employed in the industry and yet get the same total product, or, if the market is expanding, to increase its product greatly without increasing the number of employees.

The reduction of the cost of production—creation of a given product with the expenditure of less human labor—is the explanation of the trust's success and the sole and sufficient justification of its existence. Combination means organization and economy, while competition means anarchy and waste; and therefore competition is doomed.

This being the nature of the modern trust, it is evident that the trust is able to pay higher wages, or grant better conditions of labor than the competing capitalists could before consolidation—just as it is able to sell the same goods for lower prices or better goods for the same prices. It does not always thus raise wages or reduce prices. Occasionally it does one or the other or both—still making increased profits. Generally it does neither, but keeps the whole advantage to itself. The point is simply that it can do this if it will.

And from this comes the further point that when a large consolidation has taken place in any industry, the conditions of the trust employees are likely to be better than those of the employees of the remaining "independent" capitalists. These outside capitalists are not really independent. They have to sell at prices fixed in competition with the trust. They often have to pay higher prices for materials and higher rates for transportation, and to work with poorer machinery. They can make up for these disadvantages only by exploiting their employees more thoroughly—by paying them lower wages or compelling them to work longer and harder; and this they do (appealing, at the same time, for the sympathy of the workers in their fight against the "octopus"), until the decreased efficiency of their work resulting from the worse condition of the workers, finally drags them down into ruin.

The Coal Trust has not voluntarily given the mine workers any share in the benefits that have come from consolidation in that industry. That the employees of the Coal Trust are somewhat better off now than they were three years ago is due to the fact that the mine workers have formed a very solid and efficient organization of their own and either by fighting or by threatening to fight have compelled the Trust to make some concessions. But the miners have not been able to wring even such small concessions from the "independent operators"—who are neither independent nor operators, by the way—because these small capitalists could not grant anything to their employees without being weakened in their struggle with the Trust.

All of this does not at all go to show that the trusts have improved the condition of the workers. On the whole, the reverse is true. It does go to show, however, two things:

First, that the workers can more easily wrest some advantages from the trust than from the independent capitalists, once the trust is formed; and that, therefore, they have nothing to hope from a strengthening of the independents, but should rather desire the fullest and speediest development of the trust;

Second—what is really first, logically and in importance—that the trust is preparing an economical and efficient organization of industry, which, when the means of production pass into the possession of the people who made and use and need them, will be of the greatest advantage to the workers, just as it is now of the greatest advantage to the idlers.

Whether in politics or in any other field of activity, then, from the point of view of working-class interests, the policy of "trust-smashing" is a foolish as well as a futile one, and the wise and practical demand of the working class is that the workers as a body shall own the means of production.

Truly, Senator Platt must be falling into a state of senile dementia, in that specific form characterized by the loss of self-confidence and the entertaining of groundless fears. Nay, he must have fallen into that state full two years ago, when he triumphed over Hanna and nominated Theodore Roosevelt for Vice-President. He thought he couldn't manage this strenuous fellow, so he planned to put him on the shelf. Events have shown that unless the Easy Boss has lost much of his old-time cunning, he had no reason to fear the job. But "Me Too" made his mistake, and his opportunity is gone, and his Pennsylvania colleague may laugh and make mock of him, saying, "Behold, the thing that you dared not attempt, how soft a snap it is!"

Roosevelt used to be a strenuous civil service reformer. Since then he has become President—through the unwitting co-operation of Thomas C. Platt and Leon Czolgosz. Naturally, he wants a re-election, and neither Platt nor the Anarchists can help him to that. So he has become, willy nilly, a strenuous politician. J. S. Clarkson is chiefly famous as a spoilsman, a chopper-off of official heads and distributor of patronage pie. The strenuous Roosevelt used to express his opinion of the wily Clarkson in very uncomplimentary terms. But now he has given the veteran corruptionist a fat office in the customs service—an office with plenty of pay, very little work, and ample leisure, therefore, for displaying his gratitude. And his gratitude is to be displayed by co-operating with the unspeakable Quay in capturing the Southern delegates to the next Republican national convention for his strenuous benefactor, onetime enemy. "How are the mighty fallen!" How quickly does success in capitalist politics soften even the most strenuous backbone!

Platt's only consolation may be that—though he never intended it—he put a stumbling block and stone of offense in the way of Senator Hanna. But even this poor bit of comfort may be taken from him, for Mark says he doesn't want to be nominated in 1904, anyhow—which everyone who knows Mark's peculiar brand of veracity understands to mean that he does want it, that he wants it bad, and that he proposes to get it, too. And the big man with the dollar-marks on his clothes has a reputation for other things besides inverted veracity. He has a reputation for getting whatever he wants and wanting whatever he sees. So there are those who think that the victor of San Juan will come out of this fight a sadder and a wiser man. One trouble is, the Ohio Senator won't give Teddy a chance at his back, as that historic Spaniard did. Perhaps we shouldn't blame Hanna too much for that. On whatever meat he has fed, he has grown so great, and gross, that it's no easy thing for him to turn around.

As between the spectacular Rough Rider and the vulgar plutocratic Senator, we say with Hennessy, "May the best man win!" and with Dooley, "The best man will win!"—it being distinctly understood that this is a case where "best" and "worst" are synonymous terms, according to the point of view. The Republican convention of 1904 will weigh them both in the balance to determine which is the worst for the working class—and that one they will nominate.

Meanwhile, it is not to be forgotten (did we forget it we should be tempted to commit suicide or turn Prohibitionist or do some other desperate thing indicative of confirmed pessimism) that a large and increasing number of men of action—the really strenuous, the plain workingmen—all over this country are cultivating a very wholesome contempt and hatred of Hanna, Roosevelt, Quay, Platt, Clarkson, and the whole gang of bullies, poseurs, and thimble-riggers who inherit and disgrace the traditions of Lincoln and Seward and Greeley under the name of the Republican party.

WOMAN'S NATIONAL SOCIALIST UNION.

Mrs. Wenonah Stevens Abbott, Oak, Shasta County, Cal., president.; Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington, Iowa, corresponding secretary.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We stand for a new order of society based upon the principles of justice and equality as applied to economics.

We declare that the rapid concentration of capital and its control over the government has forced the issue; and that, while the trust represents the most advanced stage of present economic progress, yet because it is based upon the private ownership of the means of production, it is opposed to freedom and fatal to the future welfare of the republic; therefore the next step in social advancement must be taken, which is a change from capitalism to Socialism, from competition to co-operation, from the private ownership of the means of production to the ownership and administration by the people.

Therefore, we stand pledged to teach the principles of this higher industrial system called the co-operative commonwealth; to enlist women in the advancement of these principles in every practical way that may present itself; to educate the young in these truths; to form a better public sentiment; and, finally, we pledge ourselves to do all in our power, individually and collectively, to bring about that universal co-operation founded upon the Golden Rule of Love and Justice, which shall take the place of competitive strife and discord.

As we have heretofore fully explained our reasons for forming a woman's Socialist organization separate and distinct from the Socialist Party, and as the objects for which we are organized, and the principles upon which we are working are set forth in the above Declaration of Principles, we feel that nothing further need be said on that line; but that the outline of our work from week to week will give a better understanding of our purposes and character as workers, than any elaborate analysis to-day could do. We shall, therefore, immediately take up the editorial work of our department, glad to step in among you in this way as one of you, and hopeful that our association with you in these columns may be a source of advantage both to you and to us.

If our department may sometimes seem to lack in general exposition of Socialist theory, let it be understood that it is because that side of our work is so thoroughly canvassed by Socialist writers elsewhere, that it seems to us more profitable to devote the space allotted to us, to the special work for which we are organized, and to the Socialist thought which appeals most immediately and strongly to women.

We invite correspondence from anyone interested in our movement, whether Socialist or non-Socialist, and shall be glad of information concerning any new or promising plan of work. We are anxious to give and to gain help in every direction.

The Children.

Here in our little city we have established a children's Socialist Sunday-school. It is so newly established that we almost hesitate to mention it lest the mere mention may prove an omen of failure. How these old superstitions haunt us! We are like the Chinese women who call their babies by harsh and unkind names aloud, in order that the evil spirits may not know that they love and are proud of them, for if they knew, they fear they would come and steal them away. I wonder how many generations of enlightenment it will take to cure us of the old habits of speech, the old habits of thought, the old fear and expectation of evil and disappointment.

Well, whatever may happen in the future, we have at least had a few pleasant Sunday mornings with the children. I would not advise anyone to start a children's Sunday-school who does not like to do so. I should be sorry for the children and sorry for the teacher. There are women who have too much children's society as it is, and need a relief from their companionship; but there are also some of us who have altogether too little, and to these a few hours with children is a refreshment, a recreation.

Some of us enjoy being with the children, and find it less wearisome than the usual argumentative Sunday evening propaganda. There is no reason why Socialist women, believers in the philosophy of happiness should deny themselves this little stream of pleasure so near their doors.

Many of our comrades, I know, believe that this work is a waste of time, and to shew them that it is not entirely so, I will describe our own short experience and its results.

First, in order to bring the children together, we invited them to come and learn some songs and recitations for a children's entertainment. This interested them. We happened to have among us a woman who could and did write for us children's Socialist songs simple enough for them to comprehend and learn. It surprises me to see how very bright the children of to-day are. Sometimes they seem to me quite preternatural. I am very sure they were not so intelligent a few years ago.

On the night of the entertainment, we found that the people who filled our hall were very many of them strangers to us. We had never seen them inside our doors before. They came with their own children and filled the seats. The regular, old standbys were many of them absent, but they had heard all our arguments many times before, so it was surely an advantage to have a new audience.

Between the recitations and songs we gave the children some simple, easily understood talk along Socialist lines, a few words at a time, and these words were certainly heard and understood by the older members of the audience. And last, if not least of all, it was a pleasure to see the little ones in their dainty dresses and curls and bright faces repeating bits of Socialist verse, or singing:

"Though we're little children, marching hand in hand,
Socialism's gospel we can spread;
Driving childhood labor from the people's land,
Leaving joy where once was only dread."

We need all kinds of propaganda to reach all kinds of people, and this is one way to reach the fathers and mothers, while it also makes our own life rounder and fuller and more natural than it can be if only the adult males are represented in our gatherings.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

Peter E. Burrowes contributes the fourth paper to the "How I Became a Socialist" series in the "Comrade," whose July issue has just appeared. To our mind it is one of the best things that has yet appeared in that magazine. We can only wish that it were twice as long. We pick out one passage: "The one right and truly efficient personal reason for being a revolutionary Socialist I cannot give, for I was physically never fit for the labor market, and therefore, though a partner in the poverty, I was not a partner in the crushing toil of the proletarian. As a surplus body capitalism has heretofore managed to dispose of me out of its way; but as a surplus mind I am not so easily disposed of; I am part of that product which despotism cannot dispose of—I am part of the revolution." It is not the pathos of the words—Heaven knows there is no call for us to call out instances of tragedy in the world of the workers—it is the splendid hopeful truth of it that impresses us. Let it grind down men in unremitting toil, let it doom women to lives of degradation, let it shut out the light of day and of knowledge from little children and coin their tears into profit, in spite of itself capitalism trains its slaves into rebels and ever into stronger and wiser rebels for its own undoing.

Another excellent feature of the magazine is John Spargo's "Child Labor in 'Free' America," illustrated by Ryan Walker. This is about to be issued in pamphlet form at a very low price. It should be circulated in millions of copies, for it is an effective treatment, from the Socialist standpoint, of a question which is now attracting the attention of workingmen throughout the country.

A copiously illustrated article on the International School of Social Economy; a poem by George D. Herron on a Luini fresco of the Nativity; a sketch of J. William Lloyd, "brother of Carpenter and Thoreau," by Leonard D. Abbott, accompanied by a poem of Lloyd's; a story, "A Vote That Was Lost," by May Walden Kerr; and an illustrated article on the Maison du Peuple at Brussels by Spargo, add to the value of the July issue. Ryan Walker contributes some good cartoons, and the portraits of "Socialist Worthies"—this time Comrades Jeannette, Outram, Roth, and Gilbert—will be of especial interest to party workers.

The special articles of the July-September "Forum" are on "Chinese Exclusion" by Charles Denby; "Germany as a World Power," by Wolf von Schierbrand; and "Sir Walter Besant," by Prof. W. P. Trent. Reviews by a staff of selected writers cover current history under the divisions of American Politics, Foreign Affairs, Finance, Applied Science, American Drama, Literature, Architecture, and Education.

Charles H. Kerr & Co. of Chicago are soon to issue translations by Ernest Untermann of Frederick Engels' "Origin of the Family, the State, and Private Property" and Paul Kampfmeyer's "History of the German Social Democracy." These will be among the most important additions to the literature of Socialism in the English language since the translation of "Capital."

LONDON "TIMES" TURNS MARXIST

Of course we all know now that Marx's theories are all wrong. Have not Bernstein and the clever young men of the Fabian Society clearly demonstrated that? Nevertheless here is the "Times" practically endorsing the theory of the materialist basis of history and the concentration of capital. In an article on the Shipping Trust, on May 22, it says: "The shipping combination illustrates a truth taught by all history, when properly read, though concealed by all history as usually taught. The truth is that the larger destinies of nations are mainly worked out by economic forces, which politicians rarely understand and still more rarely have any capacity to control. The shipping combination indicates a shift in the economic centre of gravity. It is not a freak of Mr. Morgan's. It is not a whim of American men of business. It is not an expression of any sort or kind of hostility to this country. It is the expression and the consequence of pre-existing conditions and of economic movements that have been going on under our noses. As a nation we do not look at such things. Our politicians are too busy with the trumpery affairs of party squabbles and the infinite verbosity of the House of Commons. The public at large are, in plain English, not educated enough to consider such things. Anyone who dwells upon them is pooh-poohed as a crank or an alarmist. But movements do not stop because people refuse to see them; all that happens is that the people are tremendously startled when the door which has been steadily and gradually closing finally shuts with a bang."—London Justice.

—No matter how hard a Socialist has to dig for a living; you generally find him with a smile on his face. Why? He knows it's coming.—Coming Nation.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Springfield Republican.

Probably it is not to be questioned that if the leading railroads, or any considerable number of them, would lend a hand in the enforcement of an anti-rebate and cut-rate law, such a law could be made largely effective. But they refuse assistance, and the illegal practices go on. They seem to be determined to make legalized pooling a condition of any effort on their part either to observe the law themselves or to bring other roads to observe it. They could not adopt a better course to promote public sentiment in favor of a government operation of the roads.

The Undercurrent.

Excepting, perhaps, the action of the American Labor Union in endorsing the platform of the Socialist Party, the most encouraging feature of the present industrial wars is the unexampled demonstration of class solidarity. It is no new thing for capitalists to stand together—they learned their lesson long ago; but the spirit shown by the bituminous miners in their determination to support their brothers in the anthracite field is admirable. It gives promise of a new era in labor struggles. From a recognition of the oneness of Labor's interest in the industrial struggle to independent political action is only a step. The long years of Socialist agitation is now to bear fruit. Our day at last!

Colorado Chronicle.

The Pennsylvania coal strike is forcibly illustrating the helplessness of working people under the present system of private ownership of natural resources and the opportunities of labor, to better their condition with only the strike weapon at their command. The old methods of trade unions—strikes and boycotts—have about reached the limit of their power in coping with the immense combinations of capital and capitalists. Only against individuals or small concerns are these tactics longer effective, and it is high time the labor leaders of the country were formulating a new program for labor unions to follow.

In our judgment organized labor must use its political power and cast a united ballot for the change of private industrial monopoly to collective ownership of natural resources and the means of production and distribution, if it would protect itself against starvation and profit-making by the capitalists out of its daily toil. Capitalists secure their special privileges and power to grind down labor through governmental action, and until labor takes possession of the government through a united ballot, and operates it for the equal benefit of all, it will continue to suffer from bad conditions and low wages. The necessity for political action is daily becoming more and more apparent and the labor leaders who continue to oppose it will soon have to take their places on the scrap pile of past usefulness.

Hazleton Trade Unionist.

In the present crisis of organized labor a question of much importance faces the worker. Both political parties of Pennsylvania are making a bid for the labor vote, and while the Democrats have embodied a labor plank in their platform it does not appeal to the reason or intelligence of the voters that the citizens should become susceptible to the connivery of any political clique. The Republicans have entirely ignored the working class. While we recognize that labor organizations have been disrupted by political chicanery, we venture to say that if the union men as a body give discussion to the economic questions of the day and act as a unit when the time arrives they will benefit themselves.

The Socialist Party has speakers now circulating through the coal regions enlightening the members of organized labor on the importance of the ballot and how they can best protect themselves from the fetters of corporation influence. While we do not altogether agree with the principles of Socialism, the democracy embodied and advocated by these modern thinkers calls for a study of the social questions now agitating the toilers of the anthracite regions.

The government being founded on politics, and supposed to be conducted for the best interests of the people as a whole, we to-day find than in office are represented the willing tools of the corporations and hirelings of the capitalistic class. This should not be, but the people of the state of Pennsylvania are to blame for the condition of affairs. In this state there are almost 400,000 organized workers, a sufficient number to control, if they would but drop their affiliation with the two old political parties. For years the citizens have been humbugged and fooled by the gang of political tricksters, and at the last session of the legislature the miners received a sample of the gold brick that is doled out.

The time is at hand when the organized workers of the state of Pennsylvania and particularly of Luzerne County and the Fourth Legislative District should act in bringing about a change of political conditions and abolish many of the evils now in vogue. We will support any movement which will tend to the best interests of the masses and which will bring about a political reform.

Union Picket, Dayton, O.

The "Federationist" for June publishes the names of all senators and representatives who voted for the new Chinese exclusion bill, and wants them put on the unfair list. In the same issue an editorial warns the wage-workers against going into politics, where the politicians could most effectively be punished. Such inconsistencies will in a short time end, as the members of organized labor, like Coxey's pups, are getting their eyes opened.

Advance.

News comes over the wires that the American Labor Union has received eight applications for charters from Massachusetts. That the teamsters and shoemakers of Chicago want organizers, and that Dayton Central Labor Council has signified its willingness to affiliate in a body. While we regret that trouble should break out between the A. L. U. and A. F. of L. yet we are glad that there are so many progressive unions in the country. One thing is certain, Gomperism is a self-confessed failure and Socialists should exert themselves to the utmost to secure its overthrow at the New Orleans convention. By their endorsement of political action for trade unions, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago, and many other cities have practically repudiated Gomperism. And if the A. F. of L. will repudiate it this fall an internecine strife of union against union may be avoided. "Down with Gomperism." The labor lobby must give way to the labor legislature. Politics in the union must give way to the union in politics. Socialism is our only hope.

Seattle Socialist.

Mayor Schmitz of San Francisco, elected by an Independent Labor Party, is now scheming and begging for the Republican nomination for Governor of California.

Just what you might expect! No one but a Socialist will remain true to Labor's interests. No mere labor party can ever succeed. It must also be a Socialist party. That is, it must have Socialist principles, the only true labor principles.

The Socialist will never compromise or fuse with any capitalist party. His fundamental principle is that the interests of Labor and Capital are diametrically opposite and there can be no settlement but unconditional surrender by the capitalist class to the working class.

Mayor Schmitz simply illustrates what will always happen to any labor party or candidate or movement which does not adopt the real, genuine, true labor platform known as Socialism.

The Public.

The National Conference of Charities and Corrections want an investigation into the tramp problem. The tramp problem is too easy to need an investigation. It is explained by the millionaire microbe. Idle luxury and idle misery always come and go together. They belong together. The millionaire hobo and the ragged hobo are products of the same cause. They are manifestations of the same social disease. They made their appearance at about the same time. Each is a parasite upon productive industry. Each is supported by the labor of the industrious. And the ragged hobo is the less virulent manifestation of the disease; he doesn't cost so much to keep.

Kansas City Star.

Of the great mass of magazine articles and editorials which have been written recently proposing remedies for anarchy, the most authoritative agree that the only way to prevent anarchy is to quit producing it. The laws which Congress will enact will not suppress anarchy. If they have any effect at all they will more likely stimulate than check it. For it is precisely in those countries where the most rigid repressive measures prevail that anarchy is most violent. The futility of law was one of the strongest beliefs of Thomas Carlyle. "You cannot abolish slavery by act of parliament," he said, "but can only abolish the name of it, which is very little." And this assertion was made subsequent to the formal abolition of slavery by the British parliament.

The people are awaking to the fact that something must be wrong with a system of government which produces such results. In a country where a 'submerged tenth' is an admitted element, is it any wonder that among the men, women, and children forced downward into that dark region an occasional one strikes back, even though he strikes blindly, ignorantly, wickedly?

"If you examine into the history of rogues," said John Ruskin, "you will find they are as truly manufactured articles as anything else; and it is just because our present our present system of political economy gives so large a stimulus to that manufacture that you may know it to be a false one."

Typographical Journal.

That would-be philanthropist, Andy Carnegie, has written a book. It is called "The Empire of Business," and it has been a long time since any publication was so much advertised by the press. The advance sheets of the book quote Andy as saying that "the trouble is that men are not paid at any time the proper compensation for that time. * * * What we must seek is a plan by which men will receive high wages when their employers are receiving high prices for the product and hence are making large profits, and per contra, when the employers are receiving low prices for the product, and therefore small, if any, profits, then men will receive low wages." Head between the lines. When profits are large, the employer still needs them all, "as he lives." When employees dare ask an increase of wages, the employer "stands them off" on one pretext or another as long as he can. If they strike, he gets a federal court to issue an injunction and call out the troops to protect his business. If he be like Andy Carnegie, he shoots them down, as at Homestead. Andy, your name will never be associated in the minds of the masses with any other scene in history, and your efforts to become famous only recall that bloody period and the martyrs who fell that right might prevail. "The Empire of Business" will be found on the tables of the magnates who compose the beef trust, the sugar trust, the flour trust, and others of their ilk who are robbing the people, but it has no place in the homes of the workers.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

PARTY NOTES.

Local Los Angeles is forming a band.

Walter Thomas Mills will spend August speaking in Washington.

Comrade Debs spoke in Seattle on June 21. One of the largest halls in the city was packed with workingmen eager to hear him. He spoke also in Spokane, Elberton, and Olympia, Wash., and in Vancouver, Slocan, and Nelson, B. C. Good audiences greeted him at each point.

The Idaho State Convention of the Socialist Party will be held at Weiser on July 18. Comrade Chase is expected to be in attendance.

The state convention of the Socialist Party of Utah will be held in Salt Lake City on July 24. The purpose of the convention is stated, in the official call, to be "to form a state organization and to elect such officers as may be deemed necessary to carry out and make effective the plan of organization adopted by this convention; to nominate a full state ticket; and to transact such other business as may be properly brought before the convention."

Our Colorado comrades seem to have started out to annex the whole movement. "The Toiler" of Terre Haute announces that Comrades Oneal and Reynolds have been requested to take part in the Colorado campaign. On the other hand, Comrade Wise, who was one of the prominent visiting Socialists at the Denver conventions, spoke in Terre Haute the other night to an interested crowd.

The "Social Economist" of Bonham, Tex., ceases publication, the subscription list being taken by the "Coming Nation" of Rich Hill, Mo.

The "New Era" of Sargent, Custer County, Neb., editorially denounces the fusionists who have got control of the Populist Party there, and says: "Gentlemen of the Fusion Party, your work is too coarse to be endorsed by the rank and file of your party, who in this county are now, as they always have been, opposed to fusion with the old parties. The time is ripe for the formation of the Socialist Party in this county—a party which stands unequivocally for the welfare of the wealth-producing classes, a party which will not fuse for spoils with any capitalist party on earth. Calls for the county and other conventions will soon appear. They will be mass conventions, in which all who are opposed to the old parties and to fusion with them, and who endorse the principles of Socialism, will be entitled to participate. Down with capitalism! Down with fusion! Down with scheming politicians who will barter their principles for a chance at the pie-counter!"

Every number of the "Missouri Socialist" shows an active campaign going on in St. Louis. Here, for instance, is a resumé of the official notices from the issue of June 28: General Committee meeting; Labor Press Conference; Tenth Congressional District general meeting; strike pay for benefit of labor press; Eleventh Ward open-air meeting; Excursion for benefit of labor press; First Representative picnic; meetings of First Ward Club and of five precinct clubs in that ward; meetings of ten other ward clubs and of Woman's Socialist Club; Sixteenth Ward picnic; lecture by Comrade Roche, beginning a Sunday evening series; and so forth.

Des Moines telephone girls are on strike against low wages and miserable conditions of employment. Comrade Chase took advantage of the opportunity to show how capitalism oppresses the weakest members of society and what Socialism would do for the women of the working class.

Chicago comrades held twenty-one open-air meetings last week, with about twenty-five speakers.

The "Chicago Socialist" reports great activity in the party throughout Illinois.

The Socialists of the Twenty-second Congressional District of Illinois (the coal-mining region in the southern part of the state) have chosen James Conway of Glen Carbon as their candidate. Legislative and county tickets are also being put up. Solid party organization has been effected in this region, largely through the efforts of Comrade Saunders of Chicago, and the St. Louis comrades also lent a hand.

Comrades Ray and Richardson of Indianapolis were arrested for speaking on the streets. "Obstructing the sidewalk" was the charge. The Salvation Army and street fakirs are never interfered with. The police know their business.

Akron, Ohio, was the scene of the Socialist convention for the Nineteenth Congressional District, held on the Fourth. Delegates were present from Locals Akron, Ashtabula, Conneaut, and Warren. J. J. Forrester of Akron, President of the Laborers' International Protective Union, was nominated for Congress, and the following candidates for county offices were chosen: Wm. H. Langhead, Probate Judge; J. M. Bauer, Clerk of Courts; Eugene Conroy, Sheriff; T. B. Hinman, Treasurer; F. N. Prevey, Commissioner; J. Tousey, Recorder; Geo. A. King, Coroner; C. F. Bevington, Infirmary Director. In the evening a very successful mass meeting was held, with J. J. Forrester, Max S. Hayes, Robert Bandlow, Dr. W. H. Miller, and W. H. Langhead as speakers. F. N. Prevey presiding.

The Socialist Party county and congressional convention for Cuyahoga County and the Twenty-first Congressional District of Ohio was held at Cleveland on June 29. There was a good attendance from all the branches and an admirable spirit of harmony and resolution to work hard was displayed. Harry D. Thomas, a well-known Socialist and trade unionist, was nominated for Congress and a full county ticket was put in the field, headed by W. L. Webster as candidate for Circuit Judge.—In the Twentieth Congressional District W. E. Krumrey was nominated.—A new branch has been formed in the Southeast part of the city, and is taking in many new members.—State Organizer Strickland will work in the vicinity of Cleveland from July 15 till the end of August.

H. Gaylord Wilshire and Henry C. Barter of the Longshoremen's Union will be the speakers at the Labor Day celebration in Conneaut, Ohio.

The Toledo "Times" of June 30 has an excellent three-column article on Socialism by Dr. J. S. Pyle. The "News" of the same city editorially takes Bishop Quigley to task for his misrepresentations of the Socialist movement. It is evident that the Toledo comrades are making an impression on public opinion there.

Charles D. Rayner has been nominated for Mayor by the Socialists of Minneapolis. Comrade Raymer is a member of the Retail Clerks' Association and a devoted worker for the cause. The movement in that city has gained great strength in Minnesota and especially in Minneapolis.

W. E. Walter, Socialist candidate for Governor of Michigan, is making a tour of the state, speaking at Corunna, Owosso, St. Johns, Ionia, Grand Rapids, Muskegon, St. Joseph, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Albion, and other towns. —Saginaw city, county, and congressional conventions were held on the Fourth.

The "Statesman," a labor paper of Williamsport, Pa., comes out editorially, in its issue of July 4, in favor of the Socialist Party. W. I. Driesbach is the editor. Williamsport is a city of about thirty thousand people, situated in Lycoming County, and a large part of the population are employees of the Steel Trust.

Comrade Roth, Chairman of the Socialist County Committee of Luzerne County, Pa., writes under date of July 7: "The anthracite strike, the work of Comrades Spargo, Mailly, and Collins, and the literature sent in by comrades from the outside have all combined to set Socialism a-booming in Luzerne County. On June 1 we had only one local in the County—Wilkes Barre; now we have six—Wilkes Barre, Pittston, Duryea, Maltby, Edwardsville, and Hazleton; and more are coming. The County Committee met in Wilkes Barre last Tuesday evening. The attendance was large and much business transacted. The reports of the delegates from the different localities were very encouraging. Plains and Nanticoke reported that they were ready to organize, while Luzerne is waiting for the younger element to take hold. The next meeting will be held at 40 West Market street (third floor), Wilkes Barre, on the first Tuesday evening in August at 7:30 o'clock. Those localities which have not yet elected delegates are requested to do so as soon as possible. Each city, borough, and township is entitled to two delegates. District conventions will be held in the different legislative districts on the earliest possible dates for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Legislature. It has been suggested that we hold these conventions on different days during the same week and secure an able speaker to address them all. The crying need of the hour is for Socialist literature in the Polish language. Half the miners are Poles, Slavs, and Hungarians, and most of these understand Polish. Donations of Polish literature would be very welcome. These people can be easily reached in their own language." Comrades who wish to help with literature or money may address J. G. Roth, 40 W. Market street, Wilkes Barre, Pa.

H. Bent Bryan has been elected as Literature Agent by Local Newport News, Va., and residents of that city wishing for Socialist literature may see him at 231 Twenty-eighth street.

Owing to the rainy weather, the trip of the Connecticut State Organizer was limited to three days. Two good open-air meetings were held—at Norwich on July 4 and at New London on July 5, each with an attendance of about a hundred persons. The meeting at Norwich was enlivened by fusillades of blank cartridges and firecrackers, but the audience stayed to the end to listen to a discussion between the speaker and a trade unionist who thought he was a DeLeonite. Norwich is a strong union town and the men are greatly interested in the Economic League and much elated because three union men nominated by the Democratic party were recently elected to the city council. Some are ready to go farther, though, and there is a prospect of organizing in Norwich soon.

The Westchester County Committee held its regular meeting Sunday, July 6, and decided to hold a picnic on Sunday afternoon August 10, at Yonkers, for the purpose of raising money for the campaign fund. The county convention will be held at Tarrytown on July 19, at 4 p. m. Each local is to send three delegates. After the convention there will be a public meeting on Fountain Square at 8 p. m. All locals are requested to send full delegation, for there is work for all of them to do.

The General Committee of Local New York meets at the Labor Lyceum, Saturday, July 12, at 8 p. m. Nomination of officers and other important business will come up.

The meeting of the Speakers' Club held last Tuesday night at 64 East Fourth street was well attended. A number of addresses were made on the lines of general campaign propaganda work and a marked improvement was shown in the delivery of several of the new speakers. Some new material for the party is practically assured, though the Club has been in existence only two months. All comrades interested should rally to the support of the new organization. The next meeting will be on Tuesday evening, July 15.

The 1st, 3d, and 5th A. D. holds a public meeting Friday evening, July 11, at the corner of Bleecker and Christopher streets. On Wednesday, July 16, there will be a meeting at McDougal and Bleecker streets, and on the following Saturday at Hudson and Canal. The meetings are to begin at 8:30 p. m. and comrades should be on hand promptly.

The 21st A. D. is doing good, steady work. Ten of the comrades are "chipping" in 25 cents a week to be used in sending out Socialist literature to a selected list of two hundred addresses, mostly of trade unionists, in the district. So far, each of these two hundred persons has received one copy of The Worker, one of Wilshire's "Why Workingmen Should Be Socialists," one of the Meat Trust leaflet, and a typewritten letter explaining the purposes and methods of the party. About the first of September a course of lectures will be opened and each of these men will be invited to attend and bring his friends. So far, $8 has been spent in this work and the direct results include one new party member, a contribution of $5 to the Socialist Daily Fund, and two subscriptions for The Worker.

The Kings County Committee meets at the Socialist Club, near Ralph avenue and Fulton street, Saturday evening, June 12.

The Kings County Speakers' Club meets at the rooms of the Socialist Club every Monday evening. The Club has opened very auspiciously, about fifteen new volunteer speakers attending. Comrades Furman and Goldstein have given practical advice, suggested by their own experience, difficult problems that present themselves to the young speakers have been fully discussed, and some lively debates have resulted. It is designed to make this Club a bureau for the giving out of accurate and complete information to our speakers, and for the discussion of matters of policy, that there may be harmony and consistency in the work. The Division Organizers are now arranging for out-door meetings, in which the experienced speakers will give their help.

We observe that "Advance" of San Francisco reprints from the "Painters' Journal" a good little article on Socialism contributed by Comrade Kligus of New York City.

The last number of the "International Woodcarver" prints an article on Socialism by a Brooklyn member, signing "J. S."

"Progress," a Minneapolis weekly, gives nearly the whole front page of its last number to an article by Comrade Wenonah S. Abbott, showing capitalism as the cause of drunkenness and kindred evils.

Henry C. Ferris, the Denver correspondent of the "Typographical Journal," writes in the last number of that excellent craft paper, warmly commending the action of the American Labor Union and the Western Federation of Miners in endorsing the Socialist Party and preparing for vigorous political action on Socialist lines. He says: "In declaring for independent political action, the Western laborers have taken a step forward. By electing Socialist members to their respective legislatures, they place in those bodies men who will look after their interests, and introduce and keep to the front measures which have for their object the benefit of the laboring man."

REPORT AND APPEAL FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—The Pennsylvania State Committee of the Socialist Party met this evening with Comrade A. L. Shaw in the chair and all members present.

Upon application, charters were granted to Sumneytown, Montgomery Count; Butler, Butler County; Hazleton and Jeddo, Luzerne County; Lansford and Audenried, Carbon County; Silver Brook, Schuylkill County; and Simpson, Lackawanna County; with a total membership of two hundred and forty-three.

Speakers are being asked for in all quarters of the state. Comrade Collins organized five of the locals chartered this evening and spoke to sixteen meetings during the week.

A letter received from Mauch Chunk disclosed a misunderstanding on the part of some of the members of the purposes of the Socialist Party. In this connection Comrade Collins has been requested to visit the Local and make report to the State Committee.

Comrade Mailly organized Lansford with fifty-one members, and spoke at ten meetings during the week. Mailly will shortly leave the coal district to return to Massachusetts, leaving only one speaker on the ground, where a dozen could be placed to advantage.

Contributions for the agitation fund have been recived as follows: J. Simone, Vanderbilt, $1; L. Meyer, Newport, R. I., $5; Socialist League, Philadelphia, $4; Local Dover, N. H., $1; previously acknowledged, $111.65; total, $122.65. With this small sum we have had four speakers in the field—Comrades Vall and Spargo part of the time, and Comrades Collins and Mailly almost from the inception of the strike. The National Committee and The Worker have contributed to the maintenance of the latter.

The Democratic and Republican conventions have been held and their candidates have been nominated. Both conventions and candidates have, in capitalist fashion, ignored the miners' strike, and turned their backs to this great question which has brought gloom into two hundred thousand households and misery to nearly a million of the inhabitants of this Keystone State of capitalist slavery. In the light of these facts the State Committee is persuaded that this strike is of national importance, and should be so considered by the locals and the comrades throughout the country. The burden of bearing the light of Socialism into this dark region should not be imposed upon Pennsylvania comrades alone.

Against these capitalist political parties, whose candidates flee the strike question and district, we desire at once to send our candidate for Governor, J. W. Slayton, lately elected to the Select Council in New Castle, into the strike field to stay there till the strike ends or till Election Day dawns. If the comrades respond according to the needs, Comrade Slayton will be known by sight and name and known as the Socialist candidate by every striking miner and thousands of other wage-workers in Pennsylvania.

Comrades of the nation, the Pennsylvania State Committee, fully alive to this great opportunity, is powerless to act without your co-operation. To the end that the cause may be advanced in the state and nation, we urge upon each to see to it that their local meeting does not adjourn until the needs and opportunity of Pennsylvania and this appeal is considered.

Send all funds to J. Edelman, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

MAILLY'S WORK IN THE STRIKE FIELD.

William Mailly spent a couple of days in and around Pottsville last week and then proceeded to the Panther Creek Valley, speaking in the opera house at Lansford on Wednesday to a large meeting of strikers. Anthony Schlosser, district board member, spoke in Slavish.

Next day Mailly addressed a meeting of the miners' union at Coal Dale, afterwards going back to Lansford, where he again spoke and afterwards organized a local of the Socialist Party with fifty-one members.

On Friday afternoon he was the principal speaker at the Fourth of July celebration held at Lansford by the miners of the Panther Coal Valley. A parade of three thousand strikers from Nusquehoning, Summit Hill, Coal Dale, Lansford, and Tamaqua, headed by a band and drum corps, preceded the meeting, which was largely attended, notwithstanding the heat. C. J. Gilden of Coal Dale, P. Cavanaugh of Tamaqua, and F. Polzick also spoke. The celebration was one of the most successful held in years.

On Saturday evening, Mailly addressed a large open-air meeting at Nusquehoning and was warmly received. The miners of the Panther Creek Valley are among the most receptive and enthusiastic listeners to Socialism in the whole region.

Collins was at Nusquehoning on Wednesday and will speak throughout the valley.

On Sunday Mailly reached Wilkes Barre, where he lay over until Monday evening, when he proceeded to Scranton, in the meanwhile visiting Nanticoke, where he distributed literature at the convention of District No. 1, which met on Monday morning.

While in Tamaqua, upon request of the editor of the "Semi-Weekly Recorder," published in that city, Mailly wrote an article defining the position of the Socialist Party, which appeared last Tuesday. The "Recorder" is the only paper in Tamaqua openly advocating the miners' cause, and is edited by R. H. Hirsh, a young man who is favorably inclined to Socialism. The "Recorder" is pretty thoroughly read in the Panther Vreek Valley and the article should reach a large number of miners and other workingmen.

CHASE IN IOWA.

Organizer John C. Chase sends the following report to National Secretary Greenbaum for the last week, which was spent in Iowa:

"Meetings this week have all been very good. I spoke twice in Boone to very good audiences. I had an open date while in Boone, so I made arrangements and addressed an open-air meeting of several hundred people, giving them good straight Socialism. Boone is a very promising field for our movement.

"At Des Moines the meeting was held in the park pavilion, and a fine audience was in attendance. Des Moines has some very promising Socialists and prospects of a hustling organization.

"At Winterset I had one of the most successful meetings of my trip in the West. The audience was not so large as some others have been, but it was an enthusiastic one. Many farmers and others came in from the country from points twelve and fifteen miles distant. Next morning the comrades reported many converts to Socialism.

"The Albia meeting turned out well. The audience was swelled by miners from several adjoining camps, and I have made arrangements to fill in the vacant date of July 7 at one of these mining towns called Avery, providing you have made no other arrangements for me on that day."

TEXAS NOMINATES.

DALLAS, Tex., July 4.—The Socialist Party held its state convention here to-day and nominated the following ticket: For Governor, W. W. Frooman of Del Rio; Lieutenant-Governor, A. S. Martin of Bonham; Comptroller, R. D. Langworthy of San Antonio; Treasurer, M. T. Bruce of Dallas; Land Commissioner, Dr. J. W. Kynkondall of Grand Saline; Superintendent of Public Instruction, J. E. Gibson of Alva; Railway Commissioner, R. C. Colcar of Bono; Attorney-General, W. H. McBride of Quinlan. The new State Committee consists of W. S. Farmer and S. J. Hampton of Bonham, M. T. Bruce and John Kerrigan of Dallas, E. B. Lapham of Gainesville, and R. S. Brice of Houston. A great mass meeting was held in the evening.

TICKET IN WASHINGTON.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 30.—The Socialist Party of Washington yesterday placed in nomination for congress Geo. W. Scott of Seattle; D. Burgess of Tacoma, and J. C. Harkness of Northport. Thomas Neill was nominated for state supreme judge. The convention, in which two hundred and thirty-nine delegates were present in person or by proxy, was held in Germania Hall yesterday morning and afternoon. The business in hand was dispatched as quickly as possible and the labors of the delegates were completed by the close of the afternoon. In the evening a ratification meeting was held in the Carpenters' hall.

A strong and uncompromising platform was adopted and a lively campaign is to be made.

Seattle was unanimously selected as party headquarters for the state and a State Executive Committee, composed of the following comrades, was appointed: G. E. Latimer, William McDevitt, and George W. Scott of Seattle; John Mcnenzie of Spokane, and H. D. Jory of Sunnyside. A revision of the constitution, embodying some slight changes, was adopted and ordered to a referendum vote of all the members of the party.

CHILD SLAVES IN "FREE" AMERICA.

BY JOHN SPARGO, EDITOR OF THE "COMRADE."

With Illustrations by Ryan Walker and J. H. Morier.

A pamphlet dealing with the Child-Labor evil in all its phases. Crammed with facts, figures, and Socialist argument. Its illustrations make it the most attractive propaganda literature. "Child Slaves in 'Free' America" is absolutely the BEST and CHEAPEST agitation literature for Socialist agitators and organizations. Price: Ten copies, 15c.; 25 for 25c.; 50 for 40c.; 100 for 75c.; 500 for $3.00; 1,000 for $5.00.

MASSACHUSETTS CAUCUSES AND STATE CONVENTION.

Secretary Squire E. Putney of Massachusetts reports to the Socialist Party of that state as follows on the referendum vote taken by the State Committee in regard to changing the date fixed for caucuses and for state convention:

Proposition 1, To reconsider the vote calling caucuses for Sept. 12 and convention for Sept. 22, received 14 affirmative votes and 7 negative.

Proposition 2, To hold caucuses on Aug. 29 and convention on Sept. 8, had 13 affirmative and 2 negative.

Proposition 3, To hold caucuses Aug. 15 and convention Aug. 25, had 8 affirmative and 4 negative.

Accordingly, Aug. 29 is fixed as the date for caucuses, and Sept. 8 for the state convention.

The votes were counted in the presence of Vice-Chairman F. S. Schmidt and Treasurer M. J. Konikow.

NEW JERSEY STATE COMMITTEE.

The New Jersey State Committee meets Sunday, July 13, at 3 p. m., in the headquarters of Local Essex County, 124 Market street, Newark. This being the semi-annual meeting, officers and committees are requested to submit reports in writing to the end that they may be incorporated in the report of the State Secretary, to be given to the party press, as provided by the constitution.

R·I·PANS

I have been taking Ripans Tabules for six months and find myself so much improved that I can hardly realize myself to be the same person. For a year I had been complaining with my head and the loss of appetite. I had no desire to eat and suffered so severely with the sick headache and felt so tired that I found it hard to go to my work. The doctor told me I had what they called nervouse headache, and I would have to look for a quieter place to work. One day an old lady was telling about her grandson who was using Ripans. She gave me a box of them to try. I did so, with good results, and I never felt better in my life than I do now.

THE LOWER COAL FIELD.

Miners' Grievances Vary Only in Detail.

Overwork, Unhealthful and Dangerous Conditions, Low Wages, Fraud and Tyranny Prevail Throughout—"Independent" Companies the Worst Exploiters—Fate of the Children.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

TAMAQUA, Pa., July 4.—The story of conditions existing in one part is about the same as that heard all over the anthracite region. It differs only in details that do not affect the general situation, but instead serve to accentuate its tragic bitterness. Low wages, open and secret robbery, innumerable petty exactions, crystallized, form one gigantic grievance against the coal operators, a grievance that can only be extinguished with the system that produced it.

Mahanoy City, Shenandoah, Mt. Carmel, Shamokin, and Pottsville are the principal towns in the lower district. Each forms a center for mining operations that extend for miles around and embrace from half a dozen to twenty collieries. The towns draw their chief support from the miners' wages, though the business men seem to believe that the coal companies alone provide them with sustenance.

Solidarity and Peace.

Touching each of the above named places and visiting in turn the mines surrounding them, I found the strikers quiet and peaceable, displaying no sign of weakening and evincing a determination to see the fight through to a finish. It is strange that, though I have kept on the move with my eyes open, I have failed to find the breaks and disturbances reported in the press. The breaks are always ahead of me, and the disturbances always somewhere else.

Whatever may occur after this is published, wherever I have been nothing but solidarity and peace prevails. It is true that at some places engineers and pumpmen returned to work, but they have invariably quit again when the strikers reached them. It is also true that strikers have been arrested at different points, but this was simply because the company sleuths were perniciously active in apprehending without good cause. The wonder is that there have not been more disturbances, when the aggravating methods of the coal and iron police are considered. As usual these gentry have attempted to incite trouble among the strikers to a degree almost beyond human endurance. They have walked the highways, brandishing weapons, insulting women, molesting children, and loaded up with whiskey that has made them more dangerous and obnoxious.

The Imported Thugs.

These thugs, imported from the cities' slums, have done things that would entitle them to confinement from human society for life, and if committed by strikers would have been heralded to the world as unspeakable atrocities. They are the real menace to decency and order; through the activity of union officials, many have been arrested and simply fined when the offenses justified severer punishment. These arrests have probably exceeded those of strikers at a ratio of ten to one, and even then a full quota of offenders has not been secured.

For, as in every other struggle of the kind, leniency is shown to the capitalist emissaries in cases where it would not be exercised towards strikers. In nearly all places the civil officers have displayed their customary willingness to side with the capitalist as against the worker. There are exceptions to this, but so few of them that they could be counted on the fingers of one hand. These exceptions occur generally where the officeholder is looking for re-election shortly. Long term officials, or those whose terms permanently expire soon, are not so considerate.

Old Parties Are Twins.

The political status in the towns throughout the region is about evenly divided between the two old parties, but the difference in administration is not perceptible. The officeholders, Democratic and Republican, all exhibit the same eager alacrity to obey the corporations that has distinguished their predecessors, here and elsewhere, in every similar struggle in the history of the labor movement. Notwithstanding this, the miners have preserved an unbroken front, which promises well for their conduct in the future.

The Philadelphia and Reading Company owns nearly the whole lower anthracite district. Its mines and railroads are everywhere and its power and influence are great in proportion. It dominates in every phase of activity, political, journalistic, religious, and educational. Its political domination is undisputed and whoever gets into office through the ruling parties comes under its control. The newspapers are the sorriest specimens of the kind to be seen anywhere in America. Those who support the strikers do it in that delicate way that presages an easy change of heart, and cheap advice is the chief editorial staple. Were it not that the union has shown such remarkable strength and the men such solidarity and earnestness, every paper, with few exceptions, if any, would have taken open sides with the operators long ago.

"Independent" Mines Are Worst.

And yet, while the Philadelphia and Reading is so omnipotent here, bad as conditions are at its mines, they are much worse at those managed by individual operators. This comes about through the dependency of these "independent" small capitalists. They are under obligations to the Coal Trust, have to pay heavy royalties, and compete both in transportation and in the market with the monopoly. This compels the use of methods the trust can afford to ignore, through its impregnable position. So it is that company stores, outrageous docking, higher rents, inferior ventilation are more in vogue at these "independent" collieries and in a worse form than under the Reading company.

Except as in cases like this, the dockage system that afflicts the miners in the middle and upper districts does not obtain to any great extent in the lower one. It was almost entirely wiped out years ago. Nevertheless it is estimated that at least two cars out of every fifty loaded by the miner is retained for "dirty coal." A more rigid system exists, however, under which the miners' cars are examined spasmodically, and the miner laid off if a certain amount of slate is found. A second or third offence means discharge. As it is impossible to keep the coal entirely clean, it can be understood what effect this system has upon men to whom a job means everything.

The Contract System.

The laborer system exists in a worse form here than elsewhere. It is known as the contract system. Under it one miner can employ as many as four laborers. He contracts with the operator either to drive a gangway or to rob pillars and stumps. The laborers received $10.20 a week, six days of ten hours before the 1900 strike, but since then 10 per cent. advance has been added, and only nine hours are worked.

Under this system the contractor sometimes makes four or five dollars a day, sometimes not one-fourth of that, because the peculiar formation of coal precludes arriving at a definite sum by which the contract can be made surely profitable. Sometimes the coal is easy to mine, at other times very difficult, but the contractor takes his chances. It happens therefore that the contract miner can make good wages at times, and at others lose money, for the laborers' pay and the expenses run on just the same. The union is working toward the abolition of the system, though the companies favor it, for the following reason: If they had to pay for mining according to the kind of coal worked, good and bad, it would cost them much more than paying a uniform rate for good and bad coal alike. Through this system, the companies have been known to get coal out of bad places at as low a cost as five cents a ton, when otherwise it would have cost them much more.

In the breasts, or chambers, the miners work in pairs, or "butties," and their wages are estimated to fall below $300 a year in most cases. The price paid for mining is shamefully low. Cars supposed to hold three and three and a half tons, are only paid from 55 cents to 80 cents a car, according to the vein. Breaker boys receive from $2.50 a $3 for six days of ten hours. Company miners work ten hours and receive $8 a week, and gangway laborers share the same fate. Gangway bosses receive usually $2 a day. For three days time erecting batteries in breasts the miner receives only $3.70. They are trying to get $6.

Company Houses.

Owing to the formation of coal, as before stated, the miners in the lower region do not ask for coal to be weighed. They demand increase of wages, eight hours and better conditions. They might well ask also for the destruction of some of the company houses in the district. It is hard to say where the worst hovels are, but I think those I saw around Mahanoy City, and between Shamokin and Pottsville deserve that appellation. They are to be seen to be appreciated in all their dismal ugliness. Erected years ago, they are held together by strips of wood until hardly an original plank remains. How they withstand the vicissitudes of time is a problem. For these the company charges three to six dollars a month, three and four rooms, and the rent has paid for their cost years and years ago. In every place the houses owned by the miners themselves, built frequently with their own labor in their spare time, are much superior in every way to the company owned buildings.

Men Worked Out.

Travelling through the region, meeting and conversing with the miners, one is struck with the similarity of appearance among them. They all look worked out, their faces are sunken, the cheek bones protruding and their bodies lack flesh. Many are tall and muscular, but few, very few, look stout and robust. In fact, by actual count, I have only seen four really stout miners on the whole trip, and then they were unnaturally and abnormally fat. The engineers seem the healthiest of all the strikers I've seen.

But it is not to be wondered at that the miners and laborers look thin and haggard. Their work is not only dangerous but hard, and it is performed in bad air (through poor ventilation) among poisonous gases, lamp and dynamite smoke. Stand at the mouth of a mine and smell the air emerging to realize somewhat the conditions under which the miner earns his scanty livelihood.

It follows naturally that miners' asthma is a common complaint. Few men over 35 but are afflicted with it, more or less. Coal dust chokes the lungs and makes young men wheezy and scant of breath. I have met several not yet forty years old who had not worked for months because they could not stand the air and dust in the mines any longer. As one victim said: "The life makes old men out of young ones." Many are disfigured for life through gas explosions, premature shots, falls of coal and other accidents. Some are actually repulsive to look at, many of them young boys who should still be in school.

Fate of the Children.

Let it be remembered that children are forced into the mines to suffer from the same conditions. Door boys, switch tenders and others have to work in bad air with dangers on every hand. Keeping this in mind, one understands why the boys are emaciated and bloodless. Nothing more pitiable can be seen in the region than this. Indeed, it is doubtful if anything more horrible than this merciless sacrifice of youth to capitalist greed is to be seen anywhere within the confines of civilization. If their fathers could but view it with eyes free from fear of want, of fealty to false political ideals, of stupid prejudice, and keen with love and desire for better lives for their children, they would join with us to rescue the helpless ones, boys and girls alike and assist in establishing a system that would sweep child slavery and murder into the yawning limbo of deservedly dead and damned things.

WILLIAM MAILLY.

HELP THE CLERKS.

Grocery Employees in Battle with Butler.

They Are Fighting for Shorter Workday—Grocer King Proposes to Crush the Union—Workers of Other Trades Should Aid the Clerks.

The organized grocery clerks of New York City are engaged in a fight with James Butler, the Grocery King, in which they deserve the support of all workingmen—and of workingmen's wives, too, be it observed, since the wives generally do the marketing and can do much to aid the clerks by avoiding Butler's numerous stores until the trouble is satisfactorily settled.

The demands of the clerks are very moderate—far too moderate, any Socialist will say. What they call for is that the grocery stores be closed at 7 p. m. five nights in the week and that their union be recognized.

A Broken Agreement.

A year ago the Grocery Clerks' Union had made considerable progress in their effort to establish a shorter workday. A large number of grocers had agreed to close at 7 o'clock, Butler among them. Butler, however, did not hold to the agreement. He resumed the system of excessively long hours which had formerly prevailed and declared war upon the Union. As Butler has over a hundred stores in different parts of the city, with which the other merchants are compelled to compete, the clerks thought it best to concentrate their fight upon Butler and to release the other merchants from the agreement until they could put all on an equal footing.

The recognition of the union is, of course, necessary to the enforcement of any such agreement, especially in the case of a large employer such as Butler.

Peter E. Monahan, President of Grocery Clerks' Union No. 496, writes as follows of what followed Butler's abandonment of the early-closing system and of the fight which ensued:

Butler's Attack on the Union.

"A persistent and underhand effort was then made to disrupt the Grocery Clerks' Union. Men were threatened with discharge if they did not immediately send in their resignation to the local, other employers were approached and importuned to discharge their union help, a blacklist was put in circulation, low hirelings were placed at the doors of the union meeting room to spy and to report the names of those present, and nothing was left undone to make it impossible for a union clerk to earn a living in New York.

"The grocery clerks alone, of all the wage-earners in the community, were forbidden to exercise their lawful right to organize to better their conditions. * * *

"The financial and moral support of every labor organization is freely given to the clerks whom all trade unionists admire because they possess the intelligence to know their rights, the manhood to demand them, and the backbone to fight for them to the bitter end. The Clerks' Union has taken deep root in the soil of Manhattan and will flourish and bring forth good fruit. * * *

Hardships of the Clerks.

"The man who through greed or obstinacy blocks the way to an earlier closing has much to answer for. He subjects not only his own employees but every other grocery clerk in the city to a life of unnecessary hardship, keeping him away from his family and friends when they need and have every right to expect his company, making his lot one of continuous toil and shutting out of his existence every ray of social sunshine.

"Just think of a clerk never seeing his children by daylight from week's end to week's end, having no chance to enjoy their society, study their character, or mould their minds. Surely any man responsible for the continuance of such hardships to the clerks, as unjust as it is unnecessary, must be devoid either of conscience or the power to reflect on the evil he helps to perpetuate. May he soon see the errors, and the fatal folly of his ways.

"Meanwhile the clerks, with the aid of every trade union in the metropolitan district, will fight on till their fair and reasonable demands are granted."

Certainly every Socialist in the city should use his influence to help the clerks in this fight and to enlist others for the same object. The boycott against Butler should be vigorously pushed until he is made to concede at least the very small demands of his employees.

The Servile Press.

President Monahan reports that, through the fear of losing Butler's advertising or the hope of getting it, almost the whole public press of the city is closed against the statement of the clerks' case. The Social Democratic papers, he says, form a rare and honorable exception, in that they stand for the interests of the workers at whatever cost.

The Worker would suggest, not only that every Socialist help the clerks to the full extent of their power, but also that every clerk make himself familiar with the principles and objects of the Socialist movement. They will find that the Social Democratic Party offers a remedy for the evil of which they complain, that it is the political party of the working class and that the increase of its vote is the surest and quickest way to get shoter hours and better conditions of labor.

WARNING FROM LOS ANGELES.

The Los Angeles "Socialist" and the "Union Labor News" of the same city announce that an attempt is being made to flood the place with imported workingmen in order to break the power of the local labor movement, which has shown an aggressive spirit. Workingmen should not be deluded by advertisements or circulars inviting them to come to Los Angeles for employment, as, if they do so, they will simply become helpless tools of certain particularly vicious employers against the unions.

FOR THE DAILY.

General Meeting in Labor Lyceum Last Monday.

Plans Discussed at Length, but Action Deferred till August Meeting—Mass Meeting to Be Held in Brooklyn.

A meeting of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association was held last Monday evening at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, with Comrade Loewenthal in the chair.

Four comrades were proposed for membership and two applicants were admitted to the Association.

The report of the Board of Management was then received and its recommendations as to the rights, powers, and duties of the conference of trade unions and kindred organizations were thoroughly discussed. No action had been taken on these matters when, at a late hour, the meeting adjourned.

The attendance was not so large as usual, and members should not fail to be present at the next monthly meeting, which will be held on August 4.

The Board of Management will meet at the Labor Lyceum on Monday evening, July 14, and all members of the Board are expected to attend.

On Sunday, July 20, a general meeting of Brooklyn comrades will be held in the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby avenue, to arrange plans for carrying on the work in that borough. Good speakers will address the meeting and all who are interested in the establishment of the Socialist Daily should be present.

Comrades are again requested not to forget their pledges made to the Socialist Daily Fund, and to forward their instalments regularly and promptly every month to Secretary Butscher at 64 E. Fourth street.

The Week's Report.

Pressure of other matter prevents the publication of the list of pledges and cash payments for the week. These will appear, along with next week's list, in the following issue. The summary for the week ending July 7 is as follows:

New pledges	$75.00
Previously acknowledged	6,290.80
Total pledged	$6,365.80
Cash receipts: On pledges, $50.25; contributions, $31.95	$82.20
Previously acknowledged: On pledges, $1,182.25; contributions, $750.08	1,932.33
Total cash	$2,014.53

REIGN OF TERROR.

Persecution of Puerto Rico's Organized Workers.

Public Authorities Sanction Attacks on Trade Unionists and Socialists by Capitalists' Hired Thugs—A Sad Specimen of American Institutions.

Three weeks ago The Worker published a communication from Puerto Rico, telling of the systematic persecution of Socialists and trade unionists being carried on there by gangs of "toughs" or "bravos," organized by capitalist agents and protected by the government.

National Secretary Greenbaum has forwarded to us the following later report:

"Further advices from San Juan, Puerto Rico, state that warrants have been issued for the arrest of fifteen members of the Socialist Party by the authorities. Our secretary, Saturnino Dones, and many other comrades have fled to escape persecution. The party is temporarily disorganized as a result.

"A band of outlaws, organized under the name of 'Las Turbas,' is used by the authorities to terrorize the trade unionists and Socialists and to compel them to disband their organizations. An 'official investigation' of these outrages is now in process."

We can easily guess that the official investigation will end in an official "whitewash" of the guilty persons.

From the time when the island was seized by the United States during the Spanish war down to the present day, the Puerto Rican workingmen have been more severely oppressed than they were under Spanish rule. The Spanish landlords and other capitalists were greedy and cruel, of course, but they were also lazy and careless. The American capitalists, who now have the upper hand, equal them in rapacity and far surpass them in energy.

The re-adjustment of the monetary system and the administration of the tariff (in spite of McKinley's talk about "plain duty" and Roosevelt's effusions on "the dictates of honor") were carried on in such a way as to reduce wages and increase the cost of living for the working class.

In the midst of the misery thus produced, agents of the Sugar Trust were allowed to make false representations to the unemployed and starving workers in order to induce them to go into what they found to be a still worse slavery in Hawaii; and when mere lying did not suffice, they resorted to fraud and kidnapping for the same purpose, and did it with impunity.

Under both the military and the civil administration, unions have been suppressed, workingmen's meetings broken up, strikers clubbed, bayonetted, or shot, and organizers thrown into prison, with or without trial, either under old Spanish laws, or on charges of conspiracy, sedition, inciting to violence, contempt of court, and the like, so familiar to the workingmen of the United States.

Through all this persecution, however, the Puerto Rican workingmen have shown a brave and liberty-loving spirit; and if they have to bow for a time to the present storm, they will soon rise with a stronger and better organization than before, to struggle for industrial as well as political freedom.

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

My newspaper informs me that the government of the United States had consigned a quantity of coffins to the Philippine Islands last year, which, taken commercially, exceed the money value of all our imports from those unprofitable dependents. This news should silence such critics as are disposed to call the disinterestedness of expension into question; it proves how happily coined was the phrase "manifest destiny" as applied to our relations with the Filipinos. This singular example of foresight for the destined and our awareness in dealing with the needs of an inferior race, when it becomes politically linked to a superior race, would be marvellous had it not been for our Indian history. N. B.—Looking at the bottom of the abovesaid newspaper item I find that the coffins were intended for our own soldiers and sailors, I therefore withdraw the above remarks and ask The Worker to wink for me.

The coal owners of Pennsylvania, who determined, from the first, that this and all future strikes shall be settled, not by arbitration, but by violence and by the violence of the state and national troops upon the persons of the miners, are likely to have their way. Our President has been waiting, all have been waiting for some accident to settle the strike; anything but the strikers themselves and righteousness.

Very few men of late years have attained to any great public office without a university degree. Whether it was in the light of this fact that our great college President, Teddy, got his degree, or whether the college degree gets the average man, who can say. One thing is plain. At Princeton, where the honor principle in examinations has hitherto prevailed, they will be obliged to drop it. Cribbing has become so common and notorious there that even the authorities of Princeton blush for the intellectual aristocracy they are palming off on the world. Out of the loins of commercialism comes no generation that will "pass" on the honor system.

What is the constitution between friends. What is a city ordinance? or the health of the people who must stay in Manhattan among friends at the seaside? Who supposes for a moment that in the present stage of civilization any law will be enforced, however good and necessary in itself, the enforcement of which would have the effect of helping a number of strikers who are out in the interests of labor organization or increase of wages? If we had no other light on the subject, the pall of bituminous darkness now settling on smokehattan island, in spite of the law, should convince us that capitalism knows no law that will reform or diminish capitalism. Workmen must protect themselves.

Between what is called the "spirit of the law" and the "letter of the law" lies all the range for that fertility of resource and rascality through which the lawyer and judge graduate to success or failure. Judge Tierney drops the letter of the smoke law in New York for what he deems the spirit of it, and is honored as a good judge. Judge Lindsay of Kentucky declares that corporation lawyers are demoralizing the public conscience by advising according to the letter of the law only, and all the anarchists of the world take the same view of it. Only one word explains all; that word is war. The lawyers' war is the class war.

The strike of the freight handlers in Chicago will prove to have been the most important in the country if they succeed, as they threaten to demand, in making the issue between themselves and the bosses to be simply the right of an organization of labor to be recognized. It is only in America that the dastardly concerted attempt among capitalists to deny that right has become the basis of civil war. When once definitely put this will be recognized by all men as the "crux" of it, and the end of the war will be thus brought nearer.

It was always a subject of curiosity to me know what is the principle upon which we assume that it takes a rich man always to give a certificate of good character to a poor man; and yet the rich man never feels called upon to give "references" as to moral character to his late employee. Here is a rich tenement-house owner of New York charged with stealing a lot of jewelry. "Impossible," cry his friends; "a man of faultless character. Ask any banker." The banker cries, "Impossible. I could be no more astonished than by stealing myself." Of course, nobody asks for more impossibility; no one refers to the tenants.

It was long realized by professional politicians of this city that the brief season of election time did not afford leisure for disfranchising their opponents with security. In the hurry they were prone to do the thing roughly and so leave them open to appeal. But in the Board of Elections we have a squad of nippers who can take their time all the year round and do it well. Commissioner Voorhees boasts that the recent and supplementary registrations for primaries will witness a great cutting down. To be sure, it will; that's what you're there for, Commissioner.

Although the law of the economic determination of our morals operates generally on circles too wide for satisfactory specific application in our private experiences, yet one may find occasional cases of it. Take Vice-President Baldwin of the Long Island; he is moral in the anti-Coney Island sense of the word. It is not at all probable that the Long Island vice-president (or anti-vice-president) is conscious of the efficient cause; while others will readily remember that the Long Island system has no terminus at Coney Island. A careful perusal of other rich members of reform movements would throw much similar additional light on economic determinism. Who opposes savage nakedness and favors missionary enterprise more than the Manchester school?

The great statesmen among us, and there are many of us besides Hanna, who are willing to let another great nation help us in solving our problems, will hear with joy that Japan wants to buy from us the Philippine Islands. The school of BENEVOLENT ASSIMILATION now therefore confronts the offer of its life. Shall it be benevolence without assimilation or assimilation without benevolence? Hanna and I may be divided on this question, so may other great statesmen. But what think you, fair reader? We have been admiring Japan with our whole stock of adjectives in the newspapers for some years. Here you are. On the spot, progressive, commercial. On the gold basis—a hospitable friend to missions and a great admirer of the United States. Oh, that we only knew how to get rid of a bad bargain!

The philanthropic capitalists among the Jews are very eager to confuse and retard the natural progress of mankind through economic classes by reforming the old muddle of the twelve tribes, and fancying that in spite of international and all other diversity they are one solidarity. I would be among the last to utter a syllable against any real large unification of men with a bottom to it. But fake unification like this is only race division with another name. Let every Jew join his class as economics ordain.

What a melting moment; what a tender scene that must have been which took place between dear old Senator Lodge of Washington and dear old Buencamino of Manila? The one pleading with tearful and patriotic fervor for the possession of an old steel pen; and the other with pious reluctance yielding the precious relic only to the sobs of Manila's Portia. Oh dear, dear, what it would have been worth as a piece of patriotic education to be there! The pen was that very one with which Our President signed the Philippine government bill. After this exhibition of blarney who shall say that the Filipinos do not understand the principles of government by duplicity and devotion.

It is said that where there is much smoke there must be some fire. Another thing, however, may be said of much smoke, as a fire indicator, and that is, that "Where there is much smoke there is usually very little fire; and patriotism is no exception to this rule when it smokes." The desperate imitation of patriotism which the Republican and Democratic gentlemen gave the other day as the "Chamber," or lower house of Congress, broke up was most fiercely bituminous. Amidst a scene almost like a Wall Street frenzy of hat blacking, accompanied with "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and "He's a jolly good fellow" mixed together like a fugue, the "good fellow" being the chamber president pro tem, who thereupon tried to sing, "My Country 'Tis of Thee," but broke down, having forgotten the words—amidst such a scene the little fire of patriotism of the present Congress went out, to smoulder amidst trust accounts and other forms of national prosperity until next election.

The Emperor of Russia, who is probably the worst informed "respectable" man in his empire as to what is going on in his empire, is inviting some couple hundred of better informed persons to come to court and tell him what's the matter with people, and to offer him some suggestions as to what act of grace, performable by himself, will satisfy the malcontents and settle the trouble. That is just where the majesty of Russia is off its base; the Emperor can no longer "graciously" settle the malady of Russia. He can do nothing but try to be just, and that would be very ungracious to his friends, the nobles.

Slightly varying the geography and the titles, we have the same trouble here in our own country. The most serious question on earth, called "the labor question," is afflicting us here as it is afflicting "Holy Russia." Our emperor, like his brother of St. Petersburg, sends for somebody who is an expert to tell him what's the matter with the miners. He does not know apparently. He is suffering from an Imperial lack of information. That is a couple of weeks ago. He has received the information and there's an end on't. He has learned what the Russian will have learned when he gets his information, that as head of a political ring he can do nothing but smash the ring. So they will both wait. "Maybe the miners, maybe the peasants will submit. Pray God they may."

VAIL IN ROCHESTER.

Speaks to a Crowded House, Discussing Meat Trust and Coal Trust from Socialist Standpoint.

(Note.—This communication was in type for our last issue, but pressure of other matter compelled us to leave it out on the make-up. We ask the indulgence of the Rochester comrades for the delay. The matter is still timely. Neither the Meat Trust nor the Coal Trust has deserted us.—Ed.)

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 24.—Last night, at Shoemakers' Hall, Comrade Charles H. Vail spoke to a very large and crowded audience on the subject: "What Shall We Do with the Beef and Coal Trusts?" Comrade William Thurston Brown, pastor of Plymouth Church, introduced the speaker, who said in part:

"Mr. Chairman and friends:—It was always a pleasure to return to Rochester, and I can assure you that I am pleased for the opportunity to be here to-night and see this large audience. I noticed, this afternoon in the headquarters, for the first time, that my subject would be: "What Shall We Do with the Meat and Coal Trusts?" The subject, although not one of my own selection, is one that I do not object to discussing—especially the Meat Trust, by experience. Anyone who has to live these days and is not a complete vegetarian realizes that it costs to live; that it costs to buy meat; and among the solutions, the Socialists have a solution all by itself which is, we believe, the only method by which relief can come to the people.

"There are trusts. That does not need to be emphasized. Notwithstanding the President's and Attorney-General's bluffs, they are here just the same. The powers that be think they are under obligation to do something; they are making gallery plays to make the people believe that they are going to put the Meat Trust out of business. But the trusts are here at the same old stand, charging the same prices and in some instances higher ones. The trusts own everything in sight, they are not afraid of any of the bluffs. They all come after you in turn; the Meat Trust comes along and gives you a swipe; then the Coal Trust comes next winter; then another one comes along and takes its turn; they all own the whole business. The great capitalists are interminglied and interlinked in the ownership of the tools of production and means of distribution.

"Now, if you are going to kick, whom are you going to kick? Kick hard, but kick yourselves for voting the capitalists in power. While you are kicking, they are raising the prices, charging more and more abominable prices. If you vote for it, you have no right to kick unless you kick yourselves. (Applause.)

"Every man who votes for what he is getting should hire a boy to kick him around the block. Just so long as you vote for what you do not want, you must expect exactly what you are getting. Just so long as you vote the old party tickets, which are capitalist tickets, of course, there can come no relief.

"The Socialists says we have got to live here in this world; we must eat; we must supply our needs here, food, shelter, and clothing.

"Inasmuch as we have got to live here and stay here, and we have our great social needs, it would seem to me that the people themselves should get together and produce and receive the commodities at the exact cost of production. What is the use of turning over our own livelihood to irresponsible persons and allowing them to run the tools of production for private profit, allowing them to produce these things solely for their own emolument?

"You put the ownership of the tools of production into the hands of irresponsible persons; and they are becoming fewer and fewer; you allow them to own the machinery which is necessary to your very livelihood, by your votes; thus you allow them to monopolize your very existence.

"The Socialist says we have got to should organize and own the things collectively which are collectively necessary for their existence. We stand for the collective ownership of the means of production and the private ownership of the means of consumption.

"When the capitalist class allows you to work at the machine, they take all you produce and then give you back sufficient in wages to allow you to live. The supply of labor is so tremendous, on account of displacement by improved machinery, that the individual does not count now. Because the laboring class is serviceable to the owning class they will see to it that your wages as a class will fall so low that you can barely live. Very often, lately, you read in the papers how some servant girl has demonstrated that she can live for ten cents a day. They would like to have you live on ten cents a day if you could, and then they would lower your wages to that standard. Every dollar's worth of product is absorbed by the capitalist class and they give you just enough back so that you can exist.

"The secret of their power is because they have the ownership of the public powers. Down in Pennsylvania today, where the 147,000 men are on strike, the capitalists are the owners of the mines. They can say to those men: You shall not operate these mines unless you operate them as I prescribe. They say that they have nothing to arbitrate. That is so; they own the mines, and in order to live, the miners must ask the owners for the opportunity to work, and it is all one-sided—nothing to arbitrate. But the conditions have become so bad that the miners have had to combine so as to live, and in order to live they have had to strike.

"Every dollar's worth of coal which is mined is produced by labor. The value of the coal is what the labor costs to produce that coal. The operators did not make it; why should we allow them to monopolize that which God put in the ground? (Applause.) What we demand is the entire value of our toil; the mines to be operated by the people collectively for the benefit of the people. Under public ownership, the laborers would get the very best wage, the very best hours of service, and then the community would be able to get that coal at the exact cost of producing it. Under Socialism, these workers would receive the greatest benefit because they would get the very shortest hours of service, for the very reason that their toil in the mines is the most disagreeable. You have noticed that the fellow who works the hardest gets the least; and the fellow who works the least gets more; and the fellow who does nothing at all gets most.

"In the coal fields, every two or three years we come face to face with the great class struggle, and each class is trying to overreach and get the better of the other class. Just so long as a system exists where there is class antagonism, just so long there will be the strike, the lockout, and you cannot live. You have had more strikes since the Peace Conference than before. The only way to do away with lockouts is to abolish the cause—private ownership of the means of production and di stribution. When you would vote to have public ownership, then you would abolish all classes and the interests of all the people would be identical. Public ownership of the mines, together with all the machinery of production, would at once, my friends, obliterate the evils from which the people complain. Get a system where a man will not have to skin someone in order to succeed. Economic conditions control all their actions. Make the conditions right, and then you can mould character and have right living; you must have conditions that keep men right seven days in the week, not only on Sunday. (Applause.)

"Under Socialism, if a man followed his self-interest, he would be serving the public and himself in return. Just so long as you have a class interest you cannot obliterate the results. Remove the power from the capitalists' hands by making these great social tools the common property of all the people. Make the railroads, the factories, the slaughter houses, the packing houses, the mines, which are necessary for the production and distribution of commodities used by the people, the common property of all the people, and you have solved the question. They have become social tools and must be socially owned. All you can do otherwise is to kick. What good does that do you?

"Suppose we go without meat, as one man suggested to me. Then someone else will have you. We could eat potatoes, flour, etc., but the price would go up on account of the increased demand for those foodstuffs, then you would be no better off than before. You might just as well be contented to let the Meat Trust have you as any other.

"The only solution of the trust problem is to have the people own them. The Socialists have been telling you that for years that the trust would get you. They have all had you now. Either you must own these trusts, or they will own you. We cannot go backward. We cannot destroy the trusts unless you destroy every bit of machinery and put every inventor in prison, or you would have another trust. It is more advantageous to produce on a large scale than on a small one; then in the name of common sense you ought to own the trusts.

"There are two sets of fleecers. The question between the Republican and Democratic parties is simply whether you are going to be fleeced by the little capitalist or the large capitalist. The laboring class would be no better off, no matter which did the fleecing. A dog would be no better off if he had more fleas. (Applause.) We Socialists say that there shall be no patch work in a system which is no good. You must change the whole system, and the liberation of the laboring class means the liberation of humanity.

"If you do not want to be skinned by the Meat Trust or the Coal Trust, join a political party which stands for the public ownership of those trusts—the Social Democratic Party. The only way you can emancipate yourselves is to organize and get possession of the public powers and legislate for your own interests. The capitalists have shown you how they can legislate for their own interests; follow their example and legislate for yours."

The speaker here told how the people in Milwaukee brought their mayor to time by doubling the Socialist vote. He said: "You needn't even elect a man to make them fear you. If you vote the old-party tickets, they know they have you in line and they do not fear you; but you join a political labor party and show your strength, and you can get anything you want. Just so soon as you vote for what you want, you will get it; but just so long as you vote for what you do not want, you will never get anything."

The speaker next told how the voters were only allowed to show "how" they might be skinned after Election Day, by citing interesting cases from the Republican and Democratic campaigns. The capitalists pay the bills of the campaign and then own the one selected; and the worker shouts and throws up his hat, and doesn't know he was bamboozled. (Applause.)

VOL. XII.—NO. 16. NEW YORK, JULY 20, 1902. PRICE 2 CENTS.

TWO YEARS' HISTORY OF THE S. D. P. OF NEW YORK.

Report of the Outgoing State Committee to the Convention of July 4.

A Review of the Work Done for Socialism in the State from 1900 to 1902, with Account of Party Organization and Recommendations for Future Work.

The last state convention of our party was held in the Labor Lyceum, New York, on Saturday, June 16, 1900, and was composed of delegates of the Socialist Labor Party (Henry L. Slobodin, New York, National Secretary), and of the old Social Democratic Party (Theodore Debs, Chicago, National Secretary). A State Committee of nine members was elected at that convention, namely, Wm. Butscher, H. Schlueter, F. Schlueter, L. Jablinowski, I. Phillips, C. W. McCullough, Jos. Barondess, Emil Neppel and Leonard D. Abbott. Butscher, Barondess, H. Schlueter and McCullough subsequently resigned. William Edlin also served for a short time on the committee and resigned. The vacancies were filled by Chris Bub, Herman Reich, John Assel and Henry L. Slobodin. The officers of the committee have been: Neppel, financial secretary; F. Schlueter, treasurer; Reich, literature agent; and Abbott, corresponding secretary.

THE STATE TICKET.

The State ticket nominated by the convention was: Ben Hanford, for Governor; Wm. Butscher, for Lieutenant-Governor; Philip Jackson, for Secretary of State; Eugene V. Brewster, for Attorney-General; Frank Sieverman, for State Comptroller; Leonard D. Abbott, for State Treasurer, and Henry Stahl, for State Engineer.

In nominating Eugene V. Brewster, the convention deviated, for the moment, from the established policy that only Socialists actively affiliated with the party shall be nominated as its candidates. The penalty for such laxity was prompt. While a candidate of th party, Eugene V. Brewster wrote letters to the newspapers indorsing the Republican party and McKinley. The State Committee promptly compelled him to sign his resignation as a candidate of the Social Democratic Party and nominated Henry L. Slobodin to fill the vacancy.

COLLECTION OF SIGNATURES.

At the time the State Committee assumed office the Social Democratic party had no legal standing whatever in the State of New York, and the first task with which the Committee was confronted was that of taking the steps necessary to give the Party legal recognition by securing a place on the official ballot. The requirements of law were that not less than 6,000 signatures of qualified voters be attached to the nomination petitions, each acknowledged by a notary, and not less than fifty signatures of residents in each of the sixty counties of the state. The latter condition rendered the task a gigantic one. Comrade Henry L. Slobodin was elected Special Organizer, without salary, to take charge of this work and Comrades H. W. Wessling and I. Phillips were engaged to go through the state to collect signatures to the petitions. In this they have acquited themselves well. Valuable assistance was also received from Wm. Lippelt, of Rochester; Wm. Wollnik, of Troy, and several other comrades of various party locals in the state, with the final result that 11,856 signatures were filed by Comrades Hillquit and Slobodin at Albany on September 29, 1900.

The State Committee adopted the Arm and Torch as the official emblem of the party in this state.

The Campaign of 1900.

A vogorous campaign was carried on. Three campaign leaflets were issued and 100,000 copies of each were published and circulated. Several hundred thousand cards and smaller pieces were also distributed. Comrade Hanford made a complete tour of the state, and Comrade Phillips spoke as far as Syracuse. A great campaign meeting was held in the Cooper Union, New York, at which Eugene V. Debs was the principal speaker. As a result, 13,403 votes were polled on Election Day, giving to the Social Democratic Party official standing in New York Stae. The vote did not come up to the sanguine expectations of some of our more enthusiastic comrades, but the discord in the Socialist movement hampered greatly the work of agitation. The existence of two Socialist parties was a subject of constant bewilderment for those who, while not Socialists, were inclined to listen to our arguments. The Socialist Labor Party confined its efforts to dragging of the name of Socialism through the mire.

Local Elections.

In the spring and autumn of 1901, and in the spring of this year, local tickets were nominated throughout the state and an encouraging vote was registered. In some places, as Peekskill, Frankfort and Watertown, the vote has shown evidence of considerable progress.

The municipal elections of 1901 in New York City attracted the interest of the entire country. The capitalists made an effort to wrest the government of the city from a peculiar gang of political bandits known as Tammany Hall. Again was sounded the time-worn political shibboleth of Reform. The real issues of the struggle between the capitalist class and the working class were confused and disguised, in a bungling fashion, true, but sufficiently to deceive the bulk of the working population of this city. Reform trotted out its fattened pet, Seth Low, and Jerome was rung in as the people's lawyer. And again did many Socialist voters divide their sympathies and split their ticket between Socialism and Reform. Their disenchantment was prompt and thorough. Devoid of the intelligence of an ordinary professional politician, Seth Low did not know how to disguise his want of sympathy with the people who elected him. Besides his inept stupidity in political matters is a standing wonder to this community. However, when the interests of his millionaire friends were at stake, he showed signs of intelligence. So after the collision in the tunnel, he at first nodded approval to the public clamor for the introduction of electricity as a motive-power in the tunnel, but a mad note from his friend Vanderbilt sufficed to change his mind. Even his friends now demand that he parade less in public his capitalist proclivities. The tunnel collision was the cause of another accident, the explosion of the People's Lawyer Jerome. After the smoke of his loud boasts and dire threats against all creation had cleared away, the amazed public saw that the result of Jerome's proceedings against the New York Central was an indictment of the engineer Wisker, which was an exoneration of the New York Central.

Trade Unions and Labor Laws.

The trade unions of this state continue their pitiful policy of hanging on to the coat tails of all sorts of "friends of labor," with the same pitiful result. After many years of lobbying in Albany the trade unions succeeded in forcing through the legislature a law compelling the state and municipal contractors to pay to their employees the prevailing rate of wages. The Court of Appeals promptly declared the law unconstitutional. The same fate awaited the Dressed Stone law. Such labor laws as are not set aside by the courts are simply not enforced. Why should they be? The unions are dominated by professional "leaders" who year after year betray the working class to their capitalist pay-masters. But we must not pass without noticing the fact that the Central Federated Union of New York City instructed its delegate to the Convention of the American Federation of Labor to vote for a Socialist resolution, thus bearing witness to the ever-growing latent force of Socialism.

Our militia has again been in requisition against workingmen. During the Albany trolley strike, the Twenty-third Regiment, the same which bravely shot a woman in the back during the Brooklyn trolley strike and as ravely stayed at home during the Spanish-American war, was put into the field against the strikers. The tin-soldiers in drunken debauchery succeeded in shooting two bystanders. The "boys in blue" earned the praises of the "coming our way" and "friendly to labor" New York "Journal."

Propaganda and Agitation.

The State Committee carried on agitation in proportion to its means. Several agitation tours have been organized by the State Secretary. Comrades Job Harriman and Charles H. Vail have each made two complete tours in the State. Tours, including the most important centers, have also been undertaken by Geo. E. Bigelow, N. P. Geiger, John Spargo and Silvio Origo; and among those who have spoken at various points of the State, under the auspices of the State Committee, were Max S. Hayes, Frank A. Sieverman, Wm. Thurston Brown, Frederick Krafft, Wm. Edlin and E. T. Neben. During the present year Wm. Butscher was sent out through the state in co-operation with the Socialistic Co-operative Publishing Association and an organizing tour was made by F. J. Spring, of Los Angeles, Cal., who was engaged in March as State Organizer until the coming election.

In addition to the campaign literature used in the election of 1900, the State Committee has printed and circulated a little booklet entitled, "Why the Workingmen of New York State Should Join the Social Democratic Party," and also a leaflet addressed to Catholic workingmen, called forth by Bishop Quigley's and Archbishop Corrigan's recent attack on Socialism.

National Committee and National Convention.

A national convention of the two contending factions of the Social Democratic Party was held during July last in Indianapolis, Ind., where the two factions were consolidated into one Socialist Party, now the national name of the party. For political reasons the party retained the name Social Democratic in this state, and the State Committee recommends to retain it further until the next State convention. The State Committee was represented at the Indianapolis convention by Frank A. Sieverman and Leonard D. Abbott; and it sent Job Harriman as its representative to the meeting of the National Committee of the Socialist party in St. Louis in January last.

Organization.

At the time the present State Committee assumed office, there were 19 active locals of the Socialist Labor party, namely, New York, Richmond County, Astoria, L. I. City, Woodhaven, Flushing, Corona, Wyckoff Heights, Glendale, Port Chester, New Rochelle, Yonkers, Troy, Johnstown, Utica, Syracuse, Oneida, Rochester and Buffalo. There were 7 active locals of the Social Democratic party, namely, New York, Brooklyn, Patchogue, Ticonderoga, Watertown, Buffalo and Corfu. The total number of locals was thus 26. The Queen's County locals have since federated in one Queen's County local. King's County has recently organized under a charter separate from that of New York. Two locals, Patchogue and Corfu, have dissolved for good.

The State Committee has granted charters to the following 22 places: Peekskill, Ogdensburg, Corning, Hornellsville, Union Springs, Pearl River, Green Island, Elmira, Catskill, Frankfort, Gloversville, Schenectady, Fort Edward, Mount Vernon, Cold Spring, Rome, Newburgh, Dobb's Ferry, Niagara Falls, Governeur, Dexter and Highland Falls. Of these, Ogdensburg, Union Springs, Green Island and Elmira have lapsed.

There are at present locals in 39 different places (counting the separate subdivisions of Queen's County local) as compared with 23 locals in different places when the committee assumed office.

The party has also active sympathizers in the following places: Batavia, Schylersville, Auburn, Newark, Jamestown, Firthcliffe, Norwich, etc.

State Committee.

The State Committee suffered from the standing complaint of the party—non-attendance of meetings by the members. The State constitution of the party provides that every local may send a delegate to the State Committee. The State Committee urged the adjacent locals to do so. Westchester County was the only local which responded, but for a very short time. Local Kings County was usually represented by one or more delegates, but none ever attended the meeting of the State Committee. Local Queen's County was represented by Comrade Chris. Bub. Those who most regularly attended the meetings of the State Committee were Comrades Leonard D. Abbott, E. Neppel, I. Phillips, H. Reich, Henry L. Slobodin, F. Schlueter. Comrade E. Neppel has devoted considerable time in keeping the financial books of the State Committee. Comrade H. Reich's work as literature agent of the State Committee deserves special mention, as the task is as useful and hard as it is thankless.

Recommendations.

The State Committee recommends to the convention the following measures:

1. To retain the name Social Democratic Party till the next state convention.

2. To retain the Arm and Torch as the emblem of the party of the State of New York.

3. To select the place for the next State convention—the State Committee recommending Syracuse—and to authorize the State Committee to fix the date.

4. To order a more vigorous agitation among the Germans. Agitation in German has of late been neglected, though the Germans constitute an important part of the population of this State and agitation in German is likely to bear good results.

5. To order the organization of lecture circuits through the State. It may at first be a strain on the resources of the locals, but there is no better way of keeping up the interest of the comrades as well as drawing new converts. Besides if the comrades do their duty from the start, the tours may be made self-sustaining in short time.

Prospects.

Only a few years ago Socialism was a derogatory term. Now Socialist sentiment runs high and wide throughout the country. The capitalist class devise various schemes to harness its thunders for their own purpose. But though the peace conferences and other impurities multiply, the working class is slowly but surely rising in its might and dignity. Even now a fresh breeze from the West brings to us the clang of the chains at which the proletarian class is tugging impatiently. It must surely reach the workingmen of this State and rouse them from their apathy. Day in and day out, the class war beats the call. It must arouse the working class. Ours is to hold aloft the white light of Socialism so that it first greet their sight. We, Socialists, stand on the fire line. Secure in our cause and its victory, we face the foe squarely and proudly, and shall not turn back or to the right or to the left where the mocking foe or the erring friend may urge us. And even if Egyptian darkness surround us, what else could we, Socialists, do but to forge ahead, carrying the light where the darkness is the blackest.

STATE CONSTITUTION.

Below is given the draft of a constitution for the Social Democratic Party of the State of New York, as prepared by the State Convention of July 4 and ordered submitted to general vote.

All locals are called upon to consider the proposed constitution and vote upon it, section by section, the number of votes for and against each section to be reported to the State Committee.

The same applies to the appended resolution.

ARTICLE I.—ORGANIZATION.

1. The Social Democratic Party of the State of New York is a part of the national organization of the Socialist Party of the United States, and shall be governed by the platform and constitution of said party.

2. The state organization shall consist of all present local organizations of the Socialist Party, within the state

FOR THE DAILY.

Conference of Unions to Be Held Next Thursday.

Local Richmond Gives Picnic for Socialist Daily Fund and Local Campaign Fund—Report of Pledges and Payments for Two Weeks.

On Thursday evening, July 24, a conference of trade unions and other organizations in sympathy with the labor movement will be held at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, for the purpose of forming a permanent body to work in all directions for the success of the coming Socialist Daily.

From reports thus far received it is expected that a large number of unions will be represented at the first meeting. Organizations which have not yet elected delegates are invited to do so at once, that no time may be lost in taking up the work.

The Board of Management of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association met Monday evening, with Comrade Rubinow in the chair and made arrangements for the conference, drawing up an order of business for the meeting of July 24, subject to the approval of such meeting. Comrades Hanford and Harriman were chosen to present the subject to the delegates.

Richmond Picnic

Local Richmond County holds a picnic on Sunday, July 20, at Schenkel's Harmony Park, Grasmere, Staten Island, the proceeds of which will be divided equally between the Socialist Daily Fund and the local campaign fund. As many strangers are expected to be present, Comrade Fieldman has been requested to deliver an address on Socialism at three o'clock P. M. All comrades and sympathizers are invited to attend, have a good time and at the same time swell the funds to be used for the cause.

FALSE WEIGHING.

Ground of One of the Miners' Chief Demands.

By Dockage System and by Simple Fraud, Companies Get 16 to 20 per Cent of Coal Mined Free—Resist Interference of "Agitators" with Their System of Plunder.

Scranton, Pa., July 11.—Perhaps in no other part of the anthracite region has the docking system reached a higher degree of perfection (from the capitalist standpoint) than in the Scranton district. The figures produced by the miners on this subject offer eloquent reasons why the coal "operators" should fight the union on the plea that they desire "to run their own business to suit themselves." For the miners to obtain some voice in the matter would mean a sad check upon the previously enjoyed right to rob without molestation.

The "Long Ton" System.

In 1877 what is known as the "long ton" system went into effect at all of the collieries of the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company, where coal was weighed. The D. & H. is the dominant company in this district. It would take too long to explain fully what the "long ton" system means. Enough for me to say that for several years, until 1884, the miners were paid on an average of 2,000 pounds to the ton for prepared coal, which means coal fit for the market. In that year a fixed number of pounds was established for a ton. This is from twenty-eight to twenty-eight and a half hundred weight, a hundred weight being 112 pounds; making a total of from 3,136 to 3,192 pounds per ton that a miner is required to give.

The company thus increased the size of the ton and fixed it arbitrarily higher than the amount needed to furnish a ton of marketable coal, 2,000 pounds. In addition to this, the pea coal, which, previous to the "long ton" system, dropped through a nine-sixteenth inch square hole, now drops through a three-quarter-inch hole. The pea coal of to-day is increased in size over the pea coal of 1875-77, seven to nine per cent, and yet the miner has to furnish the extra size without compensation.

Since 1884 the companies have also found a market for three other sizes of coal smaller than they were able to sell formely. This should have reduced the size of the miners' ton rather than increased it. The miners assert that if they were paid the price the companies claim to be paying for a marketable ton of coal there would be no cause for trouble over the weighing question.

Size of Cars Increased.

T. G. Nichols, President of District No. 1, says: "Having gone over reports from our locals that show where coal is mined by the car, I find that at fifty collieries the size of the cars has been increased since the colliery began operation, while the miners are not paid any additional price for the increase. In fact, the cars were almost always increased without any miner being notified of the matter. But not being organized, they had to individually submit to the plunder."

In the Scranton district check-weighmen have been allowed on the mine tipples since the strike of 1900. The check-weighman's duties consist ordinarily of keeping tab upon the checking of coal by the company's weighmen and seeing that the miners get due credit. He is employed and paid by the miners themselves. The benefits derived from the presence of the check-weighman are dependent upon the ability of the union to act upon his reports. In the Scranton district, the benefit derived so far by the men from having a weighman has been confined to the obtaining of actual knowledge of how much coal they were docked and not paid for.

During 1901, the miners' weighmen kept account of the total amount of coal for which the miners received payment. Now the state law requires that the coal companies shall make detailed reports of how much coal is mined, shipped, and used during the year. When the state report for 1901 was issued the miners were able to see, by comparison with their weighmen's figures, how much they were cheated out of in the year.

Some Startling Figures.

Here are some of the figures:

At the White Oak colliery, Delaware & Hudson Company, the total number of tons prepared (ready for market) was 234,328. Of this 229,441 tons were shipped, and 5,150 tons used for steam purposes or sold to local trade. The miners received payment for 188,328 tons. The difference, therefore, between the amount of coal prepared and the amount for which the miner was paid was 46,263 tons. Which means that the miners at one mine in one year were denied payment for 19 per cent. of the coal used and sold by the companies.

At the Olyphant colliery, same company, 497,235 tons were produced. Of this 446,208 were shipped and 51,027 used for steam purposes or sold to local trade. The miners were paid for 414,491 tons—82,744 tons (16 per cent.) less than they were entitled to.

At the Raymond mine of the Ontario & Western Company, 289,956 tons were prepared in the year. Of this 270,864 tons were shipped and 19,592 used for steam or sold to local trade. The miners wer paid for 239,260 tons, or 20 per cent. less than they were entitled to.

If this is not wholesale robbery, what can we call it?

The miners want coal weighed, as the companies have in many instances increased the size of the car without increasing the price. In some mines there are as many as four sizes of cars, for which the miners are paid the one price, and which are supposed, for purposes of account with the miner, to be of the same size.

"Topping the Cars."

Nichols further says: "The miners are also required to 'top' their cars—that is, to load the car so that when it arrives at the breaker, the coal must have a certain height above the top edge of the car, or they will be docked or discharged for the same. This requirement is only the growth of about ten years, as formerly the miners were only required to load the car a certain height in the mine and be no more responsible for it after it was taken away by the driver. When it is known that in many cases the miners work as much as two miles away from the breaker, and that the car is run over all kinds of roads, up and down planes, and bumped and jostled with other cars at every turn, the demand is seen to be most unreasonable and impossible of compliance.

"The miners want coal weighed in order that they will no longer be abused for light loading and also not cheated out of the coal they mine. They want pay for each pound of coal they mine and no more. They think this is an honest and a fair demand."

Fair Demand—Therefore Denied.

Assuredly it is, but it is for that very reason that the coal operators refuse it and attempt to destroy the union that would enforce it. From the standpoint of ownership for profit, they assume they have the right to exercise ownership as they see fit. In common with other capitalists, they will oppose interference with that right, until the workers refuse to be rated of less value than machinery and place their lives, their welfare, and their rights as men and women above that of mere producers of profits for a useless and greedy class.

WILLIAM MAILLY.

WORK IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The Pennsylvania State Committee, at its regular meting to-night, granted charters to new locals of the Socialist Party at Lattimer, Harwood Mines, Plains, Freeland, Mayfield, and Hazelton, with a total mebership of 173.

National Secretary Greenbaum has supplied each local with a monthly financial report book. It is desired that the first report be for the month of June.

Treasurer Edelman submitted the quarterly financial report, showing receipts of $200.01 and expenditures of $215.40.

Comrade Mailly, after spending five weeks traveling from end to end of the hard-coal field, presenting the principles of Socialism for the first time in many a hamlet and town, and writing the most authentic accounts of the strike for publication, has left for Massachusetts, carrying with him the good wishes of thousands of miners and invitations from many places to return before election.

Comrade John Collins continues in the strike field, addressing immense audiences twice a day, and even thus not filling the demands made upon him. He has organized five locals within the week and reports that not a tenth of the literature needed is at hand.

On June 1 Carbon County had two locals; now it has four. Lackawanna County then had one; now it has four. Luzerne County had one; now it has twelve. The Luzerne County comrades report that the election of Socialists to the Legislature or even to Congress this fall is not impossible.

The record made in these three counties during June can be equalled and extended to Schuylkill and Northumberland Counties this month if finances will permit the territory to be covered.

This week we have received for the strike agitation fund from F. Woolley, Philadelphia, 50 cents; Alex. Fraser, Brooklyn, $2; Local Highland Falls, N. Y., $2; previously acknowledged, $122.65; total to date, $127.15.

Pennsylvania, for the present, is the battle ground of the nation. A dozen Coal Barons and Railroad Kings on the one side, a million of the working class are involved on the other—in an economic contest, but presenting the opportunity for laying the foundation of a political class movement that will encourage and bring hope to the comrades everywhere.

Within the week, Comrade J. W. Slayton, candidate for Governor on the Socialist ticket, will start for the strike district. It is our hope that sufficient funds will be forthcoming to keep him there till Election Day.

Send all contributions to J. Edelmann, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria St., Philadelphia.

J. Mahlon Barnes, Secretary.
Caroline Pemberton, Assist. Sec'y.

WHAT THE CENSUS FIGURES SHOW.

The census figures for manufacturing have been completed for thirty-three states and territories. They show that the average wages for all laborers in the manufacturing industries were 8 per cent. lower in 1900 than in 1890. In those thirty-three states and territories 1,004,590 workers received an average of $418.48 each a year, or $1.39 a day in 1890. In the same states and territories in 1900, 1,463,365 workers received an average of $387.68 each a year, or $1.29 a day. On the other hand, the compilation of prices in "Dun's Review" for last January showed that the cost of living now is nearly 7 per cent. higher than in 1900, and more than 11 per cent. higher than in 1890. The compilation includes food of all kinds, clothing, metals, etc. The average factory worker, therefore, is receiving 8 per cent. less wages than in 1890, and is spending from 4 to 11 per cent. more in cost of living.

TO THE MINERS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

A Talk about Striking and Voting, Which, with Only a Few Names Changed, Will Fit Equally Well for Workingmen of Any Trade in Any State.

You hard-coal miners of Pennsylvania, to the number of one hundred and fifty thousand, are on strike.

You are not striking for fun, though some of the hireling editors would have us believe so. A big strike, lasting for months, is not exactly like a pleasure vacation—though it is about the nearest approach to a pleasure vacation you ever get.

You are striking in dead earnest. You are fighting a great battle, one of the battles of the long class war between Labor and Capital. You have been expecting and preparing for it these two years. So have your enemies, the mine "operators"—as they call themselves, though they "operate" nothing but Wall Street stocks.

It is a serious business, this strike. You are determined to win, if your united courage and patience and intelligence and devotion can secure victory. Your enemies are also determined to win, if their united greed and cruelty and cunning can compass your defeat.

You have no reason to love your bosses.

You know that they grow rich by your poverty, that they overwork and underpay you and brazenly cheat you and recklessly sacrifice your lives by hundreds to save a little expense.

You owe them no gratitude, no respect, no consideration, only unwavering hostility.

You know this, and they know that you know it. They hate you as bitterly as you hate them. Tyrants and robbers always hate their victims.

These bosses have great advantages over you in the fight. They have not used all their powers yet.

One advantage is their wealth. Half a dozen of the biggest capitalists in the Coal Trust have more money than all the four hundred and fifty thousand coal miners in the United States taken together. You and other workingmen made that money for them. They are losing money by this strike, of course. But they are only losing the money that you would have made for them if you had not struck. They are in no danger of going hungry on account of the strike. You can stand the strike for some time yet, by great care and self-denial. They can stand it longer, if it is worth their while—and if they do not get scared.

Another advantage is their political power. You have a thousand times as many votes as they have. But you have been letting them do your political thinking for you. You have neglected politics. They have not. They have dictated tickets and platforms for both the big parties and you have divided your votes between them.

What is the result?

You have a Governor who worked overtime, signing commissions for Coal and Iron Police. Your splendid self-control has not given these thugs much chance for shooting, yet. But they have already murdered at least two of you and are ready to murder more.

That is only one of Governor Stone's crimes against you. Another is that he has utterly neglected to enforce the laws for your protection in such matters as defective ventilation, employment of inexperienced men, dishonest weighing, company stores, and the like.

Governor Stone has not ordered out the militia yet. Of course, he does not want to do that if he can help it—if his friends, the "operators," can win without it. But do you doubt what he will do if it comes to a crisis?

Governor Stone is not an exceptionally bad man. He is simply an ordinary politician of Matt Quay's party. In helping the "operators" against you he is only paying his political debts to the men who supplied his compaign funds and put him in office.

He is about as good and about as bad a man as Judge Pennypacker, whom Quay wants you to vote for in November. If you elect Pennypacker and have another strike during his term, he will have to do just as Stone does now, and for the same reasons—to be true to the real masters of his party.

Quay and the Republican party have treated you with absolute contempt in this terrible fight of yours. Naturally, you looked to the Democratic party to do better.

What did the Democrats do?

They nominated Robert E. Pattison, the man who sent the militia to Homestead. Do you remember Homestead? The steel workers do.

Pattison would send troops to Wilkesbarre just as cheerfully as he sent them to Homestead.

It would be pretty hard to choose between Pennypacker and Pattison, between the Republican and Democratic parties, the twin tools of the mine-owning, mill-owning, land-owning, railroad-owning capitalist class.

But you do not have to choose between them.

There is another candidate for Governor, whose name is John W. Slayton. He is a workingman, a member of the Carpenters' Union, and at present a member of the Select Council of New Castle, elected to that office recently by workingmen's votes. He is the candidate of the Socialist Party.

His colleagues on that ticket are J. Mahlon Barnes, a member of the Cigar Makers' Union of Philadelphia, and Harry C. Gould, of the Printers' Union of Erie.

All three of them have been on strike, have been locked out, have been tried and found true by their fellow workingman.

These men have been nominated by workingmen directly. The platform they stand on is a workingman's platform, demanding for the worker the full product of his labor. Their campaign fund—and a very small one it is—is made up of the hard-earned and freely given dimes and quarters and occasional dollars of wage-workers.

If elected, they will owe their election to the organized working class, just as Pennypacker or Pattison, if elected, will owe it to the organized capitalist class. Therefore they will be true to the workers, just as Pennypacker or Pattison will be true to the capitalists.

The Socialist Party will have candidates, nominated in the same way on the same platform and supported by the same sort of campaign, for Congress in the various districts, for the Legislature, and for the various county offices.

You can elect these men if you will. You have the votes. If you elect them, for the first time in its history, the State of Pennsylvania will be governed by the class that digs the coal and works the iron and does the other useful labor. Is it not about time?

And suppose, even, that you do not elect them. Suppose you cast your one hundred and fifty thousand votes for them.

Imagine how that would frighten the Coal Kings.

Cast such a vote as that for the ticket of the Socialist Party, and you would see the Coal Kings begging for a conference with President Mitchell, recognizing your union, granting you eight hours, increased pay, check-weighmen, strict enforcement of the law, anything short of giving up the mines entirely, in order to placate your opposition.

It is always a good thing to frighten your enemies. Try it.

This talk about strikes and politics is addressed directly to the miners of Pennsylvania. But it is just as applicable to workingmen of any other trade in any other state. For everywhere there is the same war between Labor and Capital and everywhere the political power plays the same part in it.

But the talk is not quite finished. There are some things to say about partizanship, about good men and the like. We shall speak of these things next week in this same column.

MONARCH AND SLAVES.

He who upholds the throne—upholds the Slave,
For Kings have subjects, and the Slave is in subjection.
Where sits the Monarch sits unequal wrong,
Where sits unequal wrong, sits servitude.
The absolute Monarch holds the absolute Slave.
Amongst a myriad hid he reeks not of
His degradation, but it is ever there
So rise and shame him. A turn of fortune's wheel
And brought before the absolute eyes—he feels
The absolute hand, and cringes 'neath the whip
Like any rice-swamp fugitive.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

The receipt of a sample copy of The Worker is an invitation to subscribe. The price is 50 cents a year, or 25 cents for six months.

We sometimes send a number of copies of The Worker, unsolicited, to some man whom we suppose to be interested in the Socialist movement. If you get such a bundle, please distribute them among your shopmates or neighbors, and see if you can't get a subscriber or two.

The "Amalgamated Journal," organ of the Iron and Steel Workers, has progressed to the point where it can editorially advise its readers to act independently in politics as workingmen, in the sense of picking good or bad candidates from the old parties and voting unitedly for or against them, regardless of partisan affiliation. We call this progress—for the "Amalgamated Journal." But it is still a long way behind the times. Workingmen have tried this scheme again and again, and they are learning that a "good" man in office is no better than a "bad" man, if he is elected on the ticket of a bad party, and that any party which is good enough for the capitalists is too bad for the workers. Non-partisanship is played out, brothers of the Amalgamated. There is only one party for the workers, and its candidates are the only good candidates for workers to support.

THE SILVER LINING TO THE CLOUD.

In the July "Pilgrim," Rev. John McDowell, a clergyman of the anthracite field, writes sympathetically of the coal strike. He gives a vivid picture of the miners' sufferings, as in this brief passage, picturing their dismal surroundings and the gloom of their daily life:

"Most of the foreign miners live in the 'Company Patches.' These patches consist of rows of houses, more frequently called 'Shanties,' built by the operators for the use of their employees. As a rule, they are located near the mines. No pretense is made to make them attractive. Not the slightest effort is made at sanitary control. Everything about them is in the rough. The atmosphere, because of nearness to the breaker, is laden with dust; the water is tainted with sulphur; and the sun has to fight its way through dense clouds of black smoke which blackens everything in sight.

"The houses are all alike and are usually of the clapboard variety, fiercely hot in summer and frightfully cold in winter. Very few of them are weather-proof and many of them are in a tumble-down condition. They are in most cases unpainted and unplastered. Inside the rafters and beams are exposed to view. The walls are either bare or covered with all kinds of old newspapers. The shanties have from two to six rooms. Rents are low and for this reason these houses are always occupied. The squalor and dirt found in these Patches surpasses anything known in the slums of our cities. Coal dirt is everywhere and in everything. The food is gritty with it. It rubs itself into the souls of those who live in it."

These foreign miners were brought into the district by the mine owners in past years to break the strikes of the American workingmen and force them to accept lower wages or worse conditions. Their poverty, their miserable standard of living, their submissiveness to tyranny were to be the means of reducing the native miners to like subjection, and making greater profits for the capitalists. The capitalists loved these men—so long as they had use for them as strike-breakers. But they did not try to improve their conditions; to do that would have been to defeat their very purpose in bringing them in.

But in the course of a few years the foreign miners have formed new ideals of life, have become dissatisfied with their state, and have eagerly joined with the older men in a united effort to improve it. The Poles, Slavs, Hungarians and Italians, whom the capitalists once counted on to break strikes are now as good union men and as good strikers as the American, English, Irish and Welsh miners.

And now the so-called "organs of public opinion"—with a few honorable exceptions, such as the "Pilgrom"—are denouncing these men for the very conditions of poverty, ignorance, dirt and degradation which the capitalists have forced upon them, for the very conditions which the men are trying to abolish.

The hopeful thing is that, under such wretched conditions—deliberately calculated, as they are, to crush out all hope, all self-respect, all principles of honor among the victims—yet the workingmen, native and foreign, show an ardent desire for better things, an increasing degree of self-respect and self-reliance and self-control, while in the matter of manly honor their behavior, at the worst, puts to shame the cowardly and faithless conduct of their masters.

The capitalist, as capitalist, is a self-centered, individualistic, sneaking, cunning schemer. Culture only intensifies these qualities and makes him a more dangerous schemer. His social and economic position perverts even his personal virtues to the injury of others. The workingman, as workingman, is a social being, with a dim but certain instinct of solidarity with his fellows. His vices are individual vices, his virtues are social virtues, redounding to the good of his class. Ignorance and misery cannot destroy his class instinct, tyranny intensifies it, and every gain he makes in leisure and education by the united effort of his class equips and disciplines him better for the battle for freedom.

"The stars in their courses fought against Sisera," and the laws of economics and of human nature fight against class rule. In the condition of the workers to-day there is no reason for pessimism. There is room only for hope and incentive to renewed activity.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The "Catholic Light" of Scranton, Pa., seemingly alarmed by the rapid growth of Socialism among the striking miners, prints in a prominent position in its issue of July 4, and with editorial approval, a long article on the "dangers" of Socialism, rehashing all the time-worn misrepresentations that the ingenuity or the stupidity of the capitalistic mind has yet been able to work out against a movement that threatens to overthrow capitalism and substitute industrial freedom.

The writer—who seems never to have read a Socialist book or paper or heard a Socialist speaker—tells the miners who read the "Catholic Light" that Socialism is an attack on the home, the family, and the church, that the Socialists foment riot and disorder, that they propose to overthrow law and order, religion and morality, that they are "laying the foundation for a system of confusion, vice, and infidelity."

Many thousands of miners—Catholics, Protestants, or what not—in the strike field, have listened to Spargo, Vail, Mailly, Collins, Geiger, and other Socialist speakers within the last two months. Many thousands of them have read The Worker and other Socialist papers, leaflets, and pamphlets. These men will be able to say for themselves and tell their fellows whether the writer in the "Catholic Light" speaks truly.

We challenge this writer to cite one speech or written article by a representative of the Socialist Party in this country, in support of his sweeping charges. He cannot do it.

The Socialist Party does not attack religion nor the church. It officially declares that religious opinion is a private matter, which should be kept separate from politics.

The Socialist Party does not attack the institution of the family nor seek to undermine the home. On the contrary, it seeks to put an end to the shameful system of class rule and exploitation of labor which makes decent home life almost impossible for so many thousands of workingmen, which breaks up the family and drags the women from the fireside and the children from the school and puts them to work for the profit of the capitalist.

The Socialist Party does not incite riot and attack law and order. It does attack the mine owners and other capitalists who violate every law for the sake of profit. It attacks the capitalists who have murdered hundreds of miners at Fraterville, Fernie, and Johnstown within the last two months. It attacks the exploiters who hire armed thugs to lie behind stockades and shoot peaceful strikers, as at Duryea. It attacks the public officials who allow mine owners to violate every law designed for the protection of the workers.

Gentlemen of the "Catholic Light," it is a dangerous game you are playing. Honesty is the best policy. In this age of newspapers and public meetings it does not pay to falsify facts too recklessly. The miners are learning what Socialism is by meeting and listening to Socialists and reading their writings. If you keep on misrepresenting Socialism you will succeed only in destroying the miners' confidence in you. We give you this warning in all kindness and good faith, for we do not wish to quarrel with you.

Finally, let us answer you with your own words:

The article against Socialism on your front page closes by advising the miners not to admit any Socialist to their unions—by advising the union to boycott Socialists on account of their political opinions.

Of course, this advice does not come officially from the church nor editorially from the paper. But editorially the paper endorses the article in question.

Now let us turn to your editorial page in the same issue.

Speaking of the incident in St. Patrick's church at Olyphant, where seventy-five strikers walked out, rather than sit with a scab to hear mass, you deprecate such action. You advise the Catholic miners "NOT TO PERMIT THEIR RELIGION TO BE MIXED UP WITH THEIR SECULAR INTERESTS."

That is good advice. The Socialist Party gives the same advice. Stick to it yourselves, gentlemen of the "Catholic Light." Do not try to play upon the miners' religious beliefs to influence them in politics or to organize a boycott against men of a political opinion differing from your own.

Keep religion and politics separate, keep church and union separate, and neither the union nor the Socialist Party will have any quarrel with the church.

CLASS DIVISIONS NO LONGER JUSTIFIED.

Although class divisions have a certain justification in history, yet is this the case only for a given epoch and for given social conditions. They arose from the insufficiency of production, and will be swept away by the full development of modern productive forces. Indeed, the abolition of classes in society pre-supposes a historic stage of development at which the existence, not of this or that particular ruling class only, but of any ruling class whatever, and, accordingly, the existence of class distinction itself, has become an anachronism and is obsolete. It pre-supposes a range of development in production at which the appropriation of the means of production and of their products, and, along with them, of the political power, of the monopoly of culture and of intellectual leadership by a particular class in society has become, not only superfluous, but also economically, politically and intellectually, a clog to progress. This stage has now been reached. On the one hand, the political and intellectual bankruptcy of the capitalist class is hardly any longer a secret to itself; on the other, its economic bankruptcy recurs regularly every ten years. At every crisis, society, unable to utilize them, is suffocated under the load of her own products and productive powers, and stands helpless before the absurd contradiction that the producers have nothing to consume because there is a dearth of consumers. The power of expansion in the means of production snaps the bonds which capitalistic production lays upon them. Their emancipation from these bonds is the only prerequisite for an uninterrupted, ever more rapidly advancing development of productive forces, and, thereby, for a practically boundless increase of production itself. But this is not all. The appropriation by society of the means of production does away, not only with the present artificial restriction of production, but also with that positive waste and havoc, both of products and productive forces that to-day are the unavoidable companions of production, and reach their height at the crises. Furthermore, by doing away with the insane extravagance of the ruling classes of to-day and of their political representatives, it sets free for the use of the whole people a mass of products and means of production. The possibility, with the aid of socialized production, to secure to every member of society an existence, not only materially sufficient and richer from day to day, but which also guarantees to him the free development and activity of his physical and intellectual gifts, this possibility now exists for the first time, and it exists indeed.—Frederick Engels, in "Socialism, Utopian and Scientific."

—It is rather remarkable that the man who can see a great objection to surrendering his independence to the union can see nothing out of place in surrendering his body and soul to a boss.—Coast Seamen's Journal.

BUY UNION-LABEL BREAD.

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

I hope it is not too late for me to make friends of the Mammon of unrighteousness; it is a prudent thing to try anyway, since the determination of the saints and the determinism, called economic, both indicate that riches and righteousness are convertible terms. Perhaps I have been lacking in sympathy for the burdens and privations of the world's jailers; perhaps I have not realized how low down a man has to live, himself, who must all day long hold another fellow's head on the ground.

There is that difficulty of governing a nation of fools without yourself playing the fool, which must necessarily go against the stomach of a greatly unfoolish man. My friend Edward VII., for instance (or somebody in his name), starts the idea of a great Coronation fair for a London hospital. Behold, all things are now ready—the roulettes, lottery bags, etc.—when a wretch named Caine, M. P., from Wales, objects to gambling. With the late Prince of Wales' reputation for roulette, what could be a more vicious, murderous club in the hands of a moral Cain? And the worst of it is, you cannot talk out loud about it, you must inside it. Yes, Kings are to be pitied!

When Guiteau was on trial for murdering the President of the United States, the defense made was that of insanity; what you might call constructive insanity; constructed thus: What is sanity? To share the common sense, will, and wishes of the people. What is the government of the United States? The common sense, will, and wishes of the people—the President being the choice of the common sense, will, and wishes of the people aforesaid. Therefore Guiteau, being one of the aforesaid, and at the same time desiring to murder the aforesaid, was insane; as a suicide is insane, for wanting to kill the choice of the common sense, will, and wishes of himself. With such a magnificent reason as this for not being killed, the President of the United States who has to surround himself with a bodyguard is to be commiserated by all nations for the madmen against whom he is so guarded.

There are people in the United States (outside the court at Oyster Bay), who recognize the hand of a master in the President's mode of preparing and leading his sheep into some sort of a royal fold which is to come next after the present impossible top-heavy, gold-crowned republic. He is already the head of an "administration" or "Roosevelt faction" of Republicans, which, of course, includes all the respectable Democrats. Already the press has special columns about how he spends his days, etc. And it all looks as natural as evolution. Bryan's issues are slipping away from under his feet while he is committing them to memory. He should come up to Oyster Bay to learn what century he lives in.

In that little passage of diplomatic arms now going on between the wiles of the bargain-counter and of the confession-box, our statesmen will have some fine preliminary practice in a little of that sort of thing which is to form so much of our future history. The press, so deftly manipulated by that great organization of gentlemen with a church to hold and everything to lose, has been preparing the public mind from day to day with stories of the gracious manner in which the Pope was going to meet America's claims, to meet them more than half way, and to carry them and us the other half. Even now, we hardly realize that His Holiness has politely conceded nothing—on the friar, church, property, and school questions. He has carried us home half way, sure; but it is his own half of the way back again. Though I am willing to bet on the black frock, for the why, I prefer to lay my money on the sons of the bargain-counter for finally getting the whole of the loaf into their pockets—that is, if the present is really a square game between two rivals.

Let us consider the gentlemen on both sides of it. No distinguished cardinal with a pope so very, very old, can afford to fly in the face of the Franciscans and Dominican orders, who, though they choose to go barefooted and bareheaded, can wear golden slippers and crowns of the same material, and who have a greatly quiet influence in the election of His Next Holiness. Again, here are our own American gentlemen who will have to dine somewhere when stationed in those isles of barbarity; and there will be no popular elections for generations. Abstract justice? Away with it! Let us make friends with the much maligned Mammon of Unrighteousness.

One of the great advantages of having a very long history behind you, and the cosmopolitan interest and habit (that is, like capitalism, having the interest and habit of getting your own cosmopolitanly) is that you grow a conscience of cosmopolitan variety, if not consistency; that you must, at one time or another, have said about everything that can be said on the right and wrong side of everything. This is the happy privilege of Archbishop Ireland—a charming old gentleman, the Chauncey Depew of his own hierarchy. This level headed prelate, with an eye all round the compass, has given it as a matter of personal knowledge, that American news agencies in the Philippines were instructed to wire nothing home but what made for war; that the Philippine war was ours and that we wanted it. Next, he thinks the stories of the cruelty of our officers are not true. Next, he thinks the Protestant teachers out there are all right, etc., etc. Now, if ever you want quotations on either side of anything, you know where to go. What is the use of being Catholic if you are not universal?

The President is not in politics for the organization of coal miners. He is not in strenuousness for the swift decision of a question which hunger will decide if you give it time. What has he to gain as candidate for the next monarchy by making friends of the Famine of Righteousness? Nay, let us look to the buttered side of the bread with the Mammon of Unrighteousness. Yet there are critics in the country unfeeling enough to blame His Future Majesty for this wise and necessary attitude.

Mr. Grout, who was always considered a serious man, even when accused of Single Tax, has just given evidence of much concealed humor in his condemnation of that Brooklyn Bridge relief plan proposed by an eminently irresponsible board of Rapid Transit Commissioners. "A wooden box full of five-cent citizens, fired through a metal tube under water by an explosive instrument called a motor with a trolley attachment" (the quotation marks are mine)—this prospect of a daily submarine fire and barbecue of of human flesh, to be added to the other interesting episodes of New York's rapid transit so strikes Mr. Grentsinger, president of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, that he, though at first approving the plan, now withdraws that, until he can consider how to raise the fare. It is altogether too much for the money.

Many volumes could be filled with the deeds of such heroes as Frank Krewson, who for forty miles struggled with two hundred pounds of steam pressure on a wild ride from Trenton to Elizabeth. He kicked his helper off to save his life, and then remained alone with feet half roasted, pressing back the steam behind the furnace door; being almost suffocated, moreover, with escaping gas from the five holes, and thus he reached Elizabeth, almost dead. He did not own a screw in that railroad system; he had no hold whatsoever, even on the right to be roasted; but because mankind is so constituted, he took unto him a railroad and a public conscience. As a worker, that spirit of self-sacrifice which no mere stockholder in the company ever could know became his. And, therefore, saith the stockholder, "Human nature must be changed before you have Socialism, because nobody ever did anything but what he was paid for; and you cannot under Socialism get men to burn their feet like this—for nothing." You can only get people to take the profits for nothing.

The newspapers state, for their masters, that the freight handlers' strike at Chicago is virtually (not virtuously) lost. It is lost in this funny way. The leader of the organization has settled it with the company; the strike being a contest on the part of the company to settle nothing with that leader or his organization. When a company's case is desperate it finds great comfort in little words. Curran won, but virtually lost. Doff you see?

In the suit brought by the school teachers at Patchogue, L. I., to recover salaries due to them from the Board of Education, the judge, in deciding that the Board, while it may fix salaries, does not owe nor pay them, presents to the mind a principle of much practical importance to Socialists. Although trade unions fix their own scale of wages to-day, and have a right to do it, they are not fixing the value of their labor; they are but reducing its confiscation by so much. When it comes to actual valuing and paying, a board representing the social intellect of labor and use will do the work between the immediate makers and consumers. The man who works and the man who needs the product must leave paying to the larger industrial mind of society.

To be too curiously virtuous borders so closely upon being vicious that one need not wonder if occasionally the sanctified slummer gets swooped off in the same patrol wagon as the sinner whose ways she only came down to the Bowery to behold and be ashamed of. This has just happened to a good-lady party of slummers. A raid being made for the capture of all of the fair sex in a certain place, and they being just slumming it there and being raided, they did not think it fair and protested that they were "all to the good," though apparently going to the bad. Not having heard of Mr. Jerome lately, I suppose he also is gone. Moral: Let us not too closely follow our reformers.

It is said that the President's instruction to Mr. Littlefield to draw up a Republican anti-trust bill is regarded as a very shrewd piece of politics; because, as everybody observes, no bill of importance ever could be passed in the second session of any Congress. But it is a shrewd piece of politics nevertheless, and will prove a trump card before the voters. How unsympathetic we are to our rulers! Is not Roosevelt to be pitied, whose doom it is to rule a population of such easy dupes?

The conquerors of the Boers are now very much exercised to find out who it is they have conquered. The Boers are going off to their farms with money in their pockets. There are not enough of the wild and woolly natives to do all the gold mining and other hard labor required. There is as yet a sentiment against importing Chinamen to a place in the bosom of British industry. So that want the British soldier, who has been doing all the fighting, to finish it by taking up the miner's pick and turning himself into conquered. It is Labor only that Capital goes to war to conquer.

In that magnificent drama of "generosity without a parallel in the history of nations," wherein we gave Cuba back to herself together with a constitution, there were a few little vaguenesses designed and left by some old masters of that black art, such as Senator Platt, which leave it uncertain whether Cuba can make any other use of her surplus revenue than paying her debts with it. Now in all other countries, the backbone of public prosperity is having a national debt. Where would a nation's incentive be, if it did not have some gentlemen in its midst to whom it would be eternally in debt? Cuba wants money. That is what we want her to want. But then, there may be two sorts of sugar in Cuba. Which sort gets the surplus? Is it Havemeyer or Beet? We pause for a reply before we lend.

It is to be sincerely hoped that victory will be with the miners in this life and death struggle. But at the same time the lesson of this great strike, no matter which way it terminates, should be educational to the miners. Is it not plain that to obtain redress of a permanent character another remedy outside of strikes must be applied, and that is public ownership of both mines and railroads? When this is accomplished strikes will be no more, the price of coal will be as staple as postage stamps and at a price that will allow its liberal use. The quickest redress and the only lasting one is for the miners and all organized labor to take independent political action. This action can best be gained through joining the Socialist Party, who are politically organized, both nationally and in the state, and it only remains for the producers themselves to become class-conscious.

Toledo Daily News.

Another calamity at Johnstown! And this will enable a lot of short-sighted philosophers to characterize a conspicuous result of man's greed and carelessness and ignorance as an act of God! What sort of a comfort is a God who would do such things? Out upon such falsely called religious beliefs. If the mine inspectors had done their duty such a catastrophe need not have happened. * * *

Precautions to prevent disasters like these cost money and the mine owners find that it pays better to do only what the law compels them to do in the way of safeguarding. They can easily hire men to take the places of those who have fallen, but ventilation, efficient inspection and intelligent labor cost money. Human life these hypocrites piously say comes and goes as the act of God.

Bad as it is this Johnstown tragedy isn't the worst feature of the mining business. Each year witnesses more than the number lost at this latest horror as sacrifices to man's greed and selfishness. Only these other victims fall one by one and we take no note of them. In these tragedies of the mines those who die outright are always the most fortunate. Scores are maimed and crippled to every one that is killed in mining. Other scores have their health undermined by the noxious vapors which the mines give off in a seeming effort to guard their treasures. * * *

These poor slaves labor as they do in order that human butterflies may bask on the sands of Newport and Cape May and Palm Beach. In order that New York and London society may glitter with their barbaric show. In order that a little coterie may swagger with its ill-gotten wealth, using its bloody dividends to its own and the social harm. We pay enough for our coal. Our money isn't righteously distributed. The coal barons without warrant or conscience have juggled the business until their rapacity has the apearance of justice and right. But the bloody human debris at the foundation of their fortunes gives their smug complacency and smooth phrasing the lie. How long must we suffer these vultures.

Omaha Examiner (Rep.).

One of the elements that must be hereafter reckoned with in future elections in this city and county is the Socialist vote. One who was interested in the recent recounts of ballots cast in the last county election says that in that election the Socialists cast nearly or quite 1,000 votes. If this be true there seems no reason to doubt the assertion that there are several times as many out-and-out Socialists as there are Populists, taking no account of the fact that most of the latter are in this country in spirit Socialists. The Socialists maintain headquarters on North Sixteenth street, where the seductive doctrines are dispensed at all hours of the day and night, and pretty soon they may be expected to cut a considerable figure in local and state elections.

Railway Employees' Journal.

In a recent interview Mr. John W. Gates said: "This prosperity is going to continue. Politics can't touch it. Every trust formed, every combination made, every community of interest consummated, is a step upward for the social advancement of the laborer."

Mr. Gates is undoubtedly a man of ability, but is his judgment not somewhat contrary to hard, cold facts?

"Politics can't touch it," by which he evidently means that the trusts are so powerful that it is impossible for the law to stop their pillaging of the workers.

Just here Mr. Gates is wrong, for the government can, and will put a stop to it.

Just because the Senate to-day does not represent the people or voice their will.

Just because Capital has at this time practically full control of the government and by using that power throttles every move that Labor makes for its emancipation.

Just because the wage-earners are subservient enough to allow petty judges to issue injunctions that outrage the word liberty.

That is no criterion that such conditions will obtain to the end of the chapter.

The time is rapidly approaching when the laborer will claim and receive his own. He will claim every position in the government from dog-catcher to president, and then how will it be for Labor?

Better said present politics can't touch it, but the politics of the future, the politics in which the voice of Labor is heard can, and will, put an end to its spoliation.

"Every community of interest consummated is a step upward for the social advancement of the laborer." Yes, the Coal Trust, the Sugar Trust, Flour Trust, Beef Trust are all shining examples of the manner in which the laborer is being uplifted.

If Mr. Gates intends that the trusts, by educating the laborer to live on air, is elevating him, then he is certainly being elevated.

But in fact the trusts are elevating the workers in one way; they are teaching them two lessons: One—the curse of the trusts as at present administered, and the other—the advantage of organization and co-operation.

At the present the labor movement, at best, is in a chaotic state; it is a giant striking blindly at an enemy whose tactics are little understood and whose baseness is not realized.

Too many labor leaders are working more for individual advancement than for the benefit of their fellow-man, but when all these shall have been exposed and when the labor movement reaches a point where concerted action is taken—then, Mr. Gates, look out for your statements; for the laborers will see to it that the government DOES "touch it" and touch them ALL so that the trusts will in reality be to the interest of the laborers, for THE LABORERS WILL OWN THE TRUSTS.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

"The Trust Overshadows All Issues" is the title of the leading article in "Wilshire's Magazine" for July. Holding that "the capitalist's political brains are in his pocket-book and the workingman's in his stomach," the writer argues that the working class has no sufficient motive to join in an anti-trust movement on Democratic lines, while the opposition of the small capitalists to the trust will prove futile. "The small capitalist," he says, "is at present praying to the workingman to come to his aid and destroy the trust, in order that he, the small capitalist, may once more go into business. The promise made to the workingman is that the waste of labor engendered by this going back to the methods of production on a small scale will be sure to make his labor much more in demand than at present. * * * That there is something in this argument canot be denied. There was something in the logic of the hand-weavers who in 1838 tried to destroy the machinery that was taking away their livelihood." But while there is "something" in such Democratic logic, there is not much, not enough to make an effective political movement. "The growth of the use of machinery has never yet been stayed because men were thrown out of employment by its use, and there is no reason why the future should differ from the past. A boy may wish to remain a boy, but he grows into a man, all the same." Ultimately, the writer feels sure "the steady process of economic evolution will force the working class into a very pronounced attitude on the question of the trusts"—but the cry they will then raise will be, not "Smash the trusts!" but "Let the nation own the trusts!" This political movement will not assume great proportions, he thinks, until the development of the trusts brings the problem of non-employment to the front. Then it will rise quickly and sweep all before it. It is the business of Socialists to prepare the public mind for this critical movement of the future. Meanwhile, the partial or compromising public ownership movements, though they will of themselves accomplish little or nothing will, he thinks, do their part in this preparation for the crisis. Among the other articles are, "My Campaign in West Elgin," by H. G. Wilshire; "The American Invasion," by Richard Le Gallienne; "The Post-office—Its Possibilities," by James L. Cowles; and "A Talk on Religion and Politics," by Charles Ferguson.

"Studies in the Strike Field," by William Mailly, accompanied with a hitherto unpublished portrait of President Mitchell, a portrait of Mailly, and a number of his "snap-shots" from the scene of battle, is a leading feature of the July number of that bright little monthly, the "Socialist Spirit." There is also an extended editorial review of the strike, from which, by a curious connecting link, one passes to a consideration of some significant facts about the United States navy, immigration, and artificially stimulated patriotism. "What of Womanhood?" is a terribly suggestive article dealing with certain phases of "our" policy in the Far East and showing how much women have to gain from the downfall of capitalism.

The title-page of the "International Socialist Review" for July indicates the spreading of a veritable intellectual feast. Marcus Hitch translates the "Retrospect, 1848-1895," which Frederick Engels, shortly before his death, wrote as an introduction to Marx's "Class Struggles in France." Jean Longuet writes on "The Socialist Party of France after the Elections," giving an elaborate analysis of the situation at the late general elections and the results thereof. Seymour Stedman writes in defense of "Immediate Demands," and H. Gaylord Wilshire, under the title, "Economic Development and Socialist Tactics," discussing the same question from a quite different standpoint, reaches quite a similar conclusion. Agnes Wakefield translates from Enrico Ferri's review, "Il Socialismo," a brief letter by Karl Kautsky on the divergent tendencies in the party, with some comment by Ferri. Finally, there is the closing paper of J. L. Franz's series dealing with the history of the United States in the light of economics. The editor discusses "Socialism and the Trade Union Movement," with particular reference to the relations of the American Labor Union and the American Federation of Labor. His positon is identical with that taken by The Worker immediately after the Denver convention, regretting this definite division of the trade union movement, believing that a wiser course could have been followed, but recognizing the division as an accomplished fact and urging upon Eastern Socialists the duty of vigorous work for and with and in the Federation to correct its now reactionary policy, as the only means of avoiding a disastrous internecine war. The departments—"Socialism Abroad," "The World of Labor," and the book reviews—are valuable and interesting as usual.

CONDEMNED BUT NOT SILENCED.

John J. Spouse, Socialist Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Michigan, Expelled by Baptists, Makes a Stinging Reply.

John J. Spouse, the candidate of the Socialist Party for Lieutenant-Governor of Michigan, is a Baptist clergyman—or, more correctly, he was a Baptist clergyman until the Baptists expelled him for heresy, or insubordination, or contempt of court, or some such heinous offense.

Comrade Spouse has written an open letter to the reverend brothers who sat in judgment on him. He does not mince words. He defies the Baptist inquisitors to give any ground for his expulsion except the fact that he was true to his conscience and said things uncomplimentary to Saint Rockefeller and other patrons of the church. He says in part:

"Six years ago I entered the ministry with a character that would bear the search light of investigation. I left it less than a year ago with a character still untarnished. During my ministry I fearlessly assailed unrighteousness wherever I found it. I might have used more 'expediency' and kept the good will of my 'brethren' by preaching about the sins of David and Solomon, and delivering 'gospel' sermons about the covetous Judas who carried the 'bag,' and who for filthy lucre betrayed his Master. But Judas has a living issue that took my attention. Their name is legion. I went after them. They stand in the way of the kingdom of God, of righteousness, of equity, of love; they have enthroned Mammon where God ought to be. It has more influence in the world than God Almighty. Deny this if ye can, ye that have judged and condemned!

"Is it not true that you never recognize divinity in a 'call' unless it is accompanied by a larger salary? I don't blame you, you poor wage slaves; you are only hirelings and if you don't please your masters you'll either have to do as I have done or starve. Of course, Jesus said, 'Take no thought of to-morrow, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, or what ye shall put on.' But then, self-preservation teaches you that that is folly. I did that, brethren; I was true to my calling and preached the truth, and the guilty were stung to their very soul's center. * * *

"I am no croaking pessimist. The kingdom of universal peace and human brotherhood is nearer than we think. Jesus' ideal of 'Our Father,' 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth,' will be realized.

"But the church will not share the honor; the priests and Mammonites but bar the way. As the kingdom—and I use this word only as a figure—of heaven started, so it will be completed by the meek and lowly of the earth—the savagery of a Schwab ("To get on in the world a man must have the tenacity of a bulldog") to the contrary notwithstanding. * * * And the lowly, despised toilers who create al wealth shall—with the Carpenter of Nazareth—inherit the earth. I cried and do cry aloud and spare not against a system which makes this impossible. You, my brethren, in condemning me, uphold it. A hellish, strife-breeding system that produces war; a system that prodnces war; a system that impoverishes millions and enriches a few thousands, and makes them owners of their brothers' souls as well as bodies; a system that forces innocent babes into factories when they ought to be nursing doll babies; a system that causes nearly three hundred thousand miners to strike against starvation; a system that breeds riot and anarchy and hatred; a system of corruption and bribery that manufactures Judases by the thousands; a glorious system, this, and it receives the benediction of ministers of the gospel of the meek and lowly Jesus. And over it all waves the starry banner, the emblem of the free—making it a base hypocrisy."

LOBBYING AND VOTING.

We have had our labor legislative committees, who are instructed to look after certain bills before congress and to have other bills introduced from time to time that are of vital import to the majority of the citizens of the United States—the working men and women—but the results are sadly disproportioned with the efforts that are put forth each year. In many sessions the product is represented thus—00000000. Now why not confine our efforts to electing our own people as congressmen? That is the only sure enough plan to make our efforts count. The laws that are passed under our present method are usually negative ones and when put to the test of usage are at once declared unconstitutional, or have no clause that will render the laws effective. Generally the only thing that is recognizable is the "enacting clause." It is the height of folly to reiterate "that we must not go into politics." Until this step is taken, and then it must be intelligently, there never will be any solid results. It appears to me that we have all the machinery at our command, and yet we are either too stupid to realize this fact, or too easily led by those who should know better than to adopt this illusionary and suicidal policy that has been forced upon us during the past five years. I fully comprehend that this suggestion will not be received with favor by the majority of the "labor leaders," but the rank and file see the necessity for it, and they are the people. Let us put ten vigorous trade unionists into the next congress and then the result will guide us whether we shall "go into politics" or not.—W. S. Waudby, in Typographical Journal.

PARTY NOTES.

The National Committee granted charters last week to new locals at Jacksonville, Fla., and at Madison, Aberdeen, and Milford, S. D.

Arrangements are in progress for effecting state organizations of the Socialist party in Wyoming, Florida, and South Dakota.

Owing to sickness of Madame Vandervelde, the contemplated tour of Comrade Emile Vandervelde in America has been abandoned.

Comrade Chase spoke last week for party locals and trade unions at Avery, Burlington, and Dubuque, Ia., and Minneapolis and Annandale, Minn.

C. D. Bailey, of Dexter, Mo., formerly prominent in the Populist movement has come out for Socialism.

Winfield R. Gaylord, a Congregational minister of New London, Wis., has joined the party and is about to make a tour of the state in company with Comrade Berger of Milwaukee. He had been a supporter of the party for some time before his formal affiliation with it.

It is reported that a Socialist club has been formed by students in the University of Wisconsin.

Comrade Wegonah S. Abbott has another article on "Capitalism and Socialism" in the Minneapolis "Progress," occupying nearly the whole front page.

Father McGrady and Thomas J. Morgan, of Chicago, will be the speakers at the grand-ratification meeting to be held by the St. Louis Socialists on August 16.

Father McGrady is making an eleven-day speaking tour for the Socialist Party of Montana.

Caleb Lipscomb, of Liberal, Mo., writes to the Missouri "Socialist" to state that he is in no way connected with the so-called Western Co-operative Association, or "Multitude Incorporated." Comrade Lipscomb's name has been used without his consent by Vrooman or some of his friends.

Comrade Mills spoke to the Machinists' Union of San Francisco the other day on the Union Labor Party. He showed that if the U. L. P. was to accomplish anything for the working class it must act on Socialist lines, and that if it was to act on Socialist lines there was no excuse for its being organized separately from the Socialist Party already in the field. He was heartily cheered by the machinists. At Vallejo, Cal., the local Machinists' Union was asked to join in starting the Union Labor Party there, and refused, on the ground that the Socialist Party filled the bill. At the last meting of the California State Comittee charters wer granted to nine new party locals.

Colorado has now twenty-seven locals in good standing, and paid dues on a membership of 804 for the month of May.

Comrade Linke of Grand Rapids, Michigan, writes: "W. E. Walters, Socialist candidate for Governor, spent ten days here. He is a live speaker and did good work. Comrade Bigelow of Lincoln, Neb., will be with us on July 25."

Rather tardily we note a great improvement in the form and apearance of the Cleveland "Citizen." The paper is now set on a machine, plate-matter is almost entirely dispensed with and the amount of original matter thus greatly increased, and attractive department heads introduced. Needless to say, since Max Hayes retains the editorship, there will be no change from the aggressive and enlightened editorial policy the paper has pursued for years.

Local Toledo, O., has nominated Dr. J. S. Pyle for Congress. Dr. C. H. Reed heads the county ticket as candidate for Probate Judge, with Jos. P. Keating for County Clerk, Harry Kuhn for Auditor, Chas. Parker for County Commissioner, and J. M. Keck for Infirmary Director.—The Toledo "Daily News" is waking up. Its recent editorial on the Johnstown disaster has the true ring. In no uncertain language it lays the responsibility for the "bloody business' at the doors of the mine "operators."

There will be a special meeting of Local New Haven, Conn., held at Aurora Hall, Saturday evening, July 19. All members should make a special duty to attend this meeting, as it is necessary to elect officers for the ensuing term and get in working order for the fall campaign.

All communications relative to dues or financial matters in New York should be addressed to James N. Wood, Assistant Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

The "Official Record," organ of the Central Labor Federation of Albany, N. Y., reprints with approval our editorial of June 15, "Still a Record of Failure," in criticism of the non-partisan lobbying policy of the American Federation of Labor. The "Official Record" adds: "These men" (the trade unionists who support the conservative policy), "have received only half of what they justly deserve; but the innocent must suffer for the acts of the guilty, and so it is in this case."

State Organizer Spring has addressed or will soon address meetings at Newark, Astoria, Mt. Vernon, New Rochelle, Dobbs Ferry, Peekskill, Tarrytown, White Plains and Brooklyn. He is making arrangements for Comrade Hanford's tours of the state in August.

The Social Democratic Club of Buffalo is arranging a yacht outing on August 24. Tickets cost 25 cents. The Club voted to pledge $10 for the Socialist Daily Fund. Officers were elected as follows: Organizer, B. Abelsohn; Recording Secretary, B. Schaffer, 23 Union street; Financial Secretary, L. Rudin; Treasurer, M. Abelsohn. Next meeting, Sunday, July 20, 3 P. M., at Park Zoo.

Local New Rochelle at its last meeting collected $5.25 to be sent to the National Committee for propaganda purposes. One new member was admitted. Comrades Wessling, Dynan, Lesser, Gagen, Henzel, Maguire, Hagerty, Dixon and Montrose were chosen as delegates to the county convention of July 19. Arrangements were made for an open-air meeting to be addressed by State Organizer Spring, and copies of The Worker got for distribution.

The Speakers' Club met at 64 East Fourth street on Tuesday night, July 8, the attendance being good. Speeches were made by nearly all the members. after some discussion, a motion to change meeting night was defeated. All comrades who wish to make themselves useful to the party as speakers should attend, every Tuesday.

The financial secretaries of all subdivisions of Local Kings County are called upon to file their reports immediately with the Financial Secretary of the Local, J. C. Holzer, 832 Halsey street. Each subdivision is also called upon to elect delegates to the committee for arranging the outing. This committee meets every Tuesday evening at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum.

The 4th A. D. has elected a campaign committee and good work is promised from all members. The Fourth announces itself as ready for battle with all its forces in line. The New York Socialist Literary Society, which meets at the same place, 241 E. Broadway, is also starting active work. Six new members were admitted at the last meeting.

The 6th and 10th A. D. at its last meeting received one new member. The Worker Distributing Committee reported eighteen copies sold on newsstands. Various other reports were received, including that of the Auditing Committee, showing receipts $6.32; expenditures for June $6; valance on hand, 32 cents, and books in good order. The Secretary was instructed to buy one hundred copies of Spargo's "Child Slaves in 'Free' America" and to order from the Organizer a banner for open-air metings. H. Cohn was elected delegate to the Second Agitation District Committee, and S. Raines on Platform Committee.

The 24th A. D., Br. 2, accepted two new members last week, bringing the roll up to twenty. The branch started last November with ten members, and three of these have since transferred to other districts.

A special joint meeting of the party organizations of the Bronx—34th A. D., 35th A. D., Br. 1 and 2, and Annexed Districts—is to be held Saturday evening, July 19, at the Club House, 3309 Third avenue. The object of the meeting is to perfect the organization of the Borough Committee of the Bronx, to adopt rules governing that body, and to work out a plan for systematic agitation through the coming campaign. It is to be hoped that every meber of the party residing in the Bronx will attend.

The 34th A. D. took in one new member at its last meeting. Reports of various officers, delegates and committees were heard and acted upon. The report of the Agitation Committee on outdoor meetings was so encouraging that it was decided to hold a meeting on Thursday, July 17, at the corner of Alexander avenue and One Hundred and Forty-third street, and another on Wednesday, July 23, at Willis avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street. A business meeting is held every Friday evening at 380 Willis avenue. All members should attend regularly and should also be present at the joint meeting Saturday evening, July 19, at 3309 Third avenue.

The 35th A. D., Br. 2, sent out circulars to the enrolled Social Democratic voters and readers of The Worker, inviting them to a meeting on July 10. Fifteen responded to the call. The meeting was addressed by Comrades Wood and Phillips, with the result that nine of the visitors applied for membership in the party at once, with more to come. A dollar's worth of Socialist literature was sold. At the regular business meeting following it was reported that the open-air meeting at One Hundred and Forty-eighth street and Willis avenue on July 5 was a success, as may be judged from the sales of The Worker and other literature amounting to $1.25. It was resolved to hold another meeting at the same place on July 12, and one at One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street and Willis avenue on Friday, July 18; also to send out circulars again for a meeting on August 14. The meeting of July 12 was still more successful than the preceding one. An audience of two hundred persons applauded the speaker, Comrade Fieldman; all the copies of The Worker on hand were sold, besides pamphlets to the value of $2.68; and five persons declared their intention to join the party. All comrades and sympathizers in the Bronx and the Annexed Districts are requested to join in the work now so well begun, and to be present at the special meeting which, it is hoped, will result in the formation of a strong working Borough Committee.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE COMMITTEE.

The Massachusetts State Committee met on June 27, with Goldstein, Sherman, Page, and Porter present, and Sherman in the chair. Votes on national referendum "B" from Lowell, Springfield, Everett, Lynn, Newburyport and New Bedford were received and filed. Communications from Everett, New Bedford, Natick, East Boston, Roslindale, Worcester, Haverhill and Waltham, financial reports from Lowell and Everett, and financial report and other communications from the National Secretary were received and filed, the Secretary being given instructions for replying. It was voted that the first proposition of the Boston City Central Committee lie on the table. A bill of 75 cents for postage was ordered paid.

An application was received from new local organization in Waltham and charter granted.

The Executive Committee hereby notifies the Socialist Clubs of Massachusetts to elect delegates to meet in convention at Boston, Sunday, September 7, at 9.30 A. M., to act upon the reports of the Executive Committee and to transact such other business as shall come properly before the convention.

Representation in the convention will be based upon membership in good standing. Each club is entitled to one delegate at large; one delegate for each ten members; one delegate for a major fraction of ten. In cities or towns where two or more branches exist, each branch shall be entitled to representation upon the same basis.

Before being admitted to the convention, each delegate must present a credential signed by the chairman and secretary of the club represented, also due-card showing the delegate to be a member in good standing of the club represented.

Clubs are requested promptly to notify the Executive Committee of the names of delegates elected and the vote for each candidate nominated.

The Committee suggests that amendments, recommendations and resolutions for the convention be sent to the Executive Committee not later than Saturday, August 30, that the proposed matter may be properly listed and the work of the assembly thus expedited.

The report of the Financial Secretary-Treasurer for June is as follows:

Receipts—For due-stamps—Ware, $4; Boston, $8; Adams, $10; Springfield, $5; Lowell, $1; Malden, $5; Holyoke, $10.30; Lawrence, $10; Waltham, $1.20; Milford, $2; Fall River, $2.50; for supplies, Lawrence, 100 membership cards, 50 cents; total, $60.

Expenditures—Mimeograph letters, $2.85; Wm. Mailly, organizing materials and expenses, $3.33; David Goldstein, trip to Leominster, fare and loss of time, $5.13; postage, $1.25; National Committee, dues, $25; total, $37.56.

On hand, June 1	$26.83
	$86.83
Expenses	37.56
On hand, July 1	$49.27
Stamps on hand, June 1	653
Sold in June	595
On hand, July 1	58

This report was audited and found correct. "The Ray," issued by the Springfield Socialist Club, is called to the attention of the comrades and recommended for use in propaganda.

The general vote for a successor to W. E. Dixon of the Executive Committee, resigned, was as follows: For Beals-Adams, 15; Boston, 4; Clinton, 18; Newburyport, 4; New Bedford, 10; total, 51; for Coyne—Boston, 12; Clinton, 6; Everett, 6; Haverhill, 1; Rockland, 9; total, 34; for Packard—Beverly, 2; Boston, 8; Clinton, 5; Cambridge, 7; Haverhill, 10; Lawrence, 4; Malden, 7; Reading, 7; total, 50; for Spero—Beverly, 6; Boston, 11; Clinton, 4; Everett, 1; Fitchburg, 11; Lawrence, 2; Newburyport, 1; total, 36. Carlton S. Beals of Brockton is therefore elected.

On the proposed amendment to Section 2 of the state party constitution, adding the Chairman and Secretary of the State Political Committee to the Executive Committee of Massachusetts Clubs, the vote stood: Affirmative—Beverly, 8; Boston, 34; Clinton, 35; Cambridge, 7; Everett, 7; Fitchburg, 11; Haverhill, 10; Lawrence, 6; Malden, 7; Newburyport, 5; New Bedford, 10; Reading, 7; Rockland, 9; total, 156; negative—Boston, 1. The amendment is therefore carried.

For the State Executive Committee,
W. P. PORTER, Secretary.

NEWS FROM LYNN.

Lynn, Mass., July 8.—On the evening of the third of July fire broke out in the store underneath the headquarters of the Socialist Central Club, 85 Munroe street, and much of the property of the club, consisting of chairs, whist tables, library, pictures, etc., was destroyed. The loss will aggregate about $285, on which the Club carried an insurance of $200. The building will immediately be repaired, and new furnishings will be purchased and the headquarters opened for business in a very short time. Meanwhile, the Club will meet on Wednesday evenings at the Highland restaurant, 9 High street.

It is reported that the Central Labor Union of this city is to nominate a ticket for the coming municipal election, although there is opposition by some of the delegates to this body, who seem to think that it would be impossible to elect the candidates on this ticket, from the fact that many of the members of the trade unions are too thoroughly imbued with old-party ideas and that the rank and file is largely made up of forced members.

Many of the leaders of this so-called labor party are disgruntled old-party politicians who simply see an opportunity to advance their own personal ambition. The Socialist sentiment in some of the unions of tais city is very strong and these members should not be misled by the acts of the would-be leaders. The Socialist Party will put a strong ticket in the field, made up of men who are in sympathy with trade union principles.

They should be reminded of the fact that the first essential of a Socialist political organization is to command the confidence of the voting public by guarding the integrity of our movement, and that we can keep it clean only by political action absolutely divorced from affiliation with other political parties, so-called labor parties included. We take a decided stand against endorsing or voting for the candidates of any party foreign to our movement.

Harry Gotimer of the Lynn Central Club was a visitor at the New York State convention July 4.

Two applications have been received and two members admitted. Martha Moore Avery spoke for the West Lynn Club before a good sized audience on June 19.

The active work of the fall campaign is about to begin. Those who have not affiliated with the Socialist Club in Lynn should do so at once, to be able to take part in the election of delegates to the state convention of Massachusetts clubs, which is to be held in August.

The American Labor Union has a branch in this city, with a membership of about three hundred and fifty. This should materialy increase our vote at the coming state and city elections.

OPEN-AIR MEETINGS OF LOCAL NEW YORK.

Open-air meetings will be held during the coming week, under the auspices of Local New York and its assembly districts, as follows:

Friday, July 18—Bleecker and Christopher streets, 3d A. D.

Twenty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, 9th A. D.

Saturday, July 19—Eldridge and Grand streets, 8th A. D.

Monday, July 21—Sixteenth street and Eighth avenue, 7th A. D.

Tuesday, July 22—Pike and Henry streets, 4th A. D.

Thirty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, 11th A. D.

Wednesday July 23—Fortieth street and Eighth avenue, 22d A. D.

One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street and Willis avenue, 34th A. D.

Thursday, July 24—Ninety-eighth street and Amsterdam avenue, 21st A. D.

Friday, July 25—Seventy-second street and First avenue, 26th A. D.

Saturday, July 26—Suffolk and Rivington streets, 12th A. D.

Eighty-sixth street and Third avenue, 30th A. D.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

CONNECTICUT.

It is expected that Comrade Coldwell, who is engaged to work for a month in Connecticut as organizer will begin work July 14. Comrades in the towns which he is to visit will be notified when to expect him and are expected to assist him to make his tour effective and the expenses low. The State Committee depends upon the prompt receipt of dues to pay his expenses and branches wishing him to spend several days in their towns should send in contributions at once.

For the State Committee,
W. E. WHITE, Organizer.

MEETING IN BROOKLYN.

A meeting of the members and friends of Local Kings County is to be held on Sunday, July 20, at 2.30 P. M., in the Labor Lyceum, 949 Willoughby avenue, Brooklyn. State Organizer Spring will be the principal speaker, and it is hoped that he will nave a good audience. After the speaking important party matters will be presented for action. Comrades of Brooklyn should turn out in full force, with at least one friend each, to make this first meeting of the campaign a rousing success.

THE "PULLITICIAN."

In many cases the men who are called politicians are not politicians at all. They are pull-iticians. They have brought the noble science of politics into disrepute. The average so-called politician is not at all the thing he pretends or purports to be. He is something entirely different and vastly worse.

He is a numerous tribe, is the pull-itician, and his family is ancient. His field is as wide as the world, and his tale as old as human story. In the parable of the good Samaritan, he was the man who passed by on the other side. When the Crucifixion question was up, he made a speech before a caucus of the Sanhedrim, and his leprous hand was in the bloody deed of Calvary. He was in for the death of Socrates, and has stifled many a good man since. He turned the democracies of Greece into debasing tyrannies and established an empire on the ruins of the Roman Republic.

Wherever there is a political pull you will find the pull-itician. He congregates about the festering pustules of political patronage, worming and working his polluting way like a human maggot. When Hamlet said there was something rotten in the state of Denmark, he alluded to the work of the pull-itician. Shakespere spoke of him again in "King Lear:"

"Get thee glass eyes;
And like a scurvy politician seem
To see the things thou dost not see."

The pull-itician is an enthusiastic partisan, but he belongs to no political party. He says he does, but he doesn't. He knows no political convictions. It does not always pay, he thinks, to have convictions, and so, like Pilate, he washes his hands of the matter. He has no beliefs. It is easier to pretend than to believe, because it is then so much easier to change, and there are dollars to be made by the change—sometimes. He is an infidel, Pharisee and unctuous hypocrite. He praises of principles he can never know, and professes truths he can never feel. He may vote a Democratic ticket, or some other ticket; may hold office as a Republican, or as something else—but he is never the something he pretends to be, for he belongs alone to the party of Self, his soul is unalterably fixed upon boodle and pelf.—Speed Mosby, in Jefferson City Tribune.

FARMERS AND THE TRUST.

The farmers of America have continually sought to weaken or abolish all great concentration of capital. But it is a law that runs through all forms of life that no waste can permanently endure, and that form of life which first succeeds in eliminating waste is alone destined to survive. This process is often a slow and painful one and it may often seem that nature is extremely prodigal of her resources. But nature unaided, whether in the biological or social realm, works with extreme slowness but great certainty, and once that a certain form of waste has been abolished by the substitution of another organism or method accomplishing the same result with less energy, the old wasteful form is forever doomed. Now the trust is to industry as a whole what the machine is to the single establishment, a means of saving time and strength. Hence it is certain to survive and it becomes a question, not to how to abolish it, but how to use it.—A. M. Simons, in "The American Farmer."

CHILD SLAVES IN "FREE" AMERICA.

BY JOHN SPARGO, EDITOR OF THE "COMRADE"

With Illustrations by Ryan Walker and J. H. Morier.

GROWTH OF THE PROLETARIAT.

In all countries in which the capitalist system of production prevails, especially in such countries as the United States where capitalism has reached the point of production on a large scale, we find the population divided mainly into two classes; first, the capitalists, who take no part in production itself; and secondly, the wage-workers, the proletariat, who possess nothing but their labor power, on the sale of which they live, and whose labor alone brings forth the whole wealth of the land.

Capitalists need a large supply of proletarians; originally, in other countries and in ages gone by, forcible methods were resorted to, to furnish this requisite supply. To-day, however, in the United States especially, such methods are no longer needed. The superior power of capitalist production on a large scale over small production is to-day sufficient, without doing open violence to the law or to private property; but on the contrary, with the very assistance of these, year in year out to strip of all property a sufficient number of small farmers and industrialists, who are then thrown upon the streets, who merge with the mass of the proletariat, and who thereby satisfy the ever increasing capitalist demand for more human flesh.

That the number of the proletariat is steadily on the increase in this country is such a palpable fact that even they who would make us believe that society to-day rests upon the same basis that it did a hundred years ago, and who try to paint in rosy colors the picture of the small producer, no longer attempt to deny it. Indeed, a revolution has taken place in the make-up of society, the same as it has in the system of production. The capitalist form of production has overthrown all others and become the dominant one in the field of industry; similarly wage-labor is to-day the dominant form of labor; a hundred years ago the farming peasantry took the first place; later, the small city industrialists; to-day it is the wage-earner or proletariat.—Karl Kautsky, in "The Proletariat."

THE STRONG POINT OF THE OPPORTUNIST.

An opportunist is one who believes the way to accomplish results is to surrender to forces which oppose the realization of such results.

An opportunist is one who retreats before advancing and surrenders without making a fight.

An opportunist arms himself with his enemy's weapons and when the crisis is reached turns these weapons over to the enemy. He does this to defeat his enemy. He, the opportunist, is practical. He says so.

The opportunist says the only way to triumph is to fight for what you don't want. The proof that the opportunist is right is the fact that he never accomplishes anything.

If you want to know in advance what the opportunist will favor, just find out what is not good for him. He will at once beat a retreat to get this very thing.

If you want an opportunist to join you, work for your enemy, and the opportunist, perceiving that this is practical, will join you and stay with you as long as you are retreating, but if you attempt to advance or to put up a fight he will desert you—because he thinks it is practical to do the wrong thing.

One of the redeeming traits of the opportunist is his willingness to concede that those who do not agree with him are probably right and this is the only reason he ever has for opposing anyone—the fear that they are right.

All concede that the opportunist has some weaknesses, but he is especially strong in one thing—the capacity for misunderstanding.

Take away from the opportunist his weaknesses and his incapacity and there will be nothing left. Hence we say that his weaknesses and his incapacity are his strong points.

As a danger signal the opportunist is a priceless jewel.

If the opportunist has his way about it he will never die, and his only reason will be that he ought to do so.—D. Burgess, in Industrial Freedom.

THE UNION LABOR PARTY.

"What will be the attitude of the Socialist Party towards the new Union Labor Party which seems likely to develop a surprising strength in a number of states?" writes a correspondent.

Organized labor is rapidly arriving at the conclusion that independent political action can accomplish but little except along a strictly applied Socialist program. Before this new labor movement, which is growing rapidly, is very old, it will have developed to a point where it will be ready to join the Socialist movement, as witness the action of the Western Federation of Miners. I see the greatest encouragement in this awakening of the workers to the power of the ballot. It's a short step to the endorsement of the only principle which will emancipate them—that society collectively must own, operate and manage the machinery of production and distribution.—The Coming Nation.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I have been taking Ripans Tabules for six months and find myself so much improved that I can hardly realize myself to be the same person. For a year I had been complaining with my head and the loss of appetite. I had no desire to eat and suffered so severely with the sick headache and felt so tired that I found it hard to go to my work. The doctor told me I had what they called nervouse headache, and I would have to look for a quieter place to work. One day an old lady was telling about her grandson who was using Ripans. She gave me a box of them to try. I did so, with good results, and I never felt better in my life than I do now.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,000 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $4.00 and $2.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 25 working

QUESTION AND ANSWER.

Fred Long of Philadelphia Explains to an Inquiring Correspondent the Meaning of Socialism.

In the Philadelphia "New Era" we find a letter from a reader of that paper who protests that he can't find out what Socialism really is, together with a reply by Fred Long, which is so sound and clear that we present the correspondence in full.

The inquirer writes:

"When one looks over the industrial world to-day, one sees nothing but discontent—the capitalist discontented because his dividends are not larger, the workingman because his wages are not more.

"The Socialist, the Anarchist, the Single Taxer—all claim to have THE remedy. The interested 'unattached' onlooker says to himself:

"'Of the three, which is the one that has the real remedy, that will be best for all humanity, not for any one class?'

"Judging a tree by its fruit, the Anarchist remedy is ruled out, it is too bloody for the onlooker in question, he being a 'vegetarian.' So that it narrows to a choice between Socialism and Single Tax. Each has its merits, each its faults or defects.

"I must confess I really have no right to criticise Socialism because I don't know what it is. You go to one Socialist and ask him what to read and he gives you 'Equality.' The next day, perhaps, you pick up the 'International Socialist Review' and there you see the Socialism of 'Equality' spoken of very disparaging as 'Bellamyism.'

"What is one to do? Has each writer his following, so that you call yourselves 'Bellamyites,' etc., etc.?

"This is not meant for sarcasm, because I am very much in earnest. I think the industrial world is in a deplorable condition. The capitalist likes to see it so and is going to be gratified just as long as the workingmen are divided as they are to-day, into the Bellamyites, and etc."

To this pathetic appeal Comrade Long replies as follows:

"It is always a pleasure to me to find one earnestly interested in the social question, more especially one whose zone of influence may be wider than that of the average man, and so a double gratification is mine if happily I shall be able to throw some light upon the question outlined in this letter.

"It is the fate of the Socialist movement in common with all forward movements, to present to the inquiring onlooker characteristics that are puzzling and often contradictory. It could not be otherwise when the inquirer depends, as he often does, upon individual adherents for an interpretation of its phenomena. Until it shall be an indictable offense for a man to call himself a Socialist unless he is able to prove it, the Socialist of sane instincts and scientific understanding is in no more likely to be stumbled across first by the innocent inquirer than is the idiot who imagines that Socialism is a new religion, or the freak who has joined the movement in order to exploit his own patented scheme of social salvation. Indeed, the chances are against the aforementioned sane man. The freaks and idiots have the advantage to the extent that they are fittest in the point of pestiferous assurance, presumption and impudence.

"There is another self-styled Socialist who, innocently enough, causes the inquiring onlooker many a muddled thought and restless night. He is the sentimental person of superficial mind who has read a socialistic novel, set his stamp of approval upon the elaborated plan, and now vociferously demands that human Society shall adjust itself to the pattern made and provided, and govern itself accordingly at the earliest possible date, if not sooner. It is not a legitimate subject of wonder that this gentleman's 'Socialism' is of the puzzling kind, or that there are as many varieties of it as there are socialistic novels multiplied by the number of admiring readers.

"The 'Socialist who knows' does not present Socialism as a plan for the government of society which contains more 'good points' than does that of the other fellow. He considers the making of all such plans about as sensible as would be the arrangement of a new time-table for the stars. He presents his Socialism as a science—the science of social life and growth—the principles of which adhered to by all intelligent and representative Socialists the world over, constitute at once a true interpretation of the past and a sure prophecy of the future. He holds and proves that the method of wealth production and exchange, at any period in history is the real foundation of the social structure of that period, and is what in reality gives cast and character to all social political and religious institutions of that period. He holds and proves, further, that any change in the method of wealth production and exchange is bound to be followed by logical and consonant changes in the social structure and its institutions.

"This, in short, is is why he is a Socialist.

"He points out that during the last hundred years the method of producing wealth has almost completely changed—that individual production has been succeeded by social production—and he insists that the present anarchic and distressing social conditions are due to the fact that society has not as yet changed the social structure and its institutions to conform to the changes accomplished in the method of wealth production.

"It may be stated here parenthetically that as changes in the methods of production are made without any regard whatever for the good or evil effect upon the individual, the Socialist does not concern himself with the question of the 'good' or 'bad' nature of the inevitable consonant changes in the social structure. He leaves discussion on this line to the kindegartens.

"Upon the question of the nature of the coming change the Socialist is as explicit as science. No guesswork mars his uterances. He declares that as individual production is succeeded by social production, individual ownership shall be succeeded by social ownership.

"This brings me to the conclusion. The change to social ownership is considered a bad thing by the present possessing class, of course. It will come to be considered by the non-possessing class not only a god thing but a thing absolutely necessary to life and liberty. Between these two classes no class can stand as non-combatants and peacemakers. It is a clear-cut class war. As God is said to always be upon the side of the heaviest battalions, the outcome of this struggle may hardly be said to be within the realm of speculation."

Notice to Contributors.

Pledges should be drawn and checks and money orders made payable to the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association. All communications should be addressed to the Agent of the Association, Wm. Butscher, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

The Worker will contain, each week, a list of contributions received up to Monday preceding the date of issue.

If any contribution sent is not promptly acknowledged the sender should at once inform Comrade Butscher, that the matter may be investigated and set right.

Those who have made pledges should remember to send in the monthly instalments promptly, saving the trouble and expense of notifying them. Let each one feel his personal responsibility for the work we have undertaken and his power to hasten the coming of the Socialist Daily.

STATE CONSTITUTION.

of New York, and such as may hereafter be organized within said state.

3. Five persons or more within a town, city or village, in which no local of the party is in existence, may form a local of the SocialDemocratic Party upon declaring their adherence to the national and staet platforms and constitutions of the party.

4. Applications for the formation of such locals shall be made to the State Committee and shall be accompanied by a list of proposed members and an initiation fee of 10 cents for every member.

5. Each local shall send every three months a report of its numerical and financial condition, also its progress and prospects, and shall report the names and addresses of members in good standing and otherwise to the State Committee.

6. Locals shall adopt by-laws to govern their own procedure; but such by-laws shall not be in conflict with the national or state constitution.

7. Every local shall elect from its members the following officers: An organizer, a recording secretary, a financial secretary, a treasurer, a literature agent, and such other officers as it may deem fit. A member may hold two or more offices.

8. Should a protest be entered against the admission to a local of any applicant for membership, two-thirds of the members of the local voting shall be necessary to admit him or her.

9. Any person violating the laws or principles of the organization may be expelled by two-thirds of the voting members in good standing of the local of which he is a member; provided that all charges against such member shall be preferred in writing, and the accused shall be entitled to a fair trial. The person so accused, if dissatisfied with the decision of the local, may appeal to the State Committee. The action of the State Committee shall be final, unless appeal is made by the accused to a referendum vote.

A member may be suspended pending the vote on his expulsion. The local shall have the right to discipline its members for any other offense.

10. Each local shall hold a regular business meeting at least once a month.

11. In any local which is divided into two or more branches, all business of the local and dealings with the party's National and State Committees shall be carried on by a Central Committee, unless otherwise provided in its by-laws.

12. Not more than one charter shall be granted to any city or two, unless such city consists of more than one county.

13. Two or more locals located in one county shall form a County Committee; two or more locals located in one city shall form a City Executive Committee.

14. Members who have withheld payment of their dues for more than three months shall be suspended from all rights until they have fulfilled their obligations.

15. On application to their local, sick or unemployed members will be excused from payment of dues.

16. Upon the election of new officers locals shall immediately notify the State Committee, giving the names and addresses of said officers.

16. Under no circumstances shall any local organization co-operate with a capitalist political party or with any other political party; nor shall a local nominate any candidate for public office, who has not been a member of the party for at least six months, without the consent of the State Committee.

ARTICLE II.—ADMINISTRATION OF STATE ORGANIZATION.

1. The affairs of the state organization shall be conducted by the State Committee and by the general vote.

2. The State convention shall elect nine members residing in the city of New York to constitute the State Committee. They shall serve until the next convention.

3. The locals of the city of New York shall have the authority to fill vacancies in the State Committee, and the power of removal.

4. Any organized county may send at its own expense one delegate to the State Committee.

5. The State Committee shall elect a recording secretary, a corresponding and financial secretary, and a treasurer, and such other officers as the committee may deem proper.

6. The committee may compensate its officers from the treasury of the state organization.

7. It shall carry on and supervise the agitation and campaign work throughout the state.

8. It shall pass upon all applications for charters and forward same.

9. It shall distribute to the locals, at the price of ten cents each, monthly due stamps furnished by the N. E. C.

10. It shall furnish to the locals quarter-annual report blanks.

11. It shall call the state convention.

12. It shall make a report of its work together with its receipts and expenditures to the state convention.

13. Locals of the city of New York shall elect a committee of three to audit semi-annually the books of the State Committee.

14. In case of conflict between any provision of this constitution and the National constitution the latter shall take precedence.

ARTICLE III.—STATE CONVENTIONS.

1. Regular state conventions shall be held in all years when a governor of the state is to be elected.

2. Special conventions may be called whenever decided upon by a general vote. The question of calling a special state convention may be submitted to a general vote by the State Committee or upon the demand of any three locals located in three different counties.

3. At the sate conventions the representation shall be by counties, each county being entitled to one delegate, and one additional delegate for every fifty members or major fraction thereof.

ARTICLE IV.—AMENDMENTS.

Any amendment of this constitution and any other matter requiring the action of the membership of the state, shall be submitted to a general vote upon motion of the State Committee or upon demand of at least three locals located in three different counties.

RESOLUTION.

Resolved, That the Social Democratic Party considers religion to be a matter of personal opinion.

GREETING FROM CUBA.

Stevedores' Union of Havana Sends a Fraternal Message to the Worker and Its Readers.

The Worker has received the following gratifying letter from the Stevedores' Union of Havana, Cuba:

"To the Editor of The Worker:

"Dear Sir—Permit us as sympathizers in the grand work you are doing in your publication—defender of justice, defender of the rights of the workers—to wish you the greatest success.

"We take this opportunity of thanking you and all our other friends for your defense of our rights as fellow workingmen and the honor and glory of our country.

"Our great trouble has been to have to do with people without conscience, who are only interested in their being benefited, without thought of the workers who suffer for their aggrandizement.

"Respectfully and fraternally yours,

"Pedro Roca é Ibarra, President.
"Jose Taboada y Lastra, Treasurer.
"Nemecio Puig de Cárdenas, Auditor.
"Octavio Fuentes y Torralbas, Secretary.
"Miguel Argudin, Assistant Secretary.
"Santiago Diaz, Supervisor."

To the Stevedores' Union and to all the workingmen of the new republic, The Worker extends its greeting and, on behalf of the Socialists of the United States, the assurance of our sympathy in their struggles and our fraternal regard.

CURRAN FOR PARLIAMENT.

Thousands of American Socialists and trade unionists will remember Pete Curran, our English comrade who came here two years ago as fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention and made an extensive tour, speaking for the unions and for the party.

It is announced in London "Justice" that Comrade Curran will be nominated for Parliament by the Socialist and Labor organizations of Jarrow. Curran would be an excellent representative of the working class in the House of Commons and his election is to be hoped for.

MACHINISTS WILL DISCUSS SOCIALISM.

District 15, I. A. of M., Decides That Party Platform Shall be Read and Question of Endorsement Considered in All Lodges.

The District Council of District 15, International Association of Machinists, has decided that the platform of the Socialist Party (or Social Democratic Party, as it is called in New York), shall be read and discussed in all lodges and a referendum vote taken on the question whether or not the union shall formally endorse and support the party.

District 15 embraces all of Greater New York, Westchester County, up to Tarrytown, and the neighboring part of New Jersey as far as Paterson, and includes about six thousand members.

The action of the District Council marks a great advance. Three years ago, although there were already many Socialists among the machinists, there were only a few lodges in which the party could get a hearing. But the machinists, like other trade unionists, are coming to realize that independent political action by the working class on Socialist lines is absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of the object for which the unions are organized.

Whether the proposition to endorse the party is carried or defeated is a matter of minor importance. The important thing is that the principles and purposes of the party are to be presented in the unions and discussed, so that the members will be able to consider them and decide how to vote.

CONVENTION OF PIANO WORKERS.

Union Growing, But Still Has Great Tasks to Perform.

The fourth annual convention of the Piano and Organ Workers' International Union was opened last Monday at Bohemian National Hall, 321 E. Seventy-third street. George McVey of the Central Federated Union, Henry Meyer and H. Bergham of the Joint Executive Board of the New York unions, welcomed the delegates, and President Helle made an appropriate response. Twenty-five delegates were present.

The reports of President Helle and Organizer Dold showed that the Union is steadily growing in numbers and in strength. Several important strikes have been won during the last year, while one lockout is still unsettled. The Oragnizer recommended amendments to the laws of the union whereby more speedy action could be taken in such matters when occasion arose.

The union has a label, which is used by six Chicago manufacturers. Organizer Dold recommended a vigorous agitation for the label as a means of strengthening the Union's position.

The Union has, as yet, no general standard work-day, though in some places—as Boston and Chicago—the locals have established a nine-hour or eight-hour day. It was urged that a concerted effort should be made to fix nine hours as the maximum for the whole trade.

Organizer Dold also spoke strongly against the contract system, as responsible for many of the abuses prevailing. The system gives to the unscrupulous contractor the greatest advantage and breaks up the fraternal relations of the workers.

Several amendments to the constitution were adopted, among them one providing for biennial conventions in the future.

ANOTHER SIGN OF LABOR'S PROGRESS.

The Iowa State Federation of Labor is another body that has wheeled into line with the progressive wing of the labor movement. The following resolution was adopted at the recent convention in Cedar Rapids:

"We believe that those who do the nation's work are the producers and distributors of wealth of the country. They constitute the majority, and consequently can secure whatever legislation they want whenever they are willing to study those laws that affect their interests and decide to enact such laws by means of direct legislation, or by sending men from their own class to the halls of Congress, and the state Legislatures, instead of men who have never framed any laws but those that produce panics, which they afterward attribute to over-production and like excuses.

"We believe that the true remedy for our industrial evils is the public ownership and control of all the means of production and distribution, viz., all public utilities.

"Under such a system the people would own the land, the tools and machinery on which and with which they work, they would have a voice in the management of all industries, and could make the necessary laws to govern them, and would then receive the full product of their toil."

In the Minnesota State Federation convention a resolution on similar lines was barely defeated.

THE OPPRESSION OF CUSTOM.

We suffer much from the tyranny of majorities, the oppression of custom, the gregarious instinct of commonplace and timid persons. True culture tends to the differentiation of individualities, by enabling people to find out what they are made for, what they can do best, what their deepest self requires for its accomplishment. True culture is never in a condescending attitude. It knows that no kind of power, however trivial, ought to be regarded with contempt. People who carve cherrystones, dance ballet, turn rondeaux, are as much needed as those who till the soil, construct cabinets or fabricate new theories about the universe. True culture respects hand labor upon equal terms with brain labor, the mechanic with the inventor of machinery, the critic of poetry with the singer of poems, the actor with the playwright. The world wants all sorts and wants each sort to be of the best quality.

Culture is not an end in itself. It prepares a man for life, for work, for action, for the reception and emission of ideas. Life itself is larger than education, than art, than science. Life does not exist for them but they for life.—John Addington Symonds.

MINE-OWNERS' THRIFT.

To Cover Loss From Disaster Caused by Their Criminal "Frugality," They Would Compel Miners to Greater "Industry."

It will be remembered that within a few days of the coal mine disaster at Fraterville, Tenn., six weeks ago, there was a similar "accident" at Fernie, B. C., in which one hundred and forty men and boys were killed, as a result of the criminal economy of the company.

The "Socialist" of Seattle, Wash., now prints a letter from the miners' organization at Fernie—Gladstone Union No. 76, W. F. of M.—showing that the company is trying to make up its loss in that disaster by exploiting its new employees a little more completely. The letter says in part:

"Another blow is being struck at those who so recently have lost their comrades. It has been the rule at these mines, since their being opened up and managed by four consecutive managers, that eight hours from bank to bank constitute a day's work. There has been no apparent disagreement between employer and employees on this question until the advent of Mr. Tonkin, late from Pennsylvania, the new general manager, who has, without consulting or notifying the employees, ordered that the men must work eight hours at the coal face and not as before, eight hours from bank to bank. To some of the men this would mean practically a nine-hour day, in other words, nine hours from bank to bank. This course of action is apparently an endeavor to establish a precedent not in vogue in any part of British Columbia."

The Union has resolved to resist any such infringement of the eight-hour rule.

The capitalists tell us they have made their fortunes by "thrift," by industry and frugality." It is true. The capitalists in the coal-mining business are as frugal as they dare be in the matter of ventilation, timbering, etc. And when they occasionally lose by carrying this sort of frugality to excess, they recoup themselves by requiring increased industry from their employees.

READ THIS WARNING.

To Workingmen: Advertisements are being run in hundreds of Eastern newspapers for the purpose of inducing carpenters, bench hands, millmen, machinemen, lathers, plasterers, hodcarriers, and in fact, mechanics of all kinds, to come to Los Angeles, where they are promised steady work at big pay.

In conjunction with these advertisements, circular letters are being sent broadcast, in the hope of getting men to come here in order to disrupt the unions of this city and to break a strike which is being waged against several planing mills, not yet quite

Many of the merchants and manufacturers of this city have organized themselves into an Employers' Association, for the purpose of destroying organized Labor. This Employers' Association hopes to so flood Los Angeles with workingmen that the struggle for jobs will be so keen it will result in the disruption of the unions and consequently reduce the wage scale now being paid.

The mouth-piece of this secret organization is the notorious scab Los Angeles "Times." This infamous newspaper is engaged in a bitter fight with the Los Angeles County Council of Labor and the International Typographical Union, and hopes, by aiding the Employers' Association, to break up the unions of this city and thereby save itself from destruction.

The advertisements and circulars being sent out by the Employers' Association are full of lies and misrepresentations. Do not be deceived by them.

Help us circulate this warning by furnishing same to your local newspapers.

MARX AND FOURIER.

Karl Marx's masterly analysis of the capitalist system, which only stands out as the more admirable by the utter failure of third-rate professors and publicists to pick holes in it, has secured for him such a position in the world of thought and in the history of economics that it is quite unnecessary to claim for him anything more than what he has so splendidly done. It is safe to say that his great work must be the basis for all future writers who wish to achieve permanent distinction in the field which he made his own. That is becoming more and more obvious every day; even the "Times," the leading capitalist journal of the world, having, as we pointed out last week, accepted and enforced the truth of Marx's theories of history and economic development. But all this being so, and Marx's pre-eminence being now unquestioned except by the ignorant or the more than ignorant half-learned, we somewhat regret the habit which Socialists have got into of talking and writing as if Marx had no predecessors. This is a mistake which he himself took good care never to make. True, he knew that he had made discoveries and that coming at the period he did he had been able to do really original work. But that did not lessen his admiration and appreciation of St. Simon, Robert Owen, and Fourier, as well as others. Now, it so happens that the first clear prognostication of the inevitable development of competitive capitalism into monopoly as an economic and social law was first made by Fourier at the time when Marx was six years old. He expressed himself quite unmistakably on this head, and his forecast, regard being had to the comparatively small development of capitalist industrialism in 1824, is almost worthy to be put side by side with Aristotle's famous dictum, "Slavery can never be abolished; except, perhaps, by the help of machines." The failure of Fourier's phalanstery projects and the miscarriage of his disciple, Victor Considérant's, experiments in America have blinded many men to his genius. But this forecast of his has been referred to before several times in the S. D. F. —London Justice.

THE "GO SLOW" POLICY.

Much is being continually written and spoken in condemnation of the workers and their supposed policy of "go slow." We say "supposed" advisedly, as there is little doubt that the statements made in this connection are grossly exaggerated, but even if they were not, they can be defended. The employers claim the right to do as they like with what they call their own, which they interpret most generously. They not only claim to employ whom they like, and dictate the conditions under which those employed shall work, but they also employ them when they like—full, half, or quarter time, as they think fit, and no one has a word to say against this worse than "go slow" system. Sufficient if the employers state that the market is glutted or some such statement, and the output must for a time be restricted, through the restriction may mean the semi-starvation of hundreds and thousands of human beings, which the "go slow" of the workers can never mean. This is legitimate business?—The Alert, Australia.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of prodiction and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

Non-Partizan Federation Fails to Catch the Painters.

Local Union No. 499 Advises Its Members to Vote Social Democratic Ticket—Some Account of an Imbecile Scheme Tried by Old Party Politicians.

To the Editor of The Worker:

In compliance with the request of the National Federation for Majority Rule to report to the official press, etc., the action taken by Local Union No. 499 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America on the majority rule resolution, dated June 25, we are instructed to inform you that L. U. No. 499, at its meeting of July 7, decided to urge its members to vote only for the candidates of the Socialist Party—known in New York as the Social Democratic Party.

That party will, if put in power, give the workingmen more than the referendum and initiative. That party will see to it that the working class, which produces all, receives the full amount of the product it creates. This once accomplished, bossism, corruption, crime, and prostitution will be things of the past and freedom and happiness will take their place.

We are fraternally yours.

L. SANDERMANN, President.

A Funny Federation.

The foregoing communication reports action taken on a circular which is being sent out to trade unions and many other organizations by a body known as the Non-Partizan Federation for Majority Rule, of which some account was given in The Worker of April 6, when the Central Labor Union of Toledo, O., after exhaustive discussion of the affair, "turned it down hard."

The Non-Partizan Federation is, in fact, nothing more nor less than a scheme for blocking independent political action of the working class, taking advantage of the wide-spread sentiment in favor of direct legislation and "non-partizanly" turning it to the advantage of the Democratic party.

Its Theory and Practise.

The promoters of the Federation—among whom are George H. Shibley, Elmer Ellsworth Pomeroy, Frank Parsons, and Samuel M. Jones—profess to be devoted to the regeneration of politics by introducing truly democratic methods and establishing majority rule. How far they are from applying democratic methods in the organization itself, how completely it follows the lines of old-party machine work, can be judged from a few extracts from one of the circulars sent out by the apparently self-elected Advisory Board.

This circular, sent out some months ago, to a selected list of local labor leaders, suggested in its first paragraph that "you and a few friends can easily start in your city a movement that will at once establish majority rule and, in addition, will be heralded throughout the state and nation as a victory for organized labor." As a further incentive, lest the recipient of the circular should not be sufficiently eager to work for a movement that would be falsely "heralded" in this fashion, it is explained toward the close, that the Advisory Board will contribute financially toward the expense of starting the local movement and that "the success of the organization WILL PLACE THE ORGANIZER IN LINE FOR TRADE-UNION AND POLITICAL HONORS, as well as being a personal satisfaction."

Of course this movement for majority rule is not to be started by an appeal to the majority. Things are to be fixed first by the gentlemen who want to be "in line for political honors," from Messrs. Shibley, Pomeroy, and friends down, and then the innocent public are to be let in. The circular explains:

"A few of you can get together and adopt the constitution. * * * Then elect an executive committee. The Executive Committee will then elect a chairman, secretary, and treasurer, and name an advisory board. Then you are ready to begin the work." After thus getting all the offices in their own hands, the "few" are to invite the "many," regardless of political faith, to come in and be good.

Even Suckers Will Not Bite.

Such a bare-faced scheme as this will not, of course, do much harm. The successful politicians of the old parties know how to preserve the appearance of democratic methods. The political failures who have launched this Federation cannot even do that. They "give the game away" at the outset. The importance of the whole affair is only as a symptom of the imbecility of the Democratic party and especially of the alleged radical elements in it—for most of the prominent promoters of the Non-Partizan Federation are active in that party.

The workingmen will not, to any great extent, bite at such a poorly baited hook. Those who still play the part of suckers will be caught by the out-and-out politicans of the old parties, who know how to do the trick properly. The workingmen who have learned to think for themselves will come to the Socialist Party, because it both advocates and practises majority rule and has a definite and progressive program besides.

GUILT OF THE MINE OWNERS.

Violations of Law by Cambria Steel Co.

Mine Not Properly Ventilated and Inexperienced Men and Little Boys Employed—All for the Sake of Profits—Company's "Generosity" Paid for by the Men.

As the facts in regard to the disaster in the Cambria Steel Company's coal mine at Johnstown, Pa., become fully known the guilt of the capitalists becomes more evident and more appalling.

The company's apologists lay the blame on one of the miners—"an ignorant Slav," they say—who worked with a naked lamp. Even though this be true, it fixes the responsibility directly on the company, for under the laws of Pennsylvania they have no right to employ a man as a miner until he has served two years as a helper or in some capacity to gain experience.

This law is almost a dead letter, however, for the mine owners find it cheaper and therefore more profitable in many cases to employ ignorant miners, and the Republican and Democratic authorities have never made more than a farcical pretense of enforcing the law—for they depend on the capitalists for their political corruption funds.

Danger Was Foreseen.

But furthermore, it has developed that for some days before the so-called "accident" the dangerous condition of the portion of the mine in which the explosion actually occurred had been known to the miners and called to the bosses' attention. The ventilation was known to be insufficient to remove the gas pouring in.

With the miners it was a question of taking the risk of instant death or, by refusing to work, incurring the displeasure of the bosses and forfeiting their only means of livelihood. With the company it was a question of saving a little on the running expenses of the mine to add to the stockholders' dividends. The company chose to let the miners risk their lives, and the state inspectors winked at this violation of the law also.

Little Boys Killed.

Among the victims were a number of little boys, one of them only seven years of age. The employment of children in the mines is forbidden by law. But the mine owners find it profitable to employ them, and the poverty and dependence of the miners makes it almost impossible for them to refuse to send their sons to work. Here, again, it is a question of profits against law and humanity with the "operators" and a question of life and death with the workers. And here, against, the state officials utterly neglected their duty.

The Company's "Generosity."

The company has made a great ado about providing for the families of the murdered miners and has got much credit for generosity through the capitalist press. The New Castle "Tribune" gives facts that throw quite a new light on this matter. The "Tribune" says:

"The newspapers of the country have been saying a great deal about the magnanimity of the Cambria Steel Company in announcing that the family of each victim would receive a thousand dollars for the life of the loved one. What a wonderful piece of charity! It does not cost the Cambria Steel Company a cent. The victims paid for it. Have been paying for it for years and the company has been accumulating a fund, hundreds of thousands of dollars in excess of what will be required for this display of magnanimity, out of the monthly payments of these men.

Employees Pay for It.

"Every man employed by the Cambria Steel Company is compelled to join the Cambria Mutual Benefit Association. He cannot work there unless he does. Members under forty-five years of age pay 90 cents per month out of their earnings. From forty-five to fifty-five they pay $1.15 per month. In case of sickness or injury they receive $5 per week. If cared for in the company's hospital this sum goes to the hospital, none of it to their families. A burial fund of $100 is also paid. If killed in the company's employ or going to or from their work their families receive one thousand dollars. In consideration of the fact that EACH EMPLOYEE IS COMPELLED TO SIGN A RELEASE from any damages he might sustain in the company's service, the company pays about $5,000 a year into this 'mutual' benefit fund.

"There is no magnanimity about this thousand dollar payment. It is a dead cold business proposition. The benefit fund has accumulated until it amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is held and invested by the company, which reaps all the interest or dividends accruing from this investment. Yet the Pittsburg papers applaud this magnanimous act and say that it is because of such treatment of its employees that the company never suffers from damage suits. THE CAMBRIA STEEL COMPANY NEVER SUFFERS FROM DAMAGE SUITS BECAUSE IT COMPELS EVERY MAN AND BOY ENTERING ITS EMPLOY TO SIGN AWAY HIS RIGHTS TO ANY DAMAGES RESULTING FROM HIS EMPLOYMENT AND IN EXCHANGE GIVES HIM INSURANCE WHICH HE PAYS FOR, AND PAYS AN ENORMOUS PRICE."

The reader may ask, What would Socialist officials do in regard to such affairs as this?

If the Socialist Party were put in full power, the coal mines, steel mills, and other means of production would become public property, under the control of the workers, to be operated for public benefit, not for profit, and the incentive to such crimes as the Cambria Steel Company has been guilty of would be removed.

But even though the Socialist Party were not fully in power, Socialist officials could and would do much to improve the condition of the workers.

Socialist judges, for instance, would not recognize as legal or valid a contract by which the miner signs away, for himself and his heirs, the right to sue for damages in case of injury or death at his work.

Socialist coroners, district attorneys, and judges would use all the power of the law to bring the guilty capitalists to punishment for such a crime as that of Johnstown. The hanging or even life imprisonment of half-a-dozen directors and company officials who have sacrificed miners' lives for profit would be a salutary lesson and would no doubt save hundreds of workmen's lives every year in the state of Pennsylvania alone.

A Socialist administration would appoint trusty union miners as mine inspectors, and they would see to the prevention of such disasters, and Socialist sheriffs and district attorneys and judges would uphold them in their efforts.

Socialist legislators, even if in the minority, would fight for such an amendment of the laws in regard to ventilation of mines, employment of children and inexperienced men, responsibility of employers, etc., as would make it possible to enforce those laws and difficult to evade them—whereas the laws as they now stand, enacted by Republican and Democratic legislators, have been carefully drafted by capitalist agents so as to make enforcement difficult and evasion easy.

Responsible to Workers Only.

Socialist officials would do these things because they would be workingmen, nominated by workingmen on a workingmen's platform, and elected by the efforts of workingmen's organizations. For a similar reason, Republican and Democratic officials do not try to protect the workingmen's interests—because they are generally lawyers, business men, or professional politicians, nominated by capitalist influence on platforms recognizing the superiority of the so-called "sacred rights of property," and owing their election to campaign funds provided by the capitalists.

Officials may generally be counted upon to serve the interests of the class to whom they actually owe their election.

EXPLOITING BABIES.

The trade unionists of the South are taking up the child labor question in earnest. They are making bitter attacks through the newspaper and from the rostrum upon the heartless corporations who, upon one hypocritical pretext or another, succeeded in robbing the cradle. One unionist in Macon, Ga., writes that he is employed in a mill in which the bosses hire babies who are "still too young to go to school." He placed one of the six-year-old tots on the scales, and she weighed 40½ pounds. She holds a regular position as a spinner and works from 6 a. m. till 6 p. m. with forty minutes for lunch. The child does not know how much wages she receives, as her mother, who also works in the mill, draws her pay. "Her father stayed at home and cooked and brought the dinner." The average life of the factory child, says the writer, "runs from the cradle to twenty-five years." Humanitarians are anxiously aiming to provide for sick poodles and cats, but they don't seem to care much when the flesh and bones of innocent babes are ground into profits. Let us hope that the Southern trade unionists will continue their agitation against the capitalistic cannibals and advertise their hideous conduct to the world. Fight them politically and industrially. It is too much to hope in this practical age that the outraged gods will hurl thunderbolts and drive the exploiters into the bottomless pit of hades.—Zanesville Labor Journal.

Yes, that is too much to hope. It is also too much to hope that mere trade unionism will put a stop to such profitable crimes. But political action on Socialist lines would do it, quick.

THE NEW TIME.

There shall come, from out this noise of strife and groaning,
A broader and a juster brotherhood,
A deep equality of aim, postponing
All selfish seeking to the general good;
There shall come a time when each shall to another
Be as Christ would have him, brother unto brother;
There shall come a time when brotherhood grows stronger
Than the narrow bounds which now distract the world;
When the cannons roar and trumpets
blare no longer,
And the ironclad rusts and battle-flags
are furled;
When the bars of creed and speech and race, which sever,
Shall be fused in one humanity forever.

—Lewis Morris.

A NEW PSALM OF LIFE.

Let us then be up and doing,
All becoming money kings;
We may some day be endowing
Universities and things.

Lives of billionaires remind us
That we've got to own the stock
If we want to leave behind us
Libraries on every block.

THE PRESS ON THE STRIKE.

Capitalist Dailies Help Coal Kings.

"Respectable" Papers Editorially Advise Use of Militia—"Yellow" Press Editorially Supports Strikers, but Works Shrewdly Through News Columns to Injure Them.

The miners' convention has come and gone. The thousand delegates at Indianapolis decided against the proposed general strike and voted instead for liberal financial assistance to their brothers on strike. Despite widely bruited rumors to the contrary, there is no reason to believe that there was any serious friction or lack of harmony.

Comrade C. F. Quinn of Wilkes Barre, Socialist candidate for Congress in the Luzerne district, writes to The Worker that the action taken by the convention is considered a wise one and that there is no sign of weakening among the strikers. He adds:

"Already the minions of capitalism have begun their work of poisoning the minds of the strikers regarding the manner of distributing the relief fund. With unspeakable cowardice they go about, throwing forth insinuations and intimating probable crookedness on the part of the miners' officials who may handle the funds. This is an old game and a contemptible one, but it won't work now. Every miner has implicit confidence in John Mitchell and the hand of men associated with him in this strike, and they will not be beguiled into suspicion or uneasiness by knaves or traitors."

The most remarkable development of the week is the attitude of the distinctly capitalist press on learning the result of the convention. The great New York dailies, of course, most clearly show the capitalist policy.

The Respectable "Post".

The New York "Evening Post" is a paper whose utterances are always significant. A three-cent paper, it circulates chiefly among the more "cultured" portion of the capitalist class. It is a strictly "respectable" and non-partizan advocate of free-trade, anti-imperialism, gold standard, and civil service reform, and represents the relatively more decent side of capitalism.

This paper published a long editorial on the second day of the convention. Two-thirds of the article was devoted to rejoicing that the convention had decided against the sympathetic strike, arguing against such strikes as a matter of principle, and praising the Mine Workers' Union for its "sane" and "moderate" policy. The concluding portion was addressed to the "operators" and advised them—nay, enjoined them as a matter of "duty to the public"—to start their mines with non-union men, and to call upon Governor Stone for militia if necessary.

Evidently respectable and humane anti-imperialist "public sentiment," as represented by the "Post," will not give the miners much aid.

The Businesslike "Times".

The "Times"—which, in the decadence of the "Sun" since the elder Dana's death, has become the leading exponent of brutally aggressive and militant capitalism, and which is nominally Democratic, but supports the imperialist policy—the "Times" came out on Saturday with a carefully written editorial, rejoicing over the decision against the general strike, but savagely attacking the union, accusing President Mitchell of all conceivable duplicity, and declaring that the strike is lost. The "Times" has, all along, been shrieking to the operators, "Mine coal, mine coal, mine coal!" and advising them to use the militia.

Evidently the "public opinion" of the average business man, the class to which the "Times" appeals, will not help the miners much.

The "Yellow" Press.

Of course, the only "public opinion" that is worth anything to the miners is the opinion of the working class. And a shrewd attempt is being made through the so-called "yellow" papers, which are read largely by workingmen, to alienate them from the strikers.

The "Journal" and "World" editorially support the strikers and attack the Coal Kings. The Coal Kings can stand this, and it makes a good campaign record for their Democratic friends. Their work is being done in the news columns of these same papers.

Every day articles are printed, under big scare heads, to prove that the cost of the strike is being paid by "the public"—whatever that is—and that the Coal Trust is losing nothing by it.

There is, of course, an element of truth in this statement. It is one of those half-truths which are worse than whole lies. But the motive of the publication of such articles at this moment is evident. If the working people at large can be made to believe that they are paying the cost of the strike (which is not true), that the mine owners are losing nothing (which is an exaggeration of the truth), and that the strike is a hopeless one—then they will withdraw their support from the strikers and make it easier for the Coal Kings to crush them.

This is the game, and it has often been played before. It will not succeed so well now as in past years. The working people learn slowly, but they do learn.

—The capitalist is the law. Lawgivers grind out laws according to his needs; philosophers fit morals to his habits; whatever he does is just and good; every act that injures his interests is a crime and must be punished.—Lafargue.

THE TRIAL OF MOTHER JONES.

Federal District Attorney Declares Her a Dangerous Woman.

Decision Not Yet Given as The Worker Goes to Press—Vigorous Effort to Imprison or Banish Brave Woman from West Virginia.

Tuesday, July 24, was the day set for Judge Jackson of the United State court at Parkersburg, W. Va., to give his decision in the cases of Mother Jones, Thos. Haggerty, and eleven other organizers of the United Mine Workers, under arrest for having violated an infamous injunction which forbids them to hold miners' meetings anywhere within sight of the mine properties, to march on the public roads in the vicinity, or, as a correspondent of The Worker put it, to do anything except eat and drink—and the West Virginia miners don't get a chance to eat too much, with or without injunctions.

Reese Blizzard, United States District Attorney, conducted the prosecution. He is counted a very able lawyer and he used all his powers to carry his point—or, rather, to carry the point for the mine owners. His closing speech occupied four hours.

Cannot Understand Her.

Mother Jones is obviously considered the most dangerous offender. The "operators" and their tools cannot understand this wonderful little woman, who is content to labor incessantly, to go hungry and cold sometimes, to endure all manner of hardships and insults and dangers, to go to prison, if need be, in order to carry on her work of organizing and educating and inspiring the miners, and whom the roughest men among the mine workers treat with such confidence and such perfect respect.

"A Dangerous Woman."

The press reports say that Blizzard called attention to the fact that Mother Jones was especially dangerous owing to the fact that her influence among the miners is almost unlimited and that, also by reason of her powerful intellect she is an instrument of great harm. The miners, he said, are receiving good wages and their condition is satisfactory, but, according to the testimony of this woman, she has come into this state with the express intention of getting eight or nine thousand miners to throw down their tools and quit work that they may help the two or three hundred who were dissatisfied with their condition and had quit the service of their employers.

After dilating on the enormity of Mother Jones' guilt, he closed by suggesting that if she would leave the state and promise never to return, the government would be satisfied for the present and would not insist on imprisoning her.

Mother Jones, of course, treated this exhibition of Southern chivalry and Rooseveltian strenuousness with the contempt is deserved. She is not the sort of woman to desert her post under fire.

Judge Tries to Entrap Her.

Judge Jackson himself, the trial justice, took a hand in the examination of Mother Jones and tried, by leading questions, to entrap her into an admission that she was an Anarchist, but he did not succeed very well.

When asked if she had not said that the operators were the same sort of people that had crucified Christ, the witness replied that she had made such a remark.

"Well," questioned Judge Blizzard, "do you not think that the crucifixion of Christ was the worst crime ever committed?"

"No," answered the witness in loud tones, "it was not nearly so bad as the crucifixion of little boys in the coal mines who are daily being robbed of their manhood and their intellect by what they are, through necessity, compelled to undergo. Christ could have saved himself, the boys cannot."

Even the flippant reporters of the capitalist papers, all whose sympathies seem to be with the "operators," were evidently impressed with her courage and dignity.

As The Worker goes to press, the decision has not been rendered, and it is impossible to guess the outcome of the case.

SOCIALISTS ARRESTED.

Speaking on the Streets Is Their Crime.

Buffalo Police, Inspired by the Clergy, Attempt to Suppress Socialist Propaganda—Six Workingmen Fined.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 21.—The Social Democratic Club held a very well attended meeting yesterday to consider plans for spreading the principles of Socialism. The Socialists here have a difficult task before them.

The police, under the influence of the clergy, have arrested several of our men for speaking in the open air and six of our comrades have been fined $5 each for this heinous offense.

Our street meetings were very successful and people were eager to listen to our speakers. That is probably the reason why we have been forbidden to hold open-air meetings any more. But the matter is not settled yet. We will fight for our rights as American citizens.

All readers of The Worker are requested to help us in the struggle. One way in which they can all assist is by co-operating to make a good success of our excursion on August 24. Tickets cost 25 cents and can be had of B. Schaffer, 124 William street, or at the next meeting of the Club, Sunday, 3 p. m., at 435 William street. The object of the excursion is to swell the campaign fund. As many tickets as possible should be sold in advance. Prizes will be given to the two persons selling the largest number of tickets, not less than seventy-five.

LABOR EDITORS UNDER ARREST.

Citizens' Alliance of Wilkes Barre Persecuting Those Who Speak for Labor.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., July 19.—On Wednesday last, Charles J. Thain and John R. Mullery, editor and business manager of the Wilkes Barre "Courier-Herald," the local labor paper, were arrested on charges of criminal libel and brought before Justice Pollock.

The charges were brought in the names of twenty-two employees of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, one of the largest of the Coal Trust roads. The twenty-two complainants are, of course, mere catspaws for the Trust.

The "Courier-Herald" has severely attacked the Citizens' Alliance, of which Comrade Mailly wrote in The Worker of July 13. The "Citizens" undoubtedly hoped to suppress the paper by this prosecution, but have failed.

Thain and Mullery waived examination and had the case continued to court. Bail for each of them was fixed at the enormous sum of $11,000—$500 on each case—in the hope, no doubt, that they could not get anybody to give bond and could be kept in prison. Bail was furnished, however, by Messrs. Corrigan and Gilligan and the "Courier-Herald" comes out this week as usual, scoring the "Citizens" and defying them to bring more prosecutions.

The "Courier-Herald" is not a Socialist paper, but has shown strong Socialist tendencies.

ECONOMY AND ECONOMY.

Socialist Councilman Objects to Raising an Official's Salary to $10 a Day When Laborers' Wages Are Cut to $1.75.

John W. Slayton, Socialist member of the Select Council of New Castle, Pa., disturbed the peace of mind of the "eminently respectable" inhabitants of that city last week. It remains to be seen at the fall election—Comrade Slayton being candidate for Governor—whether the majority of the people of New Castle, who are eminently useful but not eminently respectable, appreciate the position he took.

There was a proposition before the Council to employ a physician to attend the smallpox patients in the City Hospital. The Health Committee recommended that the City Physician be paid $10 a day for the work. His predecessor had received $8 a day.

Comrade Slayton called attention to the fact that the Council had just refused to pay $2 a day to the men who work at the garbage furnace, on the ground of public economy, and had fixed their wages at $1.75. Councilman Slayton expressed the opinion that the task of the garbage furnace workers was harder, more unpleasant, and at least as dangerous as that of the City Physician. If the capitalist members of the Council thought that the city was too poor to pay these men $2 a day, he, as a Socialist member, did not think it rich enough to pay the City Physician $10 a day.

Of course, the proposition went through, for Slayton is the only representative of Labor in the Council.

WHAT COUNTS.

"We are here," began the chairman of the committee, "to discuss ways and means for securing the passage of our bill by the legislature."

"Well," remarked one who was something of a lobbyist. "I know the surest of all ways is we only have sufficient means."—Philadelphia Press.

TO THE PENNSYLVANIA MINERS.--II

A Further Talk about Labor and Politics, with Especial Regard to Partizanship and "Good Men"—Which Talk Fits Equally Well for Workingmen of Any Trade in Any State.

Last week, in this column, we gave reasons why you striking miners of Pennsylvania, and all other workingmen, should vote for candidates of the Socialist Party. This week we would add some reasons why you should vote the Socialist ticket STRAIGHT, why you should not vote for a candidate of either of the other parties, EVEN THOUGH THE SOCIALIST PARTY MAY NOT HAVE FULL TICKETS IN SOME PLACES AND EVEN THOUGH SOME OF THE REPUBLICAN OR DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES MAY BE PERSONALLY GOOD MEN.

This may seem to you to be partizan bigotry. It is not. It is partizanship. But it is not bigotry. It is sound common sense in politics.

The capitalist parties sometimes nominate good men for unimportant offices. They sometimes nominate workingmen for unimportant offices. They very seldom nominate good workingmen, but even that may happen once in a while. But even then, a vote cast for such a candidate will be a vote cast for the capitalist class.

No candidate is really any better than the party that nominates him. No official is better than the party that elects him. He is seldom worse than his party. The quality of the man is a minor matter; the quality of the party is the important thing.

We sometimes hear of a man who has been elected to office betraying his trust. In fact, that is very rare. An official who is false to the power that put him in office commits political suicide. Officials, whether personally good or bad men, are almost always true to those to whom they actually owe their positions. Even a dishonest man, put in office by a true workingman's party, will probably be true to the workingmen, unless he is a great fool as well as a knave. And even an honest man, put in office by a capitalist party, has to do the bidding of the capitalist class or dig his own grave.

Perhaps, in a few cases, some good true fellow workingman of yours will be nominated for a minor position by the Republican party. He has never thought of politics in connection with the labor question. In his union he is true to his class; but it has never occurred to him that his class has any distinct political interest.

He knows that he does not owe his nomination on the Republican ticket to you. To whom does he owe it? He knows, and you know. He owes it to Matt Quay.

The Quay machine does not stop with dictating the nominations for Governor and other state officials. It looks after the Congressional and Legislative nominations and even the nominations for county, city, and borough offices. If it allows an honest man, even an honest workingman, to be put on the ticket here and there, it is because it knows it can control that man, deceive him, compromise him, bully him, pervert and corrupt him to its own ends, or, failing that, politically kill him. Each of you probably knows of honest men who has started to rise honestly in the Republican party and whom the Quay machine has either corrupted or killed. YOU DON'T KNOW OF ONE MAN WHO HAS REMAINED HONEST AND RISEN IN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND DONE ANYTHING WORTH SPEAKING OF FOR THE WORKING CLASS.

And what is the Quay machine? Who controls it?

Surely you have abundant evidence that the Coal Kings, the Steel Kings, the Railroad Kings, the great capitalists in general, are the principals, for whom the Quay ring is a willing agent.

Suppose the Republican party should nominate a good, faithful, true union miner for Sheriff of one of the mining counties and you should give him your votes and elect him.

Then comes a strike next year, say. He gets his orders—unofficial, but imperative—from party headquarters: "Help break the strike; swear in the company's thugs as deputies; protect scabs; break up miners' meetings and parades; arrest labor editors and speakers."

What is he to do? Suppose, as a workingman, he says: "These miners are right; they are my brothers; I will disobey orders and stand by them."

He would have to be a very brave man to do that. You know what would happen to him. He would never get another nomination from that party. He would be thankful if he was allowed to live in the state as a private citizen. The Republican machine and the mine owners, bankers, landlords, and all their pals would see that he was punished for having been false to his party and true to his class.

Suppose another case. Suppose you elect a Socialist Sheriff. Suppose he is no braver or honester or wiser than the average—just an ordinary workingman.

A strike comes. He knows what is expected of him. He knows to whom he is responsible. He owes nothing to Quay or to the mine owners and he expects nothing from them. He owes everything to you workingmen and can only look to you for support.

When he was elected, it was with the understanding that he would follow Socialist principle and policy—that in case of a strike, he would use his official position to help the strikers. If he should fail to do it he would be a scab. He knows that you have ways of making life uncomfortable for scabs. He knows that you would never elect him again, that you would drive him out of the country, that wherever he went workingmen would distrust and despise him. He knows that, if he sells out to the bosses and helps them, they too will consider him as a scab. And the bosses really despise a scab as much as you do. They use him, pay him while they have to, and then cast him off.

On the other hand, the Socialist Sheriff knows that if he is true to the Socialist Party and the working class, true to the platform on which he was elected, you will support him and the bosses and their political tools will fear him. He knows that if the Governor should even declare martial law and remove him, you will elect him again by a bigger majority next time. He knows that even if he should be forced into private life for a while, and blacklisted by the employers and landlords and merchants, you will find means to uphold him in the fight and will win in the end.

To sum up: Your workingman elected as Sheriff on the Republican ticket would have to be an unusualy brave man to do anything for you; and if he did it he would be signing his political death-warrant. Your workingman elected as Sheriff on the Socialist ticket would have to be a very foolhardy man to help the capitalists and if he did it he would be signing his political death-warrant.

PLEASE READ THAT LAST PARAGRAPH AGAIN AND THINK ABOUT IT CAREFULLY.

This is only one illustration. It applies equally in the case of a Burgess or Mayor or City Councilman or Legislator or Congressman or Judge.

SELF-INTEREST PROMPTS AN OFFICIAL TO BE TRUE TO HIS REAL POLITICAL MASTERS; IF HE IS ELECTED BY THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND IS TRUE TO IT, HE IS AGAINST YOU; IF HE IS ELECTED BY THE SOCIALIST PARTY AND IS TRUE TO IT, HE IS FOR YOU.

The Democratic party is just like the Republican party, except that it is not so well organized and not so shrewdly managed. In Pennsylvania it has shown its colors by nominating Pattison, the butcher of Homestead. It is the other wing of the Capitalist party. A candidate on the same ticket with Pattison cannot be YOUR candidate, for whatever office.

There is just one rule that it is safe for voters to follow. It is this:

DO NOT VOTE FOR MEN AS MEN; VOTE FOR MEN AS THE CANDIDATES OF PARTIES AND REPRESENTATIVES OF PRINCIPLES; VOTE FOR THE INTERESTS OF YOUR CLASS.

If you follow that rule, you miners of Pennsylvania will vote the Socialist ticket straight, from Slayton down to the foot.

And, as we said at the close of last week's article, you have only to change a few names of persons and trades to make this apply anywhere else—to shoe workers in Massachusetts, to cigarmakers in New York, to iron workers in Ohio, to silver miners in Colorado, to workingmen of every trade in every state.

—Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members. The virtue in most request is conformity. Self-reliance is its aversion. It loves not realities and creators, but names and customs. Whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist.—Emerson.

—It is good "business" to employ women and children instead of men. They work cheaper and are more obedient. Then the husbands and fathers, being thrown out of work, have to compete for other jobs and so keep wages down in other trades.—Canadian Socialist.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

If you get several copies of this issue of The Worker, kindly distribute them among your fellow workingmen.

There is an old proverb, "He who reads, rules." Eugene V. Debs put the same idea into other words in his famous bit of advice to the railway workers in 1894: "Buy less booze and more books." The labor press is the greatest agent for the education and organization of the working class. It should be supported, morally and financially, by all who hope for the emancipation of Labor.

Whenever you get a new subscriber for The Worker, you not only assure that man a chance for education in the principles of Socialism, but you supply this office with a few cents which will be used in sending out sample copies and introducing the paper and the party which it represents to several other workingmen.

It is the function of The Worker to set forth the principles of the labor movement, of Socialism on the political side and trade unionism on the economic side; to interpret the general news of the week in the light of those principles; and to present the news of the labor movement, so far as practicable, for the guidance and inspiration of the workers; as well as to familiarize them with the party organization and its candidates, that they may know how to use their political power for the good of their class on Election Day. This duty The Worker is now fulfilling to the best of its ability; far better than it did a year ago; but not yet to the full satisfaction of its editors, its proprietors, or its readers. Every new subscription that you gain for The Worker will equip it better to perform this important and difficult task.

The Worker never has paid and never will pay any dividends to its proprietors. It is owned by an association of Socialist workingmen whose purpose in publishing it is to advance the cause of Socialism and hasten the emancipation of their class. Whenever its income has risen above the cost of publication, the surplus has always been used to improve the quality of the paper or to extend its circulation into new fields; and this policy will be followed in the future as in the past.

One of the most significant and pleasing testimonies to the good service The Worker is doing is the influence it exercises on the labor press of the country. A year ago, the paper most quoted in the craft papers and local labor papers was the New York "Journal." To-day, we are safe in saying that The Worker is more extensively quoted, with or without credit (we do not care much about the credit) than the whole Hearst syndicate of papers. We are pleased with the tribute and we thank the comrades who, by their loyal support and co-operation, have made such a state of affairs possible.

Charles A. Dana, perhaps the greatest editor the world has seen, used to attach the utmost importance to the opinions of the country papers. Every week he had the country exchanges brought to his office and perused them with the greatest care. These papers, he believed, being nearer to the people and free from various influences which affect the great city dailies, most truly reflected the real political and other tendencies of the time. His success justified his belief. In the same way we believe that the local labor papers, the organs of central bodies in the small cities and towns, even more accurately than the journals of the national and international unions, reflect the actual tendencies of the labor movement. If this be true, then is the working class becoming permeated with Socialist ideas far more generally than the official actions of the unions indicate, far more rapidly than the great labor leaders seem to realize. There is hardly one in ten of the hundreds of local labor papers that reach our desk that does not contain either extracts from Socialist papers or original articles, editorial or contributed, pointing out the irrepressible conflict of interest between the workers and the capitalists, arguing for public ownership of part or all of the means of production, urging the necessity of independent labor politics, or even openly endorsing the Socialist Party

SHALL WE BEG OR VOTE?

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor recommends to all organized workers in national, state, central and local unions "that at their Labor Day celebrations they concentrate their attention to a discussion of the abolition of injunctions in labor disputes and the passage of resolutions demanding at the hands of Congress and the legislatures of their respective states the enactment of laws conforming to that purpose." It further recommends, in the same circular, that at the conventions of national unions and federations and at the regular meetings of local and federal unions and central bodies such resolutions be passed and copies sent to Senators, Congressmen and legislators.

All this sounds very fine, and doubtless the members of the Executive Council think that such recommendations, coupled with their opposition to uncompromising, independent, partizan labor politics, entitles them to a reputation for "wise and conservative statesmanship." In the light of history, however, such statesmanship on the part of national labor leaders calls to mind Tom Reed's definition of a statesman as a dead politician.

Our Republican and Democratic Senators, Congressmen, and legislators have large and commodious waste-baskets for the reception of the myriads of resolutions that they are constantly receiving from labor organizations. The janitors empty the waste-baskets at night and there is room for more resolutions next day.

The American Federation of Labor mustered all its forces to lobby and beg through the last session of Congress just three very moderate bills—one for effective Chinese exclusion, one to restrict the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes, and one to make eight hours a legal work-day in all government employment. The representatives of the Federation were very politely received by the old-party politicians. They were given abundant promises. But the Chinese Exclusion Bill was amended into relative harmlessness and uselessness before it was passed; the Anti-Injunction Bill was so amended as to authorize instead of forbidding the use of injunctions against strikers and boycotters, so that the Federation petitioners had to lobby some more to get it killed; and in a Senate committee's capacious pigeonhole case the Eight-Hour Bill "sleeps the sleep that knows not waking."

What the American Federation of Labor, directly representing more than a million organized workingmen, could not get in the session preceding a general election, by its favorite method of non-partizan begging, will not be granted in the session after election in response to any number of Labor Day resolutions of the same sort.

The only sort of resolution by labor organizations that will have any effect on Congress or the legislatures would be a resolution to strike direct at the root of the political and economic power of the capitalist class by supporting at the polls the platform and candidates of the Socialist Party—or, as it is called in some states, the Social Democratic Party. And that would have effect only if it is carried out, if a considerable portion of the trade unionists actually vote the straight Socialist ticket.

Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt and the Republican Congress, Governor Odell and the Republican Legislature of New York, Mayor Low and the Reform Board of Aldermen of New York City have all treated the resolutions and petitions of trade unions with the same formal courtesy and practical contempt that has been shown by President Cleveland and the Democratic Congress, Mayor Van Wyck and the Democratic Board of Aldermen, and Democratic governors and legislatures in various states.

But if the Central Federated Union of New York City should, at its next session, give its unqualified endorsement to the Social Democratic ticket, if the delegates should go back to their respective unions and see that the endorsement was observed, if the labor organizations of the city should judiciously spend a very few thousand dollars in organizing meetings for Socialist speakers and circulating Socialist literature, and if, as a result of such action, twenty-five thousand votes should be added to the poll of the Social Democratic Party in November—even though we did not elect a single officer—we should see the Republican and Democratic Senators and Representatives at Washington vying with each other, as soon as Congress assembled again, in their eagerness to introduce and support bills more radical than those asked for by the Federation ;we should see the representatives of Labor at Albany treated with as much real respect as railroad presidents and Wall Street lobbyists; we should see Low and Jerome prosecuting contractors who violate the labor laws as vigorously as they now prosecute newsboys who play "craps" on the sidewalk.

They would do all this, not out of love for the working class, but out of that respect which is inspired by fear—because they would be afraid that these twenty-five thousand votes against capitalism would grow to fifty-thousand next year and to a hundred thousand in 1904, and so on, until class-conscious workingmen would be seated in office at City Hall and State House and Capitol.

We are living in a time of war, class-war between Labor and Capital. The capitalists are our enemies, and they know it. The Republican and Democratic parties are their political agents. We cannot get any concessions from our enemies by tamely asking for them. We can get concessions only by assaulting them so vigorously as to make them fear our power.

Carl D. Thompson, who is now campaigning for the Socialist Party in Colorado, writes to the "People's Press" of Albany, Ore., in the most enthusiastic tone about the prospects of the Socialist movement in the Rockies. He cites a story that Edward Bellamy, shortly before his death at Denver, said to a friend: "Colorado will be the first state to see the triumph of Socialism. The mountains have always been the cradle of liberty." Whether Bellamy's prediction shall be verified we have still to see. But it is alleged by many who are familiar with the facts, that the workingmen of the Rocky Mountain region are far more energetic, courageous, and open to new ideas than those of any other part of the country; and now that the Socialist movement is well under way there, and evidently on a clear and uncompromising basis, we may hope for an advance that will carry inspiration to the hearts of the more conservative workers of the East. Meanwhile, it is our business, here in the East, not to wait for our Western brothers to do our work for us, but to work with all our power for the same great cause. The chief stronghold of the labor movement may be in the Rocky Mountains. But the most formidable citadel of capitalism is still in New York City. A Socialist victory in Colorado would only begin the emancipation of the workingmen of New York. A Socialist victory in New York would strike at the very center of capitalism and assure the emancipation of Labor throughout the land. Because here are the greatest difficulties, here the greatest obligation rests upon us. The Socialists of this city and state are responsible to the workers of the nation, and every gain made here, however trifling, will be hailed with especial joy from Maine to California, by all who understand the situation, as an advance in the very heart of "the enemy's country."

MUTUAL AID AMONG THE WORKERS.

Even the capitalist papers tell important truths about the working class now and then—by accident. The New York "Times" recently published an interview with a charity agent of the city, which closed with these words:

"The finest thing about the very poor—the thing that goes far to redeem their faults and make all other classes seem small beside them—is their wonderful kindness to one another. They will share their last loaf with the hungry, and if one of them is playing in hard luck, all the rest will help. In proportion to their means they give ten times as much as the greatest millionaire on earth."

This is not an overstatement of truth; and it applies, not only to "the very poor," but to the working class as a whole.

The contrast between wage-workers and capitalists in this respect is most striking. When a business man begins to lose his footing, the first thought of his old associates is: Let us divide the spoils and each get all he can; by a sort of tacit agreement, they unite in circulating exaggerated rumors to destroy his already impaired credit and complete his ruin; they scramble for his trade, force him into bankruptcy, bid in his property at the lowest rates, and then, with one accord, forget that they have ever sat at his table in his better days.

When a workingman loses his job or is injured at his work or has sickness in his family, the first thought of his associates is: Let us do what we can to help him out of his troubles. They quietly "chip in" out of their small wages to provide for his immediate wants; even men who were personally unfriendly to him before, wipe out old scores and join in a practical expression of good will; and a hundred ways are found to alleviate his misfortunes or make it easier for him to bear them.

Doubtless exceptions can be found to these statements on both sides; but common experience will support the general rules of conduct we have indicated.

Not only is it true that "in proportion to their means, the poor give ten times as much as the greatest millionaire on earth." It is an unquestionable fact that the absolute amount of this voluntary mutual aid among the working people is far greater than the sum of all the public and private charities instituted by the "better classes."

And what makes the contrast still greater is the consideration that, while the benevolent millionaire gives back to the workers only a part of what he owes them, the workers give aid to each other where they owe nothing.

This is only another illustration of that moral distinction between the two classes of which we spoke last week, when we said:

"The capitalist, as capitalist, is a self-centered, individualistic, sneaking, cunning schemer; the workingman, as workingman, is a social being, with a dim but certain instinct of solidarity with his fellows."

Our faith in the ultimate victory of the working-class over the capitalists is founded, not alone on its greater numercial strength, but quite as much on its moral superiority. In the actual ethics of the working class we see the germ of the social ethics of the future.

Mayor Low is getting very energetic these hot days. Last week, through his personal efforts, three newsboys were convicted for playing "craps" in City Hall Park. Surely the workingmen who voted the "reform" ticket last fall will be satisfied now.

An indictment for conspiracy or commitment to jail for contempt of court has long been recognized as a sort of certificate of merit for a labor agitator. Prosecution for criminal libel is now to be added to the list.

The "Republican" of Northport, Wash., a copy of whose issue of July 12 has just reached our desk, has sundry sneering paragraphs about J. C. Harkness, one of our comrades who spoke in the town for the Socialist Party. Along with them we find this bit of wisdom:

"By the coal miners striking in the East the coke supply is running short, and should the article become too scarce manufacturing plants in the West will be compelled to close down, throwing thousands out of employment. So by this you can readily see that strikers in any country are an injury to their fellow workmen in other sections."

By this we readily see that the editor of the one-horse paper in question is looking for favors from the owners of the manufacturing plants in question and from their servants, the Republican politicians.

But that wasn't what we started to say. We cite this case as an example of what we find to be a general rule, that the editor and other "moulders of public opinion" who attack Socialism are also enemies of the trade union movement and always ready to malign and denounce strikers.

"The party that shall do for the question of industrial slavery what the Republican party did for the question of chattel slavery must be a workingman's party." So spoke Henry George in 1886. The Socialists of New York joined with others in supporting Henry George loyally in the mayoralty campaign of that year and rolled up for him a vote that called attention to his name all over the world. But George lacked patience. It took too long to win success on the lines of the true principle he had enunciated, and he deserted the workingman's party and went back to the imbecile organization that now wavers between Bryan and Cleveland. George died a disappointed and unsuccessful man. But the workingman's party in which he so soon lost faith has gone on in spite of all opposition, defining its principles and tactics more strictly, slowly but surely gaining in numerical strength, and thus doubly increasing its educational and political influence. It has become a national party, enlisting the attention and arousing the alarm of Hanna and of Cleveland. It remains truly a workingman's party, devoted to "doing for the question of industrial slavery what the Republican party did for chattel slavery." It is the party of the future—the Socialist Party.

Mosquito Bites

By PETER E. BURROWES

Government by Newspaper, by Injunction, and by Trust is government by N. I. T. The newspaper governs by a daily juggle with the word "Public." If you could only find out just what the editors and managers mean by the word "public," you would know what it is that governs you in the first branch of your almighty NIT.

With the gravity of a monkey discussing a nut, you see your caged editor discussing his morning topic. It seems as if he were discussing a principle; but you may be sure that he discusses it only as a policy. The days of principle are gone.

Mark how he turns it around and 'round, looking at all sides of it, as he munches.—What does he do it for? —He is on guard, lest there should be a labor side to his way of munching it. If there is, he will throw it away. Why, all the great dailies have dropped their "laissez faire" doctrines since Gompers wants to work it on behalf of labor.

Have another look at your daily monkey. Every time he says "The Public," you observe his eyes shifting about from corner to corner of his cage.—What are those eyes shifting at? They never seem to remain fixed long enough for a look.—Oh, the cheques for the large "ads." come in at those corners.

But if the newspaper writer always thinks with his eye on those "ad" cheques, he is no better guide than the parson who preaches to a fluctuating salary.—Who says he is, besides himself? The world is finding out that he is not so good.

Oh, prove that, if you please.—Well, to begin with. The parson has a principle, good or bad, which, whether he believes it or not, he is obliged to state somehow, and that leaves room for discussion in the minds of his hearers and salary fluctuations.

But his congregation do not understand theology.—They understand as much of it as he does. He has been doing his level best to tell them all he knows. Now this is just what our morning monkey diligently endeavors not to do. Our M. M. blandly looks out upon his million of daily admirers, standing outside of his bars there, as being just that many fools, who should remain so.

Whatever makes the Great Newspaper Editors think the people of America are fools?—Well, if you, as he, had been teaching them so long, you ought to have the same opinion, perhaps; or, at least, I would. The editor always says he knows, or feels, the depths of his "public's" understanding. In this respect, he is like the spirit mediums, who never by any chance call up a ghost the range of whose understanding is greater than the mediums'.

Oh, pardon; I do not quite understand.—Well if Biddy Fogarty becomes a medium and calls up Darwin, Biddy's Darwin will just know as Mrs. Fogarty—no more. So your morning monkey never introduces his readers to any strange scribbling ghost that knows more than himself. He says the public would not understand it. He ought to know. It has been his business for years to limit the public understanding.

But, my dear Mosquito, if the Monkey's editorial perch be only the chair of limitations, would it not become a highly competitive position?—Not at all, sir. Competition is but an ideal thing; in the air; overhead, you know; where there is room for all of us. But if you want to get a job at the bottom of the sea, you cannot swim down to it. You have not been soaked long enough. It is only a question of how many years you have been soaked in stupidity, and that's where fate comes in and competition don't.

Is it only by stupidity, that the Great Daily Editor holds his own?—It is by stupidity that he holds yours and what he calls his own—your attention. Of course it may be a joint stupidity that makes you "a constant reader" of him; for it is a constant misunderstanding somewhere, alone, that could make you a "constant reader." Only once understand the big daily, and you will subscribe an antidote for yourself by sending fifty cents to the office of The Worker.

But no; I do not hold with you there. It is not all stupidity. There is a fascination in the monkey not covered by the word "stupidity."—Surely, I admit it. There is the amazing variety of posture ;the constant achievement of a revolution against the law of gravitation; the interesting outrages against "deportment;" the inexhaustible utilitarianism of that tail. Shakespere accounts for the entire fascination when he says, "Thereby hangs a t—."

Then it is to the mobility and versatility of the editorial monkey that you attribute his powers of fascination?—Surely. That is the centre dish always, with a little dressing. Put a little Quaker's coat on your monkey, such as the capitalist sometimes puts on his rognery; and mark how your interest grows. The gravity with which an editor says absurdities, the truthfulness with which he tells lies, the mercifulness and kindness with which he calls for the military to murder the laborers, the sincere piety with which he raps at the door of his brothel! It is the incongruity between the appearance and the thing essentially said and done that makes the capitalist daily editor to be at once the most horrible and entertaining appearance that ever unrighteousness put on.

I am willing to admit that the world itself adds very considerably to the interest of the newspaper, by the variety it offers.—Ah, yes; now you are beginning to do him justice. It is not so much the rapid transit (scared from the L roads to the editorial brains) as the variety in the world itself that makes that great brain a daily that you have not accounted for.—Well, yes. There are others. When people began to think as they talked, and to convince, or lead others to think as they talked, it immediately became necessary for the owners of the world to change the subjects of talking; and so all the rising generations learned to talk well about the other world only. Oratory was switched from the earth to heaven and the new Ciceros practised on post-mortem subjects chiefly.

What has that to do with the great dailies?—Excuse me. I have not yet exhausted my preliminary. All the farmers and laborers of the Middle Ages (and other times, too) became dummies, going once a week or less to listen to talk—the only talk of their time. Now the arrival of the printing press menaced the better class with a whole world of horrible thinkers as well as talkers. What are they to do? They must tie the presses down to Latin or to some other non-conductors of thought. Just as the daily gives you Devery.

Then you seem to think that the great dailies have a policy of non-conduction as to thought?—Sure, Mike. You may bet the whole unearned increment of the latest corn corner on that proposition.—Then it is foolish for me to read the dailies.—Not at all, comrade. It is, on the contrary, a splendid education. To note, first what they omit; then, what they select. To obtain possession of the waste baskets of Park Row would be a revelation second only to the New Testament. To learn how to accept what they reject and to reject what they accept, in the same way as they do it, by class-consciousness, would be a finished education in economics.

Then you think truth may be reached through falsehood?—Why, sir, if not, the world must sink into everlasting dispair. Reflect for a moment, how few teachers the centuries have for us but their falsehoods, and stick to your newspaper. The straight and narrow gate of lying, along which the camel had to crawl and be squeezed, was the only way into the city; so, lying is the only way to truth for a long time to come. Keep your eye on your public lies and liars; they are all you have on the way to truth. Of course, like a good mariner, you must know how to allow for the variations of the compass.

But, my word, you have been giving me a pretty long jolly. I wanted to hear something about that I. T.—It is rather late in the column to expect much on the new mode of government by injunction. In general, it may be said to be an evolution along the same lines as that from chattel slavery to wage slavery. Chattel slavery consisted of putting an end to liberty and getting the slave and his product in the lump; while the other consisted of a suspension of economic liberty only from day to day. Instead of buying your slave off, out and out, for a thousand dollars, you bought him by instalments; made him each day earn the instalments and pay you a profit for the use of the money.

That doesn't explain injunction.—Well, why don't you wait? Moving along the same lines, many attempts have been made to keep oxen alive all the time you were cutting beefsteaks off them; but the animals generally insisted upon dying and were therefore not the right stock. In the wage slave, however, you have an ox who grows his own beefsteak, and keeps alive from day to day. He is a perfect "cut and come again" sort of creature, such as the world never produced before. For a two-cent bunch of hay, which he grinds laboriously with a set of gradually decaying teeth, he gives you a rump steak worth a quarter.

But pardon me, how about government by injunction?—I am getting at it, of you will let me have my own way.

Well, now, the next step in that sort of evolution, was to get it into the administration of penal law. You want to hang a man. You have made up your mind to hang him. You must have law for it, of course; but as you must hang him, to begin with, you will hang him in such a way that there will be something of him left for hanging when you have found law for it. You therefore require some legal form of suspended animation. You have no law for hanging him by the neck until he is dead; so you find a way of hanging by the neck while he is alive. That is the whole philosophy of the government of Labor by injunction. "Just hold him there till I go and look for a club," says the capitalist, and I bet you he'll find one.

It seems getting very near the end. Am I going to have anything about that T?—Yes; just a word or two. Some comrades think that all Socialism has to do is to wait until the trust grows big enough, and then own it; and there you have Socialism. Now, I think, by the time the trust has grown big enough to be turned over to Socialism there will not be left in the United States any manhood fit to own it, any intellect fit to use it, or any decently aspiring population worth using it for. I say, therefore, let the nation bust the trust, and let the devil take the hindmost.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Williamsport Labor Review:

The capitalist newspapers vie with each other in attempts to show to the public that the Johnstown mine horror was caused by the carelessness of some one of the ignorant Slavs with which the mine is filled. * * * The facts still remain that these same mine owners are profit seekers, that they are responsible for the ignorant Slavs being employed in the mine, and that the most modern and therefore expensive safety appliances were lacking. * * * Accidents of this sort are, perhaps, unavoidable under certain barometric conditions, but the danger would be reduced to a minimum if proper ventilation was provided for all parts of these mines. But all this means additional expense and a consequent reduction of profits, which latter must not be interfered with. But if government owned and operated these mines for the benefit of the whole people, these profits would be expended for the most improved safety appliances, and pillars would not be robbed, ignorant men would not be allowed to go into the mines when any dangerous conditions existed, and such horrors as that at Johnstown would not be liable to occur.

People's Press, Albany, Ore.

Chicago has a "municipal ownership" ticket in the field, and Nebraska Populists have just gone into another "fusion" deal with Bryan Democrats, and in other places we hear of "reform" movements.

It is strange that working people can't see that these are capitalistic schemes gotten up for no other purpose than to retard the growth of Socialism, and to a considerable extent they always make it work.

Oregon, as the last election returns show, had about 2,000 voters who were Socialists enough to vote for our nominee for Secretary of State, but yet too much "reformers" to vote for our nominee for Governor, and instead cast their vote for a capitalistic, imperialistic man and elected him. What Socialists must learn is that Socialism is not a scheme to reform our present system but to revolutionize it. Our competitive system is not worth reforming; we can't afford to spend time and energy in trying to patch it up; we must do away with it and replace it with an entirely new system.

Canadian Socialist.

Manufacturers insist upon having cheap labor. Competition forces them to demand it. The majority of citizens in Canada do not want Chinese or Japanese in their land. Poll tax and exclusion laws are asked for. Whether granted by our rulers or not is of no particular significance to us. Why? Because now we find the manufacturer establishing his factories in China and Japan. Then when the trusts say so, down will come that funny thing, the tariff, and this whole country will be flooded with the products of cheap labor, which already causes much anxiety among the wage-earners of Canada, more particularly so in British Columbia.

Elizabeth Times.

By order of the American Federation of Labor an operation has been performed upon the National Brewery Workers' Union, in which it was found necessary to amputate two of its limbs known among trade unionists as the Brewery Firemen and Brewery Engineers. It is expected that should the operation prove successful the Executive Board of the aforementioned "learned" institution is likely to order another amputation or two—presumably the beer botflers and drivers. As soon as these amputations have been made and nothing but the head and trunk of the Brewery Workers' Union remains the capitalistic germ will then be in his glory and thrive in luxury upon the carcass of this once strong organization.

New Era, Philadelphia.

The Steel Trust is now distributing to holders of its stock $40,000,000 in quarterly dividends. At this rate they will receive back in one year and eight months every cent of their original investment. Every cent of these dividends was produced by labor. The materials, the mills and the steel were made valuable by labor.

Labor received only a small part of the value of what it made in wages. The Trust, by compelling the workingmen to divide up, has the power to starve them if they will not work at its terms.

Capitalists claim they are entitled to profits, because they run great risks. In one year and eight months the capitalists in the Steel Trust will, if the present rate of profits are paid, receive a full return for the capitalized value of the Trust. There is a great deal of water in the capitalized value of the Trust.

After this they cannot claim that any part of the profit is a recompense for risk. Is it not strange that workingmen are never given any reward for risking their lives in dangerous occupations. In the case of Labor the rule is the greater the danger the smaller the wage, but with Capital the rule is the smaller the risk the larger the profit.

No ability is needed to hold Steel Trust stock, and the holders of it cannot truthfully say their profits are the wages of ability. The profits were not paid to them for any useful thing they did in making steel. And as they did nothing in directing the work of making steel they cannot claim their profits are the wages of superintendence. The closer the Trust's profits are analyzed the plainer the truth appears that the profits represent what was withheld from labor.

Dayton Union Picket.

From the per capita tax sent in mostly by the federal labor unions, and those organizations which get the lowest wages, the A. F. of L. has for the past ten years kept Andrew Furuseth in attendance on Congress, waiting on committees who had charge of measures intended to comply with organized Labor's demands.

We say waiting, because that conveys more clearly the proper function of the A. F. of L. committee. It is still waiting, and Furuseth, who has recently been aided by Thos. F. Tracy, has sent in a report that should convince the most obtuse that the waiting game is all the A. F. of L. can play at unless they enter the political field and elect labor representatives to office. Then committees from union bodies will not be humiliated by waiting on capitalists elected by labor men with capitalistic minds.

President Gompers can examine all the witnesses in America, if he wants to, to "bring out important points," but he can never bring out the far greater point, and of a thousand times more importance, that until he comes out boldly for a united vote by labor organizations for the class-conscious Socialist Party he won't secure legislation for Labor.

Workers' Gazette, Omaha.

The Omaha "Examiner" says: "Suppose all employers go on strike. What then? Are there not two sides to this strike nuisance? Wouln't it be better for both sides to get together and stay together? Why not try arbitration, and abide by the decision?"

The employers ARE on strike. They quit working long before their employees quit. Wage workers and the common people generally could get along very well with the employers' strike, if the employers, after they have quit working, would not demand the major share of what those produce who are willing to work.

There is but one right side to "this strike nuisance," and that is the side whose supporters want only what is justly due them and what is withheld from them largely by the votes and influence of economic hermaphrodites or men who, being neither capitalists nor wage workers, are always ready to squeal against Labor when they are pinched by a suspension of business brought about both primarily and immediately by the aggressions of Capital.

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

We do not take much interest in Christian Socialism, because we do not like to see the Socialist political and economic movement brought into any connection, whether of alliance or of hostility, with any form of religious belief and activity. But we know a good thing when we see it, and we therefore quote from the "News Letter," published at Chicago by the Christian Socialist League, this little picture of a very common and a very contemptible type of man turned out by capitalism's subsidized institutions of learning:

"In Chicago there is an unusually good man, of his kind, who conducts a large and successful business in merchandise.

"Into his private office came one day a young man. The young man had a thin face with a smile on it. He had quite a large forehead full of something or other that he had procured in college. His hands were full of his hat, and his eyes were full of egotism. His nervous tensity bespoke energy and pertinacity, his bearing was a beautiful balance between diplomatic humility and military arrogance, ready to tilt either way on instant demand of circumstances. He was what happens when a bright boy of the 'upper middle class' or thereabouts, gets to reading outline sketches of how Rockefeller made his millions (with the details of sneakthiefism, openfaced burglary, perjury, prostitution, arson, and indirect wholesale murder all left out; but you'd better read 'Wealth against Commonwealth,' by Henry D. Lloyd, if you want to know about the Standard Oil Company.)

"This young man was what they make at the plutocratic colleges when they start with the supercilious ambition of youthfulness which has been taught that $10-a-week clerking with pink and green cuffs is more elegant and honorable than $20-a-week manual labor with no cuffs at all, save those administered by the genus 'prominent citizen' in his rôle of employer."

AN OLD-TIME AGITATOR.

The revolutionary patriot, Josiah Quincy, said in 1774:

"To complain of the enormities of power, to expostulate with overgrown oppressors, hath in all ages been denominated sedition and faction, and to turn upon tyrants, treason and rebellion. But tyrants are rebels against the first laws of heaven and society; to oppose their ravages is the instinct of nature—the inspiration of God in the heart of man."

The "respectable business men," "public spirited citizens," and "eminent gentlemen" of the present day turn out on the Fourth of July in honor of Josiah Quincy and his fellow revolutionists of a century and a quarter ago. The next day they organize in a Citizens' Alliance, Employers' Association, or something of the sort to lay plans for using the power of the law to crush the insolent workingmen and denounce them as seditious and factious, traitors and rebels.

Moral: Put no faith in the "eminent citizens." Imitate Josiah Quincy and unite to oppose the tyrants who disgrace the traditions of '76.

—John D. Rockefeller has made $12,000,000 in the last six months without working Sundays. If he continues frugal he will be able to enjoy that popular weekly half-holiday within a few years.—Oklahoma Socialist.

PARTY NOTES.

Comrade Job Harriman has resigned as National Committeeman for New York, as the condition of his health compels him to return to Southern California, at least for a time.

The Washington State Committee has started the campaign by ordering the printing of fifty thousand leaflets for distribution. An organizer will soon be sent to the eastern part of the state.

Comrade Debs spoke again in Spokane on his return from British Columbia, and again had a large and enthusiastic audience.

The State Committee of Oregon has issued an appeal to the Socialists of the state to effect a more complete, solid, and systematic organization in all quarters, that a regular and energetic campaign may be carried on all the year 'round, to assure the splendid gains made at the recent state election and double them at the next one.

The Los Angeles "Socialist" reports many successful meetings held by Comrades Mills, Wilson, and other party speakers in Southern California.

Father Hagerty is kept busy lecturing on Socialism in the Far West. He is said to be a very pleasant, forcible, and convincing speaker. His address is 625 Mining Exchange, Denver, Colo.

Comrade Chapman of Arkansas City, Kas., writes that the local there has recently taken in forty new members and has begun holding agitation meetings. State and county tickets are in the field and "the prairies are ablaze with Socialism."

The Oklahoma Territorial Committee has issued an address to the comrades, urging them to put county tickets in the field wherever possible, warning them against fusion, and calling for funds to provide for a tour of the territory by Thos. S. Smith, the Socialist candidate for delegate to Congress.

A St. Louis comrade writes: "The comrades here are hustling and gratifying results are being realized. The boat excursion given Sunday, July 13, was a success, $172 being the sum netted. The party papers, "St. Louis Labor" and the "Arbeiter-Zeitung," are the beneficiaries. Prospects are good for a large meeting on the evening of August 16, at Central Music Hall, which has a seating capacity of nearly four thousand. Comrades McGrady of Kentucky and Thos. J. Morgan of Chicago will be the principal speakers. A play will be enacted July 17, the receipts to go to the party press."

Comrade Chase lectured last week for unions and locals at Howard, Oldham, Aberdeen, Milford, and Clark, S. D.

The Minnesota state convention chose S. M. Holman of Minneapolis as State Secretary in place of George H. Lockwood, who becomes State Organizer and will go through the state with a campaign wagon, speaking, distributing literature, and organizing.

Local Minneapolis held city and county conventions on June 17 and nominated C. D. Raymer for Mayor, S. M. Holman for Congress in the Sixth District, Peter Samson for City Treasurer, Asa Kingsbury for Comptroller, and Walter Hagelin for Sheriff.

The Socialist convention of the Thirteenth Congressional District of Ohio was held at Fostoria last Sunday and our veteran comrade, Charles R. Martin of Tiffin, was nominated. A campaign committee, consisting of E. J. Plummer of Bucyrus, S. L. Smith of Bellevue, H. Sombrine of Fostoria, G. Flummerfelt of Tremont, and A. A. Floem of Tiffin, was chosen. The convention was most enthusiastic. A good start was given to the campaign fund, the actions of the state convention were endorsed, and preparations were made to organize several more locals in the vicinity. District conferences will be held twice a month.

A local of the Socialist Party was organized at Edwardsdale, Pa., on July 17, with forty-two charter members. Comrade Roth of Wilkes Barre acted as chairman at the organizing meeting. After the next meeting of the County Committee a candidate for the Legislature will be nominated in this locality, which comprises the Third Legislative District of Luzerne County. John H. Harris is Recording Secretary of the new local; Jas. Owens, Financial Secretary; Thomas Morris, Organizer; David Ashton, Literature Agent. There is a great need of Socialist literature in the Polish and Lithuanian languages as well as in English, but the comrades, having been on strike for a long time, have little money to use for the purpose. Any donations of money or literature for the campaign will be welcome.

The Socialist Party of Maine has congressional candidates in all the four districts—in the First, Fred. E. Irish of Portland; Second, S. B. Martin of Bath; Third, Fred. A. Manter of Anson; Fourth, George W. Saunders of North Lubec.

Comrade Geo. A. Keene of Haverhill, Mass., has been chosen Agent of the Central Labor Union and will start in on his new duties Monday, July 28. Comrade Keene is Financial Secretary of Retail Clerks' Union No. 515 and a delegate to the C. L. U. from that day. He promises to send us news occasionally regarding the labor movement in Haverhill.

The Socialists of Cambridge, Mass., mourn the loss of Comrade Frederick Wessman, who died on July 7 at the home of his brother in that city. Comrade Wessman was an intelligent and earnest worker for the cause and would have done still greater service for the movement had he lived. He was but twenty-nine when he died.

Irving Goldwaite is Literature Agent of the Central Socialist Club of Lynn, Mass., and agent for The Worker in that place. Any communications regarding Socialist literature or subscriptions to party papers may be addressed to him at the Club, 85 Munroe street, or at his home, 77 Glenwood street, East Lynn.

Comrade Davis of Local Derby, Conn., writes that State Organizer Caldwell's visit there was very welcome. "He made a ringing address for Socialism. There was a large and interested audience, and all seemed to accept his arguments. His words have created a deep impression and to-day Socialism is talked on the street by many. Both local papers gave a large space to the meeting and we Socialists score it a great success."

The General Committee of Local New York meets Saturday evening, July 26, at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street. Election of officers and other important business is to be taken up. Delegates should be in the hall at 8 p. m. and new delegates should bring their credentials.

The Kings County Committee meets Saturday evening, July 26, at the Socialist Club, Fulton street and Ralph avenue, Brooklyn.

Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor of New York, will begin his first tour of the state on August 9.

During the past week State Organizer Spring has been working in Westchester County. He spoke to good meetings for Locals New Rochelle and Peekskill, addressed the striking hatters at Yonkers and the Carpenters' Union at Mt. Vernon. He also visited White Plains and Dobbs Ferry and did personal work there. At Tarrytown he had a good open-air meeting after the county convention, until the rain made it impossible to continue.

Comrade Meyes gave a reading before the Speakers' Club at the last meeting, held July 15, in the Labor Lyceum, from a number of recent writers who have made a study of the condition of the working class. The reading was followed by a number of impromptu speeches, in which speakers showed how useless it was to look at the labor problem from the sentimental standpoint. Popular fallacies in regard to economic laws also received a share of attention. At the next meeting of the club Comrade Wood will speak on "The Lesson of Recent Strikes." As it is the intention to show how young speakers can use events of the immediate present in their speeches, it is to be hoped that the meeting will be well attended. Every Tuesday at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street.

On Sunday, August 24, the West Side Agitation Committee will hold its annual picnic at Hugo Kroebler's Park, West Hoboken, N. J., to which all comrades are invited to come and have a good time. The profit made on this occasion is to be divided equally between the Socialist Daily Fund and the agitation fund of the West Side Committee. Tickets can be procured from Comrade Butscher at 64 East Fourth street.

The comrades of the 1st, 3d, 5th, 7th, 9th, 11th, 13th, 15th, 17th, and 19th Assembly Districts will meet Tuesday evening, July 29, at 342 W. Forty-second street, to discuss matters of importance. It is expected that all comrades, and especially those of the lower districts will come and come early.

The 13th A. D. will hold an agitation meeting Saturday, August 2, at 8 p. m., at 342 W. Forty-second street. All readers of The Worker should do their best to make the meeting a success. Good speakers will be engaged.

At the last meeting of the 30th A. D., F. Schultz was elected Financial Secretary; K. Edelman, Recording Secretary; Wagner, Treasurer; and Pankin and Edelman delegates to the General Committee. Election of delegates to the Yorkville Agitation Committee was postponed till the next meeting, at which every member should be present.

The 34th A. D. at its last meeting received reports showing that the outdoor agitation meetings are very successful, as the crowds are always large and attentive and papers and other literature are eagerly taken. It was decided to elect a Literature Agent to take charge of the selling of papers, pamphlets, and books, at the meetings and the choice fell to Comrade Weiss, who is one of the most active members of the district. To start the work well, Comrade Gruber gave $2 to the literature fund and Comrade Reich gave twenty-five books and pamphlets and ten copies of The Worker weekly till Election Day. It was decided to hold a meeting on Wednesday evening at One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street and St. Ann's avenue. All readers of The Worker in the 34th A. D. are invited to attend the agitation meetings and also the business meetings, which are held every Friday at 380 Willis avenue.

WESTERN CONVENTIONS.

Seven Socialist State Conventions Recently Held — Strictness of Principles and Discipline Generally Maintained.

A fortuitous concatenation of untoward circumstances, as our friend Professor Lexicon would say, prevented The Worker from giving last week reports of the state conventions held in several Western states. The tickets nominated are given in another column. In Colorado the convention did not nominate, but proposed two or three names for each place to be filled and referred these to the locals to choose from.

Edward Boyce is one of the three suggested for Governor.

The conventions in general showed a thoroughly uncompromising spirit. Test cases arose in Washington and Colorado.

In Washington the convention was called upon to decide whether the delegates from Local Spokane should be allowed to vote the proxies of Judge Richardson and a bailiff of his court, who have joined the local. By a very large majority the delegates held that the convention could not recognize men who still held office from a capitalist party, however little doubt there might be of their sincerity as Socialists at the present time.

In Colorado the same question arose in a different form. Lieutenant-Governor Coates had joined Local Denver about a month before the convention was held. On the second day of the convention, Coates being present, a resolution was adopted declaring that no person holding office from a capitalist party should be recognized as a member of the Socialist Party. This was opposed by many delegates and when it was finally passed, Coates announced his withdrawal from the party in a rather bitter speech, charging the delegates with narrowness, bigotry, bossism, and so forth. The resolution was afterward reconsidered and amended so as to apply only to future applicants.

It is, from our point of view, a most pleasing sign that the conventions of these two Far Western states stood so firm for strict discipline. We may regret the withdrawal of Lieutenant-Governor Coates, who has given us much reason to believe in his sincerity; but we agree with the opinion of the majority of the delegates at Colorado Springs that if a man is not willing to resign an office which he received from a capitalist party his place is still outside our ranks.

The Colorado convention also adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, The national convention of the Socialist Party, held in Indianapolis June 29, 1901, adopted the policy for national organization of the Socialist Party, known as state autonomy; and,

"Whereas, After a thorough trial of the same it has proven inefficient as a method of organization; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Socialist Party of Colorado, in convention assembled, demands a more efficient method of organization to the end that the entire organization of the party throughout the nation may be thoroughly protected under one uniform system of national control."

The Texas convention showed the same spirit. A comrade writes:

"The most important step taken by the convention was the adoption of a recommendation from the Committee on Ways and Means compelling all members of the party within the state to join some branch of the party, and that no Socialist would be recognized as such or have voice in future deliberations of the party unless he could exhibit a dues card showing that he was a member in good standing of some branch and had paid up his dues or ceased only under stress of circumstances."

A vigorous campaign will be made and it is expected that the vote of 1900 will be tripled.

The Kansas convention, on the other hand, passed a resolution against the dues system and seemed to favor loose organization. We have as yet no full report.

Minnesota goes into the campaign this year for the first time with a full state ticket, and good results are expected.

The Indiana convention showed as good a spirit as those of Washington, Colorado, and Texas. There were spirited discussions, but no discord and no sign of compromise. The convention adopted the following resolution for the guidance of Socialists elected to office:

"Whereas, Socialists are elected to office under capitalism and questions often arise upon which they must act, and whereas it may become a matter of doubt how they should vote on such questions,

"Be it resolved, that before voting on any doubtful legislative proposition the Socialist, in office under capitalism, will consult his local as to how to cast his ballot.

"The local in giving advice will be guided by the folowing criterion:

"Will the proposed legislation advance the material interests of the workers?"

Of the Illinois convention it seems unnecessary to say that on all matters of principle the strictest lines were drawn. The Worker has had occasion to criticize the Illinois comrades on questions of party organization, but no one can doubt the intelligent earnestness of their Socialist principles or find fault with the energy of their agitation work.

LOCAL KINGS COUNTY.

Comrades Frazer and Well presided in the last meeting of the Kings County Committee. Comrades Feltner and Stamer were seated as delegates from the 13th and 14th A. D. Subdivisions not represented were: 5th; 7th; 15th; 20th, Br. 2. Two applicants were admitted to membership. The 13th and 14th A. D. reported having elected officers and arranged an outing for the benefit of the campaign fund. The 16th A. D. will hold a series of lawn meetings in the rear of the Club House at Fulton street and Ralph avenue, beginning on the first Saturday evening in August.

The Grievance Committee reported in the Lang case that this member has again failed to appear at the meeting of the Committee, and he was therefore suspended until he responds to the notice for investigation of charges. The Outing Committee reported that show-cards and tickets were out and requested that more interest be shown by the subdivision committees by attendance at the committee meetings, which are held every Tuesday evening at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. Ten dollars was appropriated to cover preliminary expenses.

As the constitution does not provide for the expiration of the term of the Board of Organizers, it was decided that such term shall be one year.

The matter of circulating proper campaign literature was left in the hands of the Board of Organizers.

The Organizer was instructed to draft a circular letter to be sent, with the state platform enclosed, to all labor organizations also to take action for sending speakers to labor organizations. The matter of arranging for a parade was referred to the subdivisions, which are to report within a month.

On motion, Comrade Thielke was invited to present at the next meeting the plans and object of the "Better Times Agitation Committee of the State of New York."

Nomination of officers was postponed to the next meeting.

The secretaries of subdivisions are reminded to send names and addresses of their officers to the Organizer, Warren Atkinson, 122 Fort Green Place.

ROCHESTER REGRETS BROWN'S DEPARTURE.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 20.—The following resolutions referring to Comrade Brown, our candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, drafted by a special committee consisting of Frank A. Sleverman, C. R. Bach, and Joel Moses, and adopted by Local Rochester, truly express the high esteem in which he is held here:

"Local Rochester of the Social Democratic Party learns with genuine regret that Comrade William Thurston Brown intends to leave this city in the near future.

"During the four years of Comrade Brown's pastorate at Plymouth Church he has many times given evidence of his ability and readiness to aid the Socialist cause with the power of his eloquence and logic.

"Prompted by what seems to us to be the loftiest conception of ethics—an unselfish devotion to the well-being of humanity—he nevertheless fearlessly and boldly proclaimed the class struggle in all its hideousness; and, both inside and outside of his pulpit, he urged the workers to join and work with the political party of their class, the Socialist Party of America. While he has often appeared before local debating clubs, economic leagues, labor lyceum, etc., in defense of Socialist principles—always routing the enemy,—he has been no less effective as a speaker at ward, district, and city mass meetings during a campaign.

"We part with him, confident that his efforts in the wider field in which he intends to work will be fruitful of lasting and beneficial results to the progress of the Socialist movement."

Local Rochester will hold county, congressional, and assembly nominating conventions at the headquarters, 95 Main street, room 9, on Saturday, August 9, at 8 p. m. All comrades should be present.

The Seventeenth Ward Club will hold a grand picnic, with prize bowling, on Sunday, August 10.

CALDWELL'S WORK IN CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 21.—State Organizer Caldwell has spoken during the past week at six public meetings, including two meetings on Sunday. He spoke Tuesday on New Haven Green to an audience of two hundred persons. On Wednesday he visited Meriden, where it was hoped to organize an American branch, but no permit was obtained for an open-air meeting, so arrangements were made for a meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday, July 29. On Thursday he spoke on the public square in Derby to a large audience, and Derby comrades were much encouraged thereby and have gone to work with renewed vigor. Friday he spoke on the Green in Waterbury to a good audience. Some members of an Italian section of the S. L. P., who were present, asked for a charter application, and said they would organize. Saturday's meeting was held in Branford. This was the smallest meeting of the week and only eleven pamphlets were sold.

Sunday, July 20, was spent in New Haven, where Comrade Caldwell addressed the union of the Metal Mechanics, seven hundred of whom are on strike at the great hardware factory of Sargent & Co. In the afternoon he addressed the strikers from the shop of the Rolling Mill Co., who are organized in the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. Three representatives of the Economic League, who had got wind of his coming, were present and after Caldwell had spoken, one of them, a well-known lawyer, was introduced to oppose him. His efforts were very amusing. As soon as he had finished, Comrade Caldwell challenged him to debate and the challenge was reluctantly accepted, as the gentleman and his friends hurriedly left the hall. A report of the events of this meeting was put in one of the morning papers, together with the challenge for the debate, which we hope to arrange a date for soon.

Comrade Caldwell's future dates are as follows: July 21 and 22, Hartford; 23, New Britain; 24, Windsor Locks; 25, South Manchester; 26, Rockville; 27, Staff Springs; 28, Middleton; 29, Meriden.

He will then visit the eastern part of the state, taking in the towns of Willimantic, Norwich, Putnam, New London, and Stonington; and the first week in August will be spent in the Naugatuck Valley and western part of the state.

W. E. WHITE.

NEW HAMPSHIRE AWAKE.

CONCORD, N. H., July 19.—Our comrade, Rev. H. W. Smith of East Pepperel, Mass., now organizer for this state, spoke in Pilgrim Hall on the evening of July 17 to a fair sized audience, taking for his text, "The A B C of Socialism." In presenting his subject he divided it in three parts—"The fallacy of the present economic system, The remedy, and How to apply it. Comrade Smith's address was apparently very well received, the entire audience giving him the closest attention throughout the hour and a half in which he spoke.

At the last business meeting of the local, seven new members were admitted and arrangements made for Comrade Wilshire's lecture on August 1 in Pilgrim Hall. Admission to this lecture will be by ticket; price, 10 cents; to be had from members of the Club.

Comrade S. F. Claflin of Manchester, candidate for Congress in the First District, has volunteered to speak at a series of open-air meetings in several of the wards during the month of August.

J. S. M.

WORK IN OHIO.

Dayton, O., July 15.—Four new locals were granted charters in June—Zanesville with fourteen members, Findley with twenty-five, Akron with seventeen, and Kenton with eleven. Other locals reported taking in many new members. The charters of Locals Bowling Green and Bellevue were recalled.

The work of the State Secretary's office included the sending out of 538 letters, 78 packages, and 46 postal cards. The financial report shows balanceon hand, May 30, $4.09; receipts for June, $95.46; expenditures, $77.12; balance, July 1, $22.43.

John Spargo, Wm. T. Brown, H. Gaylord Wilshire, Robert Bandlow and Wm. Mailly were nominated for fraternal delegate to the Canadian convention by Locals Cincinnati, Portsmouth, Springfield, Continental and Dayton, respectively.

The picnic at Woodsdale Park on July 4 was a good success in every respect. Several thousand people were in attendance and Comrade Wilshire's address was a great feature of the affair.

The party has still to make nominations by petition, and for the state ticket nearly ten thousand signatures are required. The blanks are now in the hands of comrades and should be filled as rapidly as possible, so that the work of agitation may be begun.

The State Committee was unable to make mutually satisfactory agreement with Comrade Strickland for continuing his work under its direction. However, the Committee has agreed to assist him all it can in his work and send him all the applications for his services which are received.

Meetings were arranged for Comrade Wilshire at Woodsdale Park on July 4, at Dayton, July 5, at Cincinnati, July 6, and at Springfield, July 7. Comrade Jones, of Cincinnati, spent one week in Findley, Kenton, Bellefontaine, and surrounding country and organized each town so far with a good list to start with. His work does not involve the state organization in any responsibility or expense and the reports from the territory covered are very encouraging.

Peter Frank has secured employment in Columbus and is making an effort to organize the comrades there.

F. N. Prevey organized Akron and has promised to organize some of the smaller places in that congressional district. His territory seems to be doing good work with propaganda.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, July 19.—The Massachusetts State Executive Committee met on July 9 with Goldstein, Page, and Porter present and Page in the chair; Sherman came later.

Vote on national referendum "B" from Boston, financial reports from Worcester, Ware, Lawrence, East Bridgewater, Fitchburg, Milford, Adams, New Bedford, Haverhill, Lowell, Reading, and Boston, and communications from National Secretary, William Mailly, East Boston, Avon, Lowell, Fitchburg, Reading, Beverly, Milford, Cambridge, Worcester, Newburyport, Leominster, Clinton, and Secretary Putney of the political State Committee were received and filed, and appropriate action taken.

Comrade Goldstein was requested and appointed to debate with the Prohibitionists at Lowell on Sunday, July 20, in response to a request for a debater from the Lowell Socialist Club.

The Secretary was instructed to request the National Secretary to inquire through this Committee regarding delinquencies or delays of clubs, and to conduct other correspondence directly through the Executive Committee, the sending out of financial reports and like matters excepted.

The Secretary was also instructed to communicate with Comrade William T. Brown and Bartlett regarding the proposed tour of the former in Massachusetts.

NEW YORK CARPENTERS.

The Brotherhood of Carpenters in New York City is having trouble with the Fuller Construction Company, the largest concern of the sort in the United States, having a capitalization of $66,000,000.

The company tried to introduce the sub-contracting system in the work of floor laying. The men, however, absolutely refused to submit to what they rightly describe as a "sweating system," which is calculated to drive them to work harder and to introduce dissensions into their ranks.

The company is insisting on its point and has laid off about a hundred and sixty carpenters on its two largest jobs, one of them being Macy's new store, pending reconsideration by the union. The union will stand by its position, even if it should be forced into an open fight with this powerful company.

—Josh Billings says: "Tew enjoy a good reputashun, give publicly and steal privately."

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $4.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

WHAT OF WOMANHOOD?

Capitalism and the Sanctity of the Family—Illustrated by the Doings of Elihu Root.

The "water-cure" revelations disclosed by the Philippine investigations have shamed even the "good" citizen.

America now stands before the world as base, as brutal and as unprincipled as the most debauched nation of history.

A Fouth of July celebration is now the very flower of hypocrisy.

It is true you cannot bring an indictment against a whole people. In the most degraded of countries there are still a few who love truth and justice and morality. But a country is judged by its official acts and its morality can rise no higher than its official representatives.

A Root of All Evil.

England has a Chamberlain; America has a Root; an unspeakable Root; a Root of all Evil.

"God," said Wendell Phillips, "gives us great scoundrels as texts for anti-slavery sermons."

It has been clearly and indisputably proven by public investigation that Root knew what was going on in the Philippines and that he perpetrated the lie of both commission and omission.

But as the head of the War Department he is guilty of crimes more unspeakable than the water-cure, lying, and murder.

He has systematically aided in the debauchery of women, and the equally vile degradation of the men who "are preparing the way of the missionary in the Philippines."

Why do not the missionaries begin on Root, the "regulator" of vice, the master procureur of the United States government?

The capitalist newspapers and the capitalist pulpits are strenuous in upholding the sanctity of marriage and the sanctity of the home. Whose marriage, and whose home, do they mean?

As represented by Root, the Americans are a nation of panderers to the lust of their hired murderers.

These words may seem harsh but they are sternly and awfully true. The Americans are responsible for their agents; and Root is their hired agent.

Root has been "regulating vice" in the Philippines, that interesting social aspect of benevolent assimilation which is supposed to enable the soldier to indulge himself in the basest license with safety to his body, and Root has been regulating it in such manner that if the decent women of America were not kept in ignorance of his infamy he would be driven by public sentiment out of public life.

A few women do know it, and they have done what they can. As a result of their efforts the gross and revolting public insults systematically inflicted upon women in the Philippines have been somewhat modified. A Washington woman, Margaret Dye Ellis, was largely instrumental in forcing Root to act. Letters without number and many petitions signed by those who knew went to the War Department. They called for the abolition of the disgrace, and they were unheeded.

Press and Brothel Twins.

A respect for woman at home means a respect for woman everywhere. Women don't vote. Mr. Root didn't care very much about the petitions; he knew they would not get into the press.

How did he know it? He knew it because capitalism is one: the departments work together; the press and the brothel are twins; they both are the instruments of debauchery.

The officers of the national American Woman Suffrage Association, who had been memoralizing the government on the subject for two years, passed resolutions on the question at the time of the national convention last February, and sent a copy to every newspaper in Washington, but not one printed them. Mrs. Ellis made an earnest appeal before the Woman's National Council and secured the adoption of strong resolutions by that body.

She showed to the officers of the suffrage association and the council the official registration book issued by the United States authorities to one of the child prostitutes of the Philippines, whose name, translated, is "Mary of the Cross." Her photograph (the photograph of each "registered" woman was required to be pasted on the front of her book to identify her) was the portrait of a girl seemingly about twelve years old, with a childlike face and big, pathetic, dark eyes. The book contains the official records of her regular examinations by a government surgeon, and his signature testifying to her state of health.

Mrs. Ellis left this infamous book at the White House to be shown to the President; she placed it in the hands of a number of members of Congress. Finally she published a circular, giving the facts and a facsimile of the portrait, and left a copy in a sealed envelope at the house of every member of the Congressional Committee on the Philippines, besides sending copies out elsewhere.

How Root Sneaked.

This was on February 17. On February 19 the following order was cabled to Manila:

"Wright, Manila: It is considered advisable that upon medical examination of prostitutes no fees be charged and no certificates of examination given. Medical officers can keep their own records of names, descriptions, residences and dates of examination, and it is believed that the necessary protection against disease can in a great measure be secured in this way without the liability of a misunderstanding and the charge of maintaining a system of licensed prostitution.

"ROOT."

It will be observed that Mr. Root's dispatch in no wise abolished the evil; it simply arranged for the public to be kept in ignorance of it.

Mrs. Ellis had an interview a few days ago with Col. C. R. Edwards, chief of the insular division in the War Department. In a letter to the "Union Signal" she says:

"He asked if I knew who had been sending out 'the circulars with the picture of the Filipino girl?' I replied, 'I sent them.' With a laugh he rejoined, 'Well, it was legitimate, but it has swamped us; 10 clerks were employed answering the mail, which reached from the floor to my shoulders, and I have been here late into the evening working myself. We expect soon to issue a book answering the many questions we have received, and it will not be a small book, either.'"

Taft Was Not Strong.

Before making her appeal to the public through the circular, Mrs. Ellis, representing the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, had repeatedly asked Governor Taft to accord her a ten-minutes' interview, but on the plea of lack of strength he declined to receive her, although he was strong enough to speak at public dinners, besides testifying daily before the Senate committee on the Philippines. If Mrs. Ellis had represented as many organized voters as she did organized Woman's Christian Temperance Union women, Gov. Taft would probably have found himself strong enough to see her.

Two Ideas About Women.

The Socialists declare that woman is a human being and that the ballot is her natural right. They declare that her inferior position is due to the infamous system of private property of which she is a part and which the law of the land upholds, and which she in her disfranchisement is powerless to change. This is why she has to beg and pray and sit around and pass imploring resolutions which moral lepers like Root throw into the waste basket.

The official recognition of woman as an instrument for the gratification of lust shows that she is still tacitly counted an inferior animal and a chattel, despite the grandiloquent tributes paid to her by those who maintain the system which permits of her degradation.

The Socialists declare that no woman will be truly respected while any woman is kept in degrading servitude.

The child-prostitute of the Philippines registers the status of woman in the world market.

It is the same "government" which maintains the "official register" in the Philippines and issues licenses to prostitutes that makes a marriage "legal" at home. The Socialist refuses to respect such hypocrisy. The Socialist is not equal to the charlatanism of respecting a state of society which combines the Bible with the water-cure and the "sanctity of the home" with licensed prostitution.

The Socialist is for free womanhood, economic and political. Prostitution in the marriage state is as hateful to woman as prostitution without it. The present state witnesses and licenses her sale in both cases. Only by the abolition of the idea of private property in the things man has no right to own can woman gain her long sought liberty.

The Socialist Party is the only political organization which declares unqualifiedly for woman's suffrage and means determinedly that she shall have it. In freeing herself she will help free the world from the basest and most degrading superstitions that have ever enslaved humanity.—The Socialist Spirit.

LAP-DOGS VS. CHILDREN.

Socialist Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania Writes on Capitalist Slavery and the Way Out.

You may ask me why I am a Socialist, and I answer, because I love freedom and hate slavery—I love independence and hate tyranny.

I know that social justice will never obtain while it is possible for one man to gather millions from the toil of others. I despise with every drop of my blood a social system in which the lap-dogs of the rich are treated better than millions of the children of the poor.

A little while ago I stood beside a great Southern factory and saw hundreds of little children that should have been in school—little children with the look of subjugation on their poor wan, drawn features, and a far away look in their eyes that seemed to ask for something that their little tongues feared to speak—a look that was to me, the saddest, and at the same time the most withering rebuke to this commercial system that was robbing them of the joys of their childhood, the purity of their youth, and of the possibility of true manhood and womanhood. And as I looked I saw them coming, not only with these looks, and these silent but merited curses, but I saw a doctor who said that he had personally amputated more than a hundred baby fingers that had been injured in that mill, and I saw little tots without fingers, thumbs, and sometimes the whole hand was missing, and was forced to exclaim, that chattel slavery in the height of its infamy, was a paradise compared to the commercial system that allows little children to be thus ground into profits to support an aristocracy of wealth that is cruel as fate, and as heartless as a hyena.

Socialism comes with its gospel of industrial justice, saying that those who produce the wealth of a country, must and shall own it, that none shall eat by the sweat of another's face, but of their own—it says that none shall be allowed to stand lengthwise in the trough of opportunity (hoglike) and monopolize the bounties of nature. Socialism does not say that you shall trust others to see that you get justice, but asks that you join in the ranks of those who advocate its principles, and help secure them for each other.

It says that the life of the poor man is as sacred as that of the rich; his wife and daughter deserve as good treatment; but that as long as the system lasts that allows the few to exploit those who labor, the daughters of the few will wear silk and labor not, while those of the poor will wear calico and be the servants of the others and their fathers will remain poor. Socialism says that, when the sources of human life are owned in common; when out of the bounteous granaries of the storehouse of nature, the humblest child shall draw its sustenance; when want and hunger and profits and exploitation have become but dreams of distorted fantasy as they will, only to be remembered as the hideous nightmare is, when the sun of day has driven away the shadows of the night; when competition shall have given away to emulation; when all the world will hold no more sacred thought than that of splendid human life; when it is possible for you to become what you yourself would like to be and what organized society will help you to become.—J. W. Slayton in New Castle Tribune.

THE PARTY'S WORK IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Five New Locals This Week, with 184 Members—Activity Throughout the State, Especially in Strike Field.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21.—The State Committee of the Socialist Party, at its meeting this evening, granted charters to new locals at Coaldale, Schuylkill County; Archbald, Lackawanna County; and Nesquehoning, Treskow, and Hauto, Carbon County; in all, five locals, with one hundred and eighty-four charter members.

Every local in the state reports active preparations being made for campaign work and larger quantities of literature being distributed than ever before.

Many locals ask to be visited by Comrade Slayton, the Socialist candidate for Governor. The State Committee, however, considers that as the anthracite field is now the critical point, and as there is very little money in the treasury in proportion to the amount of work to be done, Comrade Slayton can, for the present, visit only locals lying on his route to the strike field.

News comes from the Red Bird coal mine in Washington County that the DeLeonites (S. L. P.) are trying to assist the bosses in breaking up the miners' union. The miners in mass meeting unanimously voted to dig no coal until the union is recognized. Workingmen should bear in mind the fact that there is no connection between the Socialist Party and the so-called Socialist Labor Party or De Leonite organization. The two parties are hostile organizations, the conflict between them being largely on the matter of trade unionism—the S. L. P. opposing the unions, while the Socialist Party supports them.

Comrade John Collins has organized a local each day in the last four weeks and revisited a number of locals and found them flourishing and adding rapidly to their membership.

Lansford was organized July 5; on July 16 had over two hundred members. They are holding weekly meetings and will have a membership of four hundred in two weeks. Nesquehoning organized with thirty-two members; at the next meeting their roll showed over two hundred. One comrade writes, "The day is ours."

At Coaldale, a Democrat debated with Comrade Collins. The result was a local formed with thirty-eight members. The miners are beginning to know that Democrat and Republican alike spell Capitalist.

A comrade writes from Edwardsdale: "It did my heart good to see dozens of men, who have called the two Socialists in this town all the names that are not in the dictionary, for trying to disrupt the two old parties, stand up and take the pledge to sever their connection with all capitalist parties and cast a Socialist ballot for their class."

The schooling in Socialist policy and practise has made these miners hopeful and anxious for the political day of reckoning. In every mining camp they are saying: "What we need first is a Socialist sheriff." They are informed as to what course a Socialist sheriff would take, as a temporary measure. Recognizing the need of "protection to property" which the capitalists alwas clamor about when a strike comes, he would employ every striking miner as an assistant peace officer and pay them from the county treasury, collecting the necessary funds by taxation from the persons whose property would be so nobly and carefully protected. No lives lost; no property destroyed; just a nice, peaceful strike.

The miners can imagine what would happen under these circumstances. The "operators" would readily discover that there was something to arbitrate. The cables under the ocean would get hot with Pierpont pounding his understrappers to "See Mitchell; Mitchell at once and settle!"

The miners are thinking and learning more about politics to the minute now than they knew since they were born, and they are beginning to recognize that politics is a splendid game, if played right by their class.

It may be an anthracite miner that will be the first to hurl the challenge of our class into the teeth of the capitalist class in the halls of Congress.

Comrade Edward Moore, editor of the "New Era" of Philadelphia will spend his vacation in the strike field, under the direction of the State Committee and Organizer Collins, giving Collins a few days of much needed rest.

Literature has been sent in vast quantities to the miners by Comrade J. A. Wayland of Girard, Kansas, besides providing us, as selected, some of the best leaflets, pamphlets, and books, to the value of $165.

Contributions have been recived as follows: J. Stransky, Baltimore, Md., $2; Bardsman, Kingston, N. Y., $1; H. J. Weissner, Pottstown, Pa., 50 cents; Thirty-first and Thirty-second Ward Club, Philadelphia, $4; Eva B. Cook, Brooklyn, N. Y., $15; Visushil Joint, Pa., $1; Fortieth Ward Club, Philadelphia, $2; Socialist League, Philadelphia, $2.50; J. E. Perry, Erie, Pa., $5; previously acknowledged, $127.15; total, $160.15. As soon as an authorized appeal for aid is issued by the Miners' Union, one-half of all money received by us will be forwarded to the treasurer of the Miners' Union. Send all contributions to J. Edelmann, treasurer, 807 Cambria street, Philadelphia.

A VOICE FROM FLORIDA.

State Convention Advises that All Party Efforts Be Concentrated on Line of the Class Struggle.

At the convention held in Orlando on July 14 to effect a state organization of the Socialist Party for Florida, the following address, written by W. C. Green, was endorsed for publication:

"This convention affirms its adherence to the national platform of the Socialist Party and makes the following suggestions:

"It should be the business of every Socialist to work and agitate EXCLUSIVELY for the capturing of the public powers of the government by the working class. This is the very soul and essence of Socialism, the PARAMOUNT issue, to secure which the Socialist Party is organized, overshadowing all others.

"Everything else is but subsidiary to this great purpose and should be so treated by all Socialists. By far the easiest, quickest, and surest way of securing all the demands of our platform is by promoting this one idea and working for the rapid growth of the Socialist Party. We have reached the point where it is a waste of energy for Socialists to agitate for public ownership, direct legislation, or any other of the general demands of our platform, and we should now devote ourselves exclusively to educating the people to the absolute necessity of putting the Socialist Party into control and possession of the powers of the government.

"Public ownership and direct legislation are now being promoted by the trusts and other forces inimical to Socialism so rapidly that it will be difficult for us to keep pace with them and inform the minds of the people of the truth that public ownership of public utilities while the government remains in the hands of the capitalist class only tends to cement and increase the power of that class to continue wage slavery more surely and indefinitely.

"Our enemies are cunning and wholly unscrupulous, and are backed by thousands of years of traditions, which, as Marx has said, 'weigh like an Alp upon the minds of the living.' They are also in possession of the citadel of the control of the government, which is 'nine points in the law.' They are also in control of the terrible power which the possession of unlimited supplies of money gives to any cause under our present system. They will not scruple to use every subtle art and device that the human mind can invent to entrap, to sidetrack, and to head off our cause. Many a good cause in history, as Comrade Herron has pointed out, has been overthrown and perverted to base uses by being ADOPTED by its enemy, and the greatest danger to Socialism to-day is the certainty that our enemies will try to destroy it by putting on its livery and masquerading in a spurious imitation of Socialism in order to deceive the people. It behooves all Socialists, therefore, to be extremely wary of all such schemes and to look with suspicion upon all such pretenses of our opponents, and to expose all such tricks at once. The safest way to prevent the minds of the people from being imposed upon is to stick closely to our fundamental proposition that our chief aim is to obtain possession of the greatest of all the monopolies our enemies now control, the boss monopoly of the world in all times and in all places, and by which all the others have been maintained—namely, the complete control of the governing power.

"We are poor in purse and weak in numbers and could never hope for success against the tremendous forces opposed to us, if our cause was the promotion of any mere scheme; but we know that it is being brought about by that subtle and irresistible power we call evolution, and that all our enemies can possibly do will be to DEFER the inauguration of Socialism for a time, but cannot prevent its coming eventually. Our business is solely to see to it that they do not defer its coming, and to do this by showing the people the exact truth and the reasons why it is necessary that the Socialist Party should be placed in control of the government at the earliest possible moment.

"Our enemies are now in the position of the crew of a sinking ship, and will certainly resort to the usual expedient of throwing overboard one after another of all the matters we demand, such as public ownership, direct legislation, and other matters of importance to our cause, just as fast as the growth of our party seems in their minds to make it necessary. Not only is it unnecessary to trouble ourselves about these matters further, but by continuing to agitate for them we are almost sure to be lured into some of the pitfalls that our opponents will dig for us, and so weaken and endanger our cause. We need not oppose THEIR adopting them, but our attitude towards such acts on their part should be one of indifference, and a never ceasing warning to the people that public ownership, of itself, is not Socialism and will not effect the object they wish of emancipation of the workers and the overthrow of capitalism, but will, on the contrary, be like the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out of the cast.

"'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty'; so, we should not only at all times be alert to detect and render nugatory the wiles and snares of our enemies and offer them as few points through which they may outwit and trip us up as possible, but let us follow strictly our own doctrine of concentration of effort upon vital things and thus at the same time avoid all unnecessary waste of energy. This is always good tactics, both in war and in peace."

WHAT SOCIALISM IS.

There is only one Socialism—Socialists differ as to what will be after success is won because the working out of details cannot be determined beforehand, but fundamental principles are definite and agreed to by all, viz.:

First—Collective ownership and control of the means of production.

Second—Collective control of distribution so that there shall be no profits but all go to producers.

Third—Direct power vested in the people through the referendum.

Fourth—All this dependent upon political victory by a working class Socialist party.—Colorado Chronicle.

WOMAN'S NATIONAL SOCIALIST UNION.

Mrs. Wenonah Stevens Abbott, Oak, Shasta County, Cal., president.; Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington, Iowa, corresponding secretary.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We stand for a new order of society based upon the principles of justice and equality as applied to economics.

We declare that the rapid concentration of capital and its control over the government has forced the issue; and that, while the trust represents the most advanced stage of present economic progress, yet because it is based upon the private ownership of the means of production, it is opposed to freedom and fatal to the future welfare of the republic; therefore the next step in social advancement must be taken, which is a change from capitalism to Socialism, from competition to co-operation, from the private ownership of the means of production to the ownership and administration by the people.

Therefore, we stand pledged to teach the principles of this higher industrial system called the co-operative commonwealth; to enlist women in the advancement of these principles in every practical way that may present itself; to educate the young in these truths; to form a better public sentiment; and, finally, we pledge ourselves to do all in our power, individually and collectively, to bring about that universal co-operation founded upon the Golden Rule of Love and Justice, which shall take the place of competitive strife and discord.

Consumers' Leagues.

Mrs. Nathan, of New York City, is lecturing along the Pacific Coast, and organizing "Consumers' Leagues." Mrs. Nathan explains to the women of this section what a "sweatshop" is, and shows them how easily contagious diseases may be carried from the home of the worker to that of the purchaser of the garments made in these tenement house workrooms. It is well for the women of California to learn these facts, as many of them are ignorant of conditions in our Eastern cities, and I believe that a large share of the ready-made underwear as well as outside garments, is sent to the Middle West and the Pacific Coast. The amount of good that can be done by such leagues as that Mrs. Nathan represents may seem small as compared to the evil it is attacking, but it helps to open people's eyes to facts, and in so far is surely of use. Mrs. Nathan recommends her hearers to purchase only garments bearing the "Consumers' League" label, or the label of the trades unions, and states that for a year past the trades unions have refused their labels to the "sweatshops." Goods bearing either of the above labels are supposed to be made under proper sanitary conditions. I do not know how the "Consumers' Leagues" will deal with the Chinaman, who is the chief manufacturer of women's underwear in these parts, and here I apprehend a difficulty. Mrs. Nathan states that in the East the cheapest white underwear is the most likely to be made under proper conditions, for such goods are made in large quantities, and therefore usually in the factory proper, where there is a certain amount of legal inspection, etc. It is the most expensive garment, the one that calls for a large amount of handwork, that is most likely to be taken to the home of the worker. Now, in the case of the Chinaman, all the work, whether cheap or dear, is usually done in some celler or small back room, and the extreme cheapness at which he sells his goods, will, I think, make it hard to deal with the question. Many people find themselves compelled to buy as cheaply as possible, even though they may risk contagion.

On the whole, it appears to us that the chief good that can be accomplished by the "Consumers' Leagues" is the creation of a sentiment opposed to the sweatshop. So long as there is a class of unemployed, it is inevitable that there will be suffering and degradation among the workers. The root of the sweatshop is competition.

TICKET IN WESTCHESTER.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., July 21.—The Social Democrats of Westchester County held a convention at Tarrytown on Saturday to nominate county, congressional, senatorial, and assembly candidates. Twenty-eight delegates were present, representing six locals. C. H. Hahn of Peekskill acted as chairman and A. F. Simmonds of the same place as secretary.

The ticket chosen is as follows:

For Congress, Nineteenth District—W. T. Woods of Mt. Vernon.

For County Treasurer—R. Lesser of New Rochelle.

For Coroners—Paul J. Bauerberg of Yonkers and A. Hutchinson of Mt. Vernon.

For State Senator—I. E. Lamson of Williamsbridge.

For Assembly, Second District—Charles Moder of Williamsbridge.

All the candidates are active and faithful workers in the labor movement. W. T. Woods is Secretary and Business Agent of the Bronx District of the Brotherhood of Carpenters. I. E. Lamson is President of Carpenters' Local No. 493. A. Hutchinson is a delegate to the Mt. Vernon Trades Council, and R. Lesser is also a union carpenter.

Resolutions were adopted by the convention re-affirming allegiance to the revolutionary principles of international Socialism and to the national, state, and local organizations of the Socialist or Social Democratic Party, and especially endorsing the trade union resolution adopted at the Indianapolis Convention of 1900. A systematic distribution of party literature was provided for.

After the convention a meeting was held in the public square, H. W. Wessling presiding, with State Organizer Spring as the speaker. A large audience gathered and showed marked attention until, a little after nine o'clock, the rain came down in torrents and dispersed the crowd. Two hundred copies of The Worker and a quantity of leaflets were distributed.

All the locals in the county are to be included in Comrade Hanford's tour of the state, which Organizer Spring is arranging, and comrades should see that no effort is spared to bring out good crowds.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Corporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

THE PARTY PICNIC.

Remember that tickets for the New York party picnic of June 21, which was postponed on account of rain, are still good for September 7. In the meantime, sell all the aditional tickets you can and turn in the money collected as soon as possible.

DAILY PAPER CONFERENCE.

Many Unions Represented at First Session.

The Spirit Shown Promises Good Results from the Work—The Conference a Permanent Body—Holds Next Meeting on August 14.

On Thursday, July 24, was held the first meeting of the conference of trade unions and other labor organizations called together for the establishment of a Socialist and Trade Union daily newspaper in the city of New York. The meeting was held in the Labor Lyceum.

Sixty-nine delegates were present, representing the following organizations: The Central Federated Union; Slate and Tile Roofers; Wood Carvers and Modellers; Amalgamated Electrical Workers; Cigar Makers Nos. 90, 141, and 213; Cigar Packers No. 251; United Metal Workers No. 50; Painters No. 499; Ladies' Wrapper Makers; Roofers, Slate, Tile and Metal Workers; Boot and Shoe Workers No. 309; International Association of Machinists, District No. 15; Carpenters Nos. 503 and 774; Steam Engineers; Ladies' Waist Makers; Jewelry Workers No. 1; Brass Moulders No. 61; United Upholsterers No. 1; Pie Bakers No. 112; United Hebrew Trades; Branches 1, 2, 3, 4, 75, 91, 153, and 179 of the Workingmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society; the Arbeiter Maennerchor; and the following Assembly Districts of the Social Democratic Party—5th, 12th, 15th, and 17th, 18th and 20th, 21st, and 35th, Br. 2. Henry L. Slobodin was chosen as chairman and William Butscher as secretary.

John Spargo and Morris Hillquit addressed the delegates upon the object for which the conference had been called, pointing out the ways in which the capitalist press is daily used against the working class and the benefit which the organizations of labor would derive from the establishment of a good daily paper owned by workingmen and controlled exclusively in the interest of the working class. Comrade Spargo very forcibly pictured the splendid advance which would be made and the additional power which the trade unions of New York and vicinity would wield in their struggle with the capitalist class when provided with such a paper which would truly represent their conditions and accurately report the news of the labor movement. Comrade Hillquit called attention to the numerical strength of the labor organizations of the city and showed how easily these hundred thousand unionists could raise the fund of $50,000 necessary for launching the daily and putting it upon a firm basis.

The addresses of these comrades were well received and an active interest was shown by the trade-union delegates present.

The Conference elected a credentials committee consisting of Delegates Dooley of the C. F. U., Marshall of the Machinists, Scheftel of the Jewelry Workers, Trainor of the United Standard Engineers; and Moder of Carpenters No. 503; also a committee on rules, consisting of Frazer of the S. D. P., Beuro of the Cigar Packers, and Wolf of Cigar Makers No. 90.

After these committees had reported, a general discussion of the subject was declared in order, so that all delegates might be fully informed upon the work in hand. After full discussion, it was decided to make the Conference a permanent body, and to hold the next meeting in the Labor Lyceum, Thursday evening, August 14.

Thus the first conference for the daily paper was brought to a close. An excellent spirit prevailed throughout the entire meeting, and the impression was that the men gathered there were determined, resolute, and unanimous in their desire to carry out the work they were called upon to do.

When the next conference takes place in August we may expect to see many more organizations in line for the Daily, as a number of the delegates have volunteered to act as a committee to visit other trade unions and enlist their co-operation in this common enterprise for organized labor and the entire working class.

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which fills paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

THE FREE SPEECH LEAGUE.

In consequence of the many violations of the right of free speech perpetrated since the assassination of President McKinley, a Free Speech League has been organized. The league demands freedom of peaceable assembly, of discussion and propaganda; an uncensored press, telegraph, and telephone; an uninspected express; an inviolable mail.

For these it works by means of the press and platform and the courts; by persuasion, argument, petition, protest, and demand; through the agencies of election and rejection. But the education of brains and quickening of consciences are first in order of time and effect. For further information address the Secretary, W. J. Terwilliger, 171 E. Eighty-third street, New York.

General Meeting of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association to Be Held in the Labor Lyceum Next Monday.

The Board of Management of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association met last Monday evening with Comrade Bowerman in the chair. On roll call ten members of the fifteen of the Board responded.

The Secretary reported on the conference held on Thursday, July 24, as well as on the matters pertaining to the collection of pledges, etc.

The Entertainment Committee reported that progress was being made toward arranging and outlining the different departments to be created for carrying on the fair to be held at Grand Central Palace next March.

The committee in charge of the Damrosch Concert were instructed to bring in a detailed report giving an account of expenses, receipts, and tickets outstanding at the next meeting of the Board.

The monthly general meeting of the Association will be held Monday evening, August 4, at the Labor Lyceum. Every member should attend. Applicants for membership must, under the by-laws, be present at the meeting.

The conditions of membership in the W. C. P. A. are: First, the applicant must be a member in good standing of the Socialist Party—called in New York the Social Democratic Party; second, he (or she) must buy one share of stock for $5—$1 to be paid on the proposition of his name, $1 on his admission, and the rest within one year.

All branches of the S. D. P. and the Workingmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society in the city of New York which have as yet not elected delegates to the conference for the Socialist and Trade Union Daily are requested to do so at once, as the next meeting of the Conference takes place on Thursday evening, August 14, at the Labor Lyceum.

Comrades belonging to trade unions are also urged to bring the matter of the conference to the attention of their respective organizations with the object in view of sending two delegates to attend the Conference, which is to be a permanent body with certain rights and duties in connection with the publication of the daily. Please remember this when you attend the next meeting of your union.

Notice to Contributors.

Pledges should be drawn and checks and money orders made payable to the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association. All communications should be addressed to the Agent of the Association, Wm. Butscher, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

The Worker will contain, each week, a list of contributions received up to Monday preceding the date of issue.

If any contribution sent is not promptly acknowledged the sender should at once inform Comrade Butscher, that the matter may be investigated and set right.

Those who have made pledges should remember to send in the monthly instalments promptly, saving the trouble and expense of notifying them. Let each one feel his personal responsibility for the work we have undertaken and his power to hasten the coming of the Socialist Daily.

CUT WAGES, CUT SHOVELS.

Two gangs of navvies, one German and the other Italian, were engaged working on a railway in Germany recently. The contractor announced that he intended to reduce wages, whereupon the Germans struck work. The Italians went on working, but carried out a novel and effective scheme to get even with the bosses. They simply cut an inch off the end of their shovels. When this was discovered the ringleader was asked for an explanation and said: "Not so much pay, not lift so much earth. So much longer last work."

WHY NEW YORK'S WORKINGMEN NEED A DAILY NEWSPAPER.

Address to the Trade Unions Invited to the First Conference for the Workingmen's Daily.

Fellow Workingmen:—Every workingman in New York City knows that nowadays working for a livelihood does not mean alone regular occupation at his trade and getting his pay, for in order to keep our trade in a tolerable condition, we must often strike, make demands, and suffer lockout and blacklist. We must also have organizations, meetings, discussions and other things that keep us together and prevent our employers from reducing us to a condition that would be worse than outright slavery.

But in the struggle with our employers we are at a great disadvantage, for the capitalists have on their side a powerful ally against us—the daily press. The New York dailies are always on the side of the capitalists and against the workingmen. The printers have learned this during the "Sun" strike, when on critical occasions every newspaper studiously avoided any mention of the strike and refused space to the striking printers even for pay. The grocery clerks are learning the same lesson now. We can mention any number of instances where trade unionists could not find a newspaper which would accept a paid advertisement, if it contained anything against the interest of their employers. Is there a workinkman so uninformed as to think that the capitalists ever have similar difficulties. Every newspaper is in their pay. If some newspaper poses as a "friend of labor," it is only in order to serve the capitalists all the better. At any rate the capitalists have many newspapers, as the "Sun," the "Times," the "Tribune," etc., which are unequivocally their mouthpieces.

Why, then, should we, workingmen, not have at least one newspaper which should always stand for our interests and present our side, where our affairs would be fully discussed and our meetings advertised and reported? It is really our own fault that we have not long since such a newspaper. Our German fellow trade unionists have a daily newspaper of their own—the "Volkszeitung"—for the last twenty-three years. Twenty-three years is a long enough time to be behind and we need not wait any longer.

The Socialists have taken the initiative and they ask the co-operation of every English-speaking trade union in New York. Let not the word "Socialists" prejudice you. The "Volkszeitung" was started and is now conducted by Socialists. Still—or, rather, because of that—it was a loyal trade union paper all these twenty-three years and it is so now. It speaks every day to the German workingmen of the principles of trade unionism, of conditions in their trades, and of what is going on in their organizations.

We know that many workingmen, while agreeing on the necessity of the daily, will doubt our ability to publish a newspaper worthy of such name. The weakest point of the workingmen of New York is that they have a poor opinion of their own power. The capitalists know and fear our power to accomplish things. It is our own ignorance, the lingering doubt, the poisoning suspicion that paralyzes our effort and initiative. We want the sympathy of every thinking and honest workingman and we want his aid and support.

Fellow workingmen! Bitter experience has taught us to sacrifice each his individual interests for the interests of our class. In this case this virtue becomes an absolute necessity. Do not rest satisfied with electing delegates to the conference, but DO SOMETHING—each of you, who are now reading these lines—so that when you enjoy the fruit of this our common labor, you may justly say: "I am gathering the fruits; for I have planted the seed."

Fraternally,
WORKINGMEN'S CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION.

The Conference meets again in the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, on Thursday evening, August 14. Every union or other organization in sympathy with the labor movement in Greater New York is invited to send delegates. If a letter of invitation has not reached YOUR union, it is due to some accident or oversight. Send your delegates, and take part in the work from the beginning.

British Unionists Will Aid Striking Miners.

Comrade Tillett, Organizer of the British Federation, Submits the Offer through Comrade Hayes of Cleveland—President Mitchell Will Accept.

The international solidarity of Capital is illustrated every day—as when we see King Morgan of America hobnobbing with King Edward of England, President Loubet of France, and Emperor William of Germany, while his hired managers, editors, deputies, and judges at home are taking care of the strike for him.

But the workers, too, are learning to forget national boundaries and prejudices and unite, the world over, against the master class. The international solidarity of Labor received a striking illustration within the last week in the publication of the following letters:

"Max Hayes, Secretary Cleveland Labor Federation, Cleveland, O.

"Dear Sir:—Kindly notify President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of the cordial and substantial sympathy of Great Britain's trade unionists with the striking anthracite miners in their battle for their rights.

"An organized system of collection of relief funds in England, Scotland, and Ireland waits only on the indorsement of the leaders of labor in your country.

"Please inform me promptly, so that I can consult with other members of the special committee I am representing in writing to you, whether or not our financial assistance and co-operation is needed and desired.

"BENJAMIN TILLETT,
"Organizer British Federation of Trade Unions."

Mitchell Will Accept.

Comrade Hayes lost no time in transmitting this communication by telegraph to President Mitchell and received the following reply:

"Max S. Hayes, Cleveland, O.:

"Dear Sir and Brother:—Replying to your favor of July 18, permit me to thank you for forwarding the message from Brother Tillett, and also for your own expression of interest in the outcome of the miners' strike.

"I shall write Brother Tillett in a few days and accept the offer of assistance from the British General Federation of Trade Unions. With best wishes, I am

"Yours truly,
"JOHN MITCHELL,
"President United Mine Workers of America."

Tillett a Socialist.

It is, perhaps, significant that Comrade Tillett, whom many American workingmen will remember from his visit to this country last year, chose Comrade Hayes as the man through whom to transmit the generous offer. Socialists are recognized as standing everywhere for international solidarity of the working class. Tillett is an active Socialist, as is also Pete Curran, one of his fellow officers of the British Federation, Comrade Curran was fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention from the British trade unions in 1900, as was Tillett in 1901.

MIKE SABOT.

By Paul Shivell.

Mike was a lad of seventeen,
Employed in the mine;
His work was hard, his wages mean,
His love of men divine.

Three comrades dragged he through the damps.
The searchers found him dead
Beside the fourth. Their streaming lamps
Bent, haloed, o'er his head.

Slow, tenderly, they bear him forth;
So soon his task is done;
They lay his body in the earth
His spirit leads us on!

O comrades! there are holy lights
Down in the earth that shine;
We see few stars on cloudy nights,
Few gods in shop and mine.

But when, beyond the years that are,
We reach the years to be,
There glad we'll count, ah, many a star
Whose light we cannot see.

THE MINER'S RISK.

The report of the Mine Inspectors' Bureau of the state of Pennsylvania shows that during the past decade the average yearly fatalities in the anthracite coal mines were 437 and that for the year 1901 there were 484 fatal and 1,256 non-fatal accidents. This means that for every 119,000 tons of coal brought to the surface one person is killed and more than one seriously injured. It means that for each day the mines are in operation more than two persons' lives are sacrificed and more than five persons are injured. Indeed, it is a matter of record that eight times as many men and boys are killed and injured annually in the anthracite coal mines of Pennsylvania as were killed and wounded from the American ranks in the Spanish-American war in Cuba.

SLOW STARVATION.

Few now starve outright; but a large number, especially of the young, starve gradually, as has been abundantly shown by recent investigations; but many more deaths are occasioned in other ways. A carpenter is ill, and previous hard times have exhausted his resources. He dies; whereas a more generous supply of delicacies, better nourishing and more skillful medical attendance would have saved his life. . . . Another is unable to afford new shoes, and wet feet at a time of feebleness, and insufficient nourishment, cause his death. These examples may be multiplied ad libitum. Thus it is that every pressure of hard times kills thousands upon thousands, even in America. . . . Statistics have established the fact beyond controversy that laborers are shorter lived by many years than those who belong to the wealthier social classes.—Richard T. Ely.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Socialist Party Forging Steadily Forward.

Three New Locals Last Week—Prominent Unionist Declares for Socialism—In the Strike Field.

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—At tonight's meeting of the State Committee of the Socialist Party charters were granted to three new locals—Summit Hill, in Carbon County, and Tamaqua and Seek in Schuylkill County.

Comrade Slayton reports that he cannot begin his tour till September 3 and all earlier dates made for him are therefore necessarily cancelled.

No Compromise.

The Mauch Chunk matter referred to Organizer Collins is reported satisfactorily settled by the suspension of those members who believed they could take interest in capitalist politics and retain membership in the Socialist Party.

The referendum blanks on election of fraternal delegate to the Canadian Socialist convention will reach all the locals within a week. Prompt return of the vote is requested; votes returned to this office after August 26 cannot be counted.

The draft of the state constitution was completed at a special meeting of the State Committee held July 23. It is now in the printer's hands and proof sheets for a referendum vote will be forwarded to each local in a few days. One of the provisions reads:

"ANY APPLICANT FOR MEMBERSHIP, HOLDING A POSITION LUCRATIVE OR HONORARY, ELECTIVE OR APPOINTIVE, UNDER A CAPITALIST POLITICAL PARTY, MUST RESIGN SAID OFFICE BEFORE HE CAN BE ELECTED TO MEMBERSHIP."

A Welcome Convert.

Jerry N. Weiler of Mauch Chunk, perhaps the most widely known trade-unionist in the state and heretofore active in Democratic politics, who was almost certain to be the candidate of that party for State Senator in a Democratic district, has withdrawn from the contest and severed his connection with the Democratic party, in the following statement, published in the Mauch Chunk "News" of July 21:

"To My Friends:—After careful consideration, I have come to the conclusion to withdraw from the senatorial contest in this district, for several good, sufficient and distinct reasons. While feeling confident that in the present contest my chances for nomination are equally good with the other two contestants, yet, I feel that if I wish to be honest with myself, and consistent in the work for the benefit of my fellow beings, I cannot conscientiously work in harmony with any party that does not seek to abolish wage slavery, or help to elevate the human race. I will henceforth cast my lot with the rank and file of the Socialists, although in the minority, yet just and righteous. I do this from an entirely unselfish standpoint, and wish to thank by many friends for their sincere efforts in my behalf during this unfinished canvass."

Weiler was born in Allentown, Pa., in 1861 and attended public school there till he reached the age of thirteen, when he became a messenger boy for the Western Union and began the study of telegraphy. In 1878 he was secretary of the Telegraphers' Protective Association and later belonged to the telegraphers' organization of the Knights of Labor. In 1879 he entered the service of the Central Railway of New Jersey and has been in their employ most of the time since. A charter member of Division No. 73 of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and secretary of the same at the present time, he has attended every convention of the order since he joined. He has also been secretary of the State Legislative Board of Railroad Employees since its organization in 1894. In 1896 he was elected to the Assembly on the Democratic ticket. In the Legislature he introduced and successfully fought for what is known as the Weiler Law, guaranteeing the right of wage-workers to belong to labor organizations and providing penalties for interference by employers with the exercise of this right. The law was, of course, after a bitter struggle, declared unconstitutional by the Superior Court. In 1898 Weiler was nominated by the Democrats for Congressman-at-Large, being the only man on the state ticket of either old party who carried a dinner-pail. He ran 7,000 votes ahead of the ticket.

Mr. Weiler has done the best that a workingman elected for a capitalist ticket could do for his class. The futility of expecting anything from the old parties has simply been proven once more by his failure to accomplish what he had hoped, and his conversion to Socialism has followed as a natural result.

In a letter to the State Committee, he says: "I fail to see how I could have done otherwise and be true to myself. Everywhere I go the greetings I receive amply repay me for whatever I have tried to do in my humble way for our fellow workers, and the greatest surprise to me is that so many tell me I have done the proper thing who we never dreamt had a spark of Socialism in their make-up, and yet it now crops out and they are willing to let their neighbors know it."

In the Strike Field.

Comrades Collins and Moore have been doing excellent work in the mine field, and report constantly increasing interest and enthusiasm among the miners for Socialism. Comrade Moore, after five days in the field, writes as follows:

"It will be a crime if the Socialists of the United States permit the opportunity of capturing the anthracite coal fields to slip by. Collins and Mailly and Spargo have converted a majority of the miners in all the places they have visited, and all that is needed to make this propaganda work a complete success is to keep Socialist speakers in these fields. No one who has not been here would believe the wonderful change that has taken place in the political sentiment of the voters in the mining towns. Old men whose shoulders are stooped with toil and whose hair is whitened with age have taken up the gospel of the emancipation of Labor from wage slavery and vie in activity in spreading its glad tidings with the young men who have espoused the cause of Socialism.

"Men who joined the Republican party in the early days of the Abolition movement and who voted its ticket ever since are now buttonholing everybody they meet and talking Socialism to them.

"Democrats who were born in that political faith have left the party and are now devoting their time to converting the unregenerate. I spoke at Coaldale to the Miners' Union. After the meeting the chairman asked all present who had not yet joined the party to come up and put their names to the roll and twenty-four responded."

It is a known fact that the rapid rise of our movement in the coal districts is being carefully considered by the state committees of both old parties and the local politicians are at their wits' end.

Contributions for agitation among the miners have been received this week as follows: J. Ziska, Dunbar, Pa., $1; F. Hlavazek, Chicago, $1; J. Kazak, Chicago, 50 cents; George Phillips, Hyde Park, Mass., $7; Local Peekskill, N. Y., $1.50; Socialist Club, Lowell, Mass., $1; Karl Marx Club, Chicago, $5; H. John Nelson, Philadelphia, $2; Christian Sauer, Philadelphia, $1; Fortieth Ward Club, $2; A. M. Brooks, Fargo, N. D., $3; previously acknowledged, $160.15; total, $185.15. Send all contributions to J. Edelman, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

NO "PRACTICAL POLITICS."

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 8.—An alleged attempt of the Socialists of Cheyenne to capture the primary meetings of other parties has led to a peremptory order from the national headquarters of the Socialist Party in St. Louis that such practise will not be tolerated and will be punished by summary ejection from the party organization.

This is as it should be. No old party rascality will be allowed in the Socialist Party if it can be prevented and it can and will, whenever known.—Alliance of the Rockies.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

As Comrade Job Harriman is to leave for California next week, a farewell reception has been arranged by a number of his friends in New York and vicinity, to be held on Friday evening, August 1, in the summer garden of the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street. A banquet will be served and the Carl Sahm Club has volunteered to provide music for the evening. Comrades Hanford, Hillquit, Slobodin, Sprago, Lee, and others will speak briefly. All members and friends of the party are invited to come and give Comrade Harriman a hearty farewell and show that we appreciate the noble work he has done for the Social Democratic Party in this state and that our best wishes attend him in his departure. No admission fee will be charged.

—An admirable life of our king has been issued by "Religious Bits." It shows how by sheer perseverance our illustrious monarch worked his way up from being mere Prince of Wales to his present exalted position. A more encouraging present for a child it would be difficult to imagine.—Punch.

THIS IS OF INTEREST TO SOCIALISTS IN NEW YORK.

We have held a state convention and we have nominated our state ticket. We have promulgated a state platform and we expect on Election Day many voters, who have heretofore supported the Republican or Democratic party, to vote for the platform and candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

It is right on our part to expect this, provided we do everything in our power to bring our platform and our candidates to the notice of the voters. Is everyone of us doing all that may be expected of him for the propaganda of Socialism?

The arrogance of the capitalist class is growing every moment. The decisions of Judges Jackson and Kellar show clearly that the working class is not only to be held in economic bondage, but is to be completely subjected politically as well.

The vast and exhausting strikes inaugurated recently by various trade unions show the revolutionary spirit that lies dormant in the working class. However worthy of our sympathy and support these strikes may be, the results gained in these strikes are never commensurate with the energy expended. If part of that energy could be directed into channels of Socialist activity, the results would be far greater, both in the present economic conditions of the working class and its revolutionary attitude towards the whole system of capitalist exploitation.

To achieve these results is the earnest task of every Socialist. Are we doing what we can to claim such results for Socialism? Each of us has to answer this question for himself.

For the State Committee the condition of its treasury is an unfailing text of the activity among the comrades. The comrades should not complain if the State Committee fails to do what it ought to do, when they leave the Committee without the necessary funds.

The State Committee should have had several hundred thousand leaflets ready for distribution by this time. It has none. The reason—lack of funds. The State Committee has arranged several agitation tours for the best agitators in the party; but it does not see how it will be able to meet its obligations, if the comrades and sympathizers continue to answer with cool indifference its appeal for funds. The State Committee will do just as much as the comrades will enable it to do. The State Committee is receiving orders for agitation literature from all parts of the state, but cannot meet these demands. If you want the State Committee to do what you expect of it, you must help it financially.

The subscription lists are out. See that they are well filled and promptly returned. H. S.

FARCICAL LABOR LAWS.

Pennsylvania Law for Mine Inspection Proves to Be Ineffective—Passed Only for "Buncome."

Since the Johnstown mine disaster, James E. Roderick, Chief of the Pennsylvania State Bureau of Mines, has explained that his office has no maps or tracings of the mines in the state nor other adequate equipment for doing the work it is supposed to do, of seeing to it that the mines are kept in a safe and sanitary condition. He says that when the act creating the Bureau of Mines was passed five years ago, it provided no appropriation for carrying on such work.

It thus appears that this act is only a bluff, like almost all the other so-called labor laws on the statute books of the United States and the various states. By passing it, the Republican and Democratic politicians in the Legislature got the credit of being "friends of labor." They also added one more salaried office to the list of "plums" at the disposal of the Quay machine. And they did no good to workers and no harm to the capitalists.

The workingmen have been very "easy." But they are waking up, and it will not be long till they put in office fellow workingmen, elected on a labor platform—the platform of the Socialist Party—to enact and enforce labor laws that will be labor laws in reality as well as in name.

MITCHELL'S OPINION OF MOTHER JONES.

President Mitchell, in an interview reported from Chicago, denounced the decision of Judge Jackson of West Virginia as an outrage. "Anarchy is bred by such decisions," he said. "The people necessarily lose confidence in the courts when such outrages are committed by courts."

Of Mother Jones he said: "Mother Jones is one of the best women in the country. She is a Socialist, and does not seek the destruction of the government, but rather to enlarge the functions of government and make it better. She never incites to violence; in fact, her public utterances are well known to be peaceful."

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

It is to be hoped that Abraham Lincoln will not look down and see the work of his appointee, Judge Jackson of West Virginia.

If the courts should try to imprison all the workingmen who regard them with contempt, the jails would not be big enough to hold a tenth of us.

"Strikers Assault Citizens at Tamaqua." So go the daily headlines. The capitalist "organs of public opinion" never regard a striker as a citizen. The trouble is, the workingmen have so long neglected to put to any intelligent use their right of citizenship at the ballot-box, that the capitalists who dictate to the dailies quite naturally regard strikers as "outside the law."

But speaking of these stories of disorder, riot, and violence in the strike field, we suggest a good rule for the newspaper reader: Discount the story 90 per cent.; believe half of what remains; and turn the other half inside out and believe it in the inverted form. Then you will not be far from the truth.

Very likely there is some disorder. Why wouldn't there be? With a handful of luxurious drones claiming absolute mastery over the hundreds of thousands of mine owners; with the daily press lying constantly and systematically about the situation; with a horde of thugs armed to the teeth and commissioned by the state; with judges sending men to jail for exercising rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States; with the threat of bayonets and bullets ahead—why wouldn't there be disorder? There was disorder at Boston Harbor in 1773 and at Harper's Ferry in 1859. Will our patriotic editors condemn the Boston Tea Party and revile John Brown?

We need not always see the wires between the manipulator's hand and the puppet that moves, in order to infer their existence. When we see trust magnates wishing that labor agitators might be put down, and United States judges stretching the law and the constitution to the snapping point in order to send labor agitators to jail, we do not need to read the messages or overhear the conversations between trust magnates and judges in order to understand the connection. To the mind of the layman, who cares more for living facts than for dead formulas of law, Judge Jackson is as truly the hired servant of the Coal Trust as is any mine boss or superintendent on the pay-roll. We will not waste time cursing Judge Jackson. Pretty soon we will put men on the bench to be just as true and faithful servants of the working class.

There was but one way in which that facile tool of capitalism, Judge Jackson of West Virginia, could make a greater mistake than by sentencing Mother Jones to jail; that was by suspending sentence. There was but one way in which he could make a greater mistake than by ordering the arrest of Secretary Wilson of the Mine Workers; that was by revoking the order for his arrest. He has committed all the stupid blunders in this affair that judicial inanity is capable of.

Nothing could be more pleasing and encouraging to the Socialist than this ridiculous vacillation on the part of the Federal Justice acting on behalf of the Coal Kings. Nothing could better assure us of the conscious weakness of the capitalist class and of their recognition of the growing strength of the labor movement. So long as the oppressors treat the murmurs of their victims with quiet indifference, it is evident that their power is still unshaken; so long as they treat them with unrelenting severity it is evident that their power is still great, though threatened; but when they begin to falter, to threaten and then to relent, to alternate between severity and mercy, then it is evident that their power is tottering to its fall, and that they know it.

WHY NOT AN ASSOCIATED LABOR PRESS?

It is a pity that most of the labor papers of the country are compelled, for lack of adequate financial support, to use a large quantity of "plate matter," supplied by capitalist syndicates, most of which would be properly described by the word "rot" and much of which is positively false and pernicious and often in direct opposition to the statements contained in the original news and editorial columns of the very papers in which it appears.

For example, the following paragraph has been sent out by some of the syndicates and is appearing in labor papers all over the land:

"Child labor, which has never been abused in Los Angeles, Cal., to any extent, is on the decrease. An important chapter in the improvement of labor conditions was written a few days ago when one of the leading establishments of the city let out all of its employees under eighteen years of age, and adopted a rule which makes this policy permanent. Other houses which have not already made a similar rule are rapidly falling into line, for it is now recognized that the employment of children in stores and factories for a long number of hours is not only harmful but unpopular with consumers."

This is a complete perversion of the facts. The truth is that child labor has been a very serious evil in Los Angeles, as in every other industrial city of America.

Within the last year, the Socialist Party and the trade unions of the city took the matter up and opened a vigorous campaign for the enforcement of the law—which, at the best, is very inadequate. Committees were appointed to investigate the facts, which were published broadcast in the columns of the Los Angeles "Socialist" and "Union Labor News." The public was informed, in spite of the daily press, of the fact that some of the most "eminently respectable gentlemen" and "public spirited citizens" in town were growing rich by the unlawful employment of mere babies at hard and unhealthful work. Mass meetings were held. Prosecutions were instituted against the worst offenders and the hand of the District Attorney was forced by the "agitators."

As a result of this lively agitation by the labor organizations a number of child-exploiters decided that it would be well to obey the law, for a while, at least, and conditions are now somewhat improved. But, as The Worker has stated in recent issues, the Los Angeles capitalists have an organized movement on foot to defeat the labor organizations and undo their work. The Employers' Association is now spending large sums of money in publishing false accounts of labor conditions in the city and trying to induce thousands of men to come there for work, in the hope thus to glut the labor market, force men to scab, and so discourage and break up the unions and re-establish the old system of unrestricted exploitation. Such paragraphs as that quoted above, sent out as "plate matter" to the labor press, form a part of the employers' ammunition.

Another example of the same sort of misrepresentation is to be found in a "plate" item which has been going the rounds of the labor papers for weeks and will probably continue to appear until Election Day. This paragraph heralds, as a great victory for the American Federation of Labor lobbyists, the alleged passage by Congress of the Eight-Hour Bill.

This bill, of course, has not been passed by Congress, but only by the House of Representatives, and now slumbers in a Senate committee, where it is sure to die. But the capitalists who control the press syndicates think that, if the false news item is printed widely enough, a large proportion of the workingmen will be deceived and will thereby be deterred from radical action in their unions or at the polls and will be induced to vote the Republican ticket once more.

Since, under existing conditions, the labor press, in general, cannot get along without the use of "plate matter," it is high time that the Socialist papers and at least a few of the more progressive and enterprising labor papers got together to establish a syndicate under their own control which would furnish them with intelligent articles and accurate news.

The Denver "Republican" is growing philosophic—only it forgets to provide for its philosophy a solid foundation of facts. In a recent editorial the "Republican" announces that this "is a bad time for Socialists to start a campaign," that Socialism "is a product of despair" and "finds no congenial conditions in times of prosperity and growth." The time for Socialists to seek converts, says the "Republican," is "when the Republican party has long been out of power and the country is suffering from depression." Of course, the "Republican" is whistling to keep up its courage in the face of the remarkable awakening of the Socialist movement in the Rocky Mountain states.

It is really cruel to subject the theory advanced by the "Republican" to the test of historic fact. But we must "be cruel only to be kind." Let us see, then: In 1890 the Republican party had been in power for two years; in that year the Socialist vote in the country rose from 2,000 to 13,000. After two more years of Republican prosperity, our vote rose to 21,000. Then came four years of Democratic despair, during which the Socialist vote advanced in 1894 to 33,000 and in 1896 to 36,000. Then the G. O. P. came back, apparently to stay for a while; and in the two national elections so far held during this era of prosperity and growth, in 1898 and 1900, we increased our strength at the polls first to 92,000 and then to 130,000. And within the last two years, still under Republican rule, we have had large gains in city elections in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Washington, and elsewhere—to say nothing of a gain of 150 per cent. in the straight Socialist Party vote in the recent state election in good old prosperous Republican Oregon.

These figures do not very well support the theory of the Denver "Republican" that Socialism is "a product of despair" and can flourish only as a movement of protest under conditions of extreme depression and misery. Nor are there any other facts to support that theory. An analysis of our vote by localities instead of by years would yield the same results. Our greatest strength is not found and our greatest gains have not been made among the wretchedly poor. Some of our own comrades seem to labor under a misapprehension in this matter and to expect that Socialism will grow best amidst the greatest misery. A consideration of the personnel of the Socialist Party, to say nothing of an analysis of the vote, should be sufficient to dispel this idea, for the ratio of the number of relatively well paid mechanics to that of poverty-stricken laborers and operatives within the party is far higher than in the working class at large. Socialism does not effectively appeal to the wretchedly poor, though it promises them certain relief. It does not appeal to them because it is a movement of hope and effort and they have been crushed into dull despair.

NO TIME FOR SIDE ISSUES.

Some comrade sends us copies of the two pamphlets against the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Labor Party, issued, the one by Julian Pierce, ex-manager of the S. L. P. literature agency, the other by a committee representing the Rhode Island organizations of the S. L. P., with a request that we "read this and expose." We have already seen the pamphlets in question, as have many other comrades, but we have not thought it necessary to take up any space in The Worker with comment upon them.

There is nothing surprising in the fact that the S. L. P. is rent with dissension, that its internal quarrels grow in exact proportion as its membership dwindles, that its most active members—such as Vogt, Fiebiger, Forker, Sauter, Dalton, Pierce, Wherry, Carless, Maguire, Fish, Clark, and many others—have been either expelled, suspended, or driven into resigning, and that it continues to develop every day some new "fakir" who must be disciplined. All this is the normal and expected outcome of the course upon which it decided three years ago. It chose then the road to disruption and defeat. It is traveling that road as fast as it can. It does not need our help on its way.

When the S. L. P. loses its place on the official ballot in the state of New York, as it undoubtedly will do this fall, The Worker will devote one stick of type, without a display headline, to announcing the fact. Aside from that, The Worker will pay no attention to that organization except where it may seem necessary for the information of strangers, to state the fact that the Socialist Party—or, as it is called in New York, the Social Democratic Party—has absolutely no connection with the so-called Socialist Labor Party.

We have too many more important things to publish. We are after bigger game. We are after the capitalists. The battle is hot. All the space of The Worker and all the energies of its editors are not equal to the needs of this main fight. We have no time for side issues.

The Socialist Party has no need to fight the moribund S. L. P., nor to fear it, nor to trouble about it in any way. If we do our duty, the cause of Socialism will prosper and its masked enemies will not be able to help its open foes. It is our business to propagate Socialism, not to expose real or supposed fakirs, especially when they are so eagerly and so fatuously exposing themselves.

The Kaiser is surprised that Morgan seems to know so little of Socialism. The Socialists bother His Inspired Omnipotence to that he doesn't know which way to turn, and he had hoped Pierpont could give him some "pointers," as the boys say. But Pierpont professed profound ignorance of the subject, and the Kaiser is afraid that his good friend, the Industrial King of America, is neglecting his business. Perhaps Morgan knows more of the subject than he cared to say. If not, we will teach him something in November.

As a matter of fact, however, the Kaiser is not so far wrong in his estimate of Morgan. He is reported as saying:

"Try as I could, his conversation failed to reveal to me that he had any clear comprehension of the vast harmonies and conflicts of the commercial universe. I was amazed to find him not well informed regarding the historical and philosophical development of nations, and his political economy leaves him unconcerned regarding Socialism, which undoubtedly will soon constitute the most stupendous question everywhere. Mr. Morgan confessed that he had never been sufficiently interested to study into what Socialism means exactly."

We are not consumed with admiration of the Kaiser, who does not lose many opportunities to make a fool of himself. But it must be admitted that, if he is a fool, it is in a positive, not a negative way. History will probably write him down as a man of some genius, more or less unbalanced mentally by constantly reflecting on his own exalted position. He is by no means a nonentity, and his depreciatory opinion of Morgan is worthy of consideration.

It is common to credit the captain of industry—"chevalier d'industrie," "Industrieritter," as Prince Henry is said to have paraphrased it—with the possession of extraordinary abilities. Workingmen and even many Socialists concede that the man who organizes trusts, crushes competitors, and accumulates a fortune of hundreds of millions in a few years must be a very able man, a giant of intelligence and energy. The popular estimate of the ability of the Morgans and Rockefellers is probably an absurdly exaggerated one. It is due rather to the staggering effect of a long row of ciphers after a dollar mark and one significant figure than to any definite conception of the things which the Trust King really does. One need not, of course, deny to these men very considerable ability, which might be turned to better use. But it is not necessary, on the other hand, to regard them as prodigies of genius.

Although Mr. Morgan is at the head of the Steel Trust, the Coal Trust, the Railway Trust, and the Steamship Trust, he is neither a good steel worker, a good coal miner, a good railway worker, nor a good navigator. He probably knows little or nothing of any of these trades even in theory. His work—he calls it work—is essentially the work of a gambler or a swindler, and requires the peculiar sort of ability necessary for successful swindling, combined with a degree of callous cruelty which the common gambler seldom exhibits. Prince Henry was right—if he really made the bright not credited to him. Morgan is a rather unusually shrewd gambler, playing a game in which the house has a large and sure percentage.

Chauncey Depew's famous characterization of a great financier as the American Shakspere—implying that the genius which, in a former age went to the making of such works as "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" goes now to the piling up of fortunes—was as shallow as most of the utterances of the Senator from the New York Central. In any large view of history or on any deep examination of human nature, the Shakspere and Goethe tower far above the Alexanders and Napoleons; and Alexander and Napoleon tower equally above Morgan and Rockefeller, though their ability and their achievements are more nearly alike in quality.

But to speak only of executive ability—comprehending in that term knowledge of men, power of analyzing a situation, and courage and alertness in decision and action—speaking only of this sort of ability, it is safe to say that John Mitchell is infinitely the superior of any of the Trust Kings, and the work he is doing infinitely harder, as well as more useful.

Some people seem to be afraid that under Socialism we should not be able to get the services of men of ability, because we would not pay them enough. The miners get the services of John Mitchell for one thousand eight hundred dollars a year, though he has been offered much more by private employers. And valuable a man as Mitchell is, there are others who could fill his place, the miners' organization will not die with him. The labor movement has abundance of men of high and varied ability, capable, given opportunity and training, of filling the most responsible places in our industrial system.

The Irish Socialist Republican Party has a good motto: "The great appear great to us only because we are on our knees; let us arise!" The working class has not yet fully learned to trust itself and respect itself. It still thinks it must look to the "better classes" for men of ability. But it is learning. For us, we do not go on our knees to great men, living or dead, of whatever sort. We know that Man is greater than any or all men. Least of all do we bow to any man because he is able to write $X,000,000 ——— to the nth degree after his name. The common sense and common feeling and common will of the toiling mass is what we trust in, and if history teaches any true lesson we shall not be disappointed.

The horse shoers employed by the city in the Street Cleaning Department of Manhattan went on strike last week for the eight-hour day. It is well-known that the street cleaners themselves must continually submit to being bled of a large part of their wages in order to retain their positions. The treatment of public servants at the hands of capitalistic administrations should convince anyone that municipal ownership of "public utilities" would be of small benefit to the workers until the city is governed by a strictly working class political party.

The miners of Pennsylvania are surrendering unconditionally, but not to the coal combination. They are "grounding arms" to the invincible logic of Socialism. With more than sixty cheering locals of the Socialist Party, the Keystone State now takes its place at the head of the Socialist procession.

OUR ORGANIZERS.

The Worker does not often give space in its editorial columns to commendation of the work of any individual comrade—for, should we try to give credit to all who deserve it, we should have room for nothing else. In the case of the retiring Organizer of Local New York, however, we feel justified in making an exception to the rule.

There is probably no office in our whole party organization imposing duties so arduous and difficult and in many ways so thankless, and there are few positions more important and responsible than that which Comrade Gerber has filled for the last three years. And certainly there never was a period in which that office was more difficult to fill than in these, immediately following upon the party split, which centered in New York.

Comrade Gerber has labored hard and unremittingly, through all the party troubles. There are probably very few of the comrades who at all realize the dogged perseverance and energy that were required for his work or the devotion that he has displayed. As he leaves the office, The Worker most cordially endorses the vote of thanks which was extended to him by the General Committee last Saturday.

And for his successor we would bespeak a degree of consideration and, more especially, of active assistance and support such as Comrade Gerber did not always receive from the members of the Local. It is easy to throw all responsibility upon the man we have elected to this office. But in justice to him and, above all, in justice to the cause, we have no right to do so. The best organizer in the world can do little without the co-operation of the rank and file. With such co-operation, Comrade Wood will assuredly prove himself worthy of the trust which has been reposed in him.

PEACE, HEALTH, AND PLENTY.

When society owns the factories and other forces of the production of wealth so that no private capitalist can grab the bulk of the wealth produced by the partnership of man and machine, we will for the first time have industrial peace, and health and plenty for the masses.—Williamsport Labor Review.

——Each reader of The Worker can win at least one new voter to the party between now and Election Day, if he will work hard enough for it.

WOMAN'S NATIONAL SOCIALIST UNION.

Mrs. Wenonah Stevens Abbott, Oak, Shasta County, Cal., president; Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington, Iowa, corresponding secretary.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We stand for a new order of society based upon the principles of justice and equality as applied to economics.

We declare that the rapid concentration of capital and its control over the government has forced the issue; and that, while the trust represents the most advanced stage of present economic progress, yet because it is based upon the private ownership of the means of production, it is opposed to freedom and fatal to the future welfare of the republic; therefore the next step in social advancement must be taken, which is a change from capitalism to Socialism, from competition to co-operation, from the private ownership of the means of production to the ownership and administration by the people.

Therefore, we stand pledged to teach the principles of this higher industrial system called the co-operative commonwealth; to enlist women in the advancement of these principles in every practical way that may present itself; to educate the young in these truths; to form a better public sentiment; and, finally, we pledge ourselves to do all in our power, individually and collectively, to bring about that universal co-operation, founded upon the Golden Rule of Love and Justice, which shall take the place of competitive strife and discord.

The Gardens of the Gods.

There are fruits to be gathered in the gardens of the gods,
Come, brother, come!
There are sheaves to be gathered, there are grapes to be trod,
Come, brother, come!
Rich are the treasures in the land of our desire,
Sweet are the pleasures to which our hearts aspire,
Under the willows we build our evening fire,
Come, brother, come!

Freemen and bold do we march by the way,
Come, brother, come!
Onward we journey in the light of the day,
Come, brother, come!
Green are the fields in the land we shall gain;
Fair are the hillsides and fertile the plain;
Sweet are its waters and golden its grain,
Come, brother, come!

The hands that can pluck are the hands that shall hold,
Come, brother, come!
Ours for the taking are the silver and gold,
Come, brother, come!
Long in that land of delight will we stay;
'Mid its green meadows our children shall play,
Gaily we travel, and we sing by the way,
Come, brother, come!

A New Field.

In organizing women Socialists we are daily more and more impressed with the broadness and emptiness, as to workers, of the field upon which we have entered. The average wage-earning woman has not been appealed to by the Socialist, or even by the Suffragist. We must as quickly as possible carry the knowledge of Socialist principle to such women, and awake in them a hope of better conditions; teach them their right to recognition as producers; point out to them the way to escape from the harsh injustice under which they suffer, the cruelties to which the world at large wilfully closes its eyes (yes, even the wage-earning man, and sometimes the Socialist). We shall find some of them little better than children, perhaps, but let us remember that many are hardly mature in years. The field is rich with intelligent, sincere, forceful women who will be the best of all workers to hasten on the time when woman shall at last know the joy of freedom, of independence, of conscious integrity of life.

The Wage-Earning Woman.

It is often said, very unjustly, that our young women forsake their home life for the sake of the excitement to be found in public occupations. On the contrary our girls are crowded into the world of competition by the sheer force of necessity. They have no choice in the matter. Their path is a narrow one. Urged on and hedged in by circumstances, straight ahead they must go into the labor market, and feel happy if they find there the temporary security of a foothold.

If a workingman succeeds in bringing up his daughters without putting them to work during their growing years, he is doing remarkably well. When they have become young women it is no longer possible for him to provide for them. Their needs are greater, while his ability to supply them is lessened. He has become older as the years of hard work have passed by; his ambition, his strength have decreased. It is out of the question that his girls should hang upon him, a dead weight. They must provide for themselves.

The increasing uncertainty of employment for young men, causing them to enter upon marriage with caution, is also a factor in the question, as it throws the young woman upon her own resources for a considerable period before marriage. For every woman you will find me who is working for wages unnecessarily I will find you one who is not only supporting herself, but helping to support others; and for every woman you will find me who is working for wages merely for the sake of excitement, I will find you a dozen who would gladly give up their wage-earning if they could be assured of the necessities of life without being a burden upon others.

"Mother" Jones has broken an injunction—whether it was in delivering a Socialist speech or organizing food supplies, we do not know—and has been jailed. Among all our comrades "Mother" Jones is the most feared by the mine owners, who have threatened her life many times. The capitalist press is fearful that she may incite the strikers to "violence." Violence, they say, would immediately destroy the "sympathy" so necessary to the miner's existence that he had better starve to death than be without it. For a wage worker, violence is unpardonable, but for the rich it may become a "matter of necessity"—as when the wealthy mill owners of Paterson, N. J., lately formed a vigilance committee to over-awe the striking silk weavers.—Los Angeles Socialist.

Where, in all the range of vision, can be found a sadder picture than that of a young woman, poor and inexperienced, going out into the capitalistic hell known as the labor market to battle with the hardships and trials, the social alienation, the seductive influences, the temptations that shadow her every footstep? And capitalism paints such pictures by tens of thousands; paints a rapidly increasing number of them each year. They are upon the walls of the Exchange; but the Bulls and Bears are not disturbed thereby. They hang in the halls of the exploiter; but the pangs of greed have rendered him insensible to their presence. They are reflected in the glittering gems in the social swirl; but they mar not its merriment.

The nations are awakening. They will sweep such demons of greed from the face of the earth. They will break the fetters of the wage slave and liberate the mothers and daughters of the world.—N. A. Richardson, in The Undercurrent.

WHY WE PAY DUES.

The Socialist Party, being a party of, by and for the wage-working class and those in sympathy with it, proceeds upon the theory that the workers, as a class, must emancipate themselves from wage-slavery, and must consequently develop their own capacity for their great purpose.

Hence, while welcoming all assistance from individuals of other classes who are in sympathy with its objects and aims, the Socialist Party relies—first, last and all the time—on the working class for its support politically and otherwise. Not being a paternal organization, the means of the party's maintenance must come wholly from the rank and file of the organization.

Experience having demonstrated that the party cannot trust to luck in the conduct of its affairs, nor rely upon hap-hazard donations for its revenues, it has established the dues-paying system, which is in vogue in the party throughout the world.

There are those who object to the dues-paying system in our party on the following grounds:

1—It humiliates impoverished members and and applicants for membership.

2—It "places the dollar above the man."

3—No other political party has such a system.

The first reason is strictly utopian. "Poverty is no disgrace," but is the logical result of the competitive system. This being so, it is foreign to the spirit of our movement for members or applicants to feel "humiliated" because they cannot pay dues. Our dues system exacts payments from those who are able to pay, and all others are excused. A false feeling of shame shows a capitalistic state of mind, which must be overcome.

The second reason is also entirely erroneous. Nowhere in the world does our party exclude applicants or expel members because of their inability to pay dues. Hence the party does not "place the dollar above the man."

We emphasize the fact that all are welcome to our ranks, regardless of their financial condition, but very properly insist that all who can do so shall contribute regularly to the necessary and unavoidable expenses of the organization.

The third reason only shows the difference in methods between parties of capitalism and the Socialist Party as a revolutionary organization of the working class. Certainly the "old parties" have no dues-paying system; in fact, they need none, as the corruption funds "for value received" are ample to support them at all times, especially during campaigns. The support comes from above in these paternal organizations—from the trust magnates, the silver barons, or the "business men" who live on labor's fleece. The Socialist Party, on the contrary, relies upon its membership for support at all times, fighting the capitalist class, not only on election day, but every other day in the year, and strengthening and advancing its propaganda and political organization. This means expense and a dues-paying system.

The enemy can hardly be expected to furnish our ammunition in this great class conflict, so the workers must furnish their own "sinews of war."

Comrades who have evolved through the old parties cannot appreciate this position at first, but a little reflection will show its reason and its merits.

Narrowness of view of the Socialist movement and the work of the party is also responsible for unwarranted protest against and disregard for the dues-paying system. Many comrades feel that their particular locality should receive special attention and make this "criminal neglect" a reason for withholding dues.

Inasmuch as our party is national in its scope, and the funds at all times insufficient to cover the full territory, the revenues must be distributed where they will do the most good at a given time.

This might mean New York one day, California the next and Pennsylvania or Illinois the day following. The local or state feeling should not characterize our party members, and the movement and its needs should be considered, not in part, but as a whole.

It is a noticeable fact that organizations of the wage-workers the world over maintain a dues-paying system.

* * * The coal miners, for instance—who do not average employment one-half of the year—derive their revenue strictly in this manner, and keep a well-filled treasury at all times. This is almost equally true of nearly all other trade union organizations, which are a shining example of the efficacy of a dues-paying system—James S. Roche, in Los Angeles Socialist.

BUY UNION-MADE GOODS.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Butte Labor World.

The strength of organized labor lies in its weakness. That which it lacks in power of compulsion it gains by appeal to rational human ambition and intelligent perception of right and wrong. Right enjoined by force becomes wrong, and therefore falls.

International Woodworker.

John Pierpont Morgan has offered to place the ships in the Atlantic ship combine at the disposal of the British Admiralty. If Morgan can get a subsidy from any government by having his ships sail under its flag he is satisfied. The patriotism of most business men is now measured by a monetary value.

Seattle Socialist.

Tracy is a murderer. He has killed a dozen men, more or less. But what of the mine owners where explosions kill hundreds? A hundred or so at Fernie, B. C., another hundred or so at Johnstown, Pa., and now a score or two more in Utah, all within a few days of each other! Every one of them could have been prevented. A properly ventilated mine will abolish fire damp. You read now how currents of fresh air penetrate and flood the remotest workings of these mines—now that they are reconstructed after the terrible loss of life.

Set this down as absolute axiom: No mine exists that cannot be ventilated by modern machinery. Make shafts enough, have electric fans enough, provide inspectors enough, in a word, spend money enough, and you will avoid all explosions.

Well, then, the mine owners who will not spend money enough, care more for money than for men. Hence they are murderers, and worse than all the Tracys in the land.

MR. HANNA'S PLATFORM.

From Senator Hanna's platform we quote the following:

"All labor is now employed and at wages higher than ever before. Farm products have doubled in value, and earnings and savings have largely increased. The products of the farm, the forest, the mines, the shops and factories not only supply the marvelously increased home demand, but have permanently placed the United States at the head of the world's exporting nations."

If Senator Hanna believes that all labor is now employed, we extend to him a personal invitation to visit Augusta and we will try to convince him to the contrary.

If he thinks that the cotton factories are making money and that the wages of Southern textile operatives have advanced, we respectfully call his attention to the fact that there was recently a lockout and is now a strike among the cotton mill employees of this city. Notwithstanding the declarations of the Ohio Republican platform, the factories here claim that they are not prospering and the operatives claim that they have had no advancement in wages.

Even Senator Hanna would not assert that wages have doubled in value and yet he makes the assertion that "farm products have doubled in value." If the laborer has to pay double for the necessaries of life, in what way has a slight increase in wages improved his condition, granting that there has been an increase?

Senator Hanna's platform declares that "labor should be intelligently organized" and that the Republicans "believe in fewer hours and larger rewards for labor." Good! Now, let Senator Hanna make a start by advancing the wages of the employees in every company in which he has stock.

The platform wants labor to be "intelligently organized," but we have noticed that the big bosses consider labor most intelligent when it is doing least to better its condition.—John Allen Mette, in Augusta (Ga.) Voice of Labor.

THE SPECTRE.

Bending over the baby, leering down at the bride,
Claiming a seat in every home and mocking at manhood's pride;
No man gives him greeting—shadowy, fierce and gaunt—
But by our side, wherever we bide, glares the spectre, Want.

Hear him whisper the merchant, see him clutch at the clerk,
And look with the eyes of suicide at the man that's out of work!
Oh, lads that go to the prisons, well they know his frown;
And to the planned, his skeleton hand pulls the maiden down.

All the wreaths of roses, all the weight of corn,
All the might of iron and coal from earth's bosom torn;
All the world of plenty, all the world of wealth—
Gift to the race, of God's own grace, and stolen away by stealth—

Pile them into "figures," bid statistics vaunt—
While thro' the lies, with terrible eyes, glares the spectre, Want.

Want, that points to the madhouse; Want, that leads to the jail;
Want, that goes to the market offering souls for sale;
Want, that prices the coffin; Want, that measures the meal,
And sears the grace from the baby's face beneath the hunger seal.

Want, that waits in the morning, ere yet the day begins;
And Want, that o'er the deathbed, at weeping women grins;
Want, whose skeleton fingers grip the people's heart!
Oh, God of Might, make strong the Right that men and Want may part!

—Virginia M. Butterfield, in San Francisco Star.

——The Socialist movement, as every other great movement in history has done, is developing its own forces—its own orators and oratory, its own literature, its own music, its own humor. The working class are marking with their own trade-mark everything they do and that trade-mark stands for fidelity to their own class first and finally to the highest interests of all mankind.—Los Angeles Socialist.

PARTY NOTES.

On Wednesday, August 20, there will be held at Imlay City, Mich., three conventions of the Socialist Party: One for the Seventh Congressional District, comprising Huron, Santiac, St. Clair, Macomb, and Lapeer Counties and part of Wayne; one for the Lapeer-Tuscola Senatorial District; and the third for Lapeer County. Michigan is expected to contribute largely to the increase of the Socialist vote in November.

The Washington State Committee of the Socialist Party consists of George W. Scott of Seattle, Chairman; T. E. Latimer of Seattle, Organizer; John Mackenzie of Spokane; H. D. Jory of Sunnyside; and William McDevitt, 120 Virginia street, Seattle, Secretary-Treasurer.

The 15th and 17th A. D. meets on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month at 408 W. Fiftieth street.

The Washington State Committee granted charters to two locals last week—Olympia, with thirty-one members, and Burton, with twelve. The movement is still booming throughout the state. Comrade Burgess is in the field and is holding well attended meetings every night, county tickets are being nominated, and the circulation of the two Socialist papers in the state is growing steadily.

The "Alliance of the Rockies," Denver, Colo., says: "Comrade Wise writes that the Contes incident at the state convention has done no harm over the state, in spite of exaggerated reports in daily papers."

Comrade Debs is billed to speak every night from July 22 to August 20 in Colorado, to give the next three days to Wyoming, and then to speak on August 24 at Denver, August 26 to 30 in South Dakota, August 31 at Omaha, and September 1 at Davenport, Ia. His tour of British Columbia, Montana, Washington, and Oregon was a complete success. On July 18 he spoke to an enthusiastic audience of three thousand or more people at Salt Lake City, Utah, A. B. Elder presiding. The three following evenings were given to meetings at Park City, Bingham, and Lehi, in the same state.

Father McGrady spoke recently for the Socialist Party at Butte, Mont., and the Butte "Labor World" gives a full report, speaking in the highest terms of his address.

Members of Boston Club, Socialist Party, are notified to attend a general meeting, Tuesday evening, August 12, at Naegal Hall, 724 Washington street, to take up important matters of local interest.—The Boston Central Committee has adopted resolutions as follows:

"Whereas, The American Labor Union in convention at Denver declared in favor of class-conscious politics and international Socialism; and

"Whereas, The emancipation of Labor is dependent upon class-conscious political action at the polls; be it

"Resolved, That the Boston Central Committee of the Socialist Party congratulates the American Labor Union on its progressive stand, hoping that in the near future the membership of organized labor east of the Rocky Mountains will take similar action."

The debate between Lawyer George M. Wallace of the New Haven Economic League and State Organizer Caldwell of the Socialist Party of Connecticut may not take place. A formal challenge from Caldwell was published in the New Haven papers at Mr. Wallace's request; but a statement has been issued through the papers by members of the League that Wallace would not debate. No reply has yet been received from Wallace himself. Comrade Caldwell's challenge to Mayor Sullivan of Hartford and Lawyer Dunbar of Meriden, prominent members of the Economic League, were both ignored. It is evident that the Economic Leaguers will assume an attitude of virtuous superiority, knowing well that their organization will not bear scrutiny. The New Haven League has been engaged for several weeks in a dealy struggle with two obscure members, who are denounced by the "push" as politicians. This tremendous effort to purify the League is exploited in the newspapers as an advertisement, but fails to arouse much interest.

Local Hudson County, New Jersey, has arranged an excursion for the benefit of their campaign fund, to be held on Sunday, August 24. Two large barges will leave Morris street, Jersey City, at 8:45 a. m. and Fifteenth street, Hoboken, at 9:15 a. m. for Empire Grove, a delightful thirty-five mile trip up the beautiful Hudson River, and a good time is promised to all participants. Tickets are sold in advance at 25 cents. Children under twelve will be carried free and the Local hopes to clear a good amount to help carry on the coming campaign.

The Erie "People" reprints an article on Socialism contributed by Comrade Mailly to the columns of the Tamaqua "Recorder" during his stay in the strike field.

The Cleveland "Citizen" reports that Comrade Frederick G. Strickland, late State Organizer of the Socialist Party of Ohio, was arrested in that city on July 24, for speaking in the public square.

In order to raise funds for the purpose of conducting a vigorous campaign in Westchester County this fall, Local Yonkers, together with the locals of the county are arranging a grand out-door festival and picnic at Grace Farm, rear of Hollywood Inn Ball Grounds, near Dunwoodie Station, Yonkers, on Sunday, August 10, beginning at 2 p. m. There will be an out-door concert, dancing, singing, fat man's race, and various other games; also a "wheel of fortune." We ask every one of our comrades and sympathizers to aid us by contributing some little article for the wheel of fortune, such as neckties, suspenders, cigars, bottles of wine or whiskey, books, or any little article that would do for either men, women, or children. We expect to have good speakers through the county this fall and hope comrades will do their best, so that when the vote is counted next November we shall feel proud of the vote in Westchester County. Send all communications to Dr. Paul J. Bauerberg, 41 Hudson street, Yonkers.

The Worker was misled by an ambiguity of expression in the report furnished of the Westchester County Convention of the Social Democratic Party into stating that Robert Lesser, nominated for County Treasurer, was a member of the Carpenters' Union. In fact, Comrade Lesser is a well-known restaurateur of New Rochelle. He has been known as an active Socialist many years.

The newly elected officers of the 21st A. D. are: Edw. Cassidy, Recording Secretary; James K. Kanely, Financial Secretary; W. Paschberg, Treasurer; Comrades Martin, Dubman, and Welnecke, Delegates to General Committee. Comrades Dean and Kanely were elected at the last meeting to represent the branch at the Daily Paper Conference. It was also decided to hold at least one mass meeting on a Saturday evening in October (probably Oct. 18) if the State Committee will detail the candidate for Governor or Lieutenant-Governor and one other state candidate as speakers. New members are being held weekly with apparently good results. New members have been taken in at almost every meeting for six months past. In some cases, however, that is the last we hear from them, as a number of the new members have never appeared at the business meetings or paid dues. The proposer of a new member should consider it his duty to interest his candidate in party work. Efforts will be made to induce all the comrades now on the books who have lapsed to come to the front. Readers of The Worker and enrolled members in the district who desire to participate in the party agitation work for Socialism are invited to correspond with or call on the Financial Secretary, at his house, 279 W. One Hundred and Thirteenth street, or Edw. M. Martin, 887 Columbus avenue. Arrangements for the concert to be held in Colonial Hall in October are being well attended to by the committee and a successful affair is promised. The comrades in this district learn with regret that Comrade Harriman has been ordered by his physician to leave for the West. Our two female members, Mrs. Hall and Miss Dubman, are among our most active members and hardest workers. The next meeting will be held on Friday evening, August 1, at Colonial Hall. At the last meeting just double the number attended as were present at the previous one. Let's double up again, comrades.

At a special meeting of the 24th A. D., Br. 2, last Friday, at the headquarters, 215 E. Fifty-ninth street, N. S. Reichenthal was elected as Recording and Corresponding Secretary, with H. R. Wallace as Financial Secretary, J. Tausick as Treasurer, Wallace and Reichenthal as delegates to the General Committee, and Gus. Sjoholm and Max Hahn as delegates to the Third Agitation Committee. On Monday evening, August 4, there will be held at the same place a joint meeting with the 23d A. D., at which platform and literature committees will be chosen and other preparations made for the campaign.

The 32d and 33d A. D., at a well attended meeting last week, with Dr. Rudinow in the chair, elected officers as follows: Financial Secretary, Jos. Cohn; Delegates to the General Committee, John Paer and S. Berlin; to the Daily Paper Conference, John Patka. The situation in the districts was fully discussed and it was resolved to hold two meetings a month—the first Thursday evening of the month being reserved for discussion only and the third for business. Discussion meetings will be held in English and German. A committee, consisting of Comrades Ingermann and Cohn, will visit the Harlem branches of the Kranken Kasse to invite its members to become active in the party. The first discussion meeting will be held Thursday evening, August 7, and the Coal Strike will be the subject. Every comrade should help to make it a success.

At the general meeting of comrades of the Bronx on July 19, by-laws were adopted for the Bronx Agitation Committee. It was decided that each branch should elect three delegates, the Committee to elect its own officers. The first meeting of the committee was called for Wednesday, August 6. The 35th A. D., Br. 2, has already elected its delegates—Comrades Sprauger, Elges, and Burgwald. The outgoing Campaign Committee presented its report, approved by the Auditors, which was accepted. The report showed receipts of $193.67; cash expenses, $176.91; cash in hands of Auditing Committee and of Branch 2, $16.76; assets, $3; liabilities, $78.90.

The Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville held a very well attended meeting at its headquarters in the W. E. A. Clubhouse, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street, last Thursday evening. The members of this organization intend to do good work in the campaign. The Club will meet on the second and fourth Thursday evenings of August and in September it will resume its weekly meetings. All young Socialists of the Yorkville districts are invited to join. Dues are 10 cents a month. The object of the Club is to combine work for the cause, instruction, and social pleasure—and it succeeds very well in so doing.

Morris Schultz has been chosen Literature Agent of Local Stonington, Conn.

Local Rochester will hold county, congressional, and assembly nominating conventions at the headquarters, 95 street, Room 9, on Friday, August 8 at 8 p. m., and not on Saturday, August 9, as stated in the last of The Worker.—The American Branch has elected officers as follows: Treasurer, Zarrener; Financial Secretary, Blutan; Recording Secretary, Suter; Organizer, Moses; delegates to the Central Committee, Scott, Moses, Bach, Schatlein, Suter, Sheehan, Hammen, Rose, and Zarrener.—Joel Moses, our candidate for State Treasurer, has been elected by the Garment Workers' Union of Rochester as delegate to their national convention.

Comrade Kerrigan of Dallas, Tex., writes of a public meeting held after the state convention: "A large crowd was addressed by L. L. Rhodes of Van Zandt, who is surely a speaker of ability and one that understands a Southern audience and knows all the avenues and by-paths that lead into their think-box. It was amusing in the extreme and before Comrade Rhodes completed his address he had the negroes, who composed a goodly part of the audience, shouting as if they were at a camp meeting and reached that stage which is described down South as "being happy." You should have heard them shout when he told them they used to bring $1,500 a piece and that now they were worth only a dollar a day when they could find a master and the weather was good. Again they raised a mighty holler of "'Fore God, youse right, boss," when he asked them if their wages were raised when the price of beef went up, or if it wasn't true they were getting the same old rate. For the comrades in the older states should know that the Beef Trust controls the prices down here just as in New York, although we are the greatest beef raising state in the Union. What I saw and heard at our mass meeting confirmed me in a conviction I have entertained a long time, that the average negro is more responsive to appeals to his self-interest than the average white man. There is little of the sentimentalist about the negro. When you talk to him about food, clothes, and shelter you have him on familiar ground, and you can rivet his whole attention. As an outcome of the meeting there is a movement on foot among the negroes of this city to organize a branch of the party. In my opinion it will not be many years until the bulk of the negro vote will be in the Socialist column. Comrade W. E. Farmer of Bonham also addressed the meeting, as well as myself, and received close attention and much applause. The Socialist movement in Texas is in very good shape, and will grow rapidly."

Local Camden, N. J., is holding monthly discussion meetings. On July 27, Frank D. Wright spoke very, effectively on "The Slum Dwellers." Comrade Wright is young in the movement, but he is an excellent speaker and has a good knowledge of the labor movement.

The Highland Falls comrades express themselves as greatly pleased over Comrade Spring's visit.

The Boston comrades are getting matters in shape for their picnic at Apollo Garden, Amory street, Roxbury, on Saturday, August 16. This is the fourth annual affair of the kind given by the party in Boston and it is desired that it be a thorough success. Dancing will begin at two o'clock and last until ten. Valuable prizes will be given for a number of games. Tickets are 25 cents, and can be procured from Joseph Spero, chairman, or from any member of the Central Committee, which has the picnic in charge.

The 6th and 10th A. D. received one new member at its last meeting. L. Goldberg was added to The Worker distributing committee, S. Raines to the platform committee, and H. Cohn to the Second Agitation District Committee. It was voted to buy a hundred copies of Spargo's "Child Slaves in Free America." L. Goldberg was chosen as Literature Agent, with Felix Brasch, B. Korn, S. Raines, A. Keondl, and Miss Fox as literature committee. Hannemann and Raines were elected to the Daily Paper Conference.

The Outing Committee of Local Kings County meets every Tuesday evening at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. All subdivision committees should attend, as the time is short and final arrangements must be made.

The Building Trades Council of New Rochelle in conjunction with the Cigar Makers' Union, held a mass meeting in Music Hall last Tuesday. Messrs. Da Costa, Levy, and Harris of the Cigar Makers and Comrade Algernon Lee were the speakers.

Comrade Gibson of Mahonoy City, Pa., writes that the numerous copies of The Worker sent there for distribution "are doing a vast amount of good." Mailly and Geiger spoke at Mahonoy City and all the workingmen are interested in Socialism as a result. "On Election Day," says Comrade Gibson, "there will be a big surprise in our town and county at the Socialist vote that will be cast. Now is the time to keep the ball rolling. The cause is gaining every day." This is only a sample of many letters we receive from the strike field.

STATE COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the State Committee was held on Tuesday, July 22, in the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, Comrade Wood serving as chairman.

Upon roll call, Comrades Jas. N. Wood, Emil Neppel, Henry L. Slobodin, and H. C. Bowerman answered as present, Comrades I. Phillips, H. Reich, Dr. Chas. Furman, Leonard D. Abbott, and Chris. Bub being absent and not reporting.

Communications were read from speakers of the state, consideration of which were postponed until next meeting.

Notice was received that Comrade Leonard Hornung has been elected organizer of Local Onondaga County, vice E. B. Schwarz.

The Corresponding Secretary reported that Yonkers had ordered a considerable amount of supplies, which was considered to mean that they were preparing for strong work during the campaign. Local Ticonderoga ordered stamps, and that Local Rochester had sent $10 for due stamps.

Letter was read from National Secretary Greenbaum, in which it was stated that New York state had made no returns for the last month, and consequently was indebted to the National Committee. The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to call the attention of Secretary Greenbaum to the fact that New York as well as other states paid dues to National Committee by purchasing due stamps, and that, as has happened frequently, we have purchased at one time sufficient stamps to supply our membership for more than one month, and have at times even paid arrearages in like manner, although it appears now being credited with entire amount as only one month's dues.

Two thousand application for membership blanks of new form were ordered printed.

Blank certificates of nomination were ordered printed and sent to all locals in the state.

It was reported that ballots for voting new state constitution had been sent to all locals, together with blanks for returning result of vote to State Committee, which return must be received by August 19, as the vote will be canvassed and made public on that date.

The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to request organizers to be careful in preparing advertisements, and use the name of the party and the emblem legally recognized in this state.

Comrade Job Harriman presented his resignation as member of National Committee, reason being given that he is about to leave the state. Provision for filling vacancy was laid over until next meeting.

It was decided to furnish the Secretary of State with new cut of our emblem, and request that upon the ballot it be enlarged to the legal limit. The committee appointed to prepare circular to be sent to all organizations which have received appeals for financial aid reported that circular had been printed and would be mailed at once.

State Organizer Spring was reported to be at Troy. Motion carried to request the State Organizer to submit a report to each meeting of State Committee of plans laid and work done.

Financial reports for June were received from Rome, Watertown, Troy, Catskill, Utica, Kings County, Richmond Borough, Peekskill, New Rochelle, Newburgh, and Ticonderoga.

The following were reported from committee appointed to draft rules for government of State Committee, which were adopted as read:

"1. Regular meetings shall be held every first and third Monday of the month, excepting the period of three months before election, when meetings shall be held every Monday. The Secretary may call a special meeting whenever he deems proper or at the request of three members of the State Committee. The Secretary shall send at least two days before a special meeting written notice to each member of the State Committee, informing him of the time, place, and object of the meeting. No other business except such as is contained in the notice shall be transacted at a special meeting.

"2. The attendance and absence of members at meetings shall be noted and published. Any member who absents himself without excuse from three consecutive meetings thereby vacates his seat and the vacancy shall be filled.

"3. The minutes of every meeting of the State Committee shall be published in The Worker and "Vorwaerts."

"4. The Secretary shall present a report at every regular meeting of the State Committee.

"5. The following committees shall be elected:

(a) A committee on literature.
(b) A committee on agitation tours.
(c) A committee on ways and means.

The officers of the State Committee shall be ex-officio members of each committee.

"6. The regular order of business at the meetings of the State Committee shall be:

(a) Roll-call.
(b) Reading of minutes.
(c) Communications.
(d) Report of Corresponding Secretary.
(e) Report of Financial Secretary.
(f) Report of State Organizer.
(g) Reports of committees.
(h) Unfinished business.
(i) New business."

The committee determined upon August 9 as the date upon which our candidate for Governor, Comrade Hanford, would begin his first tour of the state, and decided to notify the State Organizer to that effect, so that arrangements may be made with the different locals for public meetings.

The Secretary was instructed to communicate with Comrade Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, relative to touring the state during the latter part of September or early in October.

It was decided to invite Comrade Eugene V. Debs to make a tour of New York state during the month of October. Arrangements were also completed to send Comrade Jonas throughout the state in September, speaking in the German language.

The committee decided to attempt the organization of a local to be comprised of Hicksville and Central Park, L. I.

A pamphlet is to be printed each month by this committee and mailed to each party member in the state, showing just how each may work for Socialism in a manner to be effective, and informing them of what is transpiring throughout the state—how the movement is growing, the effect of the campaign, etc. Two editions of this pamphlet will probably be issued for the month of October.

Comrades Wood and Bowerman were appointed a committee to audit the late accounts of the Campaign Committee of Local New York.

Organizer Gerber, on behalf of Local New York, requested the co-operation of the State Committee in holding a grand ratification meeting in New York during the campaign. On motion it was decided to co-operate.

The Financial Secretary reported that the income was $52, and expenses, $25.

The State Committee authorized the publication of a special New York state edition of the pamphlet entitled, "Child Slaves in Free America," which will be printed for the campaign with a cut of Comrade Hanford, the party emblem, and the list of candidates for state offices on last page, together with a page devoted to a discussion of this subject, and how Socialists would treat such conditions. The State Committee considers this very good propaganda literature, and also good for campaign purposes, and advises subdivisions of the state to circulate it. These pamphlets may be secured at 75 cents for 100 or $5 per 1,000.

Adjourned to meet again at Labor Lyceum, Monday, August 4, at 8:30 p. m. sharp.

STATE ORGANIZER'S WORK.

State Organizer Spring has been having great success in his work of late. He is now working in Troy and vicinity.

At Highland Falls he held a most successful street meeting, with fully three hundred listeners, who showed deep interest in the movemnt. Local Highland Falls was organizd six weeks ago with only eight members. It now has fifteen members, is holding weekly meetings, and is attracting attention through the columns of the local press. Organizer Lindboe is well versed in the principles and history of the party, and he is ably seconded by other comrades. The Highland Falls Socialists "mean business" and a strong movement in that locality is now assured—second, says Comrade Spring, to none in the state.

On Thursday of last week, Spring spoke at Newburg, with a fairly large audience and the closest attention to his remarks. The outlook at Newburg he reports as very encouraging.

The following night a good street meeting was held at Catskill. The comrades there expect to "make a record" at the polls this fall and will contribute their full quota to the good work which is sure to be done in the state.

Organizer Spring reached Troy last Saturday, and expected to remain in that vicinty for a week or more, working for the party organization in Albany, Cohoes, and Schuylerville.

Arrangements are progressing well for Comrade Hanford's tour of the state, beginning on August 9, and it is expected that better audiences will greet him this time than ever before. Those who have heard Hanford in previous years will not fail to bring out their friends this time, knowing that every workingman will be deeply impressed by his forcible presentation of the demands of the working class.

Communications for the State Organizer should be addressed to F. J. Spring, care of H. L. Slobodin, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, and will be forwarded promptly.

GENERAL COMMITTEE.

William Edlin and Charles Lane presided in last Saturday's session of the General Committee of Local New York. Delegates were seated for the new term as follows: 4th A. D., Boudin, Harris, and Haipern; 11th, Braun; 12th, Edlin and Wm. Halpern; 18th and 20th, Paulitsch, Jos. Wood, and J. N. Wood; 23d, Neppel and Bartholomew; 24th, Wallace and Reichenthal; 28th, Bowerman, Obrist, Löwensohn and Friedmann; 30th, Panken and Edelman; 31st, Kilgus; 35th, Br. 1, Gall and Wyssman. Four applicants were admitted to membership in the party.

Julius Gerber, as Financial Secretary, presented the financial report for the last six months, which along with the report of the Treasurer, was accepted and ordered published.

Comrade Hannemann reported for the committee elected at the preceding meeting to consider candidates for the office of Organizer, to the effect that Comrades Nic. Gieger, Jas. N. Wood, H. C. Bowerman, and Paul Thielke had accepted nominations; Julius Gerber declining to be considered as a candidate.

After exhaustive discussion, a vote was taken and, both Thielke and Bowerman withdrawing, Wood was unanimously elected.

A vote of thanks was extended to Comrade Gerber for his faithful service during the three years past.

Other officers were elected as follows: Recording Secretary, Edw. M. Martin; Treasurer, Wm. J. F. Hannemann; Auditor, M. M. Bartholomew; City Executive Committee, Reichenthal, Paulitsch, Edlin, Kilgus, Mayes, Pick, and Bowerman; Grievance Committee, Martin, Mayes, Dr. Halpern, Berlin, and Harris; Entertainment Committee, Mrs. Simon, Miss Dubman, Hannemann, Miss Fox, Tanzer, Jos. Wood, Schmidt, Wm. Halpern, and Edw. Meyer; Auditing Committee, Goldberg, Wallace, and Boudin; Credentials Committee, Fishman, Paulitsch, and Hannemann; Seargeant-at-arms, Paulitsch.

KINGS COUNTY.

Comrades Dooley and Passage presided at the last meeting of the Kings County Committee. Delegates were seated from the 5th, 12th, and 21st A. D.

A communication was received from the State Committee submitting to general vote the new state constitution of the party. The Organizer was instructed to ask the State Committee to transmit voting blanks, and, if possible, printed copies of the draft of constitution.

The delegates of the 16th A. D., the 20th, Br. 1, and the 21st, Br. 3, reported that they were instructed to vote against holding a parade.

The Outing Committee reported that arrangements for games and amusements have been made, but the Committee is disappointed at the small support given by the district committees. Unless more earnest support is given, the success of the outing is questioned. This outing is to be held for the purpose of swelling the campaign fund and the district committees and individual comrades should give the matter their immediate attention. The committee meets every Tuesday evening at the Labor Lyceum.

The following nominations were made for officers of the Local: Recording and Corresponding Secretary, A. Frazer; Financial Secretary, J. C. Holzer; Treasurer, C. Hopkins; Credentials Committee, Weil, Peiser, Boehm, Hauer; Auditing Committee, Feltner, Ginsburg, Spengler; Drum and Fife Corps Committee, Schalk Hapsted, Weiss.

Comrade Thielke of the "Better Times Agitation Committee" was granted the floor to submit the plans and object of that body. After a short discourse the matter was on motion tabled; it was further voted that it is the sense of our Committee that the agitation of the Better Times Agitation Committee is in conflict with our constitution.

All delegates are requested to appear at the next meeting of the County Committee at 7:30.

R·I·P·A·N·S

I will be sixty-one years old next April, and all my life had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion. Up to three years ago I was sure that nothing would help me, as I had tried almost every known remedy, none giving me much relief. One day my family physician told me to try Ripans Tabules, as he had found them of great benefit in several obstinate cases of indigestion and dyspepsia. I will say candidly that I had little faith in them or in any other medicine when I began taking the Tabules. Much to my surprise, I felt better within a day and was soon greatly relieved. I kept taking them and continued to improve. I felt like a new woman, and my neighbors and friends saw a great change for the better in my health.

THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The news of the past week has been rich in items illustrating the "brotherhood of Capital and Labor" and the "equality of all citizens before the law."

First, Federal Judge Jackson of West Virginia sent six union miners to jail for violating his injunction forbidding them to hold meetings in their own hired hall.

Then, some twenty more miners were arrested under the same injunction and are held for trial.

Then, another miner was sent up for three months for expressing his candid opinion that Jackson was a skunk.

Then, Secretary Mullahy of the Stationery Firemen at Wilkes-Barre was arrested on twenty-five charges of criminal libel, for having published the names of twenty-five scabs; and he was held for trial under bail of $12,500.

Finally, came Judge Kellar with another injunction, forbidding the union to organize the distribution of food to the strikers.

That is a pretty good week's record for Brother Capital.

On the other hand, it is interesting to observe that, in spite of the injunction against the Meat Trust secured, strictly for campaign purposes, by our strenuous President and his Steel Trust Attorney-General, the firms of Armour, Swift, Hammond, Morris, and the other great packers have completed their consolidation—and their shares have gone away up in the Stock Exchange.

You see, the injunction is a convenient thing. If you want it to serve as a deadly weapon, to hit strikers and hit them hard, it serves. If you want it to go off with a great noise, as a sort of campaign fireworks, and yet to do no harm to your friends, the capitalists, it serves this purpose equally well.

The injunction is, indeed, a good thing—for the class that owns the judges. The power of the law is a formidable weapon for the class that knows how to use it.

So far it is the capitalists who have owned the courts, who have known how to use the political power.

But times change and men change with them. We are going to have workingmen—radical, class-conscious workingmen—Socialist workingmen—in the legislative halls and the executive chambers and on the judicial benches.

And then OUR judges will issue injunctions for the benefit of OUR class against the men who are now our masters.

Is it not time?

NEW HAMPSHIRE NOTES.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 27.—Comrade M. H. O'Neil, our candidate for Governor, spoke in Wilton, July 23, and in Waltham, Mass., Saturday, July 26.

Several hundred workingmen listened intently to the address in front of the State House at Concord, Friday, July 25, by S. F. Claflin. Meetings at Fosterville and Penacook are arranged for this week.

Concord will have a city ticket and several ward tickets in the field, as will also Nashua. A Hillsborough county ticket is proposed, and in view of the fact that this county polled 340 votes for governor in 1900 (nearly half of our state vote) there certainly should be one. All Socialists in the country, willing to co-operate in putting up a county ticket, should write to Comrade O'Neil at Nashua at once, as there is little time to lose.

Mr. Bryan has swung around the circle and departed, but what he would do with the trusts, how he would relieve by the weight of a hair the burdens of the poor, with eight-dollar coal, nine-dollar wood, all the necessities of life double or thrice what they ought to be, he has not said, nor can any workingman find out. Bryan is a glittering fraud! He has no adequate remedy for the condition that confronts us any more than has the Roosevelt crowd.

The work of filing the nomination papers for our state ticket is progressing rapidly, and will be completed in due time. A man named Howie, an organizer for J. A. Parker of Kentucky, who runs what he is pleased to call the "Allied People's Party," has nominated himself for governor, and is making a strenuous effort to secure names enough to get on the official ballot. It is a barefaced fake, designed to injure the Socialists, but owing to Howie's well-known record, will have the opposite effect. There is no need of warning Socialists to have nothing to do with it.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON, July 26.—The State Executive Committee met July 15, with Beals, Putney, Goldstein, and Porter present, and Putney in the chair. Sherman came later.

Financial reports from Everett, Brockton, and Malden, and communications from Chicago, New York, Beverly, and Fitchburg, and National Secretary Greenbaum were read and filed.

The Secretary was instructed to send list of clubs to the "Chicago Socialist" and to write to Comrade Blaney of Marblehead to arrange a meeting. Also to write Comrade W. T. Brown that this Committee will try to arrange a tour for him during the middle of September, provided he can give the dates.

It was voted that Comrades Putney and Goldstein ascertain the terms for which Paine Hall can be secured for both coming conventions. The Secretary was instructed to draft an appeal for funds and send it out in connection with subscription lists. The Committee then adourned to meet Tuesday, July 29.

ORGANIZER CALDWELL IN CONNECTICUT

NEW HAVEN, July 27.—Howard H. Caldwell, who has been working two weeks in Connecticut as an organizer for the State Committee, is addressing large open-air meetings in every town he visits. Tuesday, July 22, he spoke in Hartford, and after the meeting he reorganized the Hartford Socialists into a branch with twenty-eight members. Wednesday's meeting was held in New Britain. An application for a charter is being filled out by local friends of the party, and Caldwell will return there next Sunday and organize. Windsor Locks was visited Thursday and South Manchester Friday and good meetings were held in both places and a large number of pamphlets sold, so that the organizer's supply was exhausted. An application for a charter is being filled out by Windsor Locks. Saturday evening was appointed for a meeting in Rockville, but no report has yet been received from there.

Caldwell's future dates are as follows: Friday, August 1, Putnam; 2, Norwich; 3, New London; 4, Stonington; 5, New Haven; 6, Torrington; 7, Waterbury; 8, Naugatuck; 9, Ansonia; 10, Bridgeport; 12, Stamford; 13, South Norwalk; 14, Danbury.

Thus far Comrade Caldwell's trip has been very effective so far as interest in the party and propaganda for Socialism is concerned. There are many places which he will visit where no agitation has yet been done and immediate organization cannot be expected. The best results may be expected from the literature he has distributed or sold, and from the interest aroused by his lectures.

In order to gain permanent benefit from his work it is imperative that these places should be visited again and in order to do this the State Committee must be provided with funds. So far no charge has been made upon the locals visited for Comrade Caldwell's services or expenses, and we believe that it is a better and simpler way to pay all expense through the State Committee. But this cannot be done unless all branches immediately pay up all dues and also contribute to the campaign fund or help the Committee by loans.

We would like to continue Comrade Caldwell's work after August 14, as it is proving the best propaganda work ever done in Connecticut, and it can be done if branches respond promptly.

For the State Committee.

ORGANIZING LUZERNE.

WILKES BARRE, July 25.—The next regular meeting of the County Committee of the Socialist Party of Luzerne County will be held at 40 W. Market street, Wilkes Barre, third floor, on Tuesday evening, August 5, at 7.30 o'clock. All members of the committee as well as the county candidates are urged to be present, as business of importance is to be transacted.

Those locals which have not yet elected delegates are requested to do so at the earliest possible date. Each city, borough, or township is entitled to two delegates, but such delegates must be members of the party and be elected as such by their respective locals.

On June 1, Luzerne County had but one local; now it has fourteen and more coming. The following places have so far been organized: Wilkes Barre, Pittston, Duryea, Plains, Maltby, Edwardsdale, West Wyoming, Hazleton, West Hazleton, Freeland, Lattimer, Yeddo, Harwood Mines, and Mayfield.

It is the intention of the County Committee to organize every town and village in the County which has not yet been reached. It is expected that the Socialist Party will be as strong a factor politically as the United Mine Workers are economically. Those locals which have not yet done so are urged to place themselves in communication with the County Secretary, C. F. Quinn, 53 Wyoming street, Wilkes Barre, giving the names and addresses of officers, the time and place of meeting, and other matters of interest pertaining to their local. This is necessary in forming a systematic county organization.

CAMPAIGN OPENED IN TOLEDO.

TOLEDO, O., July 23.—At our public meeting in Harmonia Hall last night, Dr. J. S Pyle formally accepted the nomination for Congress from the Socialist Party of this district. The meeting was well attended, considering the hot weather, and many strangers were present. Five of hte latter applied for membership in the party.

Dr. Pyle's address of acceptance is printed in full in the "Evening News" to-day. He is a man of great ability and energy and full of enthusiasm for the cause of Socialism. He is a good speaker and has the faculty of making converts more than all the rest of us together; and the best of it is that his converts are headed in the right direction; they are true Socialists.

At our meeting of August 12 Dr. Pyle will speak again and comrades should bring out as many of their friends as possible to hear him.

Frederick B. Strickland will speak here on August 5, after which he leaves for Colorado.

A SHREWD SCHEME.

Official of the Illinois Steel Company applied to the Secretary of State of Illinois recently for articles of incoraorption for a new savings bank at South Chicago. Its officers will be representatives of the steel company. The capital stock will be $200,000. Thrice a month the steel company pays out from $350,000 to $400,000 to its employees. The same game was worked by the cotton mill owners of the South. They found that the employees saved 10 per cent. of their wages. With that knowledge they cut them just 10 per cent. The working class has no business getting any more than enough to live on.—Missouri Socialist.

TROUBLE AHEAD.

The Labor Movement in "Pacified" Countries

Wherever Capitalism Arises, It Awakes the Working-Class Revolt that Is to Overthrow It—Strikes in Transvaal and Philippines—The Class War International.

It is the historic doom of the capitalist class that wherever the capitalist system of exploitation begins to develope, there arises also its enemy, the labor movement. The capitalists of England, weary of strikes and frightened by the slowly growing political independence of the workers at home, thought to find a profitable field for investment in South Africa and there to be free from the "insolence" of the workmen who no longer "know their place." So thought the American capitalists in regard to Cuba, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines.

Already we have seen the labor movement arising, weak in numbers at first, but growing stronger, vague and doubtful in character at first, but growing clearer, in Cuba and Puerto Rico. Neither the application of martial law nor the revival of obsolete Spanish statutes in the latter island has availed to crush the rising trade unions and the young Socialist Party; and in Cuba, the same movement, though not yet so strong, is under way. Capitalism itself draws the class lines and disciplines and organizes the workers for resistance.

This week comes to us interesting news on the same lines from "pacified" South Africa and from the Philippines still in process of "pacification."

From the Transvaal.

By the English mail we receive a copy of "Reynolds' Newspaper," telling of a strike of the British mechanics at the Crown Reef gold mines in the Transvaal, operated under British martial law. "Reynolds" reprints in full the statement addressed by the locals of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, the Ironmoulders' Society of South Africa, and the Transvaal Engine Drivers' and Boiler Attendants' Association to Lord Milner, High Commissioner for South Africa, Administrator of the Transvaal, etc. The document is dated at Johannisburg, April 23—before the conclusion of peace.

The statement draws Lord Milner's attention "to the fact that a dispute has been on at the Crown Reef Gold Mining Company from April 1 between the mechanics employed there and the company, through the efforts of the latter to introduce a system of task work"—or, as we should call it, piece work, intended to set up rivalry among the men, force them to greater speed, and thus increase the output for the benefit of the bosses.

"American System" of Driving.

It is interesting to observe that the men speak of the task system as an American importation. But indeed it is only untraveled American workingmen who do not know that the American workers are the hardest driven in the world and American capitalists the hardest drivers. In every industry, the Americans work harder and faster, use up their life energy quicker, and create more profit for their masters in proportion to the wages they get back than the workingmen of any other country.

The Johannisburg workers, in submitting the correspondence to Lord Milner, say:

"Your Lordship will observe from the correspondence that the directors are equally determined with the management to introduce this system, which is one of the worst systems which ever came from America and which we as British Colonials emphatically refuse to have."

They further inform him that they have already appealed to the President of the Chamber of Mines, who had recently made a speech overflowing with love for the workingmen, but that "he shuffled with the whole matter and practically repudiated his own statement made only a few days ago."

They continue with what must have sounded in Lord Milner's ears like a veiled threat, followed by words of indignant protest at the shameful abuse of the appeal to "loyalty" and "patriotism" which had drawn Englishmen to South Africa to fight the Boers. They say:

"We wish to draw your Lordship's attention that this matter not only affects the Crown Reef, but the workers on every mine from Randfontein to Springs, who are eagerly awaiting to hear the result and when the whole of the correspondence is placed in their hands they will be able to form their own opinions as to what the capitalists mean to do with the workers in the future.

Reward of "Patriotism."

"And is this to be their reward after two and a half years of fighting and suffering, instead of the franchise, freedom, and equal rights, or does 'equal rights' mean the 'right of the capitalists to force any terms upon the workers they see fit, and the workers to have the 'right' to accept or starve?

"Being under martial law, we naturally expected decent fair play; but no, they decided to act when the workers have just returned from the field of battle—some are even yet in the field—and strike them now! They are too impoverished to protect themselves."

The international gang of capitalists with headquarters at London, who brought on and engineered the war, have evidently become alarmed lest the gold mines and diamond fields which they have won at the cost of so much villainy, so much national disgrace, so much of the blood of British and Dutch workers and the tears of British and Dutch widows and orphans, may, after all, fail to yield them the fabulous profits they expected, all on account of the stubbornness of these South African colonists.

To Flood South Africa with White Workingmen

Having conquered the Boers, they have now to conquer their own colonists—and they hope to do this by flooding South Africa with workingmen. A special "Times" dispatch from London, dated July 24, says:

"A scheme is afoot to attract unskilled white labor to the Rand in view of the scarcity of native labor and the consequent depression of the mining industry. The mine owners believe the employment of white labor to be practical, for wherever it has been tried lately on a limited scale it has worked well.

"It is thought that 100,000 unskilled workmen from Great Britain ought to be attracted by the prospect of $1.25 a day as well as their board and lodging from the time they reach South Africa. The companies are building three-room cottages, each to accommodate six persons, and it may be that a married man with a family will get a whole cottage. It has been suggested that the home government ought to provide free transportation to those who are willing to go.

"Many of the mine operators are ready to hire large numbers of white men. If the desired immigration is brought about some of the scarce native labor may be liberated for employment at railway construction or in agricultural undertakings."

Unemployment is reaching terrible proportions in England, even among the skilled and organized men. But this address of the Johannisburg unions has gone to all the organized workingmen of England—and, in spite of all attempts to keep him in South Africa and set him to work, Tommy Atkins is coming home by the tens of thousands and clamoring for a chance to earn a living there.

So the poor thrifty British "captain of industry" has a sad time in his foreign ventures, in spite of all his Machiavellian schemes. And his American brother, busy carrying civilization to the Filipinos in order to get rid of that two billion dollar surplus, is likely to be in the same boat.

In the Philippines, Too.

On the same day with the London dispatch quoted, comes one from Manila, announcing that seven thousand cigarmakers have struck for higher wages—impudent fellows! And the "Evening Post" publishes along with it a letter from its special correspondent at Manila, dated May 24, from which we make some extracts:

"Just now Manila is face to face with its first conflict of labor and capital. I do not know how unexpected this was among employers, but to the general public it was a revelation of the Filipino nature. The first premonition came two weeks ago in connection with an attempt on the part of a corporation to introduce into the city the rickshaw system." (The rickshaw is a carriage drawn by men instead of horses, commonly used in Japan.) "The thing was a long time in coming. The vehicles were a-making; they were in the Custom House; they would soon be set up—be patient; in two days more they would be in operation. The day came, but alas, the promoters of the enterprise had reckoned without the Chinese guild which in its various ramifications has its hand upon practically every subject of the Flowery Kingdom. These influential leaders decided that their fellow countrymen should not draw the foreigner, like beasts of burden, and the venture ended suddenly. The company has not quite given up hope, for when Collector of Customs Schuster decided that such labor was not skilled and therefore might not be brought in, its managers appealed to the acting Governor. His decision is yet unknown.

"This was the first premonition of trouble ahead; nevertheless, we were surprised to hear that the native printers in the McCullough establishment had gone on a strike to be followed in a few days by workmen employed by Kerr & Co., the Compania Tabacalera and others.

Civilization Brings Hunger.

"The complaint in all these cases is that wages are not advanced to keep pace with increasing expenses, for food and house rent. This is true. These people are poor, and while there are only in exceptional times, cases of actual suffering, it is very clear that in thousands of cases the food consumed is either too little in quantity or too poor in quality properly nourish the body. * * *

"The native workingmen are beginning to organize themselves into labor unions in which at present there are represented no less than eight or nine trades, among them tailors, mapmakers, cigarmakers, lithographers, and printers. Capitalists here view the situation with apprehension, and well they may, for cheap labor is absolutely necessary to the acquisition of speedy wealth. * * *

"That the present strike will enable the native workman to gain his point is altogether unlikely; for, although the times seem auspicious, labor is not yet sufficiently organized to make its demand tell effectively upon the capitalistic class, already working under a much more definite understanding. Of conflicts, therefore, between labor and capital in the Philippines, we have not heard the end."

Socialism Everywhere.

In connection with all this, it may be added that there is an intelligent, though yet young, Socialist organization in South Africa; that the Socialist movement has gained a firm foothold in Japan; and that the Japanese universities, to which have resorted many young native students from China, Korea, and the Philippines, are likely to serve as a center from which the ideas of Socialism will be spread all over Eastern Asia.

International capitalism creates the international labor movement. Wars for conquest and commercial advantage are but the prelude of the class war. And the working class of the world is awakening to the necessity of joining forces across national frontiers and distant oceans to throw off the yoke of the world's exploiters.

——It is all well enough to be on the right road; but the important thing is to move in the right direction.—Williamsport Labor Review.

AT I. T. U. CONVENTION.

Comrade Cutting of Boston Offers a Resolution for Independent Political Action.

George G. Cutting of Boston Typographical Union No. 13 has proposed the following resolution for consideration at the convention of the International Typographical Union, which meets at Cincinnati on August 11:

"Whereas, The development of the trusts into a world-wide institution demonstrates the final consummation of an all-embracing trust, owned and controlled by a few men, having legal ownership of the means of life, whose economic power reflected into government means a final state of capitalistic feudalism; and

"Whereas, The machinery of production and exchange is now owned by the capitalistic class and operated by them only for profit, which prevents the employment of willing workers and imposes consequent burdens on those employed; and as the wages of the working class in purchasing power has steadily decreased, and every raise in money wages has been more than offset by the increased cost of necessary commodities, it demonstrates the necessity of the workers owning the means of production and exchange, in order to escape the inevitable tendency of capitalistic slavery; and

"Whereas, The power of government in both states and nation is at present vested in the capitalistic class who use the courts to issue blanket injunctions and the police and military to enforce their despotic decrees, and through these means prevent lawful persuasion and defeat the cause of organized labor; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the International Typographical Union, in convention assembled, recommend to all locals and affiliated bodies the adoption of an amendment to their local constitutions by a clause permitting independent political action along the line of the class struggle and international Socialism, with the aim and object to assist the political movement of the working class of the world in controlling the powers of government and the public ownership of all the means of production and distribution under a form of co-operative control, through the Imperative Mandate and the Initiative and Referendum."

CHASE IN MINNESOTA.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 26.—We have had an exciting week in this town. The meeting arranged by the Trades Council for our comrade, ex-Mayor Chase of Haverhill, had to be turned away for lack of room. Last night the party held its meeting in the Bijou Theater, with Chase as the principal speaker, and the theater was again crowded. The meeting was called to express sympathy with the struggling miners, and the arraignment of the Coal Barons and Judge Jackson in most eloquent and telling terms by Chase called out such an outburst of applause as has never been seen in this city. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the meeting:

"Resolved, That we, the workingmen and Socialists of Minneapolis, in a mass meeting assembled, send our greetings to the struggling miners in the anthracite region and pledge to them our moral and financial support in their battle for a better human existence and against the oppression of the Coal Barons:

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to John Mitchell, President of the United Mine Workers of America."

The sum of $29.57 was collected at the meeting for the strikers, and a committee of three was appointed to take up subscriptions to aid the strikers, consisting of Comrades Z. Roberts, D. Raymer, and G. B. Leonard.

Comrade Chase has gone to speak at St. Cloud and from there he is coming back to spend Sunday and Monday here. The Brainerd central body has arranged two meetings for him. The verdict here is that Chase is a mighty good fellow and that our National Committee is doing good work.

The "Times" to-day gives prominence to an extended interview, very fairly reported, with Comrade Chase and Comrade Raymer, our candidate for Mayor.

There is some misapprehension on the part of the comrades and Socialists through this state as to the name of the party. We are going on the ballot under the name of Social Democratic Party, and will stick to it unless prevented by the courts. Socialists in this state should make it their business to refer to our organization as the Social Democratic Party, as the confusion created by the use of the name Socialist Party may throw many votes to the S. L. P. It should be made clear that the Social Democratic Party in this state is the same as the national organization known as the Socialist Party.

IDAHO NOMINATES.

WEISER, Ida., July 19.—The Socialist Party of Idaho held its first state convention here yesterday and to-day and nominated a full ticket as follows: For Congress, John A. Davis of Boise; for Judge of the Supreme Court, J. C. Elder of Moscow; for Governor, A. M. Slatery of St. Anthony; for Lieutenant-Governor, L. N. B. Anderson of Moscow; for Secretary of State, Will D. Candee of Weiser; for Auditor, George W. Herrington of Mediment; for Treasurer, John E. Miller of Idaho Falls; for Attorney-General, D. W. Smith of Payette; for Superintendent of Public Instruction, Mrs. George P. Hall of Garnett; for Inspector of Mines, O. C. Smith of Wallace.

Thirteen of the twenty-two locals in the state were represented. W. Y. Perkins of Soldier was chosen as State Organizer.

TICKET IN ARIZONA.

GLOBE, Ariz., July 21.—In reading the party notes in The Worker of two weeks ago, I notice the phrase, "Socialism has struck Arizona." I want to inform the comrades throughout the country that Socialism has struck Arizona, indeed.

Local Globe of the Socialist Party was organized in February with five members. We now have twenty-six members, and Socialism is talked everywhere.

On June 21 we put a full county ticket in the field. Our candidates are: For Member of the Territorial Council, J. R. Barnett; for Assembly, Henry Vivian; for Sheriff, Kenneth Clayton; for Probate Judge, Con McCormack; for Recorder, F. W. Rolanno; for Treasurer, S. P. Barber; for Supervisors, T. R. Parks and J. T. N. Brown; for Justice of the Peace, F. S. Conrow.

The platform adopted puts our movement squarely on the working class foundation. It is as follows:

"The Socialist Party, in county convention assembled, calls upon the wage-working class to unite upon the political field for the interest of their class, by casting their ballot with the Socialist Party at the next election in November, 1902.

"In calling upon the wage-workers to vote the Socialist Party ticket we want them to study the principles of Socialism, which has its basis in the class struggle for the possession of the means of life, as expressed in the principles of Socialism—a movement whose definite aim is to emancipate the working class from wage slavery and all other evils that result from the private ownership of the means of production and distribution.

"The introduction of machinery, the concentration and organization of industries which greatly increase the productive power of labor, has not materially benefited the condition of the laborers, but has intensified their misery and poverty.

"We therefore call upon the wage-working class to rally to the support of the Socialist Party, because it represents the interests of their class, and to begin with their votes to organize their class for the abolition of capitalism and establishment of the Socialist industrial society, a system of society in which the wage-working class will collectively own and operate the machinery of production and distribution, thus giving the producers full control of the products of their labor.

"Vote the 'Socialist Party' ticket."

The two old parties have been talking of nominating a joint "citizens'" ticket, but whether or not this will be done we do not yet know. At any rate, it looks now as though the Republicans would not be "in it," and that the fight will be between the Democrats and the Socialist Party.

WAGES OF CAR WORKERS.

Census Bulletin No. 214 gives statistics of car construction and repairing, which, while they show a great growth of the industry, do not indicate a very satisfactory increase of prosperity for the workers during the period of ten years, 1890 to 1900.

In 1890 there were 137,986 wage-workers employed in car construction and repairing. Their total wages were $76,290,262. Average wages for the year were, therefore, $552.89.

In 1900, there were 207,105 such wage-workers. Total wages were $113,049,623. Average yearly wages had thus fallen to $545.86—a loss of $7.03.

TO ALL SOCIALIST TRADE UNIONISTS.

It is important that all trade unionists should be given an opportunity to learn what the Socialist Party—in New York the Social Democratic Party—stands for.

YOU can help—each one of you. For 75 cents you can get 100 copies of THE WORKER sent to your address; for $1.20 you can get 200 copies. Three hundred or more will be supplied to you at 50 cents a hundred.

Two or three times between now and election you should get enough copies of THE WORKER to supply all the members of your local union.

We want Socialism in our time.

CENSUS SHOWS INCREASE OF TENANT FARMING.

United States Census Bulletins 211 and 213 treat respectively of agriculture in West Virginia and in Illinois. It is interesting to note that, comparing the figures of 1900 with those of 1890, these widely separated states, different as they are in the character of their agriculture, agree in showing a marked increase of tenantry.

In West Virginia, in 1890, 82 per cent. of the farms were cultivated by their owners and 18 per cent. by tenants; in 1900, but 78 per cent. were owned by the men who worked them, and 22 per cent. were worked by tenants.

In Illinois, in 1890, 66 per cent. of the farms were operated by their owners and 34 per cent. by tenants; in 1900, the number of cases in which the owners worked their farms had fallen to 61 per cent. and 39 per cent. were cultivated by tenants.

In both statements, the group designated as worked by the owners includes a considerable number of cases where the occupant owns only a part of the land and rents the remainder from others; and includes also the case of farms operated by managers for the proprietors. The proportion of farms actually worked by the owners is, therefore, less than appears from the figures given.

Unfortunately, the bulletins give no information of the proportion of cases in which the same person owns two or more farms, all or all but one of which are conducted by managers for the proprietor or by tenants. And it gives no information as to the extent to which farms nominally owned by their occupants, are held subject to mortgages.

A TIME FOR THOUGHT.

It is worth while to be thoughtful in a time when all around us the cables binding us to the past are snapping like rotten whip cord. Many of us may fondly dream that Hamilton, Jefferson, Madison and Franklin set the bounds of republican institutions and chalked out the periphrey of political permanence. But the gravitation of life is greater than the wisdom of any generation of statesmen.—Maurice Thompson.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

THE PARTY PICNIC.

Remember that tickets for the New York party picnic of June 21, which was postponed on account of rain, are still good for September 7. In the meantime, sell all the aditional tickets you can and turn in the money collected as soon as possible.

TRICKS USED AGAINST THE STRIKING MINERS.

BY MORRISON I. SWIFT.

At the present time all the buncosteering faculties of American society are concentrated against the anthracite miner. Capitalist, political, military, judicial, and press-writing sharpers have united into an army to put him down. In the ranks of labor itself there are men who have sold themselves to the reigning class for some petty bribe to crush the miner back into his usual silent servitude. I will name a few of the tricks applied to him.

THE RELIEF FUND DISCONTENT TRICK: Those who want to see disunion and trouble among the miners assiduously circulate the story that the fund is not being distributed fairly and that the strikers are dissatisfied. You may rely on it that the purveyors of these reports are most of them enemies of the miners, would-be strike breakers or agents higher up of the operators. They try to make a bone of discord of the question whether the miners who have homes and credit shall receive of the strike fund as well as those who are already destitute. Now the fact is a great number of those with homes do not want aid and are willing to incur debt that the relief may go farther. The sentiment of loyalty and and self-sacrifice is strong. The strikers realize that those who represent them have complicated problems to solve in distributing the fund, and they are going to stand by their representatives cordially. The carping few will be recognized as those who expect to be paid for attempting to make trouble, with especial favors from the mine bosses when work begins. These trouble breeders are known and their purpose is known and they have usually very little influence on the rest.

THE PRETENSE THAT MEMBERS HAVE APPLIED FOR WORK This trick is always employed to cause the strikers to believe that their fellow strikers are playing the traitor to them. Mine bosses and foremen and a few strike breakers by nature and professional pets of the bosses are collected from all the mines into one mine secretly. The mine starts and it is advertised that the ranks of the strikers are broken and the strike is collapsing. This simple ruse does sometimes impose on the weaker-minded, or it hastens the crisis in another way, namely, through arousing violence.

THE TRICK OF VIOLENCE: We are all familiar with the capitalist's affection for state troops. They are one of his assets, as they are also one of the workingman's dire liabilities. If, on false pretences, by fraud, a mine can be started with bosses it is likely to cause an outbreak. The public then swings over to the owners' side. Troops come and every bribery is offered to the men of least character—and the bosses know very well who these are—to get them to open another mine, as a strike-breaking wedge. Then it is published that intimidation was the instrument by which the strikers were kept from going to work before, and public sympathy is further alienated.

For my part I can see no reason why the whole anthracite region should not be filled with an army and the strike go on serenely regardless of it. The conditions are not changed at all except that state taxes are increased and public sympathy in general lost. But what is the substantial value of public sympathy to the miners anyway? The miners have had the usual dose of so-called public sympathy and it has not done a thing for them. It has not budged the operators one inch toward arbitration. The fact is the business world has stood this strike because it secretly wants to have the labor unions of the country taught a sharp lesson. There is never any honest sympathy for strikers in the "high" business circles, and seldom much of it in the low ones. The miners therefore need not trouble themselves whether they have it or not. They should simply obey the law (and disobey all illegal injunctions) and quietly keep on striking. Let the soldiers sit about the towns as neighbors. The joke is on the people of the state who pay the bills. In this way the military trick would be scotched.

This has been a wonderful strike for abstinence from violence, showing that the working classes are penetrating the violence confidence game.

THE MERCHANTS' TRICK: A certain number of retail merchants who would fear for business' sake to come out openly against the miners have formed a secret society to prosecute the strikers' acts of lawlessness and hang the Mine Workers' officers. This body is called the Citizens' Alliance. It prosecutes boycotting, which is not illegal in this state, and hanging in effigy, which is also not illegal except through a course of legal shifts. It confines its attacks wholly to miners and lets the illegal acts of the operators wholly alone. In the mining region its influence is slight. It gives the region a gratuitously bad name outside by the untrue and grewsome picture it has drawn of it and advertised as widely as it could.

What is the remedy for the small merchants' trick, or merchants' small trick? One immediate remedy is miners' co-operative stores. If the merchants propose to fight the miners when they are in a death struggle for their rights, let the miners respond by taking themselves out of the hands of these merchants hereafter.

FOR THE DAILY.

Report of Pledges and Contributions.

The Coming Socialist and Trade Union Daily to be Named "The Globe."

The regular monthly general meeting of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association was held last Monday evening, August 4, at Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street. Comrade Hillquit was elected chairman of the meeting. It was then moved that all business be suspended except the report of the Board of Management, the admission of new members and the selection of a name. Four comrades were admitted into the Association. The question of a name for the daily paper was then taken up, and the names "The Worker," "Globe," "Sentinel" and Record" were presented. After considerable discussion the name "Globe" was adopted by a unanimous vote of the Association.

The conditions of membership in the W. C. P. A. are: First, the applicant must be a member in good standing of the Socialist Party—called in New York the Social Democratic Party; second, he (or she) must buy one share of stock for $5—$1 to be paid on the proposition of his name, $1 on his admission, and the rest within one year.

All branches of the S. D. P. and the Workingmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society in the city of New York which have as yet not elected delegates to the conference for the Socialist and Trade Union Daily are requested to do so at once, as the next meeting of the Conference takes place on Thursday evening, August 14, at the Labor Lyceum.

Comrades belonging to trade unions are also urged to bring the matter of the conference to the attention of their respective organizations with the object in view of sending two delegates to attend the Conference, which is to be a permanent body with certain rights and duties in connection with the publication of the daily. Please remember this when you attend the next meeting of your union.

Notice to Contributors.

Pledges should be drawn and checks and money orders made payable to the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association. All communications should be addressed to the Agent of the Association, Wm. Butscher, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

The Worker will contain, each week, a list of contributions received up to Monday preceding the date of issue.

If any contribution sent is not promptly acknowledged the sender should at once inform Comrade Butscher, that the matter may be investigated and set right.

Those who have made pledges should remember to send in the monthly instalments promptly, saving the trouble and expense of notifying them. Let each one feel his personal responsibility for the work we have undertaken and his power to hasten the coming of the Socialist Daily.

SOCIALISM AMONG THE MINERS.

The Coal Dale correspondent of the "Tamaqua Recorder," of Schuylkill County, Pa., gives the following account of the growth and activity of the Socialist movement in the strike field:

"Looking at the movement from the surface it indicates that the workingmen are thinking now more than ever before and that there will be some surprises in store for the "know it alls" before many moons.

"To show their honesty and sincerity of purpose, only last Saturday a Republican politician accompanied by a Democratic worker came here for the purpose of spending some boodle among the boys. He was politely told that as the Socialist Party will put a county ticket in the field for every office except District Attorney he should go and spend his money elsewhere where it might do him some good. The action of the Socialist Party through its spokesman and National Secretary, Leon C. Greenbaum, in informing the delegates at the Indianapolis Mine Workers convention that they would continue making donations for the striking miners in the anthracite regions, has shown plainly to not only the miners but all their sympathizers which political party is the friend of labor, while our Democratic and Republican parties in convention assembled in this state not only failed to recognize but completely ignored the fact that we were on strike, thus showing by their action that our interests are not worthy of their serious consideration. The local here is increasing in membership rapidly. Its numbers are being augmented by leaps and bounds. It was organized a week ago by Organizer John Collins of Chicago, with a charter membership of eighty-two. At Thursday evening's meeting seventy-nine were added to the membership and twenty-two at the regular meeting on Friday evening. At the special meeting on Sunday afternoon seventeen more were admitted. The membership of the local here at present is two hundred. The local at Seek has a membership of forty-six with good prospects for a larger number. Some of the most sanguine claim the numbers will easily reach the three hundred and fifty mark in Rahn township before election. The charter for Coal Dale Local has arrived and is in the hands of Designer John Gwilliams.

"Of the present officers of Rahn Township who have pledged themselves to cast their lot with the Socialist Party in the future are two school directors, two auditors, two inspectors of election, judge of election and town clerk.

"The following officers were chosen to guide the party's affairs in this town:

"Chairman—Subject to change at every meeting, John D. Davis; Recording Secretary, James McElhenney; Financial Secretary, Ed Melley; Literary Agent, James M. Gildea; Organizer, James Boyle.

"The secretaries of the different locals organized in this county will communicate with each other and call a meeting for the purpose of placing a county ticket in the field. The strike is now to be waged at the ballot, not for a 10 per cent. increase only, but a hundred per cent.—ownership of the mines and all means of production and distribution. The local here meets every Friday evening at 7 o'clock. All are welcome except 'scabs' and 'deputies.'"

——Can't the workingmen see what an advantage it would be to them in times of strike if their party appointed the policemen?—Williamsport Statesman.

——Everyone is talking Socialism nowadays; but some have very queer and confused ideas about it; the way to educate them is to get them to subscribe for The Worker.

——We do not know who would perform the dirty work under Socialism. But much of the dirty work, such as bribing juries and buying city councils, would not have to be done at all. —Williamsport Statesman.

BENJAMIN HANFORD FOR GOVERNOR.

A Brief Sketch and Personal Estimate of the Social Democratic Candidate in New York.

Benjamin Hanford, the candidate of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, was born in Cleveland, Ohio, some forty-five years ago, coming of old New England stock. In his early boyhood the family removed to Marshalltown, Iowa, where he began his life as a wage-worker in the printing trade.

He had no opportunity for school education, but from his stepmother—his mother having died in his infancy—he received good elementary teaching and imbibed from her precept and example a healthy taste in reading and a love of knowledge that has enabled him to make more of a workingman's limited chances for self-education than many a more worldly-fortunate man does of all the facilities of school and university training. To his stepmother, too, as he declares, he owes "whatever good there may be" in his character—and all who know him will agree that the tribute he thus pays her is a high one.

While still a boy Hanford entered a country printing office in Iowa—the elementary school of many a famous man and of many equally worthy who have not achieved fame. Having learned the trade—at least to a youth's satisfaction—he went to Chicago, where he joined the International Typographical Union at once. For some years he remained in Chicago, working on various daily newspapers and learning what a growing Western city and the conditions of the printing trade and the methods and traditions of that remarkable organization, the I. T. U., had to teach. Since then he has worked pretty well all over the country east of the Missouri.

Becomes a Socialist.

It was in Philadelphia, about 1890, that Hanford became a Socialist. Up to that time he had been indifferent to politics, seeing in the two old parties equal subserviency to the power of wealth and equal indifference to the welfare of the working class, and knowing nothing of the movement, then in its infancy in this country, which now stands for the hope and forward struggle of the workers. He was already well and rather widely known in the I. T. U. and in the union movement at large, both as an impressive speaker and as an active and progressive union man, whose sympathies were always with the "under dog" and his efforts always on the side of true democracy and the common good.

At this point he came under the influence of Fred Long, a brother printer, already a veteran in the labor movement, to whom many another active Socialist of to-day owes both knowledge and inspiration. From him Hanford learned what the then little understood word "Socialism" meant—that the principles and the policy for which it stood put into definite working form the vague sentiment for freedom and brotherhood that he had been trying to advocate. From that time to this he has been unwavering and untiring in his activity in the Socialist political movement, while no less staunch and active as a trade unionist on the economic field.

His Work in New York.

During the last ten years Comrade Hanford has worked most of the time in New York City and has had his full share in the toil and struggle of the party here. In 1898 he was the candidate of the Socialist Labor Party—then the united Socialist party of this state—for Governor and made a strong and effective campaign throughout the state.

When the split in the S. L. P. was seen to be final and irreconcilable, in October, 1899, Comrade Hanford resigned from that organization and, after making a careful investigation of the facts, became a member of the Social Democratic Party—the New York division of what is now nationally known as the Socialist Party. In the state campaign of 1900 he was chosen to head our state ticket, and his reputation for irreproachable honesty, as well as his clear and eloquent exposition of facts and principles in the campaign, did much to counteract the malignant misrepresentations scattered by the fanatical "union-smashers" of the S. L. P. and to win for the Social Democratic Party a superior place on the official ballot.

In the municipal campaign of 1901—undoubtedly the most difficult contest ever waged by the Socialists anywhere in this country—Hanford was again, much against his will, compelled to lead the forces as candidate for Mayor of New York City; and the Socialists of the city know how well he did his part.

When the state convention met on July 4 to chose candidates for the coming election, it was the unanimous opinion that it could find no other man who, by his personal record, so fully represented the spirit of the party and who, at the same time, could so well set forth its principles and its purposes as Benjamin Hanford; and much as he, , or any man in his position, would have preferred the place of a private in the ranks, he accepted the commission and has this week taken up the hard work of the campaign.

The Present Campaign.

On August 9 he begins a tour of the state, which will occupy from four to six weeks. After a few days of alleged rest—the movement never gives its representative much real rest, and the time will probably be fully occupied with meetings in New York City and vicinity—he will again visit all the principal cities and industrial centers of the state in the month before election.

Those who have heard Hanford before need not be advised to hear him again and to spread the word of his coming among their fellow workingmen and to ensure large audiences wherever he speaks. He is admittedly one of the three or four best Socialist orators in America, and there are many who maintain that none of our other speakers can surpass him as a spokesman of the awakening militant spirit of the working class.

Hanford as an Orator.

The secret of Hanford's powerful eloquence is not in any "tricks of oratory," not in any artificial finish of rhetoric and elocution. This is useful, as an accessory, but perhaps he has less of this than many a speaker who falls far short of him in power of conviction and inspiration. To use a slang phrase, Hanford is a great speaker because he is "the real thing." It has been said that "the style is the man," and that is true in his case.

In the first place, he has two personal qualities that go to make an orator—burning earnestness, as evident in his daily private life as in his appearance on the platform, and an ability to clothe his thoughts and feelings in the simplest and most direct of language, so that no hearer can fail to grasp his meaning.

A Working-Class Spokesman.

In the second place, he is a workingman, a class-conscious workingman, in every fibre—living the life of the working class, thinking its thoughts and instinct with its feelings, full of its growing hope and self-reliance, hating class rule with all his soul and despising the sham, the meanness, and the cruelty which are necessary to what the capitalist calls "success." Thus he speaks for the working class when he speaks from his own experience, and he speaks in the sincere language of that class.

As our candidate begins his tour of the state, it is only necessary to remind the comrades everywhere that there can be no question of his doing his part abundantly well. It is for them to see that his efforts are utilized to the fullest extent, that no workingman shall, through their neglect, fail to hear him.

HANFORD'S TOUR.

Hanford will speak at the following cities on dates named:

Mt. Vernon, Tuesday evening, August 12.

THE CAPITALIST PRESS.

HOW IT LIES.

The following dispatch is from the Philadelphia "Public Ledger:"

"WASHINGTON, July 31.—Strikers in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions are possessed of no particular desire to become bluejackets in Uncle Sam's navy. At the direction of the Navy Department, Lieutenant J. P. Ryan, who was recently sent on a recruiting trip through Pennsylvania, has abandoned that field of labor.

"It was expected the strikers without employment and money would be glad to enlist. But the fact that the organized miners contributed a fund for the relief of the strikers has averted their necessities, and the number of recruits secured was far less than was expected."

According to this Pennsylvania paper the miners would not enlist because they were so well provided for. Now read the following from the Boston "Herald:"

"WASHINGTON, D. C., July 31.—When the anthracite coal strike was ordered the Navy Department, thinking that some good recruits could be picked up among the miners, sent Lieutenant Ryan and Surgeon Benton to Pennsylvania for that purpose. In a report made to-day they say their trip was practically valueless, as few of the unemployed miners wished to leave terra firma, and the majority of those who did were PHYSICALLY INELIGIBLE TO ENTER THE SERVICE, OWING, IN MOST CASES, TO LACK OF NOURISHING FOOD."

The Pennsylvania paper suppresses the truth in the interest of the mine-owners, but the Boston paper lets the cat out of the bag. This is a good example of how the capitalist press does its work of misrepresentation.

And, by the way, is it not possible that these recruiting officers left at a gentle hint from the mine-owners, who know that the more men are taken away from the strike field the greater chances for the success of the strike.

We need a Socialist daily to tell the truth about these things.

——He who cites the past in vindication of the present may possibly be right in fact, but is certainly wrong in principle. If the past itself had been content with that mode of reasoning, humanity would to-day be standing where the first man stood—on one foot, undecided whether to put the other down ahead or behind.—Ex.

Instruction in the Matter of Nomination Papers.

Regular meeting of the State Committee held on August 4. Charters granted to Exeter and West Wyoming, Luzerne County, and Shenandoah and Mahanoy City, Schuylkill County, with two hundred and fifteen members. County and congressional convention reported held at New Castle August 2. Carbon County convention will be held at Mauch Chunk August 9, and Legislative District of Luzerne convention held August 2. Silver Brook Local authorized to arrange for county convention for Scuylkill. Conventions are being arranged for Delaware, Lycoming, and Montgomery counties.

By reason of so many inquiries it was decided to publish the following instructions in the matter of nomination papers:

INSTRUCTIONS IN THE MATTER OF NOMINATION PAPERS.

In describing the offices for which nominations are made by nomination papers the following will be proper: Judge of the ..... Court; Representative in Congress; Senator in the General Assembly; Representative in the General Assembly. These are state officers, and the papers must be filed in the office of the SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, at Harrisburg, BEFORE October 1 (at least thirty-five days before election. If sent by mail several days should be allowed for transmission, and the papers should be sent as first-class matter, registered.

For county offices the candidates may be: Prothonotary; Register of Wills; County Treasurer; District Attorney; Clerk of Courts; Recorder of Deeds; County Controller; County Auditors; Sheriff; or Register and Recorder; County Commissioners; Director of the Poor. These papers must be filed in the office of the COUNTY COMMISSIONERS BEFORE October 15 (at least fifteen days before election.)

Nominations for township and borough offices must be filed with the COUNTY COMMISSIONERS BEFORE October 21 (at least fifteen days before election.)

ALL blanks must be those furnished by the Secretary of the Commonwealth. No others are valid. The County Commissioners may have blanks furnished by the Secretary of the Commonwealth; if not write to Harrisburg for them. The secretary will furnish them without charge.

The number of signers required is 2 per cent. of the highest vote cast for any officer in the district at the last preceding election. To be safe get fifty to one hundred more than required. Use no other sheets than those furnished by the state. Use as many of the blanks as may be required. They may then be fastened together or filed as separate sheets, but must be filed at one time. Each sheet must be "vouched" by five of the signers who swear that to the best of their knowledge and belief the signers are all qualified electors (voters) of the district for which the nominations are made.

Each district requires a separate nomination paper. That is, a judge and a congressman cannot be nominated in the same paper; nor a congressman and an assemblyman. But the same voters may sign all the different papers, for one district may include several others. For instance, a congressional district may include two counties; a judicial district, one of those counties; while the assemblyman may be elected from a city in said county. In such a case a resident of the city may sign the three papers making nominations for the three districts.

Signers should write the name of city or town after the street number in giving their addresses, and should avoid the use of ditto (") marks.

Fill up the blanks heading the nomination papers as follows:

(Write the parts in capitals.)

We, the undersigned, all of whom are qualified electors of THE (number) JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF PENN.*....representing the SOCIALIST..Party or Policy, hereby nominate, etc.

*For Congress say " (number) REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT OF PA.

For State Senate, " (number) REPTORIAL DISTRICT OF PA.

For Assembly, say " (number) REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT of ..... COUNTY.

The number of the several districts may be obtained from Smull's Hand Book for 1901, the latest, or on application to the State Secretary of the party, J. Mahlon Barnes, 931 Callowhill street, Philadelphia, to whom all inquiries for further information should be directed without delay.

The comrades of Williamsport Local will visit Montgomery Local August 16 and assist in holding a public meeting. Royersford reports a rousing meeting held July 26, Comrades Maurer of Reading and Weisser of Pottsville being the speakers. Delaware County reports great activity, locals being formed in Media, Darby, and Clifton. Comrade Barnes of Philadelphia will speak at Darby, August 14, also at Reading, August 9. Comrade Slayton, candidate for Governor, was well received by the United Labor League of Pittsburg on July 27. He will visit Grove City, Mercer County, August 12. Maltby, which was organized June 27 with eleven members, now has more than one hundred, and three other locals have been formed in that legislative district. Comrade George Daly, the organizer, says: "There will be no let up until every ward in the district is organized and every union miner is a member." Local Hazleton is making rapid strides. Comrades Chas. Kennedy, W. Evans, Alex Dwyer, and Henry Mulhall are visiting neighboring towns each day and meeting with splendid success, and the old politicians in that district are silent and sad.

The following letter was ordered sent by the State Committee:

Father Hussie, St. Gabriels Church, Hazleton, Pa.

Reverend Sir:—By the public prints, and members of your parish, our attention has been called to the fact that in a sermon delivered Sunday, August 2, you warned your hearers against participating in the Socialist movement, now being rapidly spread in the coal regions, and denounced the same, saying, "That the doctrines are incompatible with the teachings of the Roman Catholic Church and savor of anarchy and infidelity."

We respectfully call your attention to the injustice of your utterance and invite your careful perusal of the platform, declaration of principles and the wide range of authorized literature of our party, much of which will have reached you when this comes to hand.

The Socialist Party is the political party of the working class, its purpose is the conquest of the public powers, by unity of action at the ballot-box by that class for the benefit of that class.

Like all other political parties, the Socialist Party considers religious affiliation a matter of personal choice. Each may serve God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

Unlike all other political parties, the Socialist Party is deeply interested in and is moving along practical lines to bring about peace and good will among men.

All political parties heretofore in power have carefully guarded the interests of the capitalist class and served that class alone.

There is no law of heaven that makes widespread misery, ceaseless toil and pinching poverty the portion of the millions and a few persons multi-millionaires, holding paper titles of ownership of all things terrestrial save the air. These are man made laws, and the Socialist (the working class) Party will change them.

The comfort and ease of the idle and their great wealth and their tyranny and their impudence and their indifference to the public welfare is a result of the working class being divided at the polls and voting for the hand maidens of capitalism under the name of the Republican or Democratic party.

The working class of the world produce all the wealth of the world, all the luxuries, and the beautiful things of life. The Socialist Party declares that those who produce them shall possess them and enjoy them, and those that do not work neither shall they eat.

In the triumph of the Socialist Party classes will disappear, master and slave vanish. In fraternal co-operation the human family will easily gather from willing "mother earth" her treasures, enough for each, enough for all, enough for evermore, and for the first time in history happiness and joy, plenty and lasting peace will bless the sons and daughters of men.

Very respectfully yours,
J. MAHLON BARNES,
Secretary.

Assistant Secretary.

The State Committee called meetings at headquarters August 3 and 4, that the comrades of Philadelphia might be fully informed of the situation in the coal fields. Comrades Collins and Moore presented a report of their work and urged upon the comrades to do their utmost to enable the State Committee to keep speakers in the field. A committee of three was appointed, consisting of Comrades Atkinson, Forbes, and Seltzer, to gather funds for that purpose; $83.75 was secured and a number of pledges given for weekly payments.

Comrades Collins and Moore during the week will visit the following places: Wilkes Barre, Nanticoke, Pittston, Sugar Notch, Nanticoke, Avaco, Plymouth, Hazleton, and Mauch Chunk.

AS TO VIOLENCE IN THE COAL STRIKE.

At last human endurance, long since stretched to its utmost limit, broke out into violence one day last week among the striking miners of Shenandoah.

Sheriff Bedell attempted to conduct a man within the coal company's property. The strikers discovered that he was a scab. They set upon the traitor to their class in time of war and gave him a beating. Sheriff Bedell emptied his revolver into the crowd. He was chased under cover. His brother, a local merchant who, true to the instincts of his class, was fighting the men who were doubtless his customers, attempted to go to his rescue. He was beaten to death, and a riot ensued, in which many shots were exchanged and a number of men wounded on both sides.

Now a mighty howl of "Violence!" goes up from the capitalist class and their hireling press.

Who are those who now cry "Violence!" and "Murder!" with holy horror?

They are the same men whose "Coal and Iron police" thugs had already shot a boy in the back and killed a man in the open road long before this outburst.

They are of the class upon whose head is the blood of workingmen murdered at Latimer and Homestead.

They belong to the cannibal class which fattens itself on the lives of little children and weak women.

They are of the class which foments bloody international wars for foreign trade and more profits.

Let them beware when they cry "Violence!" lest they accuse themselves. The ghosts of starved breaker-boys and murdered workingmen rise up to accuse them.

The eminently respectable people who seem so shocked and incensed at what might have been expected long before, have never been hungry—and have never worked.

The miners have toiled unceasingly since boyhood amid dirt and foul air and coal grit for enough to keep them alive; they have lived in poor houses and ate poor food, they have seen their sons grow prematurely, old, and through it all they have seen the product of their labor going to other men who owned the mines that nature left for the use of all.

Now they are on strike. They have held out manfully; they have seen their scanty funds dwindle and their families grow hungry; some of them have been persecuted through the courts; and they have seen all the forces of society—society, which their labor supports—arrayed against them. All this they are asked to stand gently, peaceably, without a murmur.

Then comes the traitor in their own ranks—the crawling deserter, who breaks the force of their united effort—the scab.

What do you expect? Are they not men with blood in their veins, with a back-bone, with the instinct of self-preservation implanted in them. Or are they to be bloodless, spineless, resistless jelly-fish?

We are sorry their passion broke loose—especially for their own sakes—but we are not surprised.

The trade union movement is not a movement of violence, the Socialist movement is not a movement of violence. Both trade unionists and Socialists deplore and strive to prevent such outbreaks. But it is not for the capitalist class to talk of violence, for they are the first to use it and they are the ones who provoke it. The striker is struggling for his rights; the capitalist is struggling for robbery. It is well to remember that men are men, that we must take them as we find them and that there is a limit to human endurance. Violence preceded the revolution, preceded the Civil War, preceded every great social change—it would be strange indeed if some of it did not creep into the struggle for labor's rights. The working class do not want violence; they want labor's rights by way of the ballot-box and a peaceful change. But when the will of the working class expresses itself if the capitalists refuse to get from under they will be as chaff to the whirlwind.

In consequence of the outbreak at Shenandoah the troops are now encamped there. The mine-owners are doubtless very glad that the Shenandoah riot took place—it is even possible that they may have incited it. A recent dispatch in the New York "Sun" stated that the mine-owners were discharging the guard and coal police because of the heavy expense. But the state pays for the troops and thus the mine-owners make a considerable saving.

As an illustration of the provocation the strikers are being put to, the following news from the New York Times" is illuminating:

"Targets will be put in to-morrow against the culm banks, and it is the hope of General Gobin to qualify as marksmen at least two of the regiments of men now in camp. He says he intends to make the most of the opportunity to increase the efficiency of the men."

The strikers are to stand by and see the troops practising to shoot them down! Who can be surprised if there is violence now?

Strikers! Violence is futile and foolish. Use first the surer weapon—a Socialist ballot.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTIES.

For years the Socialist has been preaching to trade unionists the folly of upholding the bosses on election day. And finally the truth of all this begins to dawn upon the worker—he will be "independent" or know the reason why—and so with little thought and much courage he tries to start independent labor party. The capitalist knows what catches him; he has failed to see that there is already an organized labor party in Los Angeles, in California, in the United States, in fact throughout the civilized world, "Independent" of all capitalistic control. Why then split the ranks of organized labor, now represented by over nine million voters under the international banner of the Socialist Party?

"Division in trade union organization" is the nightly prayer of every contractor, boss and labor skinner. Otis starts his Independent Labor Bureau for this purpose and the Western Mechanic organizes scabbery to the same end.

In the face of all this evidence should the working class divide?

Should one fraction of the army of labor fight for Republican capitalists, another line up with Democratic capitalists, while a third become "Independent" even of their own class organization.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

As Comrade Lee is away on a much needed vacation, the Associate Editor of The Worker begs correspondents to be patient should any of their communications happen to be neglected this week or the next, owing to pressure of work.

THE INDIVIDUAL AND THE MOVEMENT.

As the Socialist movement grows larger and more powerful, men of more than average ability and men who have some local prominence will be attracted to it, and many of these men will doubtless expect some special consideration or honor from the movement.

This question of how much consideration should be shown to individuals of place and prominence has already arisen in the cases of several men who have become Socialists while holding offices to which they were elected as the candidates of capitalistic political parties and who have desired to become members of the Socialist party and at the same time retain [illegible] until the expiration of their [illegible]. Each of the individuals in question has probably been sincere in the belief that his office and the prestige attaching to it could be used to serve the movement, and that the party should recognize his good faith and ability by making an exception in his favor and granting him membership before the termination of his office, in consideration of his future allegiance to the Socialist Party alone. Nevertheless, the party has wisely ruled that no one holding office under a political party of the capitalist class can become a member. As the party gains in political power discredited politicians and spoilsmen, who cannot comprehend the fact that there is no field for their operations in a party of class-conscious workingmen, will doubtless seek refuge in our ranks; and now is the time to draw the line.

But this question is not only one of individual sincerity; it is a question touching the very nature of the movement—for the movement is above and superior to any individual—and as such a question it provides a text for a general consideration of the relation of the movement to individuals.

No man fully understands the spirit of the Socialist movement who expects special consideration from it, who thinks he should receive special honor for joining it at a sacrifice, or who is not willing to sacrifice everything for it.

The Socialist movement is different from all movements which center about the personality of some great leader. The Socialist movement does not depend on leaders; it makes leaders. The Socialist movement, whether in its local or national manifestations, is not a movement created by leaders, great or small; it is the movement of a class impelled forward by economic evolution. The source of the Socialist movement is not personality; its source is a social source, a class source, an economic source. For this reason the movement, even where it is smallest, is greater than any man or any set of men. Leaders may come and go but the movement goes on forever, and cannot swerve an inch to the right or the left for any individual. The individual cannot make terms with the movement; he must come to the movement on its own terms, he must surrender himself completely to the movement, must merge his own personality into the collective force of the movement.

The movement demands everything from the individual and gives nothing until he has first given himself completely to it. But in giving all to the movement the individual gains everything—an understanding of human life for the first time, the joy of the fight, the content that is found in discontent, the peace that is found in battle, the consciousness that as part of an irresistible force into which he has merged himself he is greater than he could ever have otherwise been, the solace of social being, the widened consciousness that comes of being merged in something greater than himself; thus the individual finds his individuality by losing it.

Every movement which centered around the personality of a leader has died with that leader. Bellamy, Henry George, John Swinton are now but names; like a line drawn in the sand, like a ripple in the ocean, they have left no trace. At the time when their following was largest, the party of Socialism was so small that they were unwilling to merge their individuality in it. That party is now a great army growing in numbers and power every day as it marches on to victory. And that fragment of this same party that centered itself in a leader is now in process of dissolution. A movement that is builded on a personality is builded on sand; a movement that is builded on a class is builded on a rock of adamant. The movement that grows around an individual is a passing delusion; the movement that springs from a growing class is an irresistible force.

The Socialist movement will never, can never compromise itself for individuals. Though a man should come to the movement with the pen of a Shakspere, the force of a Hercules, and the oratory of a Demosthenes, he must merge himself completely in the movement, must not expect adoration from it, must consider himself infinitely less than it or any section of it.

The Socialist movement must necessarily have leaders, but the movement makes the leader, not the leader the movement. And the leader must be of the movement, not over it. And because the Socialist movement is a democratic movement, because it is an irrepressible class movement, because it is a social movement which transcends all individuals, for that reason it cannot be betrayed, for that reason it will prevail. C. L.

When President Schwab of the Steel Trust felt a little worn out last week the newspapers manifested great concern, for they fear another cannot be easily found who knows so well how to bleed the workers. But when a workingman is tired he must go on toiling till exhaustion puts him in the grave, for workingmen are "old at forty-five."

The capitalist class lives for profit and profit knows no patriotism, knows no nationality. Profit demands that its devotees buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest, regardless of flag, and the same flag which commands the devotion of many a deluded proletarian is regarded by the capitalist merely as a trade-mark, a commercial asset and an army to protect his stolen property and help him get more. The flag that the capitalist class ask the workers to fight for foreign markets under is the same flag under which the army shoots strikers down. You would not expect the capitalist to lose money for the sake of patriotism; that would not be "business." Then why sacrifice your own interests in the name of patriotism for a country which is owned by a few millionaires? Make the country your own first by taking it out of the hands of the capitalists and then may be you will have some reason to be patriotic. The enemy of the worker is not his foreign fellow workingmen; his enemy is the international capitalist class who exploit all workingmen alike. Machinery takes away more jobs from the workingmen in a year than foreign labor could in a decade. Therefore let all workingmen unite against the capitalist class to take the machines from them and make them the property of society, which created and operates them, so that all may have the opportunity not only to labor but to receive the full product of that labor.

The Central Federated Union of New York appointed a committee to be present at Mayor Low's conference about the Pennsylvania Tunnel franchise. Mr. Low would not allow the committee to attend—he does not care to hear from the men who are to build the tunnel. Take note that that is because he is not a workingman's mayor. The Pennsylvania tunnel contract will have no labor clause—the eight-hour day and the prevailing rate of wages will not be stipulated. Another chance for Socialists to say: "I told you so."

Electrical workers employed in remodeling the White House were on strike last week for higher wages. This is as it should be. As long as the workers elect a capitalist president they may expect a "scab" white house.

Governor Kimball of Rhode Island was in New York last week to get out a warrant for a promoter who persuaded him to invest two thousand dollars in an imaginary corporation. It was essential to the corporation's interests to have a governor from several Eastern states on its board of directors, said the promoter. And the greedy governor was bunco'ed. What great men govern us! And how natural it seemed to this governor that a corporation should need a few governors in its business!

PRESS CENSORSHIP IN AMERICA.

By direct ownership, as well as by means of advertising patronage, organized wealth has long dictated the editorial opinion of all the great city dailies and exercised an effective censorship over their news columns. But not only is the control of the press by the great capitalists and corporations becoming ever more direct, systematic and complete; in addition to this the newspapers of the country towns and smaller cities which have heretofore been relatively independent are also about to be gathered in by the forces of darkness, as indicated in the following special dispatch to the New York "Times:"

"NEWBURG, N. Y., July 24.—Peter F. Collier & Son, publishers, are said to be at the head of the million dollar corporation which is being organized to buy a string of newspapers up the state. H. Lowits is the general manager, and has charge of forming the trust, which it is proposed to have fully organized and in operation the first of October.

"In a letter sent to a number of publishers Mr. Lowits says he has secured options on forty plants along the Hudson River and in the central part of the state. The tender to proprietors is to pay them in stock of the United States Publishing Company, or part cash and part stock."

The country newspapers, at a distance from the centers of commercialism and corruption, and usually owned and edited by one man, have always been the most independent wing of the press, have been free to criticize men and affairs and to print what they pleased, and in general their utterances have been restricted only by the individual bias or interests of the editor himself. Their great number and individual unimportance has, up to this time, largely saved them from centralization and capitalistic control—except through the agency of the Associated Press and other news bureaus—but the above news is prophetic of their future fate. The trustification of the country newspaper marks one more step in the growth of a press censorship by economic power.

Several months ago, "Printer's Ink," an organ of publishers and advertisers, commented upon a rumor that Frank A. Munsey represented the Steel Trust and that his purchase of the New York "News" and Washington "Times" were the first steps in a plan to control practically all the one-cent papers. "What is wanted is to reach and influence the laboring people," said "Printer's Ink."

James J. Hill, of the Northern Securities Company, owns a majority of the papers along the line of his railroad, including some of the greatest dailies of the Northwest.

These are only a few striking instances of how "public opinion" is manufactured. The pulpit and the college are notoriously subservient to wealth and almost every avenue of intelligence and moulder of thought is in the power of the capitalist. The result is a censorship of press and platform almost as effective as could be decreed by absolute despotism. Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden's persecution of Socialist papers and various other publications shows that only a pretense at preserving the rights of a free press is kept up, but even if the constitutional right had not been interfered with, economic power has rendered it inoperative on any large scale. The censorship exercised over news by the Associated Press and over editorial matter by stockholders and advertisers is almost as effective for its purposes of deceiving and misleading the working class as is the censorship of the Czar for the purpose of maintaining Russian political despotism.

By controlling the minds of the workers the capitalist controls their ballots and by leading their ballots away from their own class and its interests, the capitalist continues his control over the product of their labor and perpetuates the conditions of their misery and his mastership. "I have no sceptre, but I have a pen," said Voltaire. The capitalist class have both the sceptre and the pen. But let the workers get the pen and they will soon wrench the sceptre from the grasp of the capitalist.

The daily labor press—the daily Socialist press—is the only hope. So long as the working class are daily deceived and misled by the capitalist newspaper, so long will their slavery endure. The first great step towards freedom is a Socialist daily which will tell the truth and all the truth about things as they are, sustain and guide the workers in their struggle against the capitalist class, and show them the way to freedom forever. The movement to establish such a daily in New York is now well under way. The success of one such daily here, which is as inevitable as its establishment, will inspire the working class throughout the nation to similar endeavor, and, being but the first of many, will be the mightiest force in the fight for industrial freedom. Let all bend redoubled efforts to this great purpose.

C. L.

We recently noted the increasing extent to which Socialist press is quoted by the local labor papers and the great attention paid by the latter to all phases of the Socialist movement. This fact, together with the recent endorsement of the Socialist Party by the American Labor Union, the Western Federation of Miners, the National Association of Hotel and Restaurant Employees, the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the St. Louis Trades and Labor Council, and other labor organizations; together with the enthusiastic reception of Socialist speakers and literature by the striking coal miners of Pennsylvania; together with the organization of numerous locals of the Socialist Party in every state and territory of the Union; together, finally, with the great increase of the Socialist vote in many city elections within the last year, the election of several Socialists as city councilmen, and the astonishing growth of the vote of the Socialist Party at the recent state election in Oregon—all these things together indicate that the patient work which a few hundred active Socialists throughout the land have carried on for so many years is about to bear fruit.

So it has been with every great political or social movement in the past. Through long years a few devoted men, either more far-sighted than their fellows or subject to influences which gave them a clearer view of facts and tendencies, have advocated the new ideas, have preached them in season and out of season, have endured to be scoffed at as dreamers or denounced as enemies of social order, only so that their work might be done. At the same time economic conditions have gradually changed and developed, preparing men's minds for the new ideas, breaking down old prejudices and traditions, creating discontent, doubt, and inquiry, and insensibly forming new social instincts in some special class of society. Through all these years the force of economic evolution and of the preaching of agitators have seemed to have little or no effect. But at last has come the critical moment, and then, with revolutionary quickness and completeness, all old ideas, customs, and institutions that stood in the way of progress have been swept away and as if by magic a new world has been built up. It is not by accident that this great change, seemingly so spontaneous, takes place. It is the sudden flowering of the century plant, the conditions for whose bursting into bloom have been slowly prepared by the silent co-operation of earth and wind and rain and sun with the vital energy of the seed.

We do not indulge in political predictions. We do not care to guess whether the vote of the Socialist Party will be doubled or trebled this fall, nor whether or not any important offices will be captured by the party of the working class. We know that the November elections will mark a great advance. That is enough for us, so far as immediate results are concerned. But we know more than that. We know—judging alike from the tendencies of the labor movement and from the development of capitalism—that the blooming of the century plant of Socialism, the day of our quick and wide-spread victory, is almost at hand. Whether it be this year or in 1904 or even a little farther in the future, does not matter so much. We know that our work in the past is soon to bring its historic reward. And in that assurance we find ample inspiration for the still greater labors that we have yet before us.

"Ah, come, cast off all fooling and put by ease and rest,
"For the cause alone is worthy till the good days bring the best.
"Come, join in the only battle wherein no man can fail,
"Where whoso falleth and dieth, yet his deed shall still prevail.
"Come, then, let us cast off fooling, for this, at least, we know,
"That the Day and the Dawn is coming and forth the banners go."

NOT RETIRED, BUT ON FURLOUGH.

As this issue of The Worker goes to press, our loved and honored comrade, Job Harriman, is well on his way to Southern California, where the state of his health has made it necessary that he should make his home, at least for a year or two. It would be idle to attempt fully to express the good wishes from the comrades of New York and of all the East that follow him on his way, the regret at the necessity which takes him from among us, and the hope for a speedy restoration of his health which will enable him to take up the work to which he has proven himself so devoted in the past.

Since his coming East at the time of the Rochester Convention, more than two years ago, Comrade Harriman has labored for the cause with all the energy of his intense and eager nature. His efforts during the campaign of 1900 tasked his physical strength far beyond the safety point. To the physical fatigue of that time was added a heavy burden of mental anxiety, owing to the somewhat unfortunate conditions then existing in the party and the position of many-sided responsibility which he then occupied. Since that campaign he has allowed himself no sufficient relaxation from his labor and responsibility, continuing on the post of duty, whether as National Committeeman, as agitator, or in his valuable work in the Labor Secretariat, against the urgent advice of his friends and comrades.

Comrade Harriman has well earned the much needed rest which he has now decided to take. So far as the movement can owe anything to individuals, the Socialist Party at large probably owes more for its thus far successful passage through a very critical period to the perseverance, the insight, the tact, and the self control of Comrade Harriman than to any other one man. We know that he will not in any degree lose his interest in party affairs, that we shall have the benefit of his valuable counsels whenever we call for them, and that he will be only too likely, of his own will, to take up the tasks of party work before he is ready for them. It will therefore not be amiss for us to call upon our comrades in the West to refrain from imposing upon his generous enthusiasm by urging or inviting him to any strenuous efforts until his health is quite restored.

Comrade Harriman's position in the party, his place in the feelings of all who have met him or known intimately of his work, and the solicitude generally manifested when the news of his ill health went abroad justify us in venturing a layman's opinion that, in the invigorating air and sunshine of Southern California and with due care and relaxation from responsibility in party affairs, his extraordinary personable vitality will, in a reasonable time, undo the harm that his two years of excessive strain in this unfavorable Eastern climate have worked. He is not retired, but only on furlough. For the present, we wish him good speed and extend to him our loving regard for past services and pleasant associations.

CALL FOR CAMPAIGN LEAFLETS.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the National Committee in January, call is hereby made upon the comrades in general, and those of a literary turn of mind in particular, to furnish one or more articles, not exceeding 1,000 words to be published in leaflet form for use as propaganda in the fall and winter campaigns of 1902. It is suggested that articles dealing with current events and "live issues" of the day, rather than with the abstract principles of Socialism will be most useful. The great strikes and the other concrete expressions of the class struggle furnish logical material for this purpose. All articles should be sent to Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary, 427 Emilie Building, St. Louis, Mo., not later than September 1.

STEPMOTHERS OF FRANCE.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

Whether the nation resembles the person or the person takes after the nation is one of those little innocent looking lost-child sort of questions that may get you into a profound philosophical scrap before you know what struck you. Without going around canvassing for such a fight, I think it may be permitted me to say that they resemble each other.

Those who know nothing about the delightful self sufficiency, the unassailable wisdom, the overflowings of the past, which belong to those who enjoy the privilege of being old, are missing a good thing; and they don't know it. Now it is because we old ones are such dear, good, loving creatures, as well as being wise, that we want everybody to be like us, to remember the things that we remember, to enjoy the things that we enjoy, and to do the things that we do; also, to stop remembering, enjoying and doing the things which go to make up the insignificant composites which they call themselves.

When I was young we had romances that were romances. Our novels, in six volumes, had a dark passage and a trap door in every volume, an eloping lover, a duel, trails of blood and the finding of a long lost child with a strawberry mark upon its arm, running all over them.

Now it is a delight to me, as I sit in the gloaming, to see that this period of romance is on the eve of a revival, especially in politics. The daily newspapers, dear good souls that they are, are simply full of it. Oh that the editor of The Worker had not such an inexorably economic blue pencil that I might tell you the various ways in which the period of mediæval romance is being revived in the comical tragedies known as party politics, now presented on the boards of the great United States Columbia Theater. But lest I should hurt the patriotic feelings of our own home performers, let me raise the curtain on the Parisian stage.

France, unfortunate and beautiful France, as the gold pens, with mother-o'-pearl handles, used to describe her, when they rustled their indignant silk dresses in long periods of invective against the coarse unwomanly women who whilom footed it through the streets of Paris, crying "Down with the aristocrats." France, unfortunate and beautiful France, has just experienced one of the regular stock sensations of the dear old romantic period. The lost child has just been found by a bunch of new mothers!

Of course France has been lost, that is well understood. Since the church has ceased to be her prime minister and the altar her throne; since she has wandered away from her father confessors and her miserere sisters she has been a lost orphan.

For the first time in the history of France the ladies of the aristocracy have taken to the streets. Headed by the Countess Mun and other most distinguished ladies of the starborn set, they literally footed it through the gutter on their way to the president's house to get up a rebellion against the present government; because they are the only people now left in France who love religion and old times and their own sort of a government.

They come to find the lost baby, France. So here it is, the strawberry mark is on its arm. All the countesses throw their arms about it and say they are the mothers of France. Therefore they have stepped out here with hatred in their hearts against democracies in general, and French democracy in particular, to tell how they love it. With hatred in their hearts and the love of God and the priests inside of that again, have they come out to reveal to France its long lost mothers.

"Oh, you have stepped out here and thus to tell me so," quoth France. "Step back again, you are but stepmothers with a long record of famine, blows and blood behind you; you never have been and are not now, and never can be but the nursing mothers of my bonds."

They are the proper mothers of France, they say, and are quite willing to have the question settled on the lines of King Solomon's famous decision; they are willing to have the child cut in twain, strawberry mark and all, rather than recognize that vulgar creature on the other side of the court who bore and reared the baby, to have the right of training it away from priestcraft to the ways of living men.

These pampered wives and descendants of France's titled vampires are out for motherhood; just think of it. They have been trying since ever the democracy breathed to overlay that baby; and here they are with their motherhood; quite ready to precipitate the bloody barricades and the guillotine, or any other social horror for the love of God and the dear miserere sisters, who have in all catholic countries made such safe, humble and silly slaves. But never mind, we'll have them all over here in America, where our capitalist papers want just the very sort of men and women that the miserere's turn out.

Though the child is lost, it has not lost its wits. And so it did not take the democracy of Paris very long to get up a genuine laugh at its fake mothers.

The silk mothers scornfully observed, through their principal countess, that they could not have expected politeness from such a government as this which is not a monarchy. The silk mothers made a mistake. They failed to get politeness because they walked for it; they overdid their part. Had they driven to the president in their own proper carriages they would not have been mistaken for the real mothers of France to whom the present capitalistic government of France or of any other country, will positively give no audience.

But these lady mothers of the workers thought to be dramatic, they would play a tableaux for the country papers. They would catch the President through his wife—with her hands they would lay hold of him and declare what the mothers of France had come to see him about.

"Oh, that's your way," says little lost France. "Then I perceive you are the sort of mothers called mothers-in-law."

These scented mothers of France with their gold chains shining on their ample bosoms—the other end of the wage chains borne by the children—are very angry with France for not recognizing them. "Don't you remember," they scream at little France. "Your histories of France which the dear fathers have written for you, and the dear sisters have taught you, how we used to take you under our protection and make pages and artists and soldiers and clergymen of you; how we gave you liveries and took you to our chateaus. Oh, you little ungrateful creatures; if it were not for that strawberry mark we would doubt our own virtue."

"You need not doubt it; answers the little pert ,"it had nothing to do with your motherhood of me. I remember you well. Ye are they that stole the childhood of France for centuries to sell it for a price."

Ladies of America are also among these new found mothers of France. Ladies living royally over there; and longing for a court to serve with the gold stolen from the sweat of American labor. "What do ye here," says little lost France. "Why are ye not at home with your own children? Why are ye away from them here in the house of another? Oh, I perceive you are, economically speaking, divorced mothers."

This romantic tableau of how lost France did not find its mother had a few little moral and political lessons in the corners of it for Americans if we look that way.

Just how easy it is for any government to pay too much for the alliance of the church in maintaining law and order is here neatly set down. She will support law and order up to the point where it pays and no farther; and as that point is always beyond the safety point for everything else, the government which sacrifices principle to secure the services of the priest as a policeman will pay just one price, neither more nor less, for its holy bobby—and that price is itself.

But there is the danger; the people will learn if they don't have nuns and monks, and then we shall be no longer the stepmothers of France.

THE MINERS' STRIKE AND SOCIALISM.

Under date of July 29, Morrison I. Swift writes from Wilkes Barre, Pa., to the Erie "People" as follows:

"If every Socialist in the United States could spend a week in the coal region at the present time it would multiply his determination to work and sacrifice. The hundred and fifty thousand miners now idle are primed and prepared for new light, the very light which Socialists have to give them, but the workers are few and the shews of war slight in comparison with the field.

It is only truth to say that the entire anthracite region can be turned over to Socialism during the next few weeks of the strike if Socialists of the United States will mass their energies here for the time being.

WHAT IS NEEDED?

1. Socialist meetings out of doors every day or two in all the mining villages while the miners are idle and able to hear and think.

2. The organization of Socialist locals in all of these to continue the work.

A large amount of Socialist literature to be shipped in by Socialist friends and organizations for free distribution. There is an intense desire for it. At evening Socialist meetings held on the public square of Wilkes-Barre the people crowd forward for any Socialist literature that can be given them.

4. Speakers from outside. The work already accomplished by those who have been here is great. But the field not covered, or only covered once, is vast, and the people are thirsty to hear. They are not always converted by one speech, but need several. There might well be twenty-five Socialist speakers at this time. Could not the Socialist bodies of every state in the Union contribute to support one such speaker here for a month?

Mark the results. The miners are so large a part of the citizens that they can elect several congressmen. This would be the breaking of Socialism into the halls of Washington. Although they would be few, congress is a platform from which to preach Socialism to the United States.

The local Socialists of this region have done and are doing magnificent work. They go out to speak and organize night after night. All they need is an hundred fold stronger national backing.

I urge this opportunity to the attention of all because it will only last at its best while the strike lasts. By immediate and vigorous activity the entire anthracite industry may be impregnated with Socialism. The miners are now like sensitive plates, prepared to receive ideas, starving to receive them.

When they go back to the deadening life of digging coal they sink into torpor and think chiefly of their work. Then we shall have to wait for another strike to prepare their minds again. If they are made Socialists now they will not go to sleep. The ferment will work and will show itself in a huge Socialist vote at subsequent elections.

Will not the radical press take up this matter vigorously? Pennsylvania is doing much, let other states be aroused to send in speakers."

Contributions to aid Socialist agitation among the striking miners should be sent to J. Edelman, Treasurer of State Committee, 108 West Cambria street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GROCERY TRUST.

Articles of incorporation of the National Grocery Company of New Jersey have been filed with the Secretary of State at Detroit. The corporation is a combination of a large number of wholesale grocery houses in Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Ohio, and has a capital stock of $5,500,000. Retail grocery stores still being owned mostly by individual small proprietors, the trustification of the wholesale supply houses is another long step towards putting the middle class completely at the mercy of the great capitalists—and everyone knows what that mercy is. Between the grocery trust and the department store, the small grocer can see his finish.

AMERICAN LABOR UNION.

IV.

Attitude of the Socialist Party Towards the New Body.

The following are the resolutions of the local quorum of the National Committee of the Socialist Party on the attitude of the Socialist Party towards the American Labor Union:

Whereas, The reorganization of the Western Labor Union into the American Labor Union at its recent convention in Denver, and the declaration of said body in favor of Socialist and independent political action has brought the Socialist Party face to face with an important issue concerning our party's attitude towards the trade union movement;

Whereas, There seems to exist considerable difference of opinion among the party members and comrades concerning this question of policy, and in many instances confusion and lack of proper information and sound knowledge of the historic mission of the trade union movement will tend to work mischief and injury to the cause of organized labor;

Whereas, The quorum of the Socialist Party National Committee has been repeatedly called upon to state its attitude concerning the newly inaugurated movement of the American Labor Union, therefore be it

Resolved, That we hail with joy the declaration of the American Labor Union convention in favor of Socialism and independent political action on class-conscious lines and fully appreciate the excellent pioneer work of our Western comrades;

Resolved, That we have full confidence in the honesty and sincerity of the delegates attending the A. L. U. Denver convention and feel convinced that their action was the result of free deliberation and noble inspiration for the good of the wage working class;

Resolved, That while acknowledging al this and giving the A. L. U. representatives credit for all the good done at their Denver convention, we cannot but sincerely regret their action in constituting themselves a rival trade union federation to the American Federation of Labor.

Resolved, That the invading of the Eastern industrial centers by the A. L. U. will not only retard the cause of organized labor, but will unavoidably mean the inauguration of a fratricidal war and suicidal strife between the forces of the A. L. U. and those of the A. F. of L.

Resolved, That in our opinion it is the most sacred duty of the Socialists to promote the unity of the labor forces, and for this reason we consider it a very unwise action on the part of the A. L. U. to inaugurate a rival movement that will force our comrades and fellow workers to waste their time and energy in fighting each other instead of fighting the common enemy.

Resolved, That experience having demonstrated the fact that the trade union movement as well as the Socialist movement in this country has been greatly injured and our progress considerably retarded by a so-called Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance and its S. L. P. promoters that we warn all Socialists against a repetition of this fatal policy.

Resolved, That in our opinion the American Labor Union, by organizing rival organizations to the A. F. of L. will logicaly develop in the same direction as the so-called Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance and must finally share the same fate, unless the comrades of the A. L. U. realize and promptly rectify their mistake.

Resolved, That in our opinion the regeneration of the trade union movement on Socialist lines must come from below, i. e., from the rank and file, not from above, i. e., from the leaders, and the progress made in this direction in Cleveland, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and other cities by our comrades furnishes conclusive evidence that no necessity exists for a rival economic organization.

Resolved, That we appeal to the Socialists throughout the country to use their best efforts and influence among the members of the A. F. of L. and the A. L. U. to prevent a fratricidal conflict that would do irreparable injury to both the trade union and the Socialist movements.

FOR SHOE WORKERS TO THINK ABOUT.

HAVERHILL, Mass.—The Brockton "Enterprise" says: "The twelfth census shows a total of 1,600 shoe factories in the country, where there were 2,082 ten years ago, a decrease of 23.2 per cent., which may be said to indicate a leaning toward the tendency of the times—combination and larger concerns."

To which the Brockton "Times" adds: "The statistics show that the number of workingmen engaged in this industry has increased 7 per cent., while the amount of their earnings has decreased 3 per cent."

And to this it must further be added that the price of the necessaries of life has increased about 40 per cent. since 1897. This is acknowledged by such financial authorities as the "Wall Street Journal" and is confirmed in a long article in the monthly "Summary of Commerce and Finance," published by the Treasury Department at Washington.

How these shoe workers must be enjoying "our unexampled prosperity." Even the cold figures given do not fully represent the facts, for, in addition to the reduction of wages, with the concentration of the shoe industry into the hands of few and fewer private capitalists has come a great curtailment of the liberties formerly enjoyed by the workers. It is about time the shoe workers of Haverhill, Brockton, Lynn, and the other centers of the industry woke up and began to use their political power to secure industrial freedom and the full product of their labor.

PARTY NOTES.

National Secretary Greenbaum has sent out another appeal, with subscription lists, for contributions to the Miner's Strike Fund of the Socialist Party, to be used to support the striking miners during the strike.

Several comrades who have written to this office for copies of the Julian Pierce and Rhode Island pamphlets against the S. L. P., are hereby informed that we have no extra copies.

Walter Thomas Mills has been obliged to cancel all of his Northwestern dates and return to Kansas in order to catch up with the correspondence department of his work, and get things ready for the full term of his school. He will speak at Denver, Colo., on Labor Day, September 1, and hopes to be able to remain in the campaign in the central western states until after election. He has had great meetings everywhere. The San Francisco training school and the Metropolitan Temple meetings there, together with his campaign speeches throughout the coast, and the week's institute at Los Angeles have made a lasting mark on the propaganda work of the coast states. The correspondence work has, however, entirely outgrown the present provisions for doing the work and will have his entire attention during the month of August in preparing new lessons and revising old ones, and in putting things in shape for his fall and winter work. All correspondence to him should be for the present addressed to General Delivery, Kansas City, Mo.

It is the particular duty of every organizer to see to it that every member of the local subscribes to The Worker.

Father Thomas McGrady, the "Socialist Priest," will make two tours of four days each, in Massachusetts, beginning September 15 and October 20. Arrangements are being perfected by David Goldstein, 37 Maywood street, Highland district, Boston, Mass.

State Organizer Caldwell of Connecticut sends in twenty-one subscriptions. Others are invited to follow his example.

The Los Angeles County Council of Labor has adopted resolutions to the effect that only such political parties as recognize the class struggle and are pledged to abolish the present wage system should receive the votes of the working class.

T. G. Kennedy of Mullan, Ida., considers The Worker a good paper to circulate in that state, where the Socialist Party is now growing rapidly in numbers. He sent in a bunch of eighteen subscriptions the other day.

Comrade Morrill of Haverhill works away steadily and successfully for the circulation of The Worker.

Max Faller of Chicago loses no opportunity to get a subscriber for The Worker.

T. F. Keogh of Toledo, O., has taken up the good work that Charles R. Martin began there. He seldom lets a week pass without sending in some subscriptions for The Worker. Meanwhile Martin, who is now at Tiffin, has not lost his interest in the work.

Comrade Frank Norton of Camden, noting the great need of funds for agitation in such a crisis as that now prevailing in the Pennsylvania coal field, desires to suggest through The Worker a plan to prepare for such emergencies in the future. The suggestion is, in brief, that the party designate one certain day in the year as "Strike Day," and that each year all comrades and sympathizers who can be reached directly or through the party press be requested to donate one day's pay to a special strike propaganda fund, to be drawn upon by the party organization only for purposes of propaganda in such special emergencies as the one in Pennsylvania to which our resources have proven so inadequate.

Socialists of New Castle, Pa., held convention last Saturday to nominate candidates for Congress and for all county offices.

Rev. J. L. Stevens of 1421 Baltimore avenue, Kansas City, Mo., writes: "I am in a position to use to good advantage in propaganda work one hundred copies or more weekly of The Worker or other good Socialist publications, but am unable to pay for them myself. If any of the comrades will furnish the literature I will agree to give the necessary amount of time and work in placing it where it will do the most good."

Comrade Resler of West Palm Beach, Fla., works very steadily to spread Socialist ideas in a rather unpropitious environment. In sending in subscriptions to The Worker this week he expresses a hope that a Socialist speaker of national repute will be sent to Florida soon.

Mary E. Garbutt of Los Angeles, in sending in subscriptions, writes: "Socialism is booming out here in California. The air is full of it. We have had several rich feasts in Los Angeles, in the way of a course of public addresses by J. Stitt Wilson and a class course in social economy conducted by Walter Thomas Mills. I predict that California will be the first state to give a majority vote for the Socialist Party. If you don't want it to be first, you will have to 'get a move on you,' right quick, off there in the East."

Local Philadelphia will meet on Sunday, August 10, at 8 p. m., at 1022 Arch street.

Max Hayes wishes it announced that he has declined the nomination for fraternal delegate to Canada.

Comrade W. H. Wyatt, 116 Prospect Place, Rutherford, N. J., Socialist candidate for congress, Sixth New Jersey district, which comprises Bergen, Passaic and Sussex counties, desires to speak as often as possible before election day, and will arrange for indoor meetings, his voice not being suited to outdoor meetings. He speaks English only, and prefers to follow up Republican and Democratic speakers.

In an address to the membership of the International Wood Carvers' Association upon the third anniversary of the "International Wood Carver," Editor and General Secretary M. A. Brinkman advises working class action at the ballot-box against capitalism.

The annual convention of the International Typographical Union meets at Cincinnati on Monday next, August 11. A number of Socialists are among the delegates elected.

State Organizer John Ray started on a tour of Indiana on July 22 and at last reports had organized locals at Greenfield, Rushville, Newcastle, and Connersville.

Cleveland Socialists are holding noonday meetings devoted to striking miners on public square. All monies collected go to strikers.

Two dollars for the striking miners have been recived from A. Meyer, which were contributed by those employed with him in Chas. Scneider's cigar factory. These friends of the miners will contribute one dollar per week as long as the strike continues.

"The Union," official paper of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, gives a three-column report of Comrade Chase's address to the workingmen of Minneapolis, which it says was "listened to with marked attention and frequently interrupted with applause." "The Union" has also drawn forth abuse from a rival "labor" paper by publishing Socialist communications in its columns.

Comrade Strickland has been stirring up much interest and enthusiasm in Cleveland, which has resulted in police persecution and an attempt at the suppression of free speech.

The regular montlly meeting of Local New Haven will be held at Aurora Hall on Tuesday, August 12. All New Haven comrades should be sure to attend this meeting.

The newly reorganized Local Hartford, Conn., of the Socialist Party met on Thursday, July 31. Six new members were added, bringing the total number up to thirty-four. After some discussion it was decided to meet at present at 284 Asylum street every other Thursday. Next meeting takes place on August 14. All readers of The Worker are cordially invited to come and join the party. The officers of the local are: Recording Secretary, S. Joseph; Literature Agent, S. Levin; Treasurer, J. Haaser; Financial Secretary, P. Levin.

New York State.

Comrade C. H. Caspar, the organizer of Local Ft. Edward, is also financial secretary of the Sandy Hill Lodge of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers. Just now Comrade Caspar is busy making a slate and interviewing prospective candidates. Both politicians and trade unionists promise to make it interesting for our Ft. Edward comrades. The Republicans and Democrats are after union men to be sent as delegates to their county conventions, and the unionists want to put up a ticket of their own. In addition to that Comrade Caspar ran across a swampful of superstition, and as a result his mind is not in a state fit to be photographed.

Local Watertown holds its meetings every first and third Tuesday of the month. The present organizer is Comrade W. E. Kaley. He writes: "We are doing very nicely now, having started, I believe, properly last month. We are taking in new members all the time. At our last meeting six applications for membership were received."

Comrade Hugh Judge was elected organizer of Local Johnstown. Comrade E. S. Timerman, whom he succeeds, describes him as "capable, enthusiastic and untiring; he will make things go with a rush." Glad to have you, Comrade Judge. Your sort are in great demand.

Hugh Judge of Johnstown, N. Y., is putting in some good licks for The Worker. J. Lavighe of Watertown is also a good hustler.

Joel Moses of Rochester is one of the agents of The Worker who keeps at it, year in and year out. Results justify him.

The following is a short account of the work of F. J. Spring, State Organizer for New York during last week: Held two street meetings in Troy, which were well attended, some literature sold and subscriptions taken for The Worker.—Street meeting in Cohoes resulted in five subscriptions for The Worker, and prospects of a local being organized in the near future.—Good street meeting in Lansingburg.—Meeting in Albany effected organization with nine members; another meeting was held the following Sunday and four more members were taken in. A permanent meeting place was secured and business meeting will be held each Monday evening.—Schenectady, Amsterdam, Oneonta, Binghamton, and Elmira were next on Organizer Spring's route.

Comrade Chas. H. Vail is to make a tour of New York in September. Locals desiring to arrange meetings should write to him at once at Tully, N. Y. Comrade Vail is to give the first week in October to Connecticut. The Connecticut State Committee will arrange a week's dates.

Comrade John J. Helleker, secretary of Local Peekskill, writes: "Local Peekskill sent $1.50 to the Pennsylvania State Committee for agitation. The local is in excellent shape. The boys were behind in dues and little interest was taken in party affairs. But two or three of us visited the comrades personally every month with the result that they commenced paying up back dues. In the three months that I was secretary I have collected, with the co-operation of two other comrades, $32.00 dues. The first of May only seven members were in good standing; now practically all are, some owing only for July—it being impossible for me to see some of them on account of death in my family. If you would urge all local secretaries to hustle and see the comrades personally, they could get the same results that Local Peekskill has.

"We are going to give Comrade Hanford a rousing meeting if our work can do it. Socialism is in the air up here, and from now until election day we are going to try and get it from the air into the ballot-box."

Comrade Wm. Nugent, organizer of Local Troy, writes: "We have had State Organizer Spring with us about a week, and the results have been most gratifying. We have held meetings in Troy, Albany, and Cohoes, Comrade Spring presenting the doctrines of Socialism in a clear, logical and convincing manner. A large quantity of literature was disposed of and a number of subscriptions to The Worker were secured.

"A most encouraging feature of Comrade Spring's work was the formation of a Local in Albany. The organization numbers at present fifteen members and shows promises of healthy growth. The meeting at Cohoes was entirely successful. We expect to have an organization there before long. The members of Local Troy are showing increased activity as a result of the organizer's work here. They intend to co-operate with all the locals in the vicinity in carrying on a systematic campaign work.

"Comrade Hanford is assured of an enthusiastic reception when he comes this way."

It is the duty of the officers of each local to see to it that every member of the local is a subscriber to The Worker.

New York City.

New York locals that have not yet sent in their financial reports should do so immediately.

The meeting of the comrades of the West Side, held July 29, was not well attended. The different committees and officers for our picnic to be held August 24 at Hugo Kroebel's Boulevard Park, West Hoboken, were elected. A good time for all is promised and the purpose of this festival is sufficient reason to make the comrades hustle. The next meeting of all the comrades of the West Side districts will be held August 11 at 342 W. Forty-second street, where the last arrangements for picnic will be made and such other business will be transacted as may come before the body.

Notices have been sent to all branches of Local New York that a referendum vote will be taken for fraternal delegate to the Canadian Socialist convention. The organizer desires secretaries to take note that returns must reach him not later than August 19.

An agitation meeting will be held on Friday, August 15, at Hudson Hall, 276 Spring street, New York. West Side comrades should attend, particularly those in the 1st, 3d, and 5th A. D.s. All enrolled voters and readers of The Worker in these districts have been notified. Several speakers will address the meeting.

An outdoor meeting will be held by the 34th A. D. on Thursday, August 14, at the corner of One Hundred and Forty-third street and Willis avenue. Good speakers will address the meeting.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Stand For," is the title of a very interesting pamphlet on Socialism written by Comrade Feigenbaum, printed in Yiddish. Comrade Wood reports that in the Organizer's office he has a large number of these pamphlets which are for sale in large or small lots at two cents each. Recently a number of these have been placed on newsstands on the East Side by some of the comrades and have met with a ready sale.

NEW YORK, ATTENTION.

The organizers of locals in New York are urgently requested to have the members of their locals vote on the state constitution, submitted to a general vote, and return the number of votes cast to Secretary Henry L. Slobodin not later than August 19.

They are also requested to take a general vote on the fraternal delegate to Canada and return the vote cast not later than August 19. The comrades are: James F. Carey, Haverhill, Mass.; Josephine R. Cole, San Jose, Cal.; Rev. T. J. Haggerty, East Las Vegas, New Mexico; Rev. G. R. Hammond, Elkhart, Ind.; Max S. Hayes, Cleveland, Ohio; Frederick Krafft, West Hoboken, N. J.; A. M. Simons, Chicago, Ill.; Moses Smith, Evansville, Ind.; John Spargo, New York City, N. Y.; A. F. Strambach, Spring Forge, Pa.; H. Gaylord Wilshire, Toronto, Canada—(Los Angeles, Cal.)

MASSACHUSETTS.

At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of Massachusetts Socialist Clubs a charter was granted to Chicopee. Secretary instructed to communicate with the various clubs relative to the proposed tour of William Thurston Brown. A list of speakers was prepared and secretary instructed to communicate with same relative to terms, dates, etc. Voted to submit to referendum the list of nominees for fraternal delegate to the Canadian Socialist convention. List of speakers suitable for Labor Day addresses to trade unions made out for National Secretary. Putney's report on securing Paine Hall for conventions accepted. Voted that future dates for Father McGrady be arranged by Goldstein under the auspices of this committee. Secretary instructed to write Father Hagerty relative to terms and dates of speaking. Goldstein instructed to draft heading for subscription blanks and an appeal to be sent to trade unions for camapign funds.

Financial reports filed from New Bedford, Taunton, Milford, and Rockland. Adjourned to meet Monday, August 11.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:—

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party ever has done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

Surplus of Campaign Fund of 1901	$21.29
Ben Hanford	1.00
Wm. Butscher	1.00
Dr. C. L. Furman	10.00

STATE COMMITTEE.

The regular meeting of the State Committe of the Social Democratic Party of New York was held August 4 at Labor Lyceum, Abbott in the chair. All members were present except two, who were excused. Reports were received from Locals Peekskill, Newburg, Ft. Edward. Local Johnstown reported that Joel Moses had accepted as treasurer.

Letter of acceptance from L. D. Mayes, party nominee for Attorney-General, was read. W. T. Brown will tour western and central New York early and later the lower part of the state. The details of these tours are now being arranged. Watertown calls for speakers and gives evidence of great activity and enthusiasm. Hanford starts on a tour August 12.

Financial reports were received from Ft. Edward, Ticonderoga, Schenectady, Peekskill, Watertown, and Onondaga.

Spring reports that he has organized Albany, Great Troy, Cohoes, Lansingburg. Cards and charters have been issued to Albany. He also sends in seventeen subscriptions to The Worker.

Peekskill has collected $32 for the miners. It promises a rousing meeting for Hanford. The comrades say "Socialism is in the air," but they are going to get it out. Watertown will hold its convention the first week in August, and asked for legal instructions. Campaign fund is already under way. Newark, N. Y., has organized and expects fifty members before fall. W. A. Smith, secretary.

Port Jarvis wants literature and it will be supplied as soon as possible.

Letters of acceptance were also received from Wm. Thurston Brown and J. F. Clark. Comrade Brown will begin campaign work in September, starting at New Castle, Pa., on Labor Day. Comrade Vail reports that he has made arrangements to speak with a number of locals. A list of locals has been given to Vail and Brown.

A campaign pamphlet by Hanford was endorsed and 50,000 ordered printed. Bowerman, Reich and Wood were elected a committee on literature; Phillips and Reich a committee on ways and means. An auditing committee for the campaign was also elected. The committe on literature was ordered to have printed 100,00 cards having the catoon, "The Man Who Will Never Be a Socialist."

Financial report: Expenses, $2.40; cash on hand, $87.70; received since last meeting, $70.70.

FREE SPEECH IN OHIO.

Comrade F. G. Strickland, the state organizer of Ohio, was recently arrested for the heinous crime of speaking on the street of Cleveland at high noon. Comrade Strickland was speaking on the street in a place known as "the square" at noon hour. He was arrested for speaking without a permit, and taken to jail where was was locked up with the common drunks for one-half hour, although bail was offered immediately. The trial was taken up on the 25th inst., and was finally postponed until August 1, the prosecution apparently fearing to push the case while public feeling was running so high.

At the next meeting of the Cleveland City Council, held July 28, a resolution was carried to "instruct the director of law to report to the council by what authority of law any city official has the right or authority to grant permits to speak on the west side of the square, and if they have such authority what steps are necessary to forever prohibit their issuing the same hereafter." In the discussion following one of the councilmen said: "Street speaking like that heard during the last few days breeds anarchy." Comrade Strickland has been speaking there for some time and has not been molested up till this time. He was doing excellent work and his meetings were increasing daily. In the council chamber it was a noticeable fact that the Johnson crowd did not raise a single protest against the passage of the resolution. We are still holding meetings on the square and at the present time we will not ask for any permits. W. G. C.

MONTANA CONVENTION.

The Socialist Party of Montana assembled in State Convention at Bozeman on July 28. A clear-cut platform was adopted and the following ticket was put in the field:

For Congress—George B. Sproule, Helena, photographer.

For Associate Justice of the Supreme Court—W. D. Cameron, placer miner, of Chico.

The two candidates make a full state ticket.

J. F. Fox, of Butte, was elected National Committeeman, and Alexander Freeman, of Bozeman, State Chairman.

The following State Committee was elected: P. J. Cooney, Butte; Wm. Dick, Aldridge; W. D. Cameron, Chico; J. D. Graham, Livingston; G. B. Sproule, Helena; G. Cameron, Clancy; J. J. Duham, Great Falls.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"Resolved, That the Socialist Party can never recognize, join, fuse, or entangle itself in any way with any other political party, and

"Resolved, That any candidate on a Socialist ticket must refuse the endorsement of any other party, because it insinuates an acceptance of their platform, and

"Resolved, That we direct the locals to at once expel any member who dares to propose compromise and fusion."

THE BROOKLYN LABOR LYCEUM.

Fellow-Workers:—The reconstruction of Brooklyn's Temple of Labor is now progressing favorably, but to complete the same the sum of $28,000 is still necessary. We therefore urge you to take note of the following, and hope you will take favorable action:

At a general meeting of the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum Association and with permission of the Supreme Court of the state of New York, a motion was passed to issue second mortgage bonds at $5 each to the amount of $20,000 on the property located at 949–957 Willoughby avenue. These bonds will bear interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum. The object of having the bonds at but $5 each was to enable every worker or labor organization to procure one or more of them. These bonds will be repaid immediately, in case this should be necessary. These bonds mature in ten years, and provisions have been made by which a certain share of them, to be decided by drawing, shall be repaid each year. The investment is a profitable one, as the interest is fully as high if not higher, than that paid at most banks. There is also absolutely no risk that those purchasing bonds may suffer any loss, as the property, after the completion of the building will represent a market value of at least $130,000. The first mortgage amounts to $60,000, and the second mortgage is limited to $20,000, leaving a clear balance of $50,000. This sum should be sufficient security to guarantee the repayment of the bonds. If any members of your organization wish to purchase bonds they can do so by payments of $1 each, the bonds to be delivered after the $5 have been paid up.

There is hardly any necessity for an explanation of the aims and objects of Brooklyn's Temple of Labor. It has to depend almost wholly on the workers for its maintenance, and we therefore urge you to buy as many of the bonds as you can, and also to request your members to do the same. Should you wish to make a donation instead, we can assure you that the same will be thankfully received.

All correspondence or payments relative to bonds can be addressed to Jos. Kalsch, Financial Secretary, Brooklyn Labor Lyceum, 949–957 Willoughby avenue. All other correspondence can be sent to the Finance Committee or the Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum.

Hoping to receive your support, and an answer at your earliest opportunity, we remain, Fraternally yours,

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE OF THE BUILDING FUND.

THE HEIRS OF ALL THE EARTH.

From street and square, from hill and glen,
Of this vast world beyond my door,
I hear the tread of marching men,
The patient armies of the poor.

The halo of the city's lamps
Hangs a vast torchlight in the air,
I watch it through the evening damps;
The masters of the world are there.

Not ermine clad, nor clothed in state,
Their title deeds not yet made plain;
But walking early, toiling late,
The heirs of all the earth remain.

Some day by laws as fixed and fair
As guide the planets in their sweep,
The children of each outcast heir
The harvest fruits of time shall reap.

The peasant's brain shall yet be wise,
The untamed pulse beat calm and still.
The blind shall see, the lowly rise,
And work in peace time's wondrous law.

Some day without a trumpet's call,
This news shall o'er the earth be blown;
The heritage comes back to all;
The myriad monarchs take their own.

—Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

R·I·PANS

The simplest remedy for indigestions, constipation, biliousness and the many ailments arising from a disordered stomach, liver or bowels is Ripans Tabules. They have accomplished wonders, and their timely aid removes the necessity of calling a physician for the many little ills that beset mankind. They go straight to the seat of the trouble, relieve the distress, cleanse and cure the affected parts, and give the system a general toning up.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.

The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength at present composed of 132 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $5.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $3.00 and $2.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 25 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 25 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

WHAT WORKINGMEN'S VOTES CAN DO.

Exploitation Explained—How Men Who Don't Work Get the Wealth Produced by the Men Who Do Work—The Workings of the Wage System and the Way Out.

BY BEN HANFORD.

(Will be immediately issued as a campaign leaflet.)

There are about two hundred thousand persons employed in the boot and shoe industry in the United States. Let these persons be organized to the last man, woman, and child, and, though they will thereby be able to accomplish some things, or even great things, there is a point at which their control over their own lives and destinies must cease. Through effective organization they can say that when employed they will not work longer than a certain number of hours per day, and that for those hours they shall receive a certain price. The hours may be short and the price high, but purely as a trade union that is the limit of their powers at their maximum of possible success. Having fixed the hours of labor and the price to be paid for their labor, there is left an all-important thing which they cannot control. THEY CANNOT PROVIDE THEMSELVES WITH EMPLOYMENT. THEY CANNOT MAKE THE BOSS EMPLOY ALL OF THEM. Let the hours of labor be ever so short, let the wage be ever so high, there will be shoemakers who will get no wage, for there will be shoemakers who have no work.

BENEFITS AND LIMITATIONS OF TRADE UNIONISM.

"But," say some, "given that complete organization of our craft, we can secure work for the unemployed by making hours constantly shorter, and constantly raising the scale of wages, so that even at the shortest hours the wages received will support the worker in comfort." Vain hope. When the hours of labor are so low and the wages of labor are so high that PROFIT CEASES at that instant PRODUCTION CEASES; and when production ceases, when our shoe factory is closed, the shoemaker has no work at any hours or for any price. The shoemaker must learn that in a society where one man or a group of men owns the shoe factories, the shoemaking machinery, and the materials of which shoes are made, such owners of the means of producing shoes allow those forces to be set in operation only when their operation will produce profit. The object of the owner of the shoe factory is not primarily to produce shoes, but to produce shoes to be sold at a profit. His main purpose, his great purpose, his only purpose, is to get profits. Therefore, when the trade union is strong enough to reduce hours and raise wages to a point where the capitalist class no longer get profits, the capitalist class, through their powers as OWNERS of the means of production (of employment), shut up the factory until such time as the working class will consent to resume their toil in the shop or mill or factory or printing office at a working day of such length and for a wage of such magnitude as will leave the capitalist employer a profit. The purely economic trade union may, and generally does, affect the rate of the employer's profit; but where the means of production are owned by others than those who use them, those owners must have a profit for the use of such means of production, otherwise they remain unused; and when the means of production of wealth are unused the workers are either starving or awaiting starvation—they are either out on strike, locked out, or laid off. When the distresses and necessities of the unemployed have reached a point so acute as to be unbearable, inevitably they again go to work for the employer at such hours and wages as will leave him a profit—such of them as survive and such of them as he will take back. For some have died of their wants unsupplied, and of the others the employer will not take them all, leaving some to become tramps, and forcing others eventually to become scabs.

While, as stated above, the most perfect trade union does not do all that is necessary for the welfare of its members, those things which it can and does do are not to be belittled. It can and generally does reduce the rate of profit received by the employer by securing higher wages for its members than they would otherwise get. It can and generally does reduce the hours of labor and raise the standard of living. Further, and of high importance, it teaches the workers to organize. But while recognizing the good accomplished by the trade union, every time you see an unemployed shoemaker you must see the shortcomings of the Boot and Shoeworkers' Union; every time you meet an unemployed printer you must recognize the limitation to the powers of the Typographical Union; every time you meet an unemployed cigarmaker you must recognize that the Cigarmakers' Union has a boundary to its efficiency; every time you meet an unemployed man of a skilled trade or an unskilled laborer, do not forget that there is one thing of prime importance that the purely economic trade union at the very height of its power cannot accomplish—it cannot make the employer employ ALL the workers.

HOW TO SPEND $5,000 A YEAR AND KEEP IT.

Consider for a moment on what production in our present society depends. Here is a man who has a hundred thousand dollars. We will not ask where he got it. Probably that would be a long tale of robbery, rent, and profit. We will allow that our man with the hundred thousand is in possession of his own. Now, if our man lives at the rate of five thousand dollars a year, and does no work by which he receives an income from any source, but each year he takes his five thousand out of his original hundred thousand dollars, at the end of twenty years he will be broke. Of course, that is not to his liking. He wants to spend five thousand a year on his living all right, but at the end of twenty years he wants to have his hundred thousand, or, should he die, he wants his children to have it. In short and in long, HE WANTS TO SPEND HIS HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS AND ALSO TO KEEP IT. And our present society is so arranged and organized that HE CAN DO THAT VERY THING. How? Simply by turning his hundred thousand dollars into capital. By turning it into the means of production. For instance, by buying with it a shoe factory, machinery, etc. Having placed his hundred thousand dollars in the shoe industry, one thing yet remains to be done. The cutting machines will not run themselves; neither will the lasting, sewing, soling, and trimming machines, nor will leather make itself into shoes. If his money, now turned into shoemaking materials and machinery, is let alone, it will be worse for him than if he had spent his five thousand a year out of his original hundred thousand, for idle machinery will eat itself up quicker than idle money. To accomplish his purpose of spending five thousand a year and still keeping his original hundred thousand, one more thing is necessary. Labor power must be applied to his shoemaking machines and materials. There are idle shoemakers in plenty. Our Man has selected a superintendent of his shoe factory (or he may have bought it through a broker and never even have seen the factory or its superintendent), and told him to go ahead and "make money." Our Man himself has probably gone to Europe. The superintendent tells the shoemakers to go to work at a wage which leaves Our Man a profit on their labor. These shoemakers have no means of employing themselves. They are not the possessors of shoemaking materials and machinery. They MUST work or starve.

Therefore the lasters and cutters and stitchers and trimmers go to work and use and operate Our Man's hundred thousand dollar shoemaking plant, receiving for their labor a wage which leaves Our Man his five thousand dollars a year in profits. Our Man will tell you that HE PAYS these workmen for their services. The workmen themselves will tell you that Our Man PAYS their wages. In reality nothing of the sort takes place. THE WORKERS PAY OUR MAN FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF WORKING. That's where he gets his five thousand a year. Their wages are simply a PART of the value OF THEIR OWN PRODUCT. Those shoemakers go into the factory of Our Man and for the privilege of using his means of production they first make a pair of shoes for him, then they make a pair of shoes for the landlord, and last they make a pair of shoes for which they are paid. Every time they make three pairs of shoes they are paid only for the labor power which makes one pair. As with our shoemaker, so with the printer. First he sets a line of type for the employer, then he sets a line for the landlord, and for the labor of setting the third or fourth line he receives pay. Likewise with the cigarmaker; first he makes a cigar for the capitalist, then one for the landlord, and for the making of the next cigar he is paid. Then he starts all over again—one for the boss, one for the landlord, one for himself; one for the boss, one for the landlord, one for himself. So on. And all you workingmen are in the same boat. You work an hour for your boss, an hour for your landlord, and for the next hour's work you are paid—this if you are lucky enough to have a boss and a job.

Oftentimes the employer and the landlord are the same person. Both are exploiters and robbers of the working class, and they only differ from one another in color, not in essence. Our Man with the hundred thousand might have put it into land and charged workingmen for the privilege of living on the earth, instead of putting his money into a shoe factory and charging them for the privilege of working. In the one case he would leave his property in the hands of a real estate agent, and in the other he leaves it in the hands of a superintendent. Our Man gets his five thousand a year without working for it, and can if he likes spend his five thousand a year and still at the end of each year have as much as he had at the beginning. In fact it is most fortunate for the workers when he does spend his "income." For if he does not spend it, they must next year produce a profit on that profit.

Now, can't you union men see the CAUSE of this exploitation of your fellows? Don't you see that man out of work? Don't you see that he is out of work because he lacks the means with which to work? If he had the means to employ himself and keep all that his labor produced, he would not agree to give five thousand dollars a year (5 per cent. on $100,000) to that employer. He would keep that five thousand. "But," say you, "he would do the same with it that this fellow does." To be sure he would—if you allow him. But you need not allow it, and you can stop this fellow from doing it.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT.

How? First recognize that the reason a man can rob producers is because of the character of and private property in the means of production. They are vast, they are costly, they are greater than any one man can produce alone or operate unaided. In the days when shovels and sickles, the cobblers kit, the hand press, and the ox-cart were the principal means for the production and transportation of wealth any one man could own and operate the instruments of production in almost any trade. At that time to make one man yield to another the product of his labor he must be a chattel slave or a serf. But as the spade gives place to the steam plow; the sickle to the self-binder, reaper and thresher; the cobbler's kit to the costly cutting, sewing, and soling machinery of the shoe factory; the hundred-dollar hand press to the fifty-thousand-dollar perfecting press and three-thousand-dollar type setting machine; and the ox-cart to the steam railway; the means of production become too large, costly, and complicated for one man to produce or operate. In brief, THE MEANS OF PRODUCTION BECOME SOCIAL. And as the means of production have become social in character, in their production and operation, so THEY SHOULD BECOME SOCIAL IN OWNERSHIP. We should own them socially, collectively. To stop Our Man from getting his five thousand a year for doing nothing but OWNING THINGS, WE SHOULD NOT ALLOW HIM TO OWN THOSE THINGS. To make sure that those others who now turn over to him his five thousand annually shall not do as he does when they themselves get the five thousand they produce, we must not allow ANY INDIVIDUAL to own those things. We must have social ownership of the means whereby we produce wealth; that is, we must have Socialism. A man should no more be allowed to have private property in a shoe factory or a coal mine than in the postoffice; he should no more be allowed to have private property in a street railway than in the street itself. When he has no private property in these things he cannot exploit or extort an income from those who use these things.

All this would be vastly intricate, say you. Not comparably as intricate as the postoffice or the public highway system of the country. We have no trouble with either of these except where they come in contact with great "business" interests, such as the private owners of the railroads and the contractors—fellows like Our Man, only some of them have a hundred million to his one hundred thousand. We are all owners of the postoffice; we all have a share of stock in it; but we cannot sell or dispose of our share. So it should be with productive industries.

Intricate? Is it conceivably as intricate as the haphazard, accidental, anarchistic method that we have today, where we leave the raising of wheat, cotton, and beef, the food, raiment and shelter on which our very life depends, to individual interest or caprice? Is it possible that a society that trusts itself to maintain a police force and a fire department to protect individuals and preserve wealth, dare not enter upon the social ownership of the means to produce the necessaries of its existence?

HOW TO DO IT.

How to bring Socialism about? As said in the beginning, there are about 200,000 of our boot and shoemakers in the country. There are about 150,000 persons engaged in the printing industries in the United States. The men of these trades can do something for themselves by themselves, but not much. There are over 100,000 cigar and tobacco workers; like the printers and shoemakers, their powers are limited. There more than a million men in the employment of the railway and telegraph companies; look at their low wages and long hours of labor, and it is easy to see that even that great number are far from having the power and influence that they should have over their own means of livelihood. There are more than a million men in the building trades; they have done much for themselves through organization—more than any other large group of workers; but when we note the precarious character of their employment, many idle for half the year, it is clearly seen that their relatively high wages and short hours are far from a truly prosperous condition for workingmen.

But is there then no hope? Is there no side to the shield save that which says failure.

Yes, there is. But we must understand the causes of past failures to know the means of future success. There is a path which leads to victory.

If these 200,000 boot and shoe workers and 150,000 printers will really and truly unite with those 100,000 tobacco workers; if the 1,000,000 railroad employees will unite with all three; if the 1,200,000 men of the building trades will unite with the others; and if the iron and steel workers, the miners, the wood workers, the shipbuilders, the brewers, the cotton mill operatives, and the granite cutters—if the whole working class would unite, what power is there in the world to oppose us, much less defeat us? Unite, not only in the economic fight, which still leaves many men without a job, no matter what the hours or wages for those who get work; but UNITE IN THE POLITICAL FIELD, UNITE AT THE BALLOT BOX.

Difficult, you say. Right difficult it is, but not impossible. It does not depend on any one of us, nor on any small group of us, though every one of us can do much to bring it to pass. We will not unite politically in obedience to the pesuasive powers of any man or men, though those may have their influence. We will unite because the laws of capitalism say to us: "UNITE OR PERISH."

VOTE FOR YOUR OWN CLARS.

In this year when the Republican party is furthering territorial expansion abroad, while it curtails our liberties at home; when the Democratic party cries out in protest, but lacks the intelligence to progress; when both parties have shown their enmity to the working class with increasing child labor in the mills of the Democratic South and more infamous injunctions in the Republican North; in this year when the Republican party is so drunk with power that it takes pride in its infamy, and the Democratic party is so stupidly incompetent that it sets its face to the past and reaction—under these conditions it is not to be doubted that the working class, and especially that part of it organized in trade unions, will awake to its duties and opportunities and begin its march on capitalism under the banner of Socialism and the Social-Democratic Party.

Workingmen and union men, go forward with your work of organization. So far as possible, get every man to join the union of his trade, and do not neglect to organize the man without a trade. Fight every battle for the best you have in you. In every battle, great or small, let each member of the working class fight for every other member of his class. The fact that a man is in your class and is fighting your enemy, the capitalist class, is enough to enlist your good will. You need no other reason.

But in all these economic battles, whether with you rests victory or defeat, keep your eye on the political power. Make up your mind that as workingmen and Socialists you are going to capture every public office—aldermen, state assemblymen and state senators and governor; United States congressmen and senators and president; justices of the peace, police magistrates, state judges and United States judges.

ALL the public powers are yours if you see fit to take them. YOU HAVE THE VOTES. Use those votes to secure to your class the law-making power, the law-judging power, and the law-executing power. Having done that, your officials will take from Our Man and every other man his means of getting five thousand a year without working for it. Having done that, your officials will see to it that you and every one of you shall have an opportunity to work; and that, having worked, you shall receive therefor the full product of your labor, which is three times as much as you get now, and which can be secured in one-quarter of the hours you work now—if you are so fortunate as to have work.

WHAT THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY WOULD DO.

This question of wages and the unemployed will never be solved until the working class are in possession of the powers of government. Once they have those powers, all will be well with them. Granted the government is in the hands of the working class, the unemployed will be given work by the city, state, or nation. Granted the government is in the hands of the working class, the man who locks out his employees will find that a Socialist legislature will pass a law confiscating his factory and making it public property; a Socialist judge will declare the law constitutional; and a Socialist governor and Socialist sheriffs will carry the law into effect. That employer would never go into that factory again except to do productive work on the same basis as the other workers. Socialist officials would simply say that if the capitalist could not run industry without lockouts, society could. If there was a strike, the Socialist government would pursue the same course—confiscate the employer's means of production. Socialist officials would simply say that if the capitalist could not carry on industry without strikes, society could. In the case of a shut-down—the employer ceases to be employer. He no longer employs men in production. And when he stops production society should step in and carry it on, and to do this it would abolish the capitalist's private property in the means of production, and make it social property. There is no half-way measure which can deal with this matter. The only cure for the ills which afflict the working class is to change the private ownership of the means of production to social ownership.

That can only be done through the capture by the working class of the powers of government. To you workingmen, that is the supreme issue in this country to-day. It will require great effort on your part, heroic sacrifice on the part of many. But you have the strength to make the effort and the courage and virtue to make the sacrifices. You will do both. How soon? The time also rests with you. Your path to triumph leads to the ballot box. Now is the time to start. In this coming campaign if a man tells you that the Republican party is your friend tell him the facts prove his words to be false. If a man tells you the Democratic party is your friend, tell him history proves the contrary. If either a Democrat or a Republican tells you he is your friend, tell him you are glad to hear it, and if he is indeed your friend he must VOTE YOUR TICKET—while God lives or time lasts you will never again vote his.

The working class, may it ever be right; right or wrong, the working class.

AGITATION IN OHIO.

The Ohio State Committee of the Socialist Party have made arrangements to place Comrades John Glickert and Joseph Jasin of Cincinnati in the field on an organizing and agitation tour. The two comrades will do "team work" in both hall and street speaking and will be able to materially assist the movement, not only as speakers, but in visiting and re-assuring delinquent party members, soliciting new members, and organizing new Socialist locals where none exist. The State Committee will furnish some large bills advertising their coming and containing a challenge in large scare letters in order to attract the curious. These will be sent free and can be put in windows, on fences, and all conspicuous places. They are provided with blank spaces to fill in the time and place of the meeting.

The State Secretary gives the following suggestions for meetings, which will be equally valuable to Socialists in other states:

Decide to hold a meeting, then boom it. Talk it everywhere. Put up the bills. Get a piece in the local papers and especially the labor paper, if there is one. Go before the trade unions and announce it in full. Select a good place to hold meeting where it is light enough to see the speakers. Get as public a place as possible. If not light enough arrange to have a torchlight. Arrange to have a box handy to stand on. Put up a sign two or three days previous to meeting, if possible, saying, "Public Speaking Here To-night," etc. Get the people interested. Don't be ashamed to be a Socialist. The conditions are now ripe for our propaganda, and they are being turned out by the thousands everywhere. Always have some of the comrades to ask the speakers some pertinent questions, which will bring out the desired points. ENCOURAGE THE SPEAKERS. When they make a good point LET THEM KNOW IT. This will help them wonderfully. Agitation meetings are held with a view to converting uninterested people and non-Socialists. Therefore the comrades should see that the meeting is a success. Give every one present a piece of literature such as a leaflet, platform, constitution, etc. It costs money to hold meetings and tour speakers and there should be some real results for the energy expended. This will be noticed if you make the meeting a success. Don't leave it all to a committee. Let everybody push the distribution of literature and hold agitation meetings.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR OHIO COMRADES.

DAYTON, O., July 29.—All comrades in Ohio are requested to note the following information and instructions:

The following counties have reported to this office that they have placed a county ticket in the field and giving list of nominees: Clark County, embracing Local Springfield; Summit County, embracing Local Akron; Cuyahoga County, embracing Local Cleveland; Hamilton County, embracing Local Cincinnati; Richland County, embracing Locals Mansfield and Lexington; Montgomery County, embracing Local Dayton; Ashtabula County, embracing Locals Ashtabula and Conneaut—seven in all.

The following have reported for their respective congressional districts, giving the nominee for Congress: First District, embracing a part of Hamilton County, and requiring 455 signatures on petitions; Second District, embracing a part of Hamilton County, and requiring 517 signatures; Third District, embracing Montgomery, Preble, and Butler Counties, with Local Dayton, and requiring 581 signatures; Thirteenth District, embracing Crawford, Erie, Marion, Sandusky, Seneca, and Wyandot Counties, with Local's Tiffin, Bucyrus, Fremont, and Fostoria, and requiring 529 signatures; Nineteenth District, embracing Ashtabula, Geauga, Portage, Summit, and Trumbull Counties, with Locals Akron, Warren, Ashtabula, and Conneaut, and requiring 548 signatures; Twenty-first District, embracing a part of Cuyahoga County, with Local Cleveland, and requiring 520 signatures; Seventh District, embracing Clark, Fayette, Madison, Miami, and Pickaway Counties, with Local Springfield, and requiring 455 signatures.

If any other counties or congressional districts have placed a ticket in the field they have not advised us and should do so at once. We are now supplied with all the necessary election statistics and any information can be obtained from here. Those who have not yet copies of the election laws, and who need them, should send a postal request to the Secretary of State, Columbus, Ohio. Remember that the Garfield laws have been repealed unconditionally, and it is no longer necessary to file statements of expense of either the candidates or the treasurer of the campaign committee. The "Garfield Corrupt Practise Laws" are repealed in their entirety.

To place a county ticket in the field it is necessary for the Socialists of the county to meet together and nominate a candidate for each office to be filled at the coming election. Then it is necessary to have at least three hundred signatures to the county nomination papers. They have then to be filed with the Deputy State Supervisors of Election of your county, not less than twenty days before election. The State Committee will furnish you the blank petitions to circulate for signatures. We will also furnish any information desired relative to the election laws and the work.

We want to stop having to petition to have our ticket placed upon the ballot, and the only way to do it is for the comrades throughout the state to hustle this time and get the required number of votes. If they put up local tickets and circulate literature and hold agitation meetings it will be easily done. WE MUST DO IT.

We believe that the comrades of the following counties should put up county tickets and then push the propaganda in their counties until election, so as to assist in getting official standing as a party this time: Seneca County, with Locals Tiffin and Fostoria; Scioto County, with Local Portsmouth; Trumbull County, with Local Warren; Sandusky County, with Local Fremont and other comrades at Bellevue; Lucas County, with Local Toledo; Crawford County, with Local Bucyrus and many outside comrades; Stark County, with Locals Massillon and Canton, also outside comrades; Muskingum County, with Local Zanesville; Delaware County, with Local Delaware and outside comrades; Hardin County, with Local Kenton; Logan County, with Local Bellefontaine; Jefferson County, with Local Toronto; Fulton County, with Local Wauseon; Williams County, with Local Edgerton; Hancock County, with Local Findlay; Greene County, with Local Xenia.

If these comrades will get together and place a ticket in the field, we will help them all possible; and those who have not learned as yet how to carry on the legal part of the work we will assist. Call a convention and put up the men; then put out the petitions; and soon you will be finished and ready to push their candidacy for the position.

We would like to see the comrades in the following districts place a candidate for congressman in the field:

Fifth District; embraces counties of Putnam, Paulding, Henry, Defiance, Williams, and Van Wert; needs 421 signatures; Locals Edgerton and Continental in district. Address, Dr. D. M. Knisely, Secretary; Owen Donaldson, Continental.

Sixth District; embraces Clermont, Clinton, Greene, Highland, and Warren Counties; needs 455 signatures; Local Xenia in district. Address Harry L. Arnold, Xenia.

Eighth District; embraces Champaign, Delaware, Hancock, Hardin, Logan, and Union Counties; needs 484 signatures; Locals Delaware, Findlay, Kenton, and Bellfontaine in district. Address secretaries as follows: A. Bayerlein, Delaware; D. S. Prentice, Findlay; A. J. Smith, Kenton; L. A. Poliquin, 210 N. Park street, Bellefontaine.

Ninth District; embraces Lucas, Fulton, Ottawa, and Wood Counties; needs 573 signatures; Locals Wauseon and Toledo in district. Address, D. W. Raymond, Wauseon; J. W. Quill, 1846 Ontario street, Toledo.

Tenth District; embraces Adams, Gallia, Jackson, Lawrence, Pike, and Scioto Counties; needs 437 signatures; Local Portsmouth in district. Address, Albert Hales, Box 388.

Fourteenth District; embraces Ashland, Huron, Knox, Lorain, Morrow, and Richland Counties; needs 533 signatures; Locals Lexington and Mansfield in district. Address, G. P. Maxwell, Lexington; A. J. Storck, 224 E. First street, Mansfield.

Fifteenth District; embraces Guernsey, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, and Washington Counties; needs 442 signatures; Local Zanesville in district. Address, E. Downerd, Zanesville.

Sixteenth District; embraces Belmont, Carroll, Harrison, Jefferson, and Monroe Counties; needs 408 signatures; Local Toronto in district. Address, H. E. Yingst, Toronto.

Eighteenth District; embraces Columbania, Mahoning, and Stark Counties; needs 577 signatures; Locals Salineville, Massillon, Youngstown, and Canton in district. Address, Wm. A. Savage, Salineville; Nick Weltlick, 38 Henry street, Massillon; Jacob Karper, 2221 Winfield avenue, Canton; G. C. Hamilton, 332 E. Raymer street, Youngstown.

Twentieth District; embraces part of Cuyahoga, Lake, and Medina Counties; needs 498 signatures; Locals Cleveland and Painesville in district. Address, W. B. Slusser, 44 Arlington street, Cleveland; A. N. Anderson, Painesville.

In the congressional districts where but one local exists, the local can put up their county and congressional ticket at the same time, but will have to circulate two different sets of petitions for signatures.

Every county and district has a good many comrades who are outside of the party organization, but who will collect signatures for the petitions. After the comrades have the ticket named they can receive the list of workers that we have here and then have them assist in the work of getting signatures.

In the congressional districts where more than one local exists, they should correspond and arrange to meet and name a congressional candidate. All members of the party residing in the district should have a voice in the selection of a nominee. Those districts that have nominated have put up the best men available, and we hope to cast the strongest vote this year ever recorded in the state for Socialism.

Congressional conventions should elect an organizer for the district who can work in conjunction with the state Local Quorum when necessary.

The comrades ought to get into closer touch with each other. Find out where the locals are in your district. Find out where the unattached comrades are. Correspond with them. Attend each other's meetings. Do all you can to become more thoroughly acquainted and understand each other. Much good will result therefrom. Ask for any other information.

Address, W. G. Critchlow, State Secretary, 26 Pruden Building, Dayton.

ORGANIZER CALDWELL IN CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, August 3.—State Organizer Caldwell has addressed meetings during the past week in Hartford, Meriden, Middletown, Willimantic, Putnam, and Norwich.

Monday noon he held an open-air meeting at the shop of the Pratt Whitney Company, in Hartford. Tuesday evening a good meeting was held at town hall in Meriden. Comrade Charles Ufert, of Hoboken, who was on his way to Boston and who spoke Monday evening on New Haven Green, assisted at the Meriden meeting. A challenge to debate had been sent to a Democratic lawyer, but he failed to appear.

On Wednesday Caldwell went to Middletown, arriving late in the afternoon as he was obliged to stop in New Haven to lay in another supply of literature. A band concert was being held on the main street, and when it was finished Caldwell took the stand and held the crowd. Nearly all the stock of books was sold at this meeting.

Thursday in Willimantic there was an audience of five hundred people and the remainder of the books were sold and several subscriptions to The Worker taken.

At the meeting held Friday evening in Putnam, a bartender of a saloon across the street from the speaker was irritated by some of his remarks and replied by throwing eggs at the speaker. As he was not a good shot the missiles struck among the crowd, who chased him into his dispensary. The speaker continued without any further disturbance being made. Several subscriptions to The Worker and "Wilshire's Magazine" were taken at this meeting. These last three meetings were held in towns which have not been visited by Socialist agitators since 1898.

The Saturday evening meeting was held in Franklin Square, Norwich. The passing street cars and a patent medicine fakir disturbed the meeting somewhat, but a number of books were sold and two applications for membership and several subscriptions to The Worker were taken.

Comrade Caldwell's work thus far has not resulted in adding any new locals to our party. As most of his meetings were held where there were no locals of the Socialist Party have been in places where no Socialist agitator has been for many years, it was not to be expected that organization could be effected at once. Applications for charters were taken in Windsor Locks and South Manchester, and in the latter place a local will soon be formed.

Branches have so far not responded to the call for funds to continue this agitation, and practically the whole expenses has been paid by the State Committee. Send in contributions, comrades, so that we can continue the work.

For State Committee,

W. E. WHITE.

CAR WORKERS' UNION.

The car workers employed by the New York Central in this city have formed a union known as Melrose Local No. 47 of the International Association of Car Workers. The local started with but few members, many being afraid to join; but it is growing rapidly, having now about a hundred members. Charles Barkhausen is President and J. Mapson, Secretary. The union meets on the second and fourth Friday evening of each month at the Clubhouse, 3300 Third avenue, near One Hundred and Sixty-fifth street.

It is significant that immediately after the organization of the union, though very few had yet joined it, the company raised the wages of the car cleaners. As the organization grows stronger other gains may be expected.

The car workers have great need of organization, as their hours of labor and their wages are worse than those of many other trades.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a politcal party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

Socialist Activity in the Strike State.

Great Enthusiasm Throughout the Strike Field.

PHILADELPHIA, August 11.—Regular meeting of the State Committee held on above date, Comrade Slick in the chair.

Charters were granted to the following locals: Luzerne County Committee, Nanticoke, Plymouth and Avoca, Luzerne County; Jackson, Schuylkill County; Mauch Chunk and Coalport, Carbon County, and Media, Delaware County with a membership of 178. Two ward clubs organized in Mahanoy City with upwards of 200 members.

Financial reports for the month of July and the vote on delegate to the Canadian convention received from nearly all locals. Those not yet reported are requested to do so at the earliest possible date.

Conventions.

In the Fifth Legislative District of Luzerne, J. T. Jenkins has been nominated. Lawrence County Convention held at New Castle, August 2. A complete ticket was nominated as follows: For Assembly, W. I. White and J. L. Bryson; County Treasurer, R. T. McCoy; Prothonotary, Frank Fields; County Commissioners, Clinton Mitchell and Wm. Hughes; County Auditor, John Kaufman; Congressman, George Frethey.

Carbon County Convention was held at Mauch Chunk August 9. Forty-eight delegates were present, every local in the county being represented. Comrade Collins addressed the convention. The following ticket was proposed by the convention subject to the referendum: Congressman, James Hughes; Senator, Edw. McFadden; Assembly, Jerre N. Weller; Judge, Charles Heydrick; Register, James Kennedy; Recorder, James Boyle, W. H. Bond, and W. H. Morse (one to be selected); Commissioners, James Gallagher, Elmer Smoyer, George Evans, and Chas. Baum (two to be selected); County Committee is composed of Elmer Smoyer, chairman; L. G. Roethlein, secretary; Geo. Willingham, Lansford; James Butler, Nesquehoning; F. Knauke, Jr., Mauch Chunk; William Lamb, Lehighton; Wm. Frailly, Tresckow; Robt. E. Fahrman, Hauto, and James Kershaw, Audenried.

The capitalist papers headed their notice of the convention, "Socialists Walk to the Convention," and they told the truth in this instance. Some walked ten and some walked twenty miles. Men of that calibre cannot compromise with capitalism. Clear as the tones of a bell came the declaration of the class struggle from that gathering.

Potter County Convention was held at Coudersport, August 6. The following were nominated: For Congress, Dr. C. A. Reese; for Representative, O. W. Grimm; for Prothonotary, A. E. Berdanier; for Register and Recorder, Jesse Lyman; Commissioners, Silas Stillman and Thomas Moffit; Auditors, Benj. J. King and Stephen White. Comrade J. Floyd Johnson of Coudersport was chosen as chairman of the County Committee. The national platform and the state candidates were endorsed. A number of resolutions were adopted, among them the following: "We, the Socialists of Potter County in convention assembled, believing in the principles promulgated by the members of the Socialist Party the world over, affirm our belief in those principles founded upon the natural law of the universe, and adherence to which will ultimately secure the establishment of justice, the reign of truth and right, and the brotherhood of man. Be it therefore, Resolved, That we realize that wealth belongs to him that creates it and not to the non-producer who exists upon the product of honest toil.

The following conventions will be held on dates named:

Fourth Legislative District of Luzerne, at Martin's Hall, Hazleton, August 19, 2 p. m.

Schuylkill County Convention, Mahanoy City, August 16, at Opera House, 1 p. m. Comrade Collins will attend.

Montgomery County Convention, Royersford, August 16, in the afternoon. Comrade Williams of Reading will be present at the convention and will address a public meeting in the evening.

Agitation.

Comrade Goazion, of Charleroi, reports good prospects of several charters being placed in that vicinity. He will visit California and a number of near by towns and Connellsville within the next two weeks.

Comrade J. C. Frost, Organizer of Delaware County, reports that with the assistance of Comrade Kevan, Smith, Olson and others several charters will be placed in that county in the near future. F. Long spoke at Clifton Heights August 8. Comrade Barnes will speak at Darmby, August 16. In the small towns the stereoptican used by Comrade Frost insures a good audience at every meeting.

The Your comrades are up and doing. Comrade Toole of Baltimore spoke to a large audience in the public square on August 2. The County Committee has arranged a series of meetings, the first one being held at Springet August 9, at which Comrades Lewis, Brady, Kelley and Shay were the speakers. The next meeting will be at Eberton, August 15.

Comrade Barnes spoke at Reading, Sixth and Penn streets, Saturday, August 9, which made the eighth Socialist meeting held in that city during the week. Some fine local talent is being cultivated there a headquarters is maintained and the movement is in splendid shape.

Comrades in the western part of the state are requested to be in readiness to have meetings for Comrades J. W. Slayton, candidate for Governor, and Charles Heydrick, of Erie, between September 3 and 10. They will probably visit Butler, Charleroi, Duquesne, West Newton, Connelsville, Brownsville, Ckeville, Black Lick, and locals in Potter County. Comrades Collins and Moore have visited the following places in the strike district during the week: Inkerman Crossing, Avoca, Nanticoke, Sugar Notch, Plymouth, Warriors Run, Hazleton, Milnersville, Jeddo, Breaker No. 3 and Freeland. The membership of the party in the places visited has nearly doubled in the week, and the old party politicians are beginning to shed very large crocodile tears for the woes of the workers.

A letter from the field says: "It is grand to see Irishmen, Welshmen, Englishmen, Germans, Hungarians, Italians, Russians, Poles, Americans, and all other nationalities fraternizing under the banner of Socialism."

The comrades of Phila. are setting the pace for comrades everywhere in the matter of subscribing and gathering funds for agitation among the miners. Comrades Atkinson, Forbes and Seltzer are meeting with the success their energy and enthusiasm deserves. One comrade had pledged $30, conditional upon $100 being raised by subscription. The committee got the $50, for in the one week they have collected cash amounting to $180.50 and have received weekly pledges amounting to a total of $435. No treasury is immune, be it large or small, from their assaults; no subscription too large to daze them or too small to be ignored; they know what they are working for; they want to secure the halls of Congress as the forum from which to preach Socialism to the nation, by the election of some of our comrades fresh from the mines.

Comrade Moore's vacation is at an end, which ends his work for the present among the mines. Comrade Collins will visit all locals in Schuylkill County this week. Comrade Chas. Ufert, member of the National Committee from New Jersey, will enter the Lackawanna district to-day for a week. Comrade Slick of the State Committee will accompany Comrade Collins for two weeks.

Mother Jones, en route from West Virginia to Wilkes Barre, stopped for an hour in the headquarters last Thursday. She is filled with enthusiasm at the progress being made. She said: "Judge Jackson locks a few people in jail, but thereby clears the vision and brightens the eyes of thousands of the sons of toil. Industrial and political unity is now, and must be, the watch words of the workers; it is imperative that Socialist speakers gather the ripening fruit."

The next we hear from her is in a newspaper report as follows: Mother Jones, speaking [illegible] thousand miners at Plymouth, s[illegible] "We are doing all we can to win this struggle by striking, but if our victory is delayed too long we will, while yet on strike, march in a body to the polls this fall and put our men in power, who will win the strike for us. You have been receiving and obeying in politics the dictates of the coal barons. Are you going to allow this to continue? (Cries of No, No!) Then stand together. Remain firm. We still have a path left—the ballot-box. Don't forget the ballot-box. Beware of false political influences and vote in a body.

Contributions for agitation received as follows:

Previously acknowledged, $278.90; Royersford, $1; Milton Ibach, Biddeford, Me., $1; A. White, Saco, Me., 25c.; Seattle, Mont., 25c.; J. Waldron, Junction City, Cal., $1; Philadelphia Special Committee, Atkinson, Forbes and Seltzer, $86.75; Local Philadelphia, $15; Miss M. E. Oswald, Arlington, N. J., $5; John Geso, Alice Mines, Pa., $3.80; J. Dorkin, New London, $1; Chas. Rieneck, Philadelphia, 50c.; Caroline H. Pemberton, Philadelphia, $5; Textile Union No. 8, Philadelphia, $15; L. Wittenberg, Philadelphia, per Special Committee, $10; total, $425.20.

Send all contributions to J. Edelman, Treasurer, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

MINE OWNERS IMPORTING MEN.

Associated Press dispatches from Berlin say that agents representing American railroads that are at present in difficulty with strikers are said to be canvassing the Polish provinces of Prussia and the Slavic districts of Austria for laborers, to whom they offer $2.50 a day and free board. The agents give the impression that the railways would be glad to prolong negotiation with the strikers until able to fill their places with Europeans. According to the Berlin Intelligence Office, these agents are apparently working regardless of the American contract labor law, or they are confident of circumventing the law.

If the mine-owners succeed in importing these men and they raise a disturbance when they find that they were brought over to be scabs working under difficulties and disgrace, then the capitalist press will accuse the strikers of violence.

And when another great mine disaster occurs owing to the mine-owners refusing to go to the expense of making the mine safe, then the capitalists will have another opportunity to blame it on "ignorant foreigners" as they did after the recent Johnstown disaster.

UNION'S MAIL OPENED.

Postmaster Cenral Winks at Rifling of Trade Union Official's Mail.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—Mr. Richard Cornelius, president of the Amalgamated Carmen's Union of this city, is in receipt of a letter from Postmaster General Payne which practically sets the seal of approval of the Postal Department upon the action of whomsoever likes to freely open the mail of trade union officials during times of strikes to gather information for the enemy, and, in effect, invites them to do so.

During the recent street car strike detectives in the employ of the company were admitted to the postoffice and given permission to rifle the mail of President Cornelius. This crime is one which, had the mail been James Phelan's or Irving M. Scott's, would have sent the culprits to prison for life, says "The Undercurrent;" but this crime was committed at the instance of a combination of capitalists against an humble trades organization, and hence is no crime—in the opinion of the postal authorities. When Mr. Cornelius demanded an investigation and punishment of the guilty, the investigation was granted, but as high officials were found implicated, he received the following jolly:

Office of
Postmaster General,
Washington, D. C., July 5.—Mr. R. Cornelius, San Francisco, Cal.—Dear Sir:

"Replying to your letter of June 21, I beg to advise you that investigation of the matters to which you refer has been had, and the circumstances of which you complain are much to be regretted.

"The department does not see that any good can come from further inquiry regarding the matter, as the officials of the department who were implicated have been censured and cautioned against any recurrence of the conditions of which you complain, and very careful restrictions have been placed guarding the mails from abuse of the privilege heretofore granted to the police in the matter of investigating crimes supposed to have been committed. Very truly yours,

H. C. PAYNE,
Postmaster General."

Which says as plainly as words can say that workingmen have no rights in the eyes of the department, that corporations can do no wrong in the eyes of the department, and that notice is hereby given to any and all who wish inside information concerning the working of a union may do so without fear of punishment.

Mr. Cornelius says: "I tried to find out whether the police department of this city or the Market street railroad was culpable in this matter. It was my purpose to prosecute the men whom Superintendent Cox had charged with this felony. After two months' persistent effort I am still unsuccessful in my effort to find these men. All that I have accomplished is to place the postmaster-general on record as an official utterly indifferent to the consequences of a crime that threatens not only my rights as president of a labor union in San Francisco, but which jeopardizes the rights and liberty of every member of a union in the nation. Under this ruling by the postmaster-general the agents of corporations in any city, against whom their employees may be striking, can tamper with the mail of the leaders as they tampered with mine, assured by the postmaster-general himself that they will not be prosecuted for their felonious action."

PRESS CENSORSHIP BY TEDDY THE STRENUOUS.

The following revelation of the press censorship exercised by President Roosevelt is from the "Fourth Estate," a paper dealing with the affairs of the newspaper world and circulating among publishers and editors:

"The 'New Yorker' says that the President has inaugurated a species of censorship over the newspaper correspondents of the national capital.

"The story is that he has taken personal charge of the censorship bureau and directs its operations himself. To some of the offending writers he addresses personal notes, and others are sent for and interviews requested. The process is about the same in either case.

"The correspondent is advised that it is known to the President that the matter he is sending to his paper or papers is regarded as unfriendly or unfair to the executive, and that if a change is not seen in the tone or coloring of the correspondence the offending person will find the usual courtesies accorded newspaper writers denied or restricted as much as possible.

"The intimation is conveyed in terms understood by the persons favored with this kind of White House attention that those whose names are thus recorded on the blacklist, or 'unfriendly list,' as it is designated by the President, will be discriminated against in the distribution of official news. It is not expressed in so many words, but the unfriendly Indian does not need to have a house fall on him to take the hint."

FOR THE DAILY.

Report of Pledges and Contributions.

The Board of Management of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association met on Monday, August 11, with Comrade Martin in the chair.

The Secretary reported that the work of interesting trade unions in the conference was progressing and that he was informed of several new unions having elected delegates.

Comrade Butscher was instructed to go to Elizabeth on Friday, August 15, and visit the comrades at their meeting there, and urge their co-operation for the daily.

The Board of Management also decided to publish a miniature edition of "The New York Globe" for distribution among the comrades and trade unionists.

The conditions of membership in the W. C. P. A. are: First, the applicant must be a member in good standing of the Socialist Party—called in New York the Social Democratic Party; second, he (or she) must buy one share of stock for $5—$1 to be paid on the proposition of his name, $1 on his admission, and the rest within one year.

The second conference of delegates from trade unions and other labor organizations for the establishment of the Socialist and Trade Union newspaper will take place at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, on Thursday evening, August 14, at 8 p. m. All labor organizations are invited to send two delegates to participate in the deliberations of this body.

Notes About the Daily.

Cigarmakers' International Union 413 of Calumet, Mich., not being satisfied with sending a contribution to the Socialist Daily Fund, have also forwarded enough money to pay for fifty copies of The Worker per week for three weeks. If every union that received a communication would do likewise they would be doing much to advance the cause of trade unionism by educating their members to be good and true union men every day in the year, including Election Day.

Branch [illegible], of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, located at Newark, N. J., has notified Secretary Butscher of the Publishing Association that at their last meeting it was voted to contribute $50.00 to the Socialist Daily Fund. Good for Branch 22. Don't let this frighten other branches from doing the same thing or going it fifty better if they can. Keep up the work, comrades, and we will have our daily paper out before a year has passed.

The comrades of New York and Brooklyn are asked to wake up and help push the work for the daily to its ultimate conclusion. The outlying towns are beating you and you won't allow that, we are quite sure.

Comrades, those of you who have received punch cards for the Socialist Daily Fund should not neglect to have them promptly filled and returned, with the money, of course, and a demand for another supply. If these cards are properly used many a dollar will be collected for the daily that would not reach the fund in any other way.

Comrade Butscher would be glad to hear from Local Richmond County as to the result of the picnic held some time ago for the benefit of the Socialist Daily Fund. He hopes the committee will soon be able to make a report and at the same time turn over to the daily fund a good round sum as a result of their efforts.

District Organization.

The district managers are as follows:

4th A. D.—Dr. J. Halpern, 250 East Broadway.

6th and 10th.—Henry L. Slobodin, 60 Second avenue.

11th.—Geo. Brown, 423 West Thirty-eighth street.

Hudson County, N. J.—For Jersey City, F. Krafft; for North Hudson County, Ferd. Ufert.

Notice to Contributors.

Pledges should be drawn and checks and money orders made payable to the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association. All communications should be addressed to the Agent of the Association, Wm. Butscher, Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

The Worker will contain, each week, a list of contributions received up to Monday preceding the date of issue.

If any contribution sent is not promptly acknowledged the sender should at once inform Comrade Butscher, that the matter may be investigated and set right.

Those who have made pledges should remember to send in the monthly instalments promptly, saving the trouble and expense of notifying them. Let each one feel his personal responsibility for the work we have undertaken and his power to hasten the coming of the Socialist Daily.

MACHINE TO MAKE GLASS.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 22.—It was announced to-day that the officials of the American Window Glass Company have laid plans for submission to the directors for the conversion of the present issue of $13,000,000 common stock into second preferred stock and the issuance of a new lot of common stock to be used in securing exclusive rights for the United States in the window glass blowing machine which is owned by officers of the company. The company will be the first producer of machine-made window glass in this country. Those interested say that it is already a certainty that the machine operation will be taken up at many factories of the American Company. It eliminates all the skilled labor up to the flattener. It is expected to cut the cost of production nearly in half, besides making inroads into the markets of the old producers and causing a lowering in the high-priced labor of these interests. Officers of the American company, who now own the window glass blowing machine, refused $10,000,000 to sell the rights.—New York Times.

"It is expected to cut the cost of production in half"—that means that half the workers will lose their jobs and the capitalists' profits will increase. Why? Because of the private ownership of the machine. If the machines were the common property of the people, as Socialists propose, the hours of labor would be cut in half and wages raised instead of men being thrown out of employment.

TO SPREAD SOCIALISM.

Seize This Great Opportunity for Propaganda!

Striking Miners Eager for Socialist Literature and Speakers.

Comrades and Sympathizers:

Never before in the history of the Socialist movement in America did such a splendid opportunity offer itself to bring home the truths of Socialism to hundreds of thousands of workingmen as in the present coal strike of Pennsylvania. Had we but the necessary funds to put enough speakers and literature in the field, we could perhaps carry every one of the five counties in the strike region. Capitalism has there reached the climax of its development, and has thus itself distinctly drawn the class line between worker and employer. On the one hand is the coal operator, possessing not only the means whereby the miner makes his living, but owning everything in sight—the house in which he dwells, the store where he buys, and even the ground on which he treads; on the other hand is the miner, possessing nothing but the power to work, and forced to be idle and to starve if the operator so orders.

With this glaring demonstration of the almightiness of the capitalist all around about them, and the absolute helplessness of their own position, is it any wonder that they are prepared to listen to the message of Socialism, and to grasp the meaning of the class struggle and of wage-slavery? They listen and are convinced almost as fast as they hear, for their deprivation and the wrongs of capitalist greed in one of its strong citadels has quickened and sharpened their minds for an intelligent grasping of the Socialist teachings. Within the past four weeks, and with the small force of speakers our party could afford, thirty-five locals were organized in the mine regions. The membership of the locals increases with remarkable rapidity, some of them which started with fifty or sixty members having now reached the figure four hundred. These new comrades pledge themselves enthusiastically to support the party not only by working for it, but with finances as soon as they resume their work. Think what an enormous aid this will be in increasing the efficiency of future Socialist propaganda!

It is estimated that the miners will elect three congressmen on the Socialist ticket, even without the further aid of outside speakers. By keeping ten or twelve speakers in the coal field, the entire territory could be covered and our victories repeated in every new district. It takes but the meagre sum of ten dollars a week to keep one speaker in the field. The sum of one hundred and twenty dollars a week is all that is needed to enable us to take full advantage of the unique opportunity offered by the present situation. For the purpose of securing this amount the State Committee of Pennsylvania called two meetings at headquarters, August 3 and 4, where Comrades Collins and Moore, who had been agitating in the coal region, pictured the situation among the miners, the eagerness with which they listened to Socialist speakers and read Socialist literature. The leisure which the miners now have gives our speakers the opportunity to make three or four speeches a day to big sized audiences, and so popular has the Socialist sentiment grown that the miners would listen to no other but Socialist speakers. At the first meeting the undersigned were appointed a committee to devise means of securing the needed funds. One hundred and twenty-five dollars in cash were collected; some two hundred dollars were pledged in lump sums and weekly payments, and we are promised enough to bring the total up to six hundred dollars so far.

Comrades, we have endeavored to make clear to you the position in the strike region. Every extra effort on the part of Socialists and sympathizers at this juncture will bear fruit a hundredfold its ordinary value. Will you neglect this opportunity, or will you help us give such an impetus to our cause as will make Socialism in the United States in the near future a power commensurate with the monster strength of capitalism in our country?

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

The international character of the labor movement is illustrated by the recent action of the Ironmolders' Union of North America in adopting a resolution providing for the recognition of the cards of European members to the extent of allowing their holders to work a sufficient length of time to demonstrate their eligibility for membership in the American union. The convention also decided to have its constitution and ritual printed in languages other than English for the benefit of the foreign element in American cities.

—"Heads we win and tails you loose," is a good way to express the Socialist's confidence. If a strike wins, they rejoice as showing Labor's growing strength and sense of unity. If it loses the worsted laborers have learned a lesson and will do some thinking which will land them in the Socialist camp.—Colorado Chronicle.

OPEN LETTER TO BISHOP QUIGLEY.

By a Catholic Workingman.

The Rt. Rev. Jas. E. Quigley, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—As Secretary of Branch One of the Socialist Party of this city, I take the liberty to notify you that at a recent meeting of our organization the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the Socialist organization of Local Toledo place itself upon record condemning Right Rev. Jas. E. Quigley of Buffalo for attempting to array the Catholic Church against Socialism and connecting the church with politics."

I wish to call your attention to the significant fact that, although nearly half of the members of our organization are Catholics, the resolution was adopted unanimously. This would indicate that Catholics, as well as other workingmen and women, are beginning to do their own thinking, and are about through submitting to bossism, whether from ward politician or from pulpit.

If the Socialist Party was being recruited from the more ignorant element of the working class, your tactics might be effective. But the very fact that one is a member of the Socialist Party is proof that he is a thinking, intelligent person who has the moral courage to stand for what he knows to be right before it become popular, although in so doing he may be subjected to the ridicule and contempt of his former friends. He may be discharged by his employer and excommunicated by his pastor; but persecution only strengthens his faith in the principles for which he suffers.

If the doctrines contained in the Socialist platform are wrong, specify wherein they are wrong. Denunciation is not sufficient. Abuse is not argument, and misrepresentation will react. I enclose a copy of the Socialist platform. Show us where you find in it justification for classing Socialism with Anarchy, or where it "bitterly opposes the Catholic Church." I also enclose a copy of an editorial from the Toledo "News," a Republican paper, commenting upon your latest attack on Socialism. It contains some wholesome advice, by acting upon which you can do more for the elevation of the church than by denouncing the movement which is destined to do that which Christ intended the church should do, but which it has not even attempted to do in all these nineteen hundred years—namely, the establishment of the Brotherhood of Man and Peace on Earth.

I write this as one whose only education was received in one of the Catholic parochial schools of this city, and who has been, up to the present, a practical Catholic. But, after having studied economics to the extent my scanty leisure would allow, I know there is no hope for humanity but in the adoption of the Socialist program. More than that, there is a crisis fast approaching which will engulf the world in bloodshed unless forestalled by the educational work now being done by the much despised Socialist agitator.

I went to mass at 5 o'clock last Christmas morning (before going to work), and I heard the choir sing that beautiful hymn, "Adesta Fidelis," in praise of the humble infant born in a manger. I saw the splendidly decorated church and altars. I saw the hundreds of dollars dropped into the collection-basket for the maintainance of that costly edifice. Then I thought of the poor in the city, hundreds of whom were fed on that day by the Salvation Army and hundreds of others who were not fed at all. I thought of the so-called "fallen women" in every city in Christendom—most of whom did not fall, but were forced down by the fierce competition for bread; who had to sell their souls with their bodies, to avoid starvation or suicide. I thought of the haggard hungry faces and crippled hands of the children who toil for ten cents per day in the factories of this "glorious" republic. I thought of the thousands of widows and orphans who wept on that day of rejoicing for the husbands and fathers whose lives had been sacrificed during the year on the altar of capitalistic greed in the mines and factories, that a few whom God is said to have selected might build libraries and churches and endow colleges.

Then I wondered if Christ were to come to earth again, where he would spend Christmas. I wondered if he would have kept pace with the development of civilization and the church or would he still be the friend of the poor and oppressed. Would he tell the inhabitants of New York's tenement houses they should build houses and live in them, or bid them be contented in hovels while they built palaces? Then I wondered if it was not blasphemy to go to church and thank Christ for having died for us, when we had so utterly failed to apply his teaching to the conduct of our lives.

Your opposition to Socialism is virtually a plea for this infamous system under which one man's success means another's failure; under which children are taken from the cradle and forced into the factories, where their parents do not receive sufficient wages to feed and clothe these babies; under which men and women must beg for the privilege of slavish toil, for which they receive starvation wages and are thankful for even that; under which "The living envy the fortunate dead, As they toil for a pittance of butterless bread."

That these conditions exist cannot be denied. That they should not and need not exist is a self-evident fact. The church blames God for these conditions. The Socialist knows that man is to blame and that man can and will remedy these evils. The Socialist recognizes in every man, woman, and child a brother or a sister, regardless of race, nationality, or religion. Do you? If so, what are you doing to establish conditions under which we may treat each other as brothers and sisters? If you do not, where did your Christianity originate? Are you doing your duty to them, to God, or to yourself, when you antagonize the only movement which seeks to remove the fetters from their bodies and from their souls?

I am one of the many thousands of railroad employees who are compelled every Sunday to violate the command, "Remember thou keep holy the Sabbath day." I have heard no protest against this from the pulpit. The church is deaf to the cry of the helpless children in the mills and mines and the consumption-breeding tenements. Read the enclosed pamphlet, entitled "Child Slaves in 'Free' America," and see if the conditions described therein may not suggest an object more deserving of your wrath than the Socialist Party.

The Socialist movement is not a religious nor an anti-religious one, but an economic movement. It is the result of scientific research into history and a practical understanding of the causes of existing conditions. It is not a blind spasmodic protest against oppression. It will not attack the church if the church does not put it on the defensive. Wherever it has had trouble with the church, it was first attacked by some member of the clergy, either through ignorance concerning Socialism or over-anxiety to prolong the reign of capitalistic exploitation and parasitism. The law of evolution, the great eternal plan, has decreed that capitalism must give way to co-operation and collectivism. And any class, creed, or organization which attaches itself to capitalism is destined to fall with it, even though it be the Catholic Church.

The time will come when the work of Karl Marx shall have borne fruit and the dream of Bellamy been realized; when poverty shall have disappeared; when crime will be reduced to a minimum and treated as a disease; when war—military or commercial—will be unknown except in the annals of history; when, in short, the Co-operative Commonwealth shall have been established. Then as William Morris said—

"Oft when men and maids are merry,
Ere the sunlight leaves the earth,
And they bless the day beloved
All too short for all their mirth,

"Some shall pause a while and ponder
On the bitter days of old,
Ere the toll of strife and battle
Overthrew the curse of gold.

"Then 'twixt lips of loved and lover
Solemn thoughts of us shall rise—
We who once were fools and dreamers
Then will be the brave and wise."

In that day, to use the words of Moore—

"When some names shall live but in history's curse,
When the truth shall be known and these lords of to-day
Are forgotten as fools, or remembered as worse—"

it will depend on your future conduct which of the above quotations shall apply to your case.

It is with the earnest hope that your attitude towards Socialism will change, as I believe it will, when you come to a correct understanding of its teachings, that I have written you.

Sincerely yours,
T. F. KEOGH.

TWO MEN.

Down in the coal mines of Illinois or Ohio or Indiana works a strong, brave man. He crawls on his belly. He faces hunger. He toils with might and main. He breathes foul air. Hour after hour he sweats and works. When he comes out of the hole in the ground and goes to his meager supper in his humble cabin, weary and begrimed, he has earned $2. Of this he gives twenty cents to the cause, twenty cents in support of a principle, twenty cents in defense of American manhood. To meet this sacrifice his wife and children must give up something—a little less sugar on the table, no meat for support to-day, or baby must wait till next month for the much needed new shoes.

In a palace on Fifth Avenue in New York lives a man worth $200,000,000. He has another palace at Newport. He has his yacht and his country seat. Every luxury of the world is at his command. His income is so great that he does not know what to do with it. But he, too, has his troubles. The thousands of employees of one of the many great corporations which he controls have had the audacity to ask for better wages, a more just method of measuring their work, and for arbitration. He, too, is fighting for a principle—the principle that poor men who work with their hands have no right to ask for anything except such as their masters choose to give them.—Walter Wellman, in Chicago Record-Herald.

ROBBERS OLD AND NEW.

The highway robbers of old used to take from the rich and give to the poor. The modern highwaymen take from the meager pittance of the poor in order to swell the already fabulous fortunes of the rich. But a day of reckoning is not far off. The handwriting is on the wall. These modern Belshazzars will wake up some fine day and find their occupation gone. The Medes and Persians will capture their citadel at the ballot box and put an end to slavery and exploitation.—The New Era.

—One of the beauties of a sympathetic strike at the ballot box is that it does not cost the strikers a cent.—Williamsport Labor News.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

WORKING CLASS DISCIPLINE.

As far back as we can trace the history of man we find that the struggle for survival has always forced him into combinations for reciprocal protection and benefit. The struggle for survival has been not only a struggle with nature, and a struggle between individuals, but has ever become more and more a struggle between opposing divisions of mankind. For wherever man has found a common interest he has combined to make that common interest effective and gain the added power given by co-operation and organization. In gens, clans, family, tribe, race, nation and class men have successively found common interests and therefore some degree of solidarity and social life within the boundaries of these groups. But the persistence of the struggle between the individuals composing these groups makes some sort of discipline necessary to protect the interests of the group as a whole. The interests of the group create a social standard of conduct to which the individual must conform, they necessitate social regulation of individual action. The common interests of individuals in the group gives rise to the idea of individual duties and responsibilities to the group; and to protect the interests of the group some method of enforcing those duties and responsibilities is necessary so long as the struggle between individuals gives rise to situations where individual interests and the interests of the group become temporarily divergent.

Family, tribal, geographical, racial and national divisions, based on the common interests of whole families, tribes or nations as opposed to warring families, tribes or nations, once constituted real divisions of interest and the allegiance of individuals, for example, to their own nation as patriots, was necessary to evolution, survival and progress.

But with the complete separation of the producing class from the means of production, with the rise of capitalism, with the perfection of the means of communication and transportation, with the complete control of all governments by the capitalists and the growth of an international capitalist class, the economic division of men into working class and capitalist class has obliterated all other divisions. The only division now separating men is a world-wide division, an international division; the division determined by the ownership of the means of producing wealth, the division into the class which produces wealth and the class which owns the tools with which it is produced, into wage-workers and capitalists. And between these two opposing classes there is a world-wide struggle—a class war. Organized Labor is arrayed against organized Capital; the army of Labor against the army of Profit.

In the light of the foregoing observations upon the solidarities of old, let us consider this new solidarity—the solidarity of Labor, and its discipline and ideal. We have seen that wherever individuals are bound together in a social group by common interests, wherever there is combination, there is a standard of conduct which is enforced by discipline and which, in its most extreme expression, becomes the ideal of the group. What of the discipline of the working class?

In many strikes, of which the present coal strike is one, working class discipline has manifested itself in a most determined manner—in a manner which has drawn cries of horror from the pious capitalist press. Strikers have walked out of church on account of the presence of a scab, and strikers' children have refused to attend school with the children of scabs—but these are mild measures, for everyone expects the scab to be despised and ostracized by strikers. Men on strike have taken scabs up to the first building and broken their arms against the wall so that they could not work. In the present coal strike it was reported that strikers threatened to boycott a doctor if he dressed the wounds of a scab workman; it has also been reported that strikers in one locality have determined to cut off an ear of any man who turns scab. It may be that some of these reports are lies spread by the capitalist press to prejudice sympathizers—very probably some of them are. But we are willing to accept them as true. For things like these have happened. They will happen more frequently. And they show the growth of the spirit which is going to emancipate the working class.

When patriotism was the highest ideal no penalty was too severe for the deserted in time of war, and the man who sacrificed home, family, and life for his country was regarded as the greatest hero. The spirit of devotion to his class is now taking the place of patriotism in the workingman's breast; he is learning that he is a man without a country, that all countries belong to the capitalist class, that the interests of the working class of all countries are one in the universal struggle against the international capitalist class and that to set them against each other by "patriotism" is a hoax of his masters. When the workingman believed that the interests of his government were his interests his ideal was "patriotism;" when he knows that the government's interests are the interests of the capitalist class and that his interests are the interests of the whole working class his ideal becomes devotion to his class and he is said to be "class-conscious." The working class demands that in the struggle against the capitalist class home, family, and life be sacrificed for its good, just as the patriot sacrificed these things for what he thought was the good of his country. And in the class struggle no penalty is too severe for the scab who deserts. In every army there must be a standard of conduct subservient to the general good and the army of Labor will enforce its standard by what means it may.

But, says the man with the laissez-faire, individualist mind, if the scab does not belong to the union he is not a deserter and should not be subject to its discipline and has the right to work—if he can get it. Veriest sophistry. He shares in whatever benefits may come to the working class by the strike or union, and if he does not belong to the union it is only another count against him. By the very fact of being in the working class he owes loyalty to it and is subject to its discipline.

Individual liberty ends where class interests begin.

Many Socialists with quick sympathies, and knowing the terrible industrial conditions which force men to scab, are also horrified at such grim discipline, which they are impatient of because they see how easily Labor could win complete victory at the ballot-box and thus this suffering seems to them so unnecessary. This view is a shallow one. For it is absurd to expect men to vote for their class interests on the political field before they have discovered those class interests on the economic field. Men must necessarily become class-conscious in the factory or mine before they can carry that class-consciousness to the ballot-box.

The grim discipline now beginning to show itself in strikes indicates an insistence upon solidarity, a spirit of class-consciousness and a determination that will be invincible when it is brought into the political field under the banner of Socialism.

And it is pleasing to reflect that as Socialism will end both the struggle between classes, by the working class absorbing the capitalist class, and the struggle for existence between individuals, by giving all an opportunity to earn a living, that under Socialism discipline will disappear and the government of man by man be reduced to a minimum. THE MASTERS OF THE BREAD.

Snatch from our hands the gold we've won
And leave us worthless dross;
Bind on our brows your crown of thorns
And on our backs your cross.

Seize on the earth and bid us delve.
That we may yet be fed,
Then dole a pittance for our toil,
Ye masters of the bread.

Go rob our childhood of its youth
In sweatshop, mill and mine;
With hunger's lash drive home the lie
That 'tis the will Divine.

But should we dare to guard our own,
Your ruthless hands to stay,
Call out your hireling butchers then
Our maddened mobs to slay.

Then let the grizzly wolf of want
Stalk through our hovels bare,
Till bootless hope and fruitless toil
Shall mock our loved ones' prayer.

Yet wait until our famished babes
In cold and hunger die,
Then send your holy henchmen there
To prate their pleasant lie.

Yes, starve our daughters into shame,
Our sons to felons' deeds;
Then talk of trade and private rights,
Of glory, flags and creeds.

Yet think not ye may thus remain
Secure in girded might;
In hate's dark hour some frenzied hand
The heartless breast may smite.

Or if ye live your evil span—
Unblessing and unblest—
Your Helot's curse will scale your walls
And filch your guarded rest.

And though ye flout and flee abroad,
Still, in your secret room
Our shades will dog your dying steps
And hound ye to the tomb.

Though hell be "but a guilty dream,"
And heaven a hope forlorn;
Though age on age of wrong may cloud
Reluctant reason's morn,

Still in the silent halls, where sleep
The high and humble dead,
Your limbs will lie, as cold as ours,
O masters of the bread.

ANOTHER APPRECIATION.

One of the very best of the many Socialist weeklies is The Worker of New York. Newspaper is rendering more efficient service to the cause.—Colorado Chronicle.

WHAT OUR READERS THINK OF US.

W. S. Morrill, editor of the "Railway Employees Journal," writes: "Allow me to compliment you on your paper, as being ever wide awake and conduct strictly in the interests of the workingmen."

J. B. Chapman, of Arkansas City, Kan., writes: "I want to compliment you on The Worker. I consider it the best of all our Socialist papers."

E. E. Martin of Olympia, Wash., in renewing his subscription to The Worker, says it is "one of the very best papers printed. It is splendid and I like it. Long may it carry on its most effective work."

R. E. Carey, of New York, writes: "The article on editorial page in this week's Worker entitled 'The Individual and the Movement' is one of the best articles I have ever read in the Socialist movement, and I want to thank The Worker for the pleasure I have had in reading it."

William Smith, or San Bernardino, Cal., writes: "Please find enclosed fifty cents for one year's subscription to the dear old "Worker." It is the standard bearer of the solid Socialist movement in this country. I heartily commend the general conduct of the paper. It suits me to a T."

Comrade Philippi of St. Louis, in renewing, writes: "I have read several labor papers and am a subscriber for four besides The Worker. I must say The Worker is the best Socialist weekly I have read; and I am sure if all your old subscribers feel as I do they would all renew promptly."

A. P. Firth says: "I have very little time for reading, but your paper is so SOUND that I feel one can do better work when more familiar with the basic principles you treat so ably."

"The Worker is a great converter. Every subscriber I have secured for it has become a good class-conscious Socialist. It is a very difficult task to get people interested in the movement, but it is quite encouraging to hear such a remark as: 'The Worker is a regular encyclopedia—best I ever read.' So says Comrade Staley of Niagara Falls.

THE "BEST MAN" ARGUMENT.

"'Vote for the best man,' that's my motto."

"Yes, thousands get left by that motto."

"How so?"

"Why, 'the best man' is no better than his party, is he?"

"No, of course he stands for the party that nominates him."

"Then, if he is nominated by a capitalist party, he must stand for capitalist principles, no matter how good he is. What can he do alone, anyhow?"

"Yes, I know. A man without a party is helpless."

"Well, then, it looks to me even 'the worst man' in a good party is better than 'the best man' in a bad party. 'Principles, not men'—that's my motto."—The Seattle Socialist.

A MONKEY ON A STICK.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

If we squarely interrogate the Socialistic mind with "What is your push?" I believe the central answer of our whole movement will be essentially this: "A protest against the great insanity of a man's being separated from the public life."

On the other hand, if you come to the individualistic mind with the same interrogation it will answer substantially: "An effort to affirm my own independence of society; up to that point where I shall have occasion to call in the government as a policeman."

The protestors assume that there is a public life, from which to be intellectually separated is insanity. The affirmationists, repudiating any social unity of the mind deny that there is a public life of any stronger cohesiveness than that which joins the rolling pebbles on a sea beach. The geographical accident of their being on one beach they recognize, but for the rest, except when they are rubbed up against each other by the waves, each one rolls on his own superficies and that's all. And if there are other pebbles, that circumstance is merely the discovery of an outside point of view with which I have no real concern. "Let me alone, I roll."

Holding, as I do, that mind and conscience are the same agency, and that the boundary of the one is the boundary of the other, every human thinking, as I see it, being a more or less broken morality; the notion of each and every separate mind doing its own rolling, is, of course, to me obnoxious. But others not seeing it this way so constantly as I do; nor regarding Socialism so much as an intellectual movement, perhaps, as I do, may think it worthy of an essay in The Worker to discuss one or two pros and cons of this protest and this affirmation.

I hope I will not be charged with monkeying too much with the sanctity of the private life if I borrow, by way of illustration, that dear little toy of my childhood whom we have all met, a little painted and jointed monkey who ran up over and down a stick in obedience to the little hand of the delighted operator.

I remember well what a roguish, inimitable side look that little wooden philosopher used to bestow upon me, as, taking for granted every possible and impossible position into which I thrust him, he stayed, devoting each eye with equal attentiveness to those particular spots of everything which happened to be right opposite each respective eye until, once more urged from behind by me he found himself with a like resignation devoting the same two deliberate and fixed gazes to whatever pair of other opposite side issues happened to be at the ends of a line passing from eye to eye through his wooden head.

My little wooden friend (in whom we all readily recognize the father of the dual philosophies) will, I trust, excuse me, who am his junior by so many years, if I venture to take a few exceptions to his method of looking at things.

First, then, sir, you assume several things that don't belong to you. When on the beach, for instance, as a pebble you say: "Let me alone, I roll," you are assuming that if let alone you could roll, which indeed you are doing only because the tide interferes with you; and because it will not let you alone, therefore you roll. In fact, my dear monkey; you have no "alone," and never had one. The little pin that holds your hip joints together I put into you myself, one time. And your shoulder pin, as you know, was put in by a poor little Christian white slave over there in Germany. Don't contradict me. You know very well you are a social creation. You knew the little girl that made your legs and the little boy who popped on your eyes with his little brush—ten hours a day for ten cents. After this, how can you dare to assert your impudent independence. If all other pebbles are no concern to you, being only the phenomena of an outside point of view, and are like men in society all stand-off-able; what about the tide that rolled you here?

Well, to be sure, you admit, that in so far as being rubbed down or groomed by the other rolling pebbles, there is some advantage to an individualistic monkey in having other fellows around him; and in fact that appears to be the only use you have, as a gentleman and laissez faire individualist, for the mob of other persons called society. But suppose they all choose to stand off from that egoistic pebble of yours as you do from them, at least in your philosophy, how about your smooth surface, and your polished manners, where would the stand off gentlemanship come from, or where would you be? It appears to me that if stand-offism were the general order you would be still in geology, where there is no one to be ordered, nothing to give an order about, and no one to give an order. In fact the sum of all madness is the insanity of a man's separation of himself from the public life, my dear old companion on a stick.

I will spare your feelings. I will make no further reflections upon yourself as a factor in the great process of evolution, save to remark that, with this doctrine of stand-offness in your sharp finger nails and in your hip pocket, whatever figure you may have cut in a book on evolution, you will cut nothing but your neighbor's throat as a philosophical individualist wishing to be let alone and to live your own life, and make your own character, by using all other mortals as punching bags for the muscular development of the great Roosevelt which you feel pulling himself together inside of you.

Now this is not intended for unkindness, my dear toy. But really you are more a creature of circumstances than you think, and I have been, next after those sweated babies in Germany your principal circumstance. I have been society's right hand to you, and without that right hand you never went up, you never stayed up, or you never came down. But I will tell you what I'll do with you. If you can manage to keep me off when I want to come on to you, then I will allow you to set up a separate property shop of your own, to thump and bleed the working people around you, to keep them on your house rations while they are furnishing the tables of your palaces, and to call me in as a policeman when they go on strike.

Having thus disposed of our timber tailed friend as a philosopher of the independent personal life, let us have a word over the corpse; although no dignified cat ever kills the same mouse twice let us at least turn him over. When a wooden monkey declares his unbelief in the public life, is about the time that, behind closed doors he is watering the milk, watering the stock, or watering the political and official flowers that blossom around Mr. Boot. His denial of the public life is only made in the property sense; for, though he will not allow the public life to own property, he cordially allows it to own the club, the policeman, the deputy, the militia and Judge Jackson to beat off all that crowd who never learned any better than to work for their living. He allows the government to own property, if the government first qualifies for that important trust by handing itself over to be owned and monkeyed by the trust. And when it has proved its calling and election sure by declaring its loyalty to that interpretation of the constitution which shall, forever and ever, exclude the laborers from everything but work, as our monkeyship provides and finds it profitable to give.

Once there and the capitalist becomes a whole number, a unit, while every worker outside is but a dead fraction, having neither a local habitation nor a name, until a whole number attaches him and gives him significance among the masses of unassigned humanity by giving him a job and letting him call himself "Mr. Monkey's man."

The radical difference as a thinker between that monkey and me was thus: That he, after his tail took root in a city lot or some other bit of property regarded that as the absolutely fixed-in-itself-for-evermore part of all human relations.

Starting with this initial fixity which simply forbids all change but such as may be incidental to the unlimited extension of the original lot—the logic of individualism that the state is the accidental thing but any lot the absolute—he does not deny the right of other tails taking root and keeping root, until he is ready to root them up. He simply denies public life to be anything else but a constable to take care of him while he is rooting.

A number of such monkeys may be swinging on their tails like daisies, each in his own lot and some day when they get their heads together they are the state, they are progress, they are culture, they are civilization.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The miners can offset General Gobin's target practice by shooting their ballots straight for Socialism next fall.

It didn't require the much resented criticisms of the Socialists to make the Civic Federation a failure.

High tariff or no tariff, Republican and Democratic politicians agree that reciprocity between themselves and the trusts is highly essential to prosperity.

Mark Hanna exhibits his usual estimate of workingmen's intelligence when he presumes to advise them how to run the unions that were built up in spite of his efforts to destroy them.

The Kaiser got his information about Socialism from German workingmen and Morgan will be better posted when American workingmen also get busy.

It's peculiar that only old party politicians out of office have remedies to settle the coal strike.

Mr. Bryan is apparently determined that if he cannot be elected president by the Democratic party no one else will.

The language used by the Shenandoah priest who condemns the strike leaders is singularly like that reported to have issued from the mouths of certain false priests and pharisees some 1900 years ago.

The trust magnates won't fret much while Attorney-General Knox uses nothing more deadly than his fists upon them.

Our capitalists evidently believe they have the right to use the same methods in running their automobiles that they are permitted to exercise in conducting industry.

Workingmen all over New York state must feel considerably richer since learning that Governor Odell "saved" over nine million dollars to the state treasury during the past year.

Now we are assured that the heads of the American aristocracy will lie easier since King Edward wears a crown.

Perhaps it's because Carroll D. Wright says 60 per cent. of all strikes are successful that Mark Hanna sees the necessity for a Civic Federation to prevent strikes.

The difference between the depths of a "scab" and a striker is that one is always murdered and the other is simply killed.

If the workers are entitled to a larger share of their product, as Senator Hanna declares, why are they not entitled to the whole thing? If it is right for the capitalists to retain 1 per cent., then it is right for them to retain all they can get.

COMRADESHIP: THE SOCIALIST IDEAL.

BY LEONARD D. ABBOTT.

"It is to the development, identification, and general prevalence of fervid comradeship (the adhesive love at least rivaling the amative love hitherto possessing the imaginative literature, if not going beyond it), that I look for the counterbalance and offset of our materialistic and vulgar American Democracy and for the spiritualization thereof. Many will say it is a dream, and will not follow my inferences; but I confidently expect a time when there will be seen, running like a half-hid warp through all the myriad and visible worldly interests of America, threads of manly friendship, fond and loving, pure and sweet, strong and lifelong, carried to degrees hitherto unknown—not only giving tone to individual character, and making it unprecedentedly emotional, muscular, heroic and refined, but having deepest relations to general politics. I say Democracy infers such loving comradeship as its most inevitable twin or counterpart, without which it will be incomplete, in vain, and incapable of perpetuating itself."

In these suggestive words (quoted from "Democratic Vistas") Walt Whitman takes cognizance of a very interesting phase of the social ideal. He makes us realize that the world of today is a world of fragments; that it has lost all sense of organic unity; and that it cannot express or realize itself in any adequate way until that unity be gladly and openly, even passionately, recognized. Our society is a society of competitors, which is only another way of saying that it is based on division. It separates men. It sets them, individually and in classes, at one another's throats. It brings caste where there should be equality; suspicion where there should be affection; hatred and rivalry where there should be fellowship.

Life to-day is a thing in the rough from top to bottom. There is no finish or beauty in it. Our cities are a patchwork of dull and thoughtless architecture; our streets are full of men and women who are mere automata, who possess no real personality or individuality. To quote one of Stephen Phillips' phrases, they are—

"Creatures we marred, compelled upright
To drift beside us in the light."

Is not the crude, unfinished condition of human life due, in the last resort, simply to our lack of comradeship, our lack of social responsibility? We have learned how to refine iron and steel; to span oceans and annihilate space; to breed horses and dogs. But we seem supremely indifferent to the breeding of fine human beings. The potentialities of humanity are unimaginably great; the actualities, as made visible in the averages of modern life, are unspeakably meager and contemptible. We have thought we could exist each by himself. We have thought we could separate ourselves from the social whole. We have tried each one to live a petty life within four walls, and to overlook the great torrents of humanity that flow past our doors. We have tried to put up our little barriers of class and clique. And the result of it all has been just the kind of a world we see around us—the festering East Side tenements here, and, a stone's throw away, the Fifth avenue mansions; the portly millionaire in his carriage, and, beside him, the poor huckster in the gutter.

Is it a thing to wonder at that our public life is mean and squalid, when our private lives are so isolated and unnatural? The average man of today may be a kind husband and a good father, but he leaves his conscience behind him when he goes out into the industrial arena. In our city offices we see "pillars of the church" and "philanthropic citizens" paying their clerks wages that will barely support life; and Christian employers are rigid in their adherence to the "market rate" of labor, even though that rate be on the starvation line and their profits in the millions. The commercial code of ethics is clearly understood, and is well expressed in the phrase: "Each for himself and the devil take the hindmost." The same callous feeling extends over into the realm of governmental and political affairs. We hand over the reins of government to the Crokers and Platts with perfect serenity, for we are quite unconscious of any social responsibility. A similar state of affairs prevails in the world of international politics. The politicians and the newspapers of the various countries never lose an opportunity to jar race pride and prejudices, with the result that the "great powers" of to-day, though they talk loudly and bombastically of their friendship for one another, are quietly increasing their armaments and ever holding themselves in readiness for international war.

Might it not almost be said that the world has progressed just in so far as it has admitted the spirit of comradeship? Is not that simply a statement in ethical terms of what the economists have been telling us in economic terms? Comradeship, translated into economic terms, means nothing but co-operation, co-ordination, organization. We live together in cities or communities because we realize that life lived that way may become a richer and fuller thing for each one of us. We build libraries and public schools because we know that it is better that we should be surrounded by men and women who read and think than by men and women who merely eat and drudge. The park, yonder, with its green trees and fragrant flowers and its band of music, is a concession to the lives burnt out in our parched streets; it is an example of purest communism and shuts its gates to no human being. Some day, when the spirit of comradeship has come into the world, we shall organize the whole of life on the same principle. Society, with all its resources, will stand behind every baby born. Then at last we shall know a race of full-statured men and broad-visioned women.

Socialism will give men room and opportunity to be kindly, gentle, tender, to one another. It will express in the very fiber of the industrial fabric the organic unity of human life. It will weld together all the jarring atoms; it will fuse the very passion and arrogance and malice of men; it will harness all the virtues and the vices in the service of the commonwealth. For the vicious act is but the act which is anti-social, and to-day a premium is set upon vice. But in the days that are to be a premium will be set upon mutuality and fraternity. There will be every reason why we should work together and none why we should pull apart. The barriers will break down. Frozen hearts will become warm. Artificial gradings and conceits and jealousies will go to the rubbish-heap. We shall begin to reverence this poor humanity of ours, which has been so battered and torn and trodden under foot. We shall begin to understand that the red blood runs and the red heart beats beneath all flesh. We shall verily be comrades one to another. And this comradeship will blossom in every beautiful thing—in great social life, great art, great thinking. Our mission must ever be, in the words of Edward Carpenter:

"To form an indissoluble union and compact, a brotherhood unalterable,
"Far pervading, fresh and invisible as the wind united in Freedom—
"A golden circle of stamens hidden beneath the petals of humanity,
"And guarding the sacred ark.
"Through heroisms and deaths and sacrifices.
"Always for the poor and despised, always for the outcast and oppressed.
"Through kinship with Nature, and the free handling of all forms and customs.
"Through the treasured teaching of inspired ones—never lost and never given wholly to the world, but always emerging—
"Through love, faithful love and comradeship, at last emancipating the soul into that other realm (of freedom and joy) into which it is permitted to no mortal to enter—
"Thus to realize the indissoluble compact—to reveal the form of humanity."

A SOCIALIST "SOCIALIST-KILLER."

Mr. Hourwich has more than one way, as well as more than one name, to combat Socialism with. His favorite way is to discredit the prevailing Socialist views not so much by argument as by ridicule. And his favorite method of ridicule is the easy but effective ridicule of quotation marks. His less favorite but more effective way of casting discredit on Socialism is to present something of his own, something which he claims is Socialism—the real thing—a practise which tends to discredit Socialism with every sensible but uninformed person.

He expatiates in the Jewish "Vorwaerts" on the demerits of the government printing establishment in Washington. It is dominated by the unions. This involves great loss and waste of labor. Stereotyped tables are destroyed for the purpose of being set up again, and that by hand labor, as the union succeeded in preventing the introduction of linotype machines. People should consider this, says Mr. Hourwich, and think twice before they favor government ownership of railways. The Socialists who stand for the complete overthrow of capitalism are unable and unwilling to solve this problem. Therefore this job devolves on Mr. Hourwich. Mr. Hourwich is a well informed man and it would be unjust to charge him with ignorance. Therefore, we take it, that he rails against Socialism deliberately and with malice aforethought. He knows the position of the Socialists on this question. He knows that this problem will be easily solved by the trade union in question. Let Mr. Hourwich guarantee to the printers in the government establishments a reduction of their hours of labor in proportion to the saving of labor by the linotypes, and he will find no greater enthusiasts for the introduction of the linotypes than the printers and their union. Their present opposition to the linotypes is easily explicable, seeing that their introduction will put so many of them on the street to shift for a job. All of which Mr. Hourwich knows well, but does not even hint at, for it would be an attack on capitalism and not on Socialism.

But this is not all. Mr. Hourwich knows well that the opposition of trade unions to the introduction of modern machinery is an ever waning phenomenon. The unions are impotent in this direction and their opposition is of no effect and is not a factor in industrial development. On the other hand, industries which are completely controlled by trusts and monopolies are noted for the tenacity with which they adhere to the old forms of production. There is good reason for it. Once competition is eliminated, there remains one reason less to impel the capitalist to introduce new machinery. The outlay may by far exceed the profits which may accrue from the saving on labor. Or, at least, the capitalist thinks so, and this is sufficient reason for him. This negative attitude of monopolized industries to the introduction of modernized machinery is, unlike the opposition of the trade unions, an ever growing industrial factor, threatening social progress. Facts of this kind come often to the surface in the daily press. We read now and then of an invention or discovery in the production of a commodity controlled by a trust. The trust always secures control of the invention and this may be the last that we hear of it. It is suppressed or, perhaps, destroyed to the irretrievable loss of society. All of which is perfectly well known to Mr. Hourwich. But to point out this would be against capitalism and this is not Mr. Hourwich's mission. Besides many Socialists do it and to denounce and ridicule them is the mission of Mr. Hourwich. We predict but a short career for Mr. Hourwich as a Socialist "Socialist-killer."

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Courier-Herald, Wilkes Barre, Pa.

"Do not forget. We need a lot of shingle and lumber manufacturers in the next legislature, and the time to do effective work is at the primaries. It is immaterial what your politics are so long as the lumber and shingle men are chosen."

The above is part of a circular letter sent out by Mr. Victor Beckman, secretary of the Washington-Red Cedar Shingle Manufacturers' Association, whose headquarters are at Seattle. * * * They are thoroughly class-conscious, for they desire no outsiders to look after their interests in the legislature.

Daily American, Mahanoy City, Pa.

Socialist John Collins cracked right and left with will and eloquence last evening, nor did he appear to fear the assailment of his position. Socialism has many features that appeal to the moneyless man; and, again, quite a few avenues which lead to the social and moral betterment of the man who does not fear the loss of a little sweat in honest toil. Perhaps Socialism is the Land of Promise!

Industrial Advocate, Pittston, Pa.

First principles of Socialism:

1. Society is divided into two classes, the capitalist class and the working class.

2. There exists a struggle between these two classes for the product of labor.

3. The interests of these two classes are diametrically opposed to one another.

4. In this class struggle, each class is organized both economically and politically.

5. The trusts represent the economic and the Republican party the political organization of the capitalist class.

6. The American Federation of Labor represents the economic, and the Socialist Party the political organization of the working class.

7. The dying middle class is represented economically by the so-called master tradesmen's organizations and the Citizens' Alliances, and politically by the Democratic party, all of which organizations must inevitably die with it.

Reading Advocate.

Labor papers in the anthracite region are busy denouncing the sheriffs and judges for appointing deputies to aid the coal barons. They seem to forget that they helped to elect those capitalistic puppets to office.

Cleveland Citizen.

The New York Worker calls attention to the manner in which the two sensational yellow organs of that city, the "Journal" and the "World," which constantly pose as being friendly to labor, are surreptitiously aiming to injure the striking miners. They do not make honest editorial attacks on the union men, but distort and magnify little incidents that occur in the anthracite region in such manner as to start a general demand for military interference. The Cleveland "Press" is evidently imitating the New York sheets. The blood-curdling headlines and distorted dispatches are injuring the cause of the miners a hundred times more than the strongest editorials that could be published. Those union men who have been taking the "Press" as a "friend of labor" are now having their eyes opened. False idols have fallen before.

Southern Mercury, Dallas, Tex.

Now a national anti-boycott league is proposed. The president of the Wilkes Barre "Citizen Alliance" was in New York last week and shed the information that there was a movement on foot to form a secret organization of the "best citizens" of the country for the purpose of antagonizing boycotts by boycotting all boycotters in the manner attempted in Wilkes Barrre, Scranton, Terre Haute, and other places. Of course the organization will be a secret one, as the members of such organizations lack the courage to let their membership be known, and will sneak up back streets to attend meetings.

Secretary Mullahy, of the firemen, has been arrested and placed under $12,500 bail in Wilkes Barrre, upon the charge of libeling a number of scabs by advertising them as unfair men. The editor and manager of the Wilkes Barrre "Courier," a labor paper, have also been dragged into the court for libel and had to furnish $20,000 bail. The editor of the "Trade Unionist" of Hazleton, when arrested for libel and sued for damages by scabs, grimly declared that about all they could secure was a list of delinquent subscribers. Others have also been proceeded against. Needless to say that the coal barons are behind all these cases. They are taking advantage of oppressive laws enacted by the corrupt old party politicians to cripple the unionists if possible.

The Exponent, Saginaw, Mich.

Incidental to the western trip of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, comes the report that Samuel Gompers will not be re-elected at the coming convention in New Orleans. It is said that the national officers of several large organizations have already talked the matter over and have selected a new man for the position. James Duncan, of the Granite Cutters, and first vice-president, is said to be the choice, and he is considered a more aggressive man than Gompers.

PARTY NOTES.

Comrade Collins reports organizing Shenandoah with 67 members, and Mahanoy City with 45. He is now at Atlantic City, N. J., for a few days' much needed rest. At Shenandoah he spoke on the night before the riot took place to an audience of 4,000 people. He is of the opinion that there will be a terrible loss of life before the strike closes, as the "authorities," that is the coal operators, are seeking every possible pretext to slaughter the miners.

Comrade J. H. Harris of Edwardsdale, Pa., writes: "The Socialist movement is going forward by leaps and bounds. Last Saturday Local Edwardsdale called a convention of the Socialists in this the Third legislative district of Luzerne County, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the legislature. We nominated a United Mine Worker, John T. Jenkins, who is very prominent in the labor movement.

"Last night Comrade Quinn of Wilkes Barre, nominee for congress; Comrade Jenkins and myself went to Plymouth. A local was organized with thirty-five members. Comrade Swift went to Nanticoke to organize a local. To-night we will have some good speeches on the river bank at Wilkes Barre."

Our correspondence from the strike field shows that the striking miners are hungry for Socialist literature. Any comrade who can order a bundle of The Worker sent to J. H. Harris, Box 4, Edwardsdale, Pa., or Morrison I. Swift, General Delivery, Wilkes Barre, Pa., may know that the seed thus sown will fall on fertile soil.

Comrade Wm. C. Gibson, of Mahanoy City, Pa., writes that he is distributing The Worker and has not enough copies to go around. He says: "After the strike I can send you a list of two hundred subscribers, for Socialism is ruling our town. We are going to hold a convention on Saturday, August 16, to put a whole ticket in the county and state. I have organized three locals the last week here and more to organize. All we need is speakers and literature to sweep the county." Any comrade who can send a few bundles of The Worker to Wm. C. Gibson, Local 1563, U. M. W., Mahanoy City, Pa., can be sure that they will make many Socialists.

Comrade Jacquot of Freeland, Pa., writes: "Comrade Moore of Philadelphia and Comrade Wm. Detrey of Nuremburg, Pa., addressed a largely attended meeting of the Freeland Socialist Club on Saturday afternoon, and all comrades were pleased to hear the speakers. Comrade Collins will be with us this week and much good may be accomplished. The miners are joining thick and fast and by the November election we hope to poll a very large Socialist vote."

Local Los Angeles, Socialist Party, has adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, The logic of the class struggle forces the conclusion that from the ranks of organized wage-workers must come those men best fitted to fight the battles of the laboring class; therefore be it

"Resolved, That Local Los Angeles hereby records its intention to nominate for office at the coming municipal election those members of the organization who are trade unionists."

Wm. R. Fox of Cincinnati, O., whose verses so frequently appear in the columns of the Socialist press has been nominated for congress from the Second District of Ohio. He will take the stump for the campaign and gives warning that the supply of verses may be limited, if not entirely stopped thereby. Comrade Fox reports that the outlook for Socialism in Cincinnati is exceedingly favorable, and that the party membership is growing rapidly.

Owing to a decision of the courts the Minnesota comrades will go on the ballots as the Social Democratic Party.

G. H. Lockwood was arrested in Minneapolis for making a Socialist speech. The outrage has created such a furore that Lockwood has started on a trip through the state of Minnesota and is attracting large audiences.

Comrade Wilshire's recent address at Portland received a good column report in the Portland "Daily Advertiser."

The new constitution of Colorado, now being submitted to referendum, provides, among other things, that no person holding an elective or appointive office under any other political party shall be elected to membership in the Socialist Party; that after 1902 no person shall be eligible to nomination for public office except he has been a party member for one year; that no member shall announce himself as a candidate for office, or do anything to promote his own nomination, under penalty of being made ineligible. It also provides for delegate conventions.

A big Socialist demonstration will be held in St. Louis August 16. So far twenty-one labor unions have decided to participate. Father Haggery and Thomas Morgan of Chicago will speak.

Local San Francisco is troubled with internal dissension, charges having been brought against many prominent members.—California State Convention will meet on September 9.

The Socialist Party of Toledo, O., is circulating subscription lists throughout the city to raise funds for the striking miners.

A New Hampshire comrade writes: "It is evident from the way the common people turn out to hear our speakers with very little advertising that they are getting interested. Look out for Concord when the ballots are counted."—The Concord "People and Patriot" gives a very fair report of Comrade Wilshire's address at Concord, N. H., August 1.—Comrade Clafin of Manchester, N. H., recently spoke in Penacook to a large audience and was well received. He also spoke in Fosterville to a large and enthusiastic audience.

Rev. H. W. Smith, a Socialist clergyman of East Pepperell, held the close attention of an audience of 200 at Bridgewater, Mass., on August 7.

Comrade J. B. Chapman of Arkansas City, writes as follows: "Arkansas City Local is forging ahead. We have now one hundred and thirty-four members; two months ago we had only ten. Every member is enthusiastic and a worker. New members coming in every day. We have the old parties on the run; their leaders are dazed at our growth. We have had one street meeting with Comrade O'Hare as speaker. On the 8th we will hold a picnic with Comrade Lonthee as speaker; on the 9th, another street meeting. Our county ticket will be voted straight by all the comrades. Look out for the vote from Kansas."

J. C. Harkness of Northport, Wash., is a steady hustler, both for the party organization and the party press. The Worker owes much to his efforts.

Rush in the subscriptions for The Worker, comrades. It makes Socialist voters, Socialist party members, and Socialist agitators.

C. K. Coolidge of Kansas City is continually bombarding us with new subscriptions.

William Mahoney of Indiapolis never misses an opportunity to get a new reader for The Worker.

Comrade Martin, of Olympia, Wash., writes: "The cause in Washington is progressing nicely, considering the number of workers in the field, finances, etc. We shall poll for 10,000 votes this fall. Just in from a trip throughout this county—Thurston—and feel sure that we shall more than quadruple our vote of two years since. It's in the air everywhere in this neck o' the woods."

Following is a summary of Massachusetts Financial Secretary-Treasurer Goldstein's report for July. Income: On hand July 1, $49.27; stamps, $65.60; other sources, $2.05. Expenditures, $52.56. Cash on hand August 1, $64.37. Stamps: On hand July 1, 58; bought, 800; sold, 656; on hand August 1, 858.

Organizer Caldwell of Connecticut is reinforcing his agitation work by taking subscriptions for The Worker.

State Organizer John M. Ray of Indiana has organized locals at Greenfield, Newcastle, Rushville, and Connersville, and sends in some "subs." for The Worker.

Comrade Franklin H. Wentworth, of Chcago, will debate with Rev. Frank Dixon, of Hartford, Conn., before the Danville, Ill., Chautauqua, on August 20. Dixon's subject is "The Threat of Socialism."

H. A. Gibbs, M. D., of Worcester, Mass., will give an address on "Socialism, the Basis of Universal Peace," on Thursday afternoon, August 21, at the thirty-sixth anniversary of the Universal Peace Union and the thirty-fifth of the Connecticut Christian Peace Society, to be held in the Peace Union Grove at the Peace Temple, Mystic, Conn., August 20, 21, 22, and 23. Dr. Gibbs will also address a street meeting in Mystic on Thursday evening, and it is hoped that a local will be formed there. Stonington, New London, and Norwich readers of The Worker take notice and attend and cooperate if possible.

At a recent meeting of Local Bridgeport, Conn., the following officers were elected: Organizer, McLevey; Financial Secretary, R. Leibt; Recording Secretary, A. Uhlig; Literature Agent, E. Cederholm; Agitation Committee, J. Back, Hascher, O. Connor, McLevey, Narierawski; Boycott Committee in the Interest of the Striking Brewery Workers, Puza, Back, Hascher, Leibt. Comrade Hascher has been chosen agent for The Worker and "Volkszeitung." Comrade Mayes, of New York, spoke recently in Bridgeport. The city law does not allow the distribution of literature on the streets, which makes our propaganda difficult. The local has ordered 100 copies weekly of The Worker until after election. Comrade Caldwell will speak at Washington Park next Thursday, August 14, and all comrades should be present.

At the last meeting of Local Detroit the following officers were elected: Chairman, Clontier; Corresponding Secretary, H. Kummerfeld; Treasurer, L. Erb; Financial Secretary, E. Schnephase; Organizer, Utley; Auditors, Basar Hahn, Chas. Erb, Gustav Zander. Regular meetings are held the first and third Wednesdays of every month at Tinnette's Hall, Catherine and Rivard streets.

New York City.

Comrade Sol. Friedman could make good use of a large concert phonograph in his agitation work if any comrade can loan one for use at street meetings during the campaign. He would also like to hire a good sized open wagon for six nights in the week, from 7 to 12 p. m., from now until Election Day. Address Sol. Friedman, 64 East Fourth street, care of Organizer, S. D. P.

Comrade E. Sif, manufacturer and grinder of all kinds of cutlery, furriers' cutters, razors, etc., 101 Rivington street, will donate to the fund for the Socialist Daily 10 per cent. of the income from all patronage given him by the comrades.

—At the last meting of the Speakers' Club Comrade Ben Hanford gave an interesting talk to the members. The points given were of a nature to aid and inspire all who hope to become active participants in the Socialist movement. A number of extemporaneous addresses were given, in each case demonstrating that the organization is showin valuable results. The meeting of the club for August 13 falls on a Wednesday night, but thereafter it will continue as usual on every Tuesday night. The time for work is at hand. All who desire to go on the platform for the working class should come forward.

10th A. D., attention! An open meeting will be held on Thursday, August 21, at Lafayette Hall, 8-10 Avenue D, which will be addressed by Organiser Wood and William Edlin. All sympathisers of the S. D. P. and all readers of The Worker are invited to attend.

During the past two months Comrade Sol. Fieldman has been addressing very large and enthusiastic meetings throughout New York City. If the number of applicants for membership brought in and the quantity of literature sold are any criterion, the meetings may be characterized as a great success. The people living in and near Eighth avenue seem to be burning with a desire to understand Socialism. Fieldman speaks there to audiences of 600 to 700 people three nights in the week, and they are not only intensely attentive listeners but they are eager to learn more about Socialism and show it by purchasing 250 to 300 pamphlets at each meeting. At a single one of these meetings fourteen citizens applied for membership in the Social Democratic Party. About sixty names have been brought in from that vicinity and it is Comrade Fieldman's intention to organize a Social Democratic Club on Eighth avenue.

The 16th A. D. has decided to call a meeting of all Socialists and sympathizers in the district in order to gain new members. It has also been decided to start an open-air campaign at once and comrades are urged to help as much as they can. Members should not fail to attend the next meeting on Thursday, August 21, as very important business is to be transacted.

New York State.

O. W. Curtiss of Watertown, N. Y., is helping to educate the workingmen of that city, by getting them to subscribe for The Worker.

A joint meeting of the members of Local Buffalo decided to open headquarters at corner of Main and North Division streets. The following officers were elected: Organizer, W. H. Spears; Recording Secretary, Louis Slotkin;; Financial Secretary and Treasurer, Henry Moses; Literature Agent, Bonet Abelson.

At the last meeting of the Buffalo Social Democratic Club (Jewish Branch) the Excursion Committee reported progress and asks every member to be present at the next meeting and settle for the tickets. The excursion takes place Sunday, August 24. The boat leaves Amherst street, 9:30 a. m. Tickets, 25 cents. Profits go to the campaign fund. The state constitution will be voted on and other important matters brought up at the next regular meeting Sunday, August 17, 3 p. m., at 433 William street.

Last week State Organizer F. J. Spring held a good meeting in Schenectady, and at Amsterdam visited quite a number of people interested in the movement and writes that we will be able to effect organization there in the near future. Comrade Spring also visited Oneonta, and held meeting in Binghamton and Elmira. He will remain in Rochester until August 17, as the comrades there have arranged six meetings for him and an attempt will be made to organize branches in the various wards. From Rochester, Comrade Spring will then move towards Buffalo. He writes: "I am confident that our vote this fall will be very materially increased and that the S. L. P. will lose its place on the ballot."

Comrade Dorn, secretary of Local Rome, writes: "Local Rome was organized last March. Three mass meetings have been held; May Day meeting addressed by Wm. T. Brown; May 5, addressed by Organizer Spring and June 17, by Organizers Vail and Byron-Curtiss. We expect to have a good vote for Socialism. We suffer from the absence of union men. We have sent them special invitations to our meetings, but they did not seem to turn out. However, Socialists are never discouraged and we will keep up our work."

The comrades of Oneida have organized again into a local. After the loss of the cigarmakers' strike, all the known Socialists were blacklisted and could not find work in Oneida. This broke up the then very active local. But now the persecution of Socialists has somewhat subsided and the comrades plucked up spirit to organize a new local. Good cheer to the loyal comrades of Oneida!

The vote on the state constitution and the fraternal delegate to Canada should be returned not later than August 19, 1902.

Every local should elect a literature agent. It is the duty of the literature agent to see to it that every member of the local subscribes to The Worker.

HANFORD'S TOUR.

Ben Hanford, Social Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, will speak at the following cities on dates named:

Yonkers, Friday evening, August 15.
White Plains, Saturday evening, August 16.
Peekskill, Monday evening, August 18.
Cold Springs, Tuesday evening, August 19.
Highland Falls, Wednesday evening, August 20.
Newburgh, Friday evening, August 22.
Catskill, Saturday evening, August 23.
Troy, Monday evening, August 25.
Albany, Tuesday evening, August 26.
Schenectady, Thursday evening, August 28.
Gloversville, Friday evening, August 29.
Johnstown, Saturday, evening, August 30.

AGITATION MEETINGS IN NEW YORK CITY.

Meetings will be held at the points named in the following list, on the dates given. Comrades in the assembly districts where meetings are held should not fail to be present and use the opportunity to assist the speakers by agitating among by-standers and aiding in the distribution of literature.

OPEN-AIR MEETINGS.

Wednesday, August 13—Bleecker and McDougall streets, 3d A. D. Speakers: Mayes and Nicholson.

Wednesday, August 13—One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street between Lexington and Third avenues, south side. 34th A. D. Speakers: Phillips and Reichenthal.

Thursday, August 14—Christopher and Bleecker streets, 5th A. D. Speakers: Mayes and Nicholson.

Thursday, August 14—One Hundred and Forty-third street and Willis avenue, 34th A. D. Speakers: Lissauer and Roewoer.

Friday, August 15—Seventy-seventh street and First avenue, 28th A. D. Speakers: Mayes and Reichenthal.

Saturday, August 16—One Hundred and Forty-eighth street and Willis avenue, northeast corner, 34th A. D. Speakers: Phillips and Lissauer.

Tuesday, August 19—One Hundred and Forty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, southeast corner 33d A. D. Speakers will be given later in the "Volkszeitung."

INDOOR MEETINGS.

1st, 3d, 5th and 7th A. Ds.—Hudson Hall, 276 Spring street, Friday, August 15. Speakers: Phillips, Wood. Enrolled voters and readers of The Worker have been invited.

11th, 13th, and 15th A. Ds.—342 W. Forty-second street (family entrance), Thursday, August 21. Prominent speakers will be present. Enrolled voters and readers of The Worker have been notified.

35th A. D.—Clubhouse, 3309 Third avenue, Thursday, August 14. Speakers: Phillips, Wood. Enrolled voters and readers of The Worker have been notified.

FIELDMAN'S MEETINGS.

Meetings will be held by Comrade Sol. Fieldman as follows:

Monday, August 18—Sixth street and Avenue C., N. E. corner, 16th A. D.

Tuesday, August 19—Fifty-fourth street and Eighth avenue, 17th A. D.

Wednesday, August 20—Sixteenth street and First avenue, 18th A. D.

Thursday, August 21—Twenty-seventh and Eighth avenue, N. W. corner, 9th A. D.

Friday, August 22—Third street and Second avenue, 6th A. D.

Saturday, August 23—Thirty-second street and Eighth avenue, N. W. corner, 11th A. D.

In the 18th A. D. Paulitsch will also speak.

CALL FOR SPEAKERS.

Comrades:—In view of the growing demand for speakers throughout the assembly districts of Manhattan and the Bronx it is essential to a proper response on the part of the Organizer, that a complete list of those ready to speak should be in his hands. This is a matter of great importance. I request that all party speakers communicate with me at once giving a list of the nights or particular dates they can fill. The number upon whom I am now forced to depend is absurdly inadequate to the calls coming in daily. With a reasonable number of speakers it will also be possible to map out a systematic agitation throughout the city.

JAMES N. WOOD,
Organizer, Local New York.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

CALDWELL'S MEETINGS IN CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, August 10.—Organizer Caldwell began the week's work with a rousing meeting on New Haven Green Tuesday, August 5. With the help of the Socialist Piccolo Band a large audience was called together and remained, giving close attention until the end of the address.

The most enthusiastic meeting he has had in Connecticut greeted Caldwell on Wednesday in Torrington. About 400 were present and nearly 100 books were sold and subscriptions for The Worker taken. A former member of Local Hartford who lives in Winsted undertook to get names on a charter application.

At Waterbury, Thursday, there was an audience of 300 and five new members were added to Local Waterbury. A hall has been engaged and Local Waterbury will hold regular meetings until election day. All readers of The Worker should attend the meetings and join the party. The sale of books and subscriptions at this meeting was also good.

The meeting at Naugatuck on Friday evening will surely result in adding a new local to the party soon. There are enough Socialists in this town to form a permanent organization and they took a charter application. Among them is a well known physician.

Caldwell spoke in Ansonia Saturday evening. This is the town where the Economic League originated, and the city government is made up entirely of workingmen who are trade unionists. A good public meeting was held and some subscriptions were taken. The Economic League still holds the interest of the workingmen, so that no organization can be effected.

Caldwell willl visit Stamford, South Norwalk, Danbury, and Bridgeport next week. His engagement in Connecticut ends Thursday, August 14. Arrangements are being made to have another speaker go over the same route and endeavor to complete the organizations which have been started.

EVANSVILLE CARPENTERS FOR SOCIALISM.

The following resolutions, adopted at a recent meeting of Carpenters' Union, No. 90, of Evansville, Ind., have been sent to all locals throughout the jurisdiction, asking for their adoption:

"Resolved, That Carpenters' Union No. 90 hereby declares for the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, and recommends to its members that they unite with the international Socialist movement in conquering the political powers now controlled almost exclusively by the capitalist class. Be it further

"Resolved, That our delegates to the national convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners to be assembled at Atlanta, Ga., in September, be and is hereby instructed to advocate and vote for a declaration at the convention in favor of the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, and political action in the Socialist Party. And be it

"Resolved, That we commend the action of the executive board, the secretary and the editor of the "Carpenter" in printing articles on Socialism, and request that such articles be continued and the principles of Socialism be fully presented in our paper. And be it further

"Resolved, That the delegates from our convention to the American Federation of Labor convention be instructed to work and vote for a declaration in line with the foregoing."

—See that every member of your local union gets at least three issues of The Worker before election.

R·I·P·A·N·S

For twenty years I had been a sufferer from bronchial troubles accompanied with a hacking cough. I at times suffered from extreme nervous prostration. About four years ago I began taking Ripans Tabules, and since then I have used them pretty constantly. I rarely retire at night without taking my Tabule, and I find they keep my digestive organs (which naturally are weak) in good order, and they also allay my tendency to nervousness and make me sleep.

DANGEROUS DOCUMENTS

Calculated to "Incite to Class Hatred."

Pernicious Literature Emanates from the Census Bureau—Tends to Show that the Rich Are Growing Richer and the Poor Poorer—Bulletin No. 215 Deals with Cotton Industry.

Under the new anti-anarchist law, the government should start out by prosecuting and suppressing the Census Bureau. That office has just issued a dangerous revolutionary document, calculated to excite discontent with the existing state of society and "incite to class hatred" in the highest degree. And the worst of it is that this is only one of a long series of similar pernicious publications, all emanating from the same source.

The document in question is known as Census Bulletin No. 215. We present below a summary of Table 23, with some deductions therefrom and a very little comment.

Increase of net product, 43 per cent.; of total wages, 31 per cent.; of total profits, 73 per cent.

The table does not need much comment to bring out its significance, supporting, as it does, every contention of Socialist economists—concentration of capital, increased productivity of labor, relative and absolute reduction of wages, and relative and absolute increase of profits. Let us, however, sum up some of the points shown by the table and elaborate others not immediately shown by it, asking the reader to bear in mind that, as shown in Note 1, we have, in case of uncertainty, owing to the vagueness of the information given, made excessive allowances in favor of our opponents.

Wages Absolutely Reduced.

First, then, the table shows a positive reduction of wages (2).

In 1890, the average yearly wages of the 218,876 wage-workers amounted to $301.65—surely a munificent sum on which to support an American family and keep a "full dinner-pail."

But in 1900, the average wages of the 302,861 wage-workers had fallen to $287 56 — FOURTEEN DOLLARS LESS FOR AN AVERAGE YEAR'S WORK THAN IN 1890.

Perhaps it is thought that the workers who thus suffered a reduction of wages should be comforted by observing that, meanwhile, the salaries of the officials and clerks rose from an average of $1,279 in 1890 to an average of $1,499 in 1900. Probably the officials saw more of this rise than did the clerks.

Increase of Child Labor.

Of the wage-workers in the cotton industry in the year of grace and prosperity 1900, only 135,721, or less than 45 per cent. were men—even counting boys from sixteen to twenty-one as being men. Nearly 42 per cent. were women—including girls over sixteen. MORE THAN ONE-EIGHTH OF THE WORKERS WHO PILED UP PROFITS FOR THE COTTON LORDS WERE BOYS AND GIRLS UNDER SIXTEEN, WHO SHOULD HAVE BEEN AT HOME, AT SCHOOL, OR ON THE PLAY-GROUND.

The employment of children increased relatively, as well as absolutely. In 1890 there were twenty-six children in the mills to every hundred men; in 1900 there were thirty children to every hundred men. (3).

Wages of Women and Children.

The table summarized above does not give separately the wages of men, women, and children. But in Table 5, which covers "cotton goods," as distinguished from "small cotton wares," and includes over 98 per cent. of the wage-workers in the industry, we find these items separated, and this will serve for the whole industry.

The wages of the forty thousand child slaves in the cotton mills in 1900 averaged $132.57 a year. The women got an average of $266.11 a year, and the men $349.25.

A man and wife with one child old enough to work in the mills might thus, by working every day when they were allowed to work, earn a total of nearly $750 a year—equivalent to almost $2.50 for every working day in the year.

Who would take care of the home and tend the younger children in such a case? We leave that question to be answered by the eminently respectables stockholding gentlemen who say that Socialism would undermine the home and destroy the family.

Taken in conjunction with the positive reduction of wages the figures given in the latter part of the table are extremely instructive, though they greatly understate the facts.

Dividing Up the Product.

In 1890, the average net product of a wage-worker's labor for a year was $424.38. Of this, he got back $301.65, and left $122.73 as profit for the capitalists who "gave him employment"—in addition to contributing his share to the salaries of capitalists who were also company officers and to the various items of rent, interest, legal fees, corruption funds, and "pickings and stealings," which went to some portion of the capitalist class under the head of "miscellaneous expenses."

In 1900, the average net product of the year's labor of a wage-worker in the cotton mills had risen to $439.73. Of this, he received in wages $287.56, and left $152.17 to the gentlemen who kindly permitted him to practise "thrift" and "abstinence"—besides contributing to other items of capitalist income noted above.

Who Is Responsible?

These figures are a sufficient reply to the claim of politicains of either old party that they have given "prosperity" to the working class. The Republicans held power in the nation during the first two and the last four of the ten years from 1890 to 1900 and the Democrats were in power for four years in between. The cotton industry is chiefly centered in New England and in the South; in the former section the Republican party has held control of the state governments most of the time during the period in question, and in the Southern states the Democratic party has had almost uninterrupted control. Responsibility for the lowering of the condition of the workers in this industry must, therefore, fall about equally on the two old parties.

Our candidates for Congress, especially in the districts where there are many cotton mills, should write to the Director of the Census, Washington, D. C., asking for "Census Bulletin No. 215, Cotton Manufactures." It will be sent free, and will prove useful in campaign. Table 23 is the most important part.

(1) The heading of "Salaried officials and clerks" includes many proprietors, firm-members, and stockholders: in these cases the salaries are often not actually wages of superintendence, but simply disguised profits. The heading of "Miscellaneous expenses" includes some items which are legitimately a part of the cost of production (as fuel, repairs, etc.) and others (as rent, interest on loans, legal fees, lobbying, etc.) which are actually disguised profits. The total of salaries, however, is relatively small, and it is impossible to separate the legitimate from the illegitimate items of "miscellaneous expenses"; in analyzing the table we shall therefore give the capitalists the benefit of the doubt and treat both as a portion of the cost of production. Our treatment of the figures errs, therefore, on the side of moderation, showing the net product and the profits smaller than they actually are and the proportion paid to the workers in the form of wages larger than it actually is.

(2.) In the face of his own figures, showing the number of wage-workers and total amount of wages in 1890 and in 1900, the compiler of the Bulletin has the audacity to say: "It is a matter of general experience that wages in cotton mills were higher in 1900 than in 1890." He must suppose that the people outside of his office are all too ignorant to perform two simple sums in long division, that they will never examine the tables, but will read only his comments. We shall have to revise the old provery and say: "Figures don't lie, but some figurers do."

(3) The compiler of the report says that "the employment of children is not a matter of choice but of necessity and, economically, is a losing rather than a profitable system." The Cotton Lords, we might infer, would make money, or save money, by sending all these children back to the school-room, but are keeping them in the mills out of pure humanity and public spirit.

This, however, is not exactly what he means. He means only that the capitalists are making profits on the children, but would make bigger profits by hiring men in the children's places. But even this is a lie, to put it in plain English. He explains it thus: "In the South, the industry is growing at a wonderful rate. Whole families enter the factories, because in no other way can the demand for labor be satisfied. Manufacturers took whom they could get for operatives."

When the wages paid to men in the cotton mills, North and South, average less than $350 a year, it is hardly to be wondered at if men do not crowd to the mills. But the pretense that the employment of children is due to necessity and that the mill-owners would like to avoid it is disproven by three indisputable facts:

First, that in Alabama, Georgia, and the Carolinas, when the trade unions petitioned for very moderate bills restricting the employment of children in the mills, the mill-owners have fought them tooth-and-nail.

Second, that in Massachusetts the mill-owners have in the same way opposed bills introduced by the Socialist members to raise the age-limit for the employment of minors and to forbid the employment of women and children on night-work in the mills; the activity of the Arkwright Club, the mill treasurers' association, against this latter bill, was reported in the New York "Times" of May 20.

Third, that according to Table 9 of this same bulletin No. 215, the employment of children has increased in the last ten years, not only in the South, but also in New England and in the Middle States, where it it is well known that there are many men out of work, even in this "era of prosperity."

FOR RELIEF OF THE STRIKING MINERS.

New York Defense Committee, No. 1, for the relief of the striking miners, headquarters University Settlement, 184 Eldridge street, New York, which meets every Friday at 8 p. m., has issued the following appeal:

"To All Labor Unions—Greeting:

"The greatest of all labor contests is now being waged. On one side there are four railroad companies that monopolize the richest mineral deposit of the world—the fuel that furnishes the motive power of our industrial system; and on the other the great army of 147,00 quiet and determined men insist upon a living wage for their hazardous toil, and the right of association, in order that they may be able to make better terms for themselves. The future of the labor movement depends largely upon the outcome.

By each member contributing his mite, the men battling heroically for a cause which is so obviously just, and which deeply concerns every lover of humanity, they will be enabled to win, it is only the bare necessities of life that are needed.

The Relief Committee appointed by the conference of representatives of trade unions and friendly societies respectfully appeal to your body to subscribe the sum of five cents (5c.) per week for each member, in order that a substantial amount may be assured each week to the miners as long as the strike lasts. Can we count upon your co-operation?

"Yours in the cause of Labor,
The Defense Committee,
HERMAN ROBINSON,
Secretary.

"P. S.—Kindly make money orders, postoffice orders or checks payable to Daniel Harris, Treasurer."

This committee is also securing the co-operation of several theatrical managers who are devoting the use of their theatres to benefit performances in the furtherance of this cause.

The committee reports a number of donations of money from the local unions to the coal miners, and that it is expected to send the striking miners about $5,000 a week from New York. Typographical Union No. 6 announced a 5-cent per capita weekly assessment on its 6,000 members, which will aggregate over $1,200 a month toward the support of the miners; the stereotypers have voted to send $100 a month while the strike lasts; the pattern makers donated $250. Cigarmakers' Union No. 144 $100, and various amounts have been contributed by the Gilders, Safety Engineers, Meat Cutters, Typographical Union No. 7, Wood Carvers, Marble Machine Workers, Letter Carriers, Cloak and Suit Cutters, Brewers' No. 1, Bakers' No. 113; Bakers' No. 50; Neckwear Cutters, Brass Molders, Boot and Shoe Workers, Coppersmiths, Brotherhood Carpenters No. 478; Electrical Workers No. 3; Cloth Examiners and Cloth Spongers, and the Enterprise Labor Club of Street Sweepers, the latter three unions pledging ten cents a member each week while the strike lasts.

The Defense Committee announces a benefit theatrical entertainment for the miners in the Grand Opera House for September 7.

AID FOR STRIKING MINERS.

A mass meeting was held on August 4 by Newspaper and Mail Deliverers' Union, No. 9,463, A. F. of L., at their headquarters, 278 Water street, New York, to devise means to assist the striking coal miners of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Wm. A. Conkley, president of the International Lithographic Apprentices and Press Feeders Union of the United States and Canada, made a strong appeal to the members for their financial support to the men out on strike. His words had the desired effect, as it was unanimously voted to assess each member ten cents a week until the strike is over. As there are between 850 and 900 members in this union this will net the sum of about $350 a month, a very creditable showing for a union that is still in its infancy.

PROGRESS IN INDIANA.

The condition of the Socialist movement and the Socialist Party in Indianapolis, as well as throughout the state of Indiana, presents a most extraordinary growth, and the effect is to stimulate the comrades to renewed efforts. Each meeting of the Indianapolis local is marked by an ever increasing number of applications. The most gratifying thing about the new members is their desire to become thoroughly acquainted with the true basis of Socialism.

The sale of Socialist literature during the past few months amounts to about fifty dollars and a great many subscriptions to the party papers have been taken. Street meetings are being held in all parts of the city and county and are well attended. In nearly every instance books are sold and subscriptions to papers are taken and many apply for membership. A clear, vigorous, and harmonious movement is being built up here that promises to surprise the unobservant at an early date. The S. L. P. is not manifesting any activity at present in Indianapolis and we have a clear field.

During the miners' convention thousands of papers and pamphlets were distributed and many subscriptions to party papers were taken.

Reports from State Organizer Ray are most encouraging. Within a few weeks he has organized five locals in the most expected quarters and before the campaign is over we hope to have an organization in every town of any size in the state.

The state convention demonstrated that the party in Indiana was well equipped to push the work of education and organization, and no effort would be spared to make the Socialist Party a factor in the political affairs of the state.

ORGANIZATION AT PERTH AMBOY.

The Fire Proof Tile and Brick Makers Along the Raritan River Form a Union.

Comrade E. T. Neben has organized the fire proof tile and brick makers of Perth Amboy and vicinity. The men were eager to form a union and an immense crowd of workers from all the shops near Perth Amboy responded to the call and assembled early last Monday evening at Nelson's Hall, Woodbridge, N. J., to enroll themselves as members. Comrade Neben opened the meeting at eight o'clock and made a few brief remarks upon organization. The books were then opened and for over an hour two men were kept busy obtaining the names of over four hundred men who enrolled as members. When the last man had signed his name, the meeting was called to order and officers of the union elected. E. T. Neben was elected President, and Matthaus Reissing, who is also a Socialist, Vice-President; Recording Secretary, William Reilly; Financial Secretary, Charles Anderson; Treasurer, James Rogan; Sergeant-at-Arms, Michael Fisher. The election of the Executive Committee next took place. This committee is composed of the following members from the six plants located at Perth Amboy: Alex. Lepold, William Barett, John Glodish, Alev. Fugerson, Steve Tillman, John Serisko, William Reid, John Subos, John Grager. To this committee there will be added nine more men at the next meeting. The name, Amalgamated Association of Fire Proof Tile and Brick Makers' Union of America, was adopted with ringing cheers. On account of the lateness of the hour the meeting had to adjourn without completing all its business.

The next meeting will be held in the same hall on Monday, August 25, at 8 p. m. Thereafter the regular monthly meeting will be held the first Monday of every month.

Plans for national organization will come up before the Executive Committee next Monday evening. This meeting will take place at the home of Hyronimus Gundlach, 127 New Brunswick avenue, Perth Amboy.

This union will be known as No. 1, headquarters at Perth Amboy. Another will be organized at once at Woodbridge as No. 2, and another at Newport at No. 3, and efforts will then be made to organize every other brick industry into the Amalgamated Association of Fire Proof Tile and Brick Makers' Union of America.

OHIO.

The State Secretary's financial report for July shows: Balance on hand July 1, $22.43; receipts during July, $311.13; expenditures during July, $304.80; balance on hand August 1, $28.76. Four new locals were organized during the month. Bellefontaine with thirty members. Delaware, with fifteen members, Urbana with five members, Xenia with twelve members. The business at headquarters for the past month has amounted to the sending out of 527 letters, 63 packages and 53 postal cards. We wish to again call attention to the report books which are in the hands of each local now. Study the directions and get your report in to us in time, or we will be forced to ask for it. Save us that trouble. If your local has not voted for the fraternal delegates as per letter sent you a few days ago, be sure and do so at next meeting. Only a few secretaries have sent us the list of officers on the red cards. Please forward your list if you have not done so. We have the official resignation of all the candidates for state offices on file here. They are all properly signed and all that remains now is to elect the candidates to the offices.

ADDITIONAL CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS.

Resolved, That we request the National Committee and all independent speakers to notify the State Secretary of their tours in Ohio at the earliest time possible.

Resolved, That we adopt the National Emblem of the Socialist Party as the emblem of the Socialist Party of Ohio.

These were omitted in the convention proceedings and I have received these resolutions properly attested by the chairman and secretary of the convention, therefore gladly make the correction.

We are keeping a record of all the elections this year with the names and addresses of the candidates, etc. This data will all be compiled for future reference. See that we are informed as to all the details about your local ticket, and candidates, if you have any.

We are granting commissions to organizers, giving theofficial right to organize in the state, congressional districts and counties, and they are given by these districts according to the ability of a person to cover the territory. We desire to get some good comrades to act as organizers for the congressional districts. They can assist us materially. We will issue such commissions to members of the party who are capable and who are recommended by the membership of their district.

During the month we have furnished many locals with blank nomination petitions and resignation blanks for candidates free. We still have plenty on hand for those needing them. Ask and ye shall receive.

Push the state petitions. • • • Ask the State Secretary all the questions you like about the election. But don't write on more than two sides of the paper. Make your letters pointed as possible. Support the speakers that we are arranging to tour. Push the distribution of literature. Hold as many agitation meetings as possible. Get as much of your literature from us as possible; it all helps to keep the organization going. Our organizers are busy, and as a result they are keeping the headquarters crowded with work. We are too busy to tell you all about it, but everybody seems to be working for all they are worth. Let's keep the work moving. Agitate and circulate party papers and literature. That's our propaganda.

Fraternally yours,
W. G. CRITCHLOW,
State Secretary.

SOCIALISM IN MAINE.

Report of the State Secretary Shows Gratifying Progress.

To the Locals and Members-at-Large of the Socialist Party of Maine:

Pursuant to the constitutional provisions, your State Committee has the pleasure of submitting its first report on the progress and growth of the state organization. While the constitution provides for quarterly reports, its final ratification by referendum of the membership occurred too late to render this section operative for the first quarter of the year. This report therefore embodies the first six months of the present year.

On the first day of January, 1902, there were 77 members enrolled who had paid state and national dues for the previous month. Of this number, 55 were concentrated in the four locals of the state, situated at Bath, Biddeford, Skowhegan, and Portland. The remaining 22 members were scattered in varying numbers over eleven counties of the state, representing, in a large measure, what had been accomplished in the way of organization from the date of the Unity Convention to the close of 1901.

With this nucleus of 77 members, the present State Committee entered office and began its labors. Profiting from the natural impetus given the movement by holding our state convention early in January, we are able to report a gratifying progress. New locals have been chartered at Auburn, Berwick, Camden, and Madison, doubling the number of local organizations and adding proportionately to the effectiveness and aggressiveness of the movement.

Several of the old locals, notably Portland and Skowhegan, have added materially to their strength, so that on July 1 the total membership in the locals had risen from 55 to 140, while the membership at large had increased from 22 to 49, making a total membership in good standing on July 1 of 189, as opposed to 77 on January 1, or a gain of over 150 per cent. in six months.

We regret to state that the membership of two locals, Biddeford and Camden, the former with 23, and the latter with 30 members enrolled, are not included in this report, Local Biddeford being in arrears for June, and Local Camden not only for June, but also in part for May and April. In making this statement as to the financial standing of these locals, we wish to say that in the case of Biddeford there are a few comrades who have nobly proven themselves exceptions to the general rule. Almost alone and single handed Comrades White and Ibach have done all in their power to upbuild the movement and strengthen the local. We believe in both instances cited that the existing conditions are entirely due to negligence on the part of the comrades, and not in any sense the fault of the respective financial secretaries, who appear as much distressed as is the state executive itself.

The formation of the four new locals and the extension of the membership at large has opened three new counties to the movement, leaving but two in which we have no membership whatever. These are Franklin and Piscataquis, both of which we hope to report "occupied" in September.

Owing to conditions peculiar to the state, notably long distances between centers of interest, poor connections, severity of winter travel, and high cost of halls, but little effort has been made during the period covered by this report to conduct agitation meetings. Comrade D. A. White of Saco has addressed meetings in Camden, Rockland, Thomaston, Bath, and Portland at different times during this spring, and Comrade Roland T. Patten of Skowhegan has also spoken in several Somerset County towns.

But by far the greater part of our propoganda has been devoted to building up the circulation of such part of our party press as seemed best adapted to the needs and requirements of the time and locality. Over 500 subscriptions have been reported to the State Secretary, and presumably one-half as many more have been filled without coming to our notice. We have also distributed several thousand leaflets and pamphlets dealing with various phases of Socialism and comrades individually have nobly seconded our efforts in this direction.

We earnestly recommend that each local purchase a share of Chas. H. Kerr & Co. stock, as it is a material object to obtain our literature at the minimum of cost.

For the ensuing state campaign your committee has been so fortunate as to secure the services of Comrade James F. Carey of Haverhill, Mass., who will stump the state from the borders of New Hampshire to the Canadian line, speaking forty-nine nights during July, August, and the first week in September. His able co-worker in the Massachusetts legislature, Comrade F. O. MacCartney, has also placed a few dates at our disposal in September, and a ten day's tour for Comrade H. Gaylord Wilshire has been arranged in August. Beside this array of talent, Comrade White of Saco will fill a week's dates in Somerset, Penobscot, Androscoggin and Sagadahoc counties just prior to election.

But while the work of agitation and education is in a healthier condition than ever before in the history of the movement in Maine, we would urge all the comrades to heartily support our party press, and actively co-operate with the executive board, if they wish to see the work continue to thrive and grow in the future.

In the political field we shall have practically a full ticket in three counties, congressional candidates in all four districts, and numerous state legislative candidates as opposed to four or five, two years ago. While it is, of course, impossible to forecast the result of the election, we are confident our vote will show a healthy increase over that of two years ago, while it is certain we have at least a fighting chance to elect one representative to the legislature.

The party funds, while totally out of proportion to our wishes and expectations, show a comfortable balance on the right side of the ledger. The statement of receipts and expenditures from January to July is as follows:

January: Receipts and 1901 balance, $27.81; expenditures, $23.22; February: Receipts, $21.79; expenditures, $21.34. March: Receipts, $109.95; expenditures, $20.33. April: Receipts, $44.32; expenditures, $19.48. May: Receipts, $13.55; expenditures, $40.28. June: Receipts, $52.72; expenditures, $73.88. Mileage on hand, $55.16; due on mileage, $19.82. Total receipts, January 1 to July 1, $355.30; total expenditures, January 1 to July 1, $218.35. Net balance in treasury, July 1, $136.95.

In closing, we wish to impress upon the minds of the comrades that we are here to perform the party business. We are ready and eager to co-operate with each and every comrade at all times, in order to secure any results tending to add to the strength and effectiveness of the movement. In return, we trust that each and every individual member of the organization will feel a sense of personal responsibility in the upbuilding of the party, and lose no opportunity of soliciting new members and disseminating our principles.

Yours fraternally,
FRED E. IRISH,
Secretary-Treasurer.

For State Committee, Socialist Party of Maine.

LUZERNE COUNTY, PA.

The County Committee of the Socialist Party of Luzerne County Pa., held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening, August 5, at 40 W. Market street, Wilkes Parre. The following were present: Delegates: Chas. J. Duke of Pittston; Wm. M. Phillips of Edwardsdale; M. J. Dooley and Richard Dillon of Plains; Albert Jarczyk of Nanticoke; Condy McCole and Joseph Papcun of Freeland. Candidates: Charles F. Quinn, I. N. Cathrall, Frank Mlenaric, and John T. Jenkins. Officers (ex-officio members), J. G. Roth, Chairman; C. F. Quinn, Secretary, and Fred Schade, Sr., Treasurer.

Bills amounting to $10 were accepted and laid over because of lack of funds. Treasurer's report showed $2 in treasury.

Chairman's report showed thirty agitation meetings held during the month, which were addressed by Comrades Swift, Quinn, Lavin, Roth, Cathrall, Durand, Wierzbiski and others. Comrade Morrison I. Swift, who is with us at present, alone addressed twenty-five meetings. He is a great aid to our movement. He is here on his own hook and expects to leave next week. We shall miss him very much.

Five locals were organized during the month—Maltby, Edwardsdale, Plains, West Wyoming, and Exeter.

Encouraging reports were received from all the delegates. Comrades McCole and Papcun stated that they had come all the way from Freeland to represent their local at their own expense. Both are striking miners. Comrade Papcun made a special appeal for literature in the Polish language for his countrymen.

Comrade John Harris of Edwardsdale sent in his resignation as candidate for County Commissioner in order to make room for a man from the Hazleton region. Comrade Harris' resignation was accepted and Comrade Charles Jacquot of Highland (near Freeland) was nominated to fill the vacancy.

Our ticket as now completed is as follows:

For Congress—Chas. F. Quinn, union salesman of Wilkes Barre, secretary-treasurer of Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

For County Treasurer—Nym Seward, union carpenter of Luzerne, member of Wilkes Barre Building Trades Council.

For Register of Wills—I. N. Cathrall, union painter of Pittston, president of Painters' Union and vice-president of Pittston Central Labor Union.

For County Commissioner—Frank Mlarnic of Nanticoke, formerly president of Bliss Local, United Mine Workers.

For County Commissioner—Charles Jacquot, union miner of Highland, president of Freeland Local.

Nomination papers have been prepared and placed in the hands of the delegates for the collection of signatures. All comrades having nomination papers are urged to get them filled as neatly and quickly as possible and turn them in to the County Chairman by September 1. Be sure and have them sworn to.

The question of raising money was discussed, but no definite action taken. The voluntary contributions were received by the treasurer: Frank Mlenaric, $1; I. N. Cathrall, $1; Chas. F. Quinn, $2, and J. G. Roth, $1; total, $5.

Decided that the County Committee have all candidates' cards printed collectively. No individual cards to be circulated.

Motion that the County Committee apply for a charter. Carried.

Comrade Jenkins spoke for some time on the importance of all candidates working together for the success of the full ticket, and not for individuals. His remarks were well received and vigorously applauded.

Adjourned to meet again at 40 West Market street, Wilkes Barre, on Tuesday, September 2, 7:30 p. m.

J. G. R.

To the Comrades of the Fourth Legislative District of Luzerne County, Pennsylvania (Hazleton Region): You are hereby notified that the District Convention of the Fourth Legislative District of Luzerne County will be held in Martin's Hall, North Pine street, Hazleton, on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 19, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the legislature and forming a district organization. You may send as many delegates as you see fit. But each member of your local should affix his signature to the credentials of one of the delegates; no member to sign more than one.

J. G. ROTH,
County Chairman, Socialist Party of Luzerne Co., Pa.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

—Vote as you strike, against capitalism. Remember that, with the secret ballot, voting is safer than striking, as well as more effective.

—The Socialist demands the greatest possible organization of the material basis of life that he may leave the greatest possible freedom to the life of the spirit, and maintains that the absence of freedom and variation in the one direction follows from the absence of organization in the other.—Sidney Ball.

COAL BARON AND COAL MINER.

BY Henry L. Slobodin.

It is a workday, but the miners are idle. They stand in groups, viewing grimly the blackness surrounding the mine—the deep, profit-yielding, death-dealing mine. Down in the black pit a struggle was long waged between the miners who would have their life and bread made more secure, and the overseers, the bosses and other slave-drivers of the Coal Baron, who would wring more and still more profits from the half-fed, perishing miners. And now the miners struck work and the struggle is carried to the surface.

Thousands of hollow, hungry stomachs are pitted against one fat, bulging purse. Which will hold out longer? The Coal Baron issued his fiat—"No arbitration! The rebels shall be crushed!" As to the miners, they settled down into a calm but doggedly stubborn determination to starve but not to yield.

The issues of the struggle are plain. The miners know full well who stands between them and their livelihood; who makes their hours of underground toil endless, and their wages small; who imperils their lives by failing to provide the necessary safeguards; who meanly steals from their pittance by a sneakish, thievish system of docking, false weighing, and overcharging on picks, shovels, and powder; who drives their children into the mine. It is the Coal Baron, the profit-grasping, millionaire mine owner. Therefore it is against the mine owner that they take common counsel, make secret plans and carry on hostilities. It is with the Coal Baron that they treat, make truce and treaties.

The miners resume work only to carry this struggle again from the surface into the mine. For the miners know that this struggle will never abate so long as there will be miners on one side and mine-owners on the other.

But here the knowledge of the miners ends. A feeling of vague doubt and fear creeps over them. Whichever way they turn the miners are confronted by a thing that stands watchful, awful, threatening; ever ready to crush them, chain them, gag them, and surrender them helpless to the mercies of the Coal Baron. This thing is Law—Mine-Owner's Law. Vainly do the miners endeavor to live in peace with the thing. They are "breaking" the thing whatever they do; they are "violating" it whether they know it or not. So say sheriffs and deputies; so declare courts and judges; so ordain legislatures; so proclaim governors. And the bayonet and rifle and cannon are leveled at the miner. Yield you, rebel! they all shout in a chorus. The miner looks at them despairingly. His manly, stubborn heart cries out against surrender. Starve! Die! hammers his heart,—but yield? Never! The miner stands lost, despairing, for he does not understand.

It is Election Day. The miners take in the excitement of the campaign as good fun. The newspapers, that only yesterday barked in unison, like a pack of wolves, at the miners, have suddenly remembered that they were of different politics—some Republicans, others Democratic—and now fairly howl in mutual denunciation. The miners have become the objects of tender solicitude. Professions of love for the miners and pledges to take care of their well-being fall thick and fast as leaves in autumn. Brass bands bray—for the miners. Fireworks crack and glare—for the miners. The miner enters into the humor of the situation. He waxes quite indignant with the Dems. at the corruption of the Reps., or he is up with the Reps. against the iniquity of the Dems. And now it is Election Day. The miners enter the polls and one by one deposit their ballot, some choosing Dems., others voting for Reps.

The next day the miners read the election news. Coal Baron's son-in-law is elected governor on the Republican ticket; Mine Owner's cousin is elected judge on the Democratic ticket; Coal Baron's brother-in-law is elected to Congress on the Republican ticket; Mine Owner's Man Friday is elected to the Legislature on the Democratic ticket; and so down to the Sheriff and local constable, it is the Coal Baron's relative, agent, or tool. The Coal Baron knows that all of them will do his bidding as punctually, as unfailingly, as if they were so many buttons of an automatic machine. Only the miner does not know it. If the party he voted for wins, he vaguely expects something good to happen and feels generally rather sheepish.

What has really happened?

Simply this: The miners voted that the Coal Baron be given all the power of the state, so that in case of a strike of the miners he may use those powers to crush them. The miners, by casting their ballots for Republicans or Democrats, delegated their sovereign authority and power of citizens to the mine-owner and ordained that the mine-owner shall have absolute authority over and control of sheriffs and deputies, courts and judges, legislatures and governors. The miners, by voting for the Republicans or Democrats, declared it to be their will that legislature and governor make laws in favor of the mine-owner and against the miners; that courts and judges render decisions and issue injunctions in favor of the mine-owner and against the miners; that the governor and the militia, the sheriff and the deputies stand ready to enforce by bullet and bayonet those laws, decisions, and injunctions in favor of the mine-owner and against the miner.

How could the miners, being of sound mind and in full possession of their faculties, do such an absurdly foolish thing against themselves?

It happens in this way. To achieve this object the mine-owners ostensibly divide themselves into Republicans and Democrats. The miners very foolishly fall into the trap and some of them say, "We are Republicans!" and vote for the Republican mine-owner and his tools, and others among them declare, "We are Democrats!" and vote for the Democratic mine-owner and his tools; but every time the miners vote for the mine-owner and against the miners. What wonder that after election the miners find everything against them, turn wherever they may.

What should the miners do?

Millions of years ago benevolent nature began to store up organic matter in the bowels of the earth and form it into coal. Millions of years later came man. He needed that coal and the simplest thing for him to do was to dig for it. But over every coal treasure stood a Coal Baron and declared that the coal was his; that nature stored it for his benefit only and anyone who wanted to dig that coal must pay him for it. To prove this he showed some bits of paper. It would be too long a story to tell how and whence the Coal Barons come. But somehow or other things so arranged themselves that now every miner who works in the mine receives one-third and sometimes one-quarter of his product—two-thirds and often three-quarters of his product being kept by the Coal Baron for allowing the miner to dig coal.

Now, if the miners think it right for the Coal Baron to take from them from two-thirds to three-quarters of the product of their toil for the privilege of digging, blasting, and shovelling amidst danger to life and limb, while the poor Coal Baron must dance attendance on some princeling or flashy actress; if the miners think it right for the Coal Baron to wring profits from their toil and the privations of their families—why, then the miners have no complaint to make. But then it were far better for them to sell themselves and their families outright to the Coal Baron into chattel slavery and have some security of food and shelter.

But the miners cannot and do not think this robbery of the product of their toil right. Then the only alternative for the miners is to compel the Coal Barons to give back to the people what nature intended and what of right ought to belong to the people—the coal mine.

But this is Socialism! will the miners exclaim. Exactly. Turn wherever you may, if you want to do what is right to yourselves and to the people, you come to Socialism. It is useless for the miners to look for any other side to the problem. There is only one other side—the wrong side—Capitalism. The miners are on that side now, and the Coal Barons want them to stay on that side forever. It is for the miners to choose between capitalistic wage-slavery and the collective ownership of the mines by the whole people, so that the people may come to their rights and the miners may get the full product of their labor.

How to get Socialism?

How is it possible that the Coal Barons, so few in numbers, oppress and exploit hundreds of thousands of miners? It was answered before: Because the Coal Barons are in control of the powers of government. How have the Coal Barons secured this control? This, too, was pointed out before: By entrapping the miners and other workingmen into voting for Republican or Democratic tools of the Coal Barons.

There is only one right way. Every other way is a wrong way. The miners and the workingmen of other trades must join the ranks of the Socialist Party, a party of their own, organized and controlled by workingmen, distinct from and opposed to all the capitalist parties, whatever their name be—Republican, Democratic, Reform, Citizens', or what not. The miners, together with other workingmen, constitute the vast majority of citizens of each state. They can and should elect only candidates of their own party, the Socialist Party, to all offices—governor, judges, legislators, and sheriffs. The Socialist legislators will pass laws in favor of the miners and against the mine-owners; the Socialist judges will uphold such laws; and the Socialist governor and sheriffs will enforce them. The militia and deputies will be commanded by Socialists and if any one is to be shot, the Socialists will take care that it is not a miner or other honest or useful toiler.

Now a word of warning: As soon as you miners begin to talk Socialism, you will find men in your own midst who will assure you that the Socialists want to destroy the family and religion; that they want to cut up and divide everything into small and even pieces, and much more of the same sort. Do not heed such foolish and absurd talk. Remember, great is the power of money for evil and corruption. Remember, the aim and object of Socialism is collective ownership by the people of the means of production. Socialism does not aim to take from anyone what rightfully belongs to him; on the contrary, it aims to secure to each man and woman the full product of his or her labor.

Miners, you voted for Capitalism and you have it in full measure. If you want Socialism, work for it and vote for it.

STATE COMMITTEE.

Reports Show Activity in New York State.

Hanford's Tour Highly Successful — Demands for Speakers and Literature —Sieverman, Abbott, and Hillquit Nominated for National Committee.

Following are the minutes of the last two meetings of the State Committee of the S. D. P. of New York.

Regular meeting of the State Committee was held Monday evening, August 11, at Labor Lyceum. Financial reports were received from Locals Richmond, Rochester, Rome, and Cold Springs. Results of vote on state constitution were reported from Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, Niagara Falls, Fort Edwards, Newburg, Peekskill, and Rome. New Rochelle, Rome, Mount Vernon, and Richmond reported result of vote on fraternal delegates to Canadian Socialist Convention. One report of this vote was received without name of local or any signature whatever. A communication was ordered sent to several locals of the state regarding delinquent members. State Organizer Spring reports great activity up the state. He has organized locals in Oneida, Albany, and Newark, N. Y., and states that Highland Falls complains that charter has not been received. The Secretary reported that he had ordered new charters printed, and would receive them in a few days. On motion charters were granted to the new locals, and the Secretary was instructed to forward same as soon as he could secure them from the printer, together with all necessary supplies. The Organizer's report also stated that trade unions holding picnics in many places in the state had called for Socialist speakers representing the Social Democratic Party for these occasions. A letter was received from Comrade Debs, thanking the State Committee for their invitation to visit this state during the campaign, and stating that his plans, not being definitely settled for this fall, he could not promise at this time to arrange dates for New York. This matter was laid over. Communications were received from Comrade Mayes, candidate for Attorney-General, and Comrade Vail. Comrade William Thurston Brown, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, sent request that the tour being arranged for him in this state include many towns where there are no party organizations. He says the working people of the state all want to hear Socialist speakers. Request referred to Committe on Speakers and Tours.

Buffalo Active.

Buffalo reports that they have a flourishing Social Democratic Club and expects a very lively campaign. Comrade F. Spear is the present organizer, and Comrade L. Slotkin secretary.

Request was read from National Secretary Greenbaum for list of locals in the state. Bill of $5, being balance due to Socialist Literature Company, was ordered paid. The Financial Secretary was instructed to investigate all old accounts which may be outstanding and the bills when presented. Appeal was received from National Executive Committee calling for financial aid for the striking miners. Bill of $1.20 for expenses of corresponding secretary of the State Committee was ordered paid.

The Financial Secretary reported receipts of $88 and disbursements of $116.88 since last meeting; that a few of the campaign subscription lists were now being received. Comrade Wood gave notice that, inasmuch as he had been elected Organizer of Local New York, he could not attend to the duties of Financial Secretary of the State Committee, and would resign at the next meeting. Moved that Comrade Neppel, treasurer of State Committee, be notified, and assist Comrade Wood in preparing books for the Auditing Committee. The Committee on Literature reported that Comrade Hanford's new leaflet, "What Workingmen's Votes Can Do," has been ordered printed, and will be ready for distribution throughout the state this week; that 50,000 of these leaflets had been ordered as a first edition; also that 100,000 cards have been ordered, part of which will be delivered this week. On motion committee was instructed to send packages of these leaflets to the locals in towns where our candidate for governor is to speak. Comrade Slobodin was instructed to make arrangements with Chas. H. Kerr & Co., of Chicago, to print not less than 25,000 booklets containing New York state platform, pictures of candidates for state offices, letters of acceptance, or extracts therefrom, of the various candidates, together with other original campaign matter. Motion made and carried to request Comrade Jonas to write a leaflet for the campaign, and that 25,000 of these be printed. The date on which Comrade Jonas will begin his tour of the state was fixed as September 15. Secretary reported that enlarged emblem had been sent to the Secretary of State, with the request that our emblem on the official ballot be as large as the legal limit. Adjourned to meet Monday, August 18.

The State Committee met August 18, with Comrade Phillips in the chair. Present were Slobodin, Reich, Bub, Wood, and Abbott. Godfrey Lehner was present as the delegate elected to the State Committee by Local Yonkers.

Reports Show General Activity.

Correspondence was read from various locals throughout the state.

Newburgh reported holding two open-air meetings, with Robert Paine of Hoboken as speaker.

Troy reported intention to nominate a county and local ticket.

Long Island City sent for one hundred membership cards, and reported new activity.

Peekskill reported that all preparations were being made for a big meeting for Hanford.

Johnstown also reported work done for the Hanford meeting, and requested lithographs of state candidates.

Rochester reported an active campaign carried on in that city by Organizer Spring, and requested more speakers. New headquarters have been opened in Rochester in a conspicuous part of the city. Five new members were taken in at last meeting of the local, and a new branch is being organized. Plans are on foot to raise a big campaign fund.

Buffalo sent for propaganda literature.

Fort Edward corresponded regarding senatorial and congressional nominations.

Vote on fraternal delegate to Canadian Socialist Convention was received from Fort Edward, Catskill, Newburgh, Ticonderoga, Utica, Long Island City, Troy, Highland Falls, Peekskill, Rochester and Yonkers. Vote on new state constitution was received from Catskill, Ticonderoga, Cold Spring, Long Island City, Troy, Highland Falls, Rochester, Yonkers, and Buffalo. Financial reports were received from Utica, Catskill, and Richmond Borough.

For National Committeeman.

For National Committeeman, in place of Job Harriman, resigned, the following were nominated: F. A. Sieverman by Troy and Yonkers; L. D. Abbott by Ticonderoga; Morris Hillquit by Rochester.

State Organizer Spring reported on work done in Rochester, Batavia, Buffalo, and Syracuse.

The Secretary reported that Hanford was having good meetings in the state, and that a tour was being arranged for Brown. Correspondence regarding meetings in New York State for Debs and Hagerty was also read, and put on file.

Finances and Literature.

Financial Secretary Wood made financial report, showing that the receipts for the week were $143; expenses, $146 balance, $42.54. He reported that the total recipts since he had assumed office were $387.91; total expenses, $374.64; cash in hand, $22.27. Subscriptions received during the week amounted to $28; total subscriptions to date, $63.54.

Herman Reich reported, as Literature Secretary, that subscription lists had been sent to all the locals in the state; and that a new propaganda leaflet and card would soon be ready.

It was decided to issue a thirty-two page booklet for the state campaign, to be published by the Comrade Publishing Company, with cuts of candidates, etc. One hundred thousand agitation leaflets were also ordered.

Comrades Bauerberg and Lehner were present from Local Yonkers to inquire regarding a resolution passed by Westchester County and sent to The Worker, but not published therein. Reich and Wood were appointed a committee look into this matter.

It was decided to hire a clerical assistant, in co-operation with the City Executive Committee, to help Comrade Reich in sending out campaign literature.

SERVES THEM RIGHT.

The Louisville unionists have got into a nasty muss. They invited Mayor Grainger to participate in the Labor Day exercises, and on the same day that he accepted the molders in his foundry were forced to go on strike, their demand for a 10 per cent. increase in wages having been denied. Now the boys are all talking at once. It is bad policy to monkey with capitalist politicians' buzz saws.—Williamsport Statesman.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Socialist Activity in the Strike State.

Seven New Locals Formed and Old Ones Gaining in Membership — Tickets Nominated — Agitation Lively and Wide-spread.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., August 18.—Regular meeting of the State Committee held on above date, Comrade Geo. J. Felder presiding. J. J. Boyle presented credentials as a delegate from Delaware County and was seated. Charters upon application were granted to locals at Nanticoke, Polish, Luzerne, Lee Park, Gloster, all of Luzerne County, and Darby and Clifton Heights, Delaware County, with a membership of two hundred and eight. Mahanoy City added fifty members during the week, Summit Hill fifteen, Treskow fifty-four. The Treasurer reported two thousand membership dues cards had been issued by him since July 26. September 15 is the last day to return vote on the state constitution. A majority of the locals have reported adopting the constitution as a whole. August 26 is the last day to return the vote on fraternal delegate to Canada. From reports received to date Comrades Spargo, Wilshire, and Strambach lead the list in the order named.

Conventions.

Lackawanna County Convention held at Carbondale, August 14. A full ticket was nominated. Schuylkill County Convention held at Mahanoy City, August 16. Twenty-nine delegates were present. In this county the capitalist militia is quartered to help fill the mines with scabs for the operators. The only purpose they have served is to arouse in the minds of the workers a strong desire to fill the public offices with men of their own class. A local paper reporting the convention, said: "Among the delegates were many former Republicans and Democrats; no tariff or money question seems now to divide them as of old." The following ticket was nominated: Congress, Thomas J. Lannon; State Senator, M. J. Lynch; Recorder, John Dougherty; Register, W. C. Gibson; Treasurer, David Davis; District Attorney, Frank Hooven; Clerk of Court, E. D. Feny; Legislature, First District—W. Banks; Third District, C. P. Gilden; Commissioners, Alex. Lindsey and Isaac Phillips.

John Dougherty of Coaldale was chosen chairman of County Committee.

Fifth Legislative District Convention of Luzerne County was held at Pittston to-day, August 18. Sixth Legislative District Convention of Luzerne County will be held at Hazleton, August 19, 2 p. m. Preparations are being made for county conventions in Lycoming and Delaware counties.

Agitation.

In Philadelphia lectures are given every Sunday evening at headquarters. A new branch has been organized, composed mainly of members of the Socialist League. An open-air meeting will be held August 23 at 5544 Haverford avenue. Comrades Long and Barnes will be the speakers. Meetings will be held on the streets every night till the close of the campaign, beginning September 2.

The comrades of York had a very successful meeting at Eberton on August 15. Comrades Grady, Lewis, and Gladfelter were the speakers. The prospects of a local in that place are good. August 23 a meeting will be held at Dover; August 30 at Abbottstown, York County.

Delaware County comrades are gratified with the success attending their efforts. Meetings and debates are being arranged for a number of towns. A very successful meeting was held at Darby, August 14. On August 21, Comrade Parker will speak at Media.

Sumneytown reports adding to their membership and desire a speaker. They are distributing a large quantity of literature with good effect.

Erie is active and they have a great deal of faith in their ability to send Comrade Geo. Ward, a cigarmaker, to the legislature.

New Castle comrades are going to make Labor Day last a week, with a program of Socialist agitation, the like of which has never before been presented to any community. W. Thurston Brown will speak Sunday, August 31; Comrades Brown and A. M. Dewey will be the orators on Labor Day; Tuesday evening Comrade Brown will speak on the "Diamond" in the centre of the town; Wednesday and Thursday H. Gaylord Wilshire will speak at the sam eplace, while Comrade Slayton, candidate for Governor, will fill out the week.

Comrade Slayton is a delegate to the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters to be held in Atlanta, Ga., during September, after which he will go to the coal fields and remain till election.

Comrade Chas. Ufert of New Jersey, during the week has been speaking twice a day in the Lackawanna district at Simpson, Mayfield, Richmondsdale, Vandling, Carbondale, and a number of other places. He will be occupied in and about Scranton during the coming week. He reports a lively interest everywhere, and says nothing can stem the tide in our direction, except lack of literature and cessation of agitation.

F. W. Fischler of Philadelphia and Comrade Boltovski of Chicago, both Polish speakers, in response to urgent demands, will report at Wilkes-Barre headquarters to-morrow. Comrade Fischler for two weeks and Comrade Boltovski till Election Day. A constant and increasing demand comes up for Polish literature. The Polish societies of New York City have decided to contribute $25 and ask this committee for a like amount to circulate a special edition of the Polish paper, "Robotnik," which suggestion will be carried out as soon as funds permit.

Comrade L. Goasiou will go to the Lackawanna district for two weeks, beginning August 30 at Carbondale.

Great Enthusiasm.

Comrades Collins and Slick's reports are replete with enthusiasm and progress made. The following places were visited: Mahanoy City, Silver Brook, Gloster, Eberdale, Lansford, and Hazleton. Mother Jones and Collins spoke to immense audiences at the last two places named. At Gloster an Italian, a Hungarian, and a Polish speaker translated the address of Comrade Collins into the respective languages and one hundred and twenty-eight persons joined the party at that meting. Miners' bands and drum corps are at the disposal of the Socialists for meetings in nearly all the towns. Comrade Collins will leave for home about the 27th of August, but will return again in a few weeks for the balance of the campaign.

Comrade Morrison I. Swift, who has been rendering valuable service in and about Wilkes-Barre, having spoken in all the towns in upper Luzerne County, and who has graphically described the miners' position and plead his cause in many papers and periodicals, has been persuaded by the committe to make Hazleton his headquarters and take charge of the campaign in that locality, which he will do August 19. He will be ably assisted by the local comrades, Evans, Kennedy, and Dwyer.

The Worker has donated $20 to the committee, part expenses of Comrade Mailly for the time he was in Pennsylvania. Each week they have sent bundles of The Worker to the field gratis since the strike began, making a total of about 30,000 copies and leaflets and pamphlets to the value of $120. The State Committee highly appreciates this assistance and the more so as The Worker has promised to continue the weekly bundles till election.

A meeting will be held at the school house in Lattimer, September 10, the fifth anniversary of the massacre of the miners at that place by Sheriff Martin. Comrades Swift and Barnes will probably be the English speakers and Comrade Boltovski of Chicago will speak in the Polish language.

Tricks of Capitalist Politicians.

A Citizens' Alliance composed of business men, mine bosses and politicians—a secret organization—which in the early days of the strike cut some figure—whose purpose was to boycott everything in the nature of unionism and for the persecution and prosecution of the miners and their sympathizers on any pretext, is now impotent and tumbling to its doom. As a consequence of this Citizens' Alliance, a Workingmen's Alliance was formed, as an offset and to protect the workers from the Citizens' Alliance, into which thousands of the workers enrolled. This, however, is not all of the story. The Socialists have challenged every capitalist politician in sight. There has not been one capitalist political meting held in all that region, and there wil not be one until Election Day, for the miners will immediately insist upon Mr. Democrat or Republican debating with the Socialists and answering the posers that have been put to them, which they well know they cannot and dare not attempt to do; here then is the sequel, the capitalist politicans of both parties aided by a few ambitious union men have tried to have the Workingmen's Alliance enter the political field and nominate "good men," irrespective of party. But they are to be good men who favor the continuance of capitalism, the very thing that thousands of men enlisted in the Socialist Party are impatiently counting the days till election comes, to strike against it. Our speakers and comrades in the field assure us that this play of the politicians and the operators will fall flat. Socialism has gained such a foothold that this trick will not work.

Funds for Agitation.

Comrades, we need literature and money. Will you give it? There seems to be a misconception in many quarters that the State Committee of Pennsylvania gets some of the funds sent to Comrade Greenbaum, National Secretary. We desire to state that all all that is sent to the National Committee goes direct to he bread fund of the Miners' Union. We hope such contributions will be large and worthy of the Socialists of America; but we also hope to be able to take advantage of this grand opportunity for Socialist agitation among the miners and contributions for this purpose must be sent to our treasurer. Contributions for this purpose have been received to the amount of $153.70, bringing the total up to $478.90. List will be published next week. Send all contributions to J. Edelmann, Treasurer, 807 West Cambria street, Philadelphia.

HANFORD'S TOUR.

Ben Hanford, Social Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, will speak at the following cities on dates named:

Newburgh, Friday evening, August 22.
Catskill, Saturday evening, August 23.
Troy, Monday evening, August 25.
Albany, Tuesday evening, August 26.
Schenectady, Thursday evening, August 28.
Gloversville, Friday evening, August 29.
Johnstown, Saturday, evening, August 30.

LIES ABOUT THE STRIKERS.

A Socialist in the Strike Field Exposes the Falsehoods of the Capitalist Press—The Truth about the Military Regime at Shenandoah.

(Special Correspondence to The Worker.)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 16.—It is a glorious thing to have the state pay for your picnics. If you can go out and pose as brave heroes before the country at public expense while you are merely enjoying a pleasing picnic without danger to yourself and with no hardship, you surely are in clover. But if you can draw pay for your spree, besides eating and traveling at the expense of the state you do better yet. Such is the delightful position of the state troops now idling in the mining regions.

These pasteboard heroes are drawing $1.50 a day, the common privates; the officers of course receive more, until the great general of the picnickers is rewarded for enjoying himself, at the rate of $15 a day. The cost to the state is nearly $4,000 per diem. This is a neat sum to pay men for going out to play soldier. So far the total burden on the taxpayers has been over $50,000 for these decorated sporting gentry.

They were brought into the region without just cause, but no harm has been done by their coming. On the contrary, several advantages have been gained by the strikers through their presence, advantages of great importance.

First of all, it has been shown that it was not lack of police protection that prevented the mines from opening. This has been again and again put forward as the reason why the mines could not resume. It was false, and is now proved false. When this excuse is offered again under similar circumstances the fraud will be clear. Here is an army to guard the mines and more regiments will be sent if demanded, yet no men work. It convicts the operators of duplicity, for they have prentended that they had plenty of men if it were safe to use them. It shows moreover the towering strength of the union sentiment.

The New York "Times" has repeatedly and repeatedly written in this vein: "The employers refuse to make terms with their former employees, which is their privilege, but they equally refuse to employ others, which is not their privilege. With large numbers of their experienced men eager for re-employment, and thousands of others ready to return when any advantage can result from expressing a readiness to do so, not a pound of coal is being raised. . . ." Once for all this kind of statement is exploded.

Second, it has made the conclusion plain that the strike region might be filled with troops without in any way interfering with the progress of the strike. Where a strike depends on violence troops interfere, but where there is scarcely any violence that is not trumped up and fabricated it is a different matter. The object in hurrying troops to the scene is to give the public the impression that riot prevails and is only hindered from bursting by the soldiers. This is expected to make the public hostile to the strikers. But if riot does not prevail the presence of troops cannot obstruct the peaceful progress of the strike just the same as if the regiments were at home earning their living. If this is henceforth understood it will put a new coloring on the military manipulation of strikes, the manœuver of hurrying soldiery to the field when a capitalist's drunken private policeman shoots at a crowd and starts a riot, as at Duryea.

For those skeptical as to the insane, trouble-breeding, cowardly conduct of these private deputies let me cite a case which will probably escape general notice. My authority for it is the Wilkes Barre "News." The affair occurred only two nights ago. Some boys prepared an effigy and placed it against a window of the Pettibone colliery. To one of the deputies inside who observed it later it wore the aspect of a striker peering in from the ghostly darkness at him. He bravely cried out several times to the supposed striker to get away or he would shoot, and as the form did not move he fired a bullet full into the face and the figure rolled to the ground. "I shot a striker. I shot a striker," then called the deputy.

Now suppose it had been a man. Would looking in at a colliery window against orders justify his being shot dead? This is a type of the men we have here as private mine guards; men either anxious to murder or men so easily scared out of their wits by a face at the window in the dark that they sink into a nervous frenzy and shoot while in the fit. This also is a good example of how riots readily arise. Had there been strikers about, the work of this fool might have caused general trouble. The so-called riot at Duryea yesterday originated from similar hysterical conduct on the part of some washery guards filled with whiskey. One striker insisted on coming within the stockade and they lost their tempers or heads and opened a fusilade. Now the owners of that washery demand troops. A sure recipe for obtaining troops is this: Have a band of crazy deputies on your premises with instructions to murder on sight, and you will get troops.

Third, the Shenandoah fiasco has made the military a laughing stock. They cut a ridiculous figure, until they settled down to frankly enjoy themselves and stop inventing midnight stone throwings at them by secret societies of foreign anarchists and the like, who were so dumb and cared so little for their lives that they would walk up to bushes within short rifle range of the excited soldiers and volley stones at them. These fabrications were very funny, but they furnished an appearance of usefulness to the rifle-clad heroes and gave a hungry crowd of newspaper scours horrible information to telegraph.

The foulest soldiery act of libel on the strikers is yet to be told. Three of these noble protectors of law escaped from the ranks and went out for a night of pleasure. They collected three women and went to a village called Frackville, where they stayed until morning. Being afraid of punishment in camp they begged 'Squire McGinniss to "telephone to General Gobin that they were in his house surrounded by a crowd of "dagoes," which the 'Squire, who must be a valiant representative of truth and law, kindly did. From half-past 3 o'clock that night till 7 a. m. they stayed peacefully at the Depot House, Frackville.

The story that went out to the press through the invention of these military braves, touched up by reporters, was that they were chased by a howling mob at a killing pace for miles. The mob grew till there were two hundred and fifty at their heels, and as they passed houses new recruits joined the rout. The soldiers, who were unarmed, lost their road and their pursuers endeavored to drive them into the laurel brush, "where scores of mine holes filled with noxious gases promised them horrible death." At last they overtook 'Squire McGinniss' carriage and were taken in and borne to his home. The mob located them and threatened to burn the house. The 'Squire went out and harangued the crowd several times during the night to avert disaster.

This unblushing lie went out through the country to defame the mine workers. We have to thank the lofty military spirit of the guardians of Shenandoah for this lurid defamation. The producers of this lie against a town of citizens deserve a year each in jail, and the newspaper men who swallowed and promulgated and embellished such a story should be given six months each. It is time to put an end to the situation where any untruth may be sold broadcast with impunity if it relates to workingmen.

MORRISON I. SWIFT.

PERSECUTING LABOR EDITORS.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., August 15.—Patrick McGarvey and Victor Dougherty, editors of the "Trade Unionist" of Hazleton, were arrested to-day on five counts of criminal libel, the charges being made by Luther C. Smith, superintendent for Coxe Bros. & Company, who says that attacks were made upon him in five consecutive issues of their paper. They were held in $2,500 bail each. They have already been sued for heavy damages in civil suits.

It is evident that the Coal Kings and the other capitalists allied with them are determined to crush the labor press if they can, by fair means or foul.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

To the Socialists of the State of New York.

Comrades:—As the time for gubernatorial and congressional elections draws nearer, the contest between the Social Democratic Party and the two old parties of Capital grows sharper. In order that the workers' side of the political question may be seen in its true light, the State Committee proposed to organize in every locality and set the Socialists to work. The principles of our party must be explained to the workingmen throughout the state. One important thing that we have to do, in which every comrade or sympathizer can help, is to put our party literature into the hands of every wage-worker in the state before Election Day—and the sooner the better.

The State Committee has issued a leaflet written by Ben Hanford, our candidate for Governor, for especial use during the campaign. It contains the following headings:

1. What Workingmen's Votes Can Do.
2. Benefits and Limitations of Trade Unionism.
3. How to Spend Five Thousand a Year and Keep It.
4. What to Do About It.
5. How to Do It.
6. Vote for Your Own Class.
7. What the Social Democratic Party Would Do.

The leaflet also bears the party name and emblem and the state ticket and platform.

Locals are requested to send in their orders immediately for a supply of this leaflet, which will be sent postpaid at the following rates: Two thousand copies, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

The State Committee can also supply the following German pamphlets:

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas." Price, 5 cents; ten or more copies, at 2½ cents each.

"Municipal Forderungen der Social Democratie." Price, 5 cents; ten for 25 cents; fifty for $1; one hundred for $1.50.

"Die Mission der Arbeiter Klasse," by Charles H. Vail. Price, 5 cents; one hundred for $2.

Send orders, with cash, to the Literature Agent of the State Committee, H. Reich, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

It is good always to find a funny side to serious things and we think Socialists will find cause for much merriment in what we have here to present.

A Roman Catholic paper, the Pittsburg "Observer," in a recent editorial bewails the fact that, by giving people an opportunity to read, Andrew Carnegie is unwittingly making Socialists. The "Observer" is also horrified to find that Socialists teach that the workers should receive the full product of their labor, and emits the following warning wail under the heading, "Promoters of Unquiet:"

"Mr. Carnegie, formerly of this city, has aided thousands of worthy charities. Let us state frankly that he has done much good. The 'Observer' believes with equal sincerity that, unintentionally, he has allowed his generosity to be used for the purpose of promoting much evil.

"How is this true? By the gifts of libraries. He has given away millions to found libraries, great or small, in great or small cities. His settled conviction seems to be that books will make men intelligent and happy. He seems to think that the more men read the better citizens they will become.

"Mr. Carnegie is simply mistaken. It all depends on the kind of books, just as it does on the kind of food a man eats. If a man eat that which is wholesome, he will keep health and prosper. His neighbors, by doing likewise, will likewise prosper and good citizenship will result. If unwholesome food be eaten all are poisoned.

"Now, does Mr. Carnegie know—does he even dream—that, indirectly, his great wealth is being used to spread Socialism in the United States? Does he know that he is probably doing more to spread this poison of the mind than all the Socialist agitators in the country combined? We rather think he does not.

"Yet let him go into any of this $25,- libraries, anywhere in the land and look at the tremendous number of books on Socialism which the trustees all of these institutions manage to select. The 'Observer' has a working acquaintance with some twenty of these in various sections of the country, and deliberately asserts that Mr. Carnegie's wealth is rapidly causing the death of the American republic. There are books on the shelves of these libraries which practically teach that the toiler is entitled to the entire profit on his labor, as well as a living wage, and there are other books which teach that the laborer is entitled to the entire product of his toil. There are books teaching even worse.

"Now, does anybody suppose these books go unread? They certainly do not. Go into any public library when you will and you will find a certain kind of workingman there (thank God, there are few Catholics as yet) and this kind of workingmen is reading Socialistic books. He is filling his mind with unrest and with un-Christian ideals. Most of these works insidiously poison the minds of men against Christianity. As a result, most non-Catholic workingmen of the country are becoming antagonistic to the churches. All over the country preachers are wondering why workingmen are keeping away from the churches. Let them go down to those libraries and examine what workingmen are reading and they will learn. Then, perhaps, they will quit arraigning the Catholic church and get to work against the common foe of Christian faith.

"Yet is not spreading Socialism revolutionary and otherwise, a queer business for Mr. Carnegie to engage in? Is not putting before immature minds books that inculcate the principles of anarchy, a still stranger business? Bad books are just as dangerous as are dangerous companions. It is sad to see a well-meaning man unintentionally aiding a propaganda which seeks to thrive by goading the masses to frenzy."

So we see that the "Observer" thinks that it is unChristian and anarchistic to teach "that the laborer is entitled to the entire product of his toil." This comical capitalistic-Christian paper is sure that Christianity would be destroyed if the man who works got the full fruit of his labor. According to the "Observer" the church could not exist if the capitalists were not allowed to rob the workers. Why is that? And what do you think Christ would think of this kind of Christianity?

We are pleased to find the following editorial paragraph in the columns of our contemporary, the "Labor Journal" of Zanesville, Ohio:

"The fearless and enthusiastic New York Worker quotes what we recently said about child labor in the South, and adds that political action alone would lessen the evil. That is all right, brother, but you will find the trade union a powerful piece of machinery for the education of men to the proper political action."

The Worker quite agrees with the "Labor Journal" in this opinion. The intelligent and class-conscious workingman should belong both to the union of his craft and to the Socialist Party, the party of his class. The unions and the Socialist Party should work hand in hand, by their different methods for the emancipation of Labor.

THE MILWAUKEE CIRCULAR.

The circular issued by the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, which we reprint in full in another column, is interesting in more ways than one. The circular is not so definite in its expressions as we might wish; we are left somewhat in the dark as to the exact intentions of the originators—whether to launch a new Socialist party (for certainly the principles laid down are those of Socialism), or to coordinate and clarify the local labor parties which have sprung up in various places, or merely to provide for a system of discussion and education on political matters in the trade unions.

It is hardly necessary to say that the Socialist Party has nothing to do with issuing the circular, although some of its authors are undoubtedly party members. The Socialist Party already has its organization, national, state, and local, and there is no apaprent necessity for a dual organization. Any party based on the principles enunciated in the circular must be a Socialist party, and nothing can be gained by dividing its forces or complicating its machinery. On the other hand, and for the same reason, we do not seriously fear such a movement. The security of our party is in its adherence to Socialist principles; so long as we are true to our ideals, any division of forces can be only temporary.

In another aspect, the affair is most encouraging, for it indicates the steady growth of Socialist ideas—even though not always recognized as being Socialistic—among the workingmen of every trade and of every part of the country.

President Gompers seems to be seriously concerned about the Milwaukee proposition, and this may perhaps be taken as a strong point in its favor. President Gompers has issued a counter-circular, warning all unions against endorsing the Milwaukee plan. It is too late in the day, however, for any leader's protest to have a serious effect, for the rank and file are thinking for themselves.

—"Alas!" sighed the poor woman, who had just closed the door on the deputation of charitable folk who had called to show her how to make a cooling, cheering dessert from the remains of a seven-course dinner—"alas! the rich we have always with us."—Baltimore American.

GENIUS OR "GRAFT?"

Which Word Describes the Mental Ability of Our "Captains of Industry?"

Many people are given to crediting the greater capitalists with overpowering genius. Because some members of the capitalist class have performed a real function in organizing industry, and because the organization and centralization of industry will lead to its socialization, even some Socialists fall into this error. That the great trust magnate possesses a certain kind of predatory genius is true; but that the scientist, the author, the inventor, the physician, the thinker possess a much wider, greater, and higher mental ability is certain. As was pointed out in a recent issue of The Worker, it is because the operations of the capitalist bring him such enormous wealth, not because they require a high order of genius, that they are so impressive. These men are commonly called "captains of industry." They can be more accurately described as a gang of glorified "grafters."

The real nature of the sublimated genius so commonly attributed to these industrial pirates is admirably explained in an article by Richard Le Gallienne in the July number of "Wilshire's Magazine," as follows:

"When Mr. Morgan the other day said in court, obviously without any affectation, that he saw nothing extraordinary in a transaction of ten million dollars, he said nothing extraordinary, though a capitalized press and a capitalized world may gape in astonishment. It was merely the talk of a certain class of brain at home with its material. * * *There are many parallels hardly less astonishing to the man who does something else. You may, perhaps, sometimes stop a moment and watch the huge cranes hoisting tons of stone to the top of some new sky-scraper. It is marvellous, you say. How ever do they do it! But the architect sees nothing surprising in these vast masses of iron and stone. To him it is all in the day's work. A special training has made it a familiar feat to him; and, as a matter of fact, there is in it little more than a multiplication of force and an accumulation of material, which comes primarily of the money to purchase both. A little building may be essentially far more wonderful, and have called out much rarer gifts in the man who made it. But mere bulk naturaly impresses and even terrifies, however really insignificant it may be. Leaving out the work of nature, bulk in the works of man can only mean two things—really only one thing—money and labor. The pyramids, we are told, were built with the sweat and blood of myriads of slaves. Any fool could have designed the pyramids. They were only rendered possible by an inexhaustible supply of cheap human labor. Technically they are monuments to forgotten Egyptian kings. Actually, they are, so to say, anthills of stone, whose real significance is the power of money and the cheapness of human industry. They meant no special brains in the architects who designed them or the kings whose ridiculous vanity ordered them.

"It is just the very same with the pyramids of dollars which certain American financiers are at the moment causing to be erected in their own honor. The colossal fortunes of Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Rockefeller, and Mr. Morgan do not really for a moment imply that any of these gentlemen are really cleverer financiers than their predecessors—anything like so original, for example, as Mr. John Law who blew the South Sea Bubble. They make a greater impression merely because the chessboard is bigger, and the game for higher stakes. There is no more skill in manipulating a million dollars than in manipulating ten cents. The real skill is in the million dollars. Indeed, the more million dollars you have, the easier becomes the game. In fact, very soon it plays itself. Your real financier is the poor man.

"That America was to be the land of financiers was a foregone conclusion. With all its vast natural resources, the American nation must surely have been the stupidest nation in the world if it missed being the richest. But the point I wish to make is that America's wealth means no specially terrifying genius in the men who have made it, and no essential originality of method."

THE DEVIL AND CARNEGIE.

The devil was out for a walk one day
And called on Carnegie—over the way.
"What favor," said he, "my little Scotchman,
Can I do for the big trust clan?"

Now Andy came from a country cold
Where Tam O'Shanter grew so bold,
And out he spoke, while he stroked his chin,
And answered the devil with a grin.

"You know you bought my soul, erstwhile
And filled it full of cunning and guile,
And gave me stock in your red hot place
And loaned me this hypocritical face.

"I skin and rob and plunder the poor
And shoot them down if they ask for more.
But all the while I throw a sop
The grumble of the press to stop!

"You taught me how to make a haul
By robbing Peter to pay Paul.
Now just one more good sleight of hand
And then I'll come to join your band.

I'm getting old and my knees are weak
And once in Hell I cannot squeak.
Now pledge me this before I go—"
And the devil said "Yes! I'll do just so."

"Now then," said Andy; "this is it.
You know old Dives in the pit—?
After you'd let him have his bum
He died for water upon his thumb!

"Now, here's your pledge—you must agree—
A moment ago you promised me—
When we trusts into hades flock
Let us take down some watered stock!"

T. W. S.

The absorbing question with the democrats now is to find a paramount issue. The real issue with the democrats is how to get the republicans out and the democrats in, so they can have a whack at the spoils, but of course they won't admit so openly. No matter which of the capitalist parties wins, the workers are bound to lose.—The New Era.

SOME REVOLUTIONARY ASPECTS OF SOCIALISM.

BY PETER E. BURROWES.

The banner of Socialism is the banner of evolution, spelt with an R. When any given process has reached its maturity and the time has come for the commencement of another process the act of change is the act of revolution. This process is a universal fact taking place on larger or smaller lines everywhere about us; and what we call a striking or a great truth is but our perception of one of these completed processes. For, though we utter truth in parts, which are apparently isolate and complete of themselves, there is really no such thing as an isolate truth any more than there is an isolate life or an isolate event in history. This is the basic thought of organization. A living chain of continuity finds all human things together.

But all that and the statement of it are, however, two different things. Philosophers have lived, together with all other men, in the midst of such natural and social unfoldings and yet failed for ages to find for themselves or the others any continuously unfolding statement to correspond with this actual dialetic chain of life's experience. It has taken so long for the events we know to stamp themselves as a whole upon the single mind; it has taken so long before the single mind was able to record the larger social movements around us. To get into this condition of efficiency seems, however, to constitute the actual necessary preparation and fitness of a Socialist agitator, teacher, and organizer; to-day by far the highest type of intellectual usefulness in this world.

Socialism is revolutionary. The statement of Socialism is therefore a revolutionary statement. But the two modes are very different. To reduce any proposition to its logical ultimate is to do with verbal propositions what the larger life of society could not do with its subordinate manifestations. For instance, if in the theological world of sentences I say God has appointed to every one the day of his death, the logical revolutionary statement of that proposition is to proscribe all physic and punish the doctors for blasphemy. Or, if in the economic world of sentences I say that it is right for a private man to own and control any property he can get, the logical revolutionary end of that statement is that democracy must go. Or, if it is said that any man can, by his own will, become a good man, then all who are not good are bad. Or, if by his own will one can become the best man in town therefore also he is the freest from mental error, and one man can become the best in the world and thereby become infallible. And to have one infallible man in the world would warrant us in putting into jail any or all other men who differed from him. A fallacy reduced thus is logic; a condition thus pursued is revolution. Verbally, truth is not susceptible to this rigid treatment. But, though truth may not appear practicable always when so pursued to its ultimate, it is helpful and sometimes luminous to be heroically logical, and it hastens the actual evolution of life to let them evolute through our heads in the processes of reasoning.

Socialism is revolutionary in the sense of its comprehensiveness as compared with minor movements and philosophies; and it is revolutionary in the sense of surprise or novelty. But in the sense of violent and hasteful change, the "evil" sense under which the evil minds of the world's evil despots have always sought to bury it, Socialism is not revolutionary.

The novelty of Socialism is no credit to the intellectual life of the world. Mankind surely had some right to collective teaching long before the present time; but the thinkers of the world never did, or never could, go much further than other hired men from their bread and butter, and so, with a few dim exceptions, the modern machine has brought into the world the collectivist thinkers.

One specially novel feature of Socialism, as compared with the cloud thinking around us, is to be observed in the sources from which it is derived. Among many movements dealing with human life on earth, it is the first in history that proposes constructively to confine that earthly business to the earth where it belongs; and so the roots of Socialist philosophy are to be found on this planet, the history, the experience and the horizon which are really ours. Socialists do not submit human affairs to the anarchy, ignorance and superstition represented by the king's arbitrary will, or any out of the world authority invented by despots. Whatever the spiritual nature of man may be, Socialists perceive that it cannot be in conflict with his physical life. The sources, the nourishment and the limits of the soul are all to be found within the physical universe, its knowing and its known. This restraint of itself, and limitation to the boundaries of time and sense by Socialism, has produced a vastness of increase in practical scope about equal to all that has been cut off from the theoretically infinite end of human affairs.

What realm of human interest can there be that is left untouched by Socialist philosophy? The former concepts of life by ordinance only, touched each other sometimes and lightly; this, by organization, can fuse them all. The theologist picks up and uses art and music by bending and specializing them to his own purpose; and so is it with the politician and the militarist (the money motive has not yet found any art so mean that can express it); but this recognition of one life in all the universe and the people, with its one day's sunshine at a time for everyone; the glory of all for each, the glory of each for all; the earth one common homestead and a progression of the race, spiritually, in keeping with the equities wherewith we environ one another; this, instead of bending art to itself, breathes into art the great soul of the race, so that art for the first time, with Socialist soul in it, has earth and all humanity for its basis. And this enlargement given to art extends to all the imperfectly specialized duties of men, such as healing, feeding, pleading, teaching, comforting, stimulating, adorning, rewarding, controlling, obeying, subduing, uniting and all the other active relations that we are called upon through life to exercise for or upon each other. The scope of Socialism, because it flows from the heart of the world's life, touches and inspires every human interest and reaches with renewing vitality every extremity.

Socialism presents also a novel side of revolution in the training and sources from which its teachers are coming. The factories, apparently fitted to drive the humanity out of us, appear only to be driving us all out to humanity. The so-called ignorance of the uncolleged man is waking up to find what a fraud, for the most part, the wisdom of the wise has been. To be one with the whole nation, one with the race, takes the overshadow of the small great man from his life. He begins to think from the common source as soon as he discovers the meaning which Socialism gives to equality; and how wisely it strips individual freedom and liberty of the inhuman falsehood by which the white twentieth century laborer has been brought into a life-long bondage imposed more for his natural needs and affections—capitalism ordaining that bread and offspring may only be bought by cruelmixion. So the little meadow birds we sometimes hear in their agony of fear fluttering over and around our heads crying us away from that spot in the grass where lies the nest of eggs. The laborer, alleged to be free, is challenged by his master to go where he will. Well the world knows how empty of liberty is all the universe to a man whose bread and home and family are here in wage slavery with life and death in the hands of the dollar.

The revolutionary scope of our propaganda is better understood by its enemies than by many of its friends, and so we are living in a day of strange revolutionary combinations, arrayed against Socialism. While Chicago and Berlin may take different sides on questions relating to pork, you will never find them to differ on questions relating to labor. New England senators who gush nobly on various sides of many questions seldom gush nobly on this, but with all other senators they gush together on the un-Americanism of allowing the laborer to do a little boycotting like his masters; or to get a little of that protection which the great trusts find to be so useful and patriotic in defending their own infantile millions. This universal alliance of the profit-mongers of all nations and creeds against Socialism is the external side of our revolution. The international virtue of our cause must indeed mean much, against which all diabolism has for once agreed to combine. Alliances are taking place against us in the world's great menagerie of profit mongers which no one could have foreseen a century ago. The wage-masters of every country are aware that their community of interest in all their activities primarily and implicitly are against the proletariat. The cause of labor contains within it all that they have to overcome; all their other social evils are simplified and made assailable in the organizations of labor. The workmen simply accepts this revolution which the capitalist has matured for him and says, "Let it come, but let it come wisely, at the ballot boxes, or you shall throw off your mask of democracy."

The necessity of having a class of world slaves is to aristocracy a first principle of civilization, and thus have they fallen into that happy condition of confidence by which they regard their own money class interests and the interests of all mankind as one—a proper state of mind for the Armageddon, the state of mind in which the world's two all comprehending classes must finally meet to settle the class conflicts of the ages, and give to the nations of the earth one life.

The training of the selfishness of single persons into class interests; that is, to single eyed class selfishness, is the education of man which shall ultimate in the loss of all but one interest in the world; and of all but one self to be looked after in the economics of the social man.

The collectivist thought, in terms of which, more or less, all the moralists of the world have been compelled to express themselves, must ever be, under competition, the most revolutionary of the world's thoughts. The explanation of this strange conflict between the moralists' universal consent and their universal practice is to be found in three causes: first, in the circumstances which hitherto, everywhere, seems to have made unrestrained private property fundamental to civilization; and, second, in the great big lie of inhering personal rights against society, whatever magnitude the property or the vice which got it, may assume; and the third cause is to be found in the notion that personal property success is an incubator in which saintly chickens grow their wings. The third is the keynote of aristocracy and anarchy; that is, of the whole inverted and perverted private property state of life; the grandparent of all the turbulencies of the upper mob.

Socialism as an economic explanation deals radically with this by denying that mental or moral qualities of persons can be measured in quantitative terms of the property they have swiped. It explains that the mind is rather a reflex of the environment; than is the environment of the mind. And this contra statement, though denied on Sundays, is recognized in practice, by every sane man the world over, for the other six days of the week. Yet the Socialist does not affirm this truth in its inflexible totality. He affirms the influence of economic pressure upon all other humanics; but he does not hold that economic determinism in a fatalistic way turns out history as an organ grinder turns out tunes. On the contrary he affords to the world by his ceaseless moral activities a proof that the contemplation of man as the subject of his environments is a more powerful source of moral energy than is the contemplation of man as a stranger here and a mere pilgrim to another world, especially after that way of contemplating him has become only a genteel creed and a genteel insincerity.

The Socialist knows that, set over against the unreasonableness of the individual antagonism to and domination of the collective life, there is a collective conscience.

Thus the primitive selfhood of persons, a thing before wholly irreconcilable in former times with the rights or claims of other selfs, has, through economic evolution, become the very material out of which alone a permanent human self-preserving civilization can be established; and its father is organization and its mother is machinery.

NATURE OF SOCIALIST ORGANIZATION.

The troubles of the Union Labor Party furnishes the Socialist Party with some valuable lessons. A new organization, or rather a new party, it sprang into power and prestige at a single bound. It had no organization. Depending on a general enthusiasm, having no radical principles, being chiefly a party of protest, it needed no organization to achieve immediate and temporary success. But since the events which provoked the uprising of labor—for such it was—have been left further and further behind in the swift course of time, the opposition and the time-servers have rendered it necessary that an organization shall be effected if the Union Labor Party is not to go the way of its predecessors and disappear in defeat, dissension and betrayal. Unfortunately for it, it seems that organization has been too long neglected, and that the primary election will see its capture by the traitors whose only use for it is to lift themselves into positions of political power, and eventually to scuttle the ship which sailed them into the city hall haven. The political party of labor cannot be a party in which an executive committee of fifteen or twenty-five constitutes the whole thing and has not an organized constituency which can exercise authority over it. The political party of labor must be as widely, as numerously and as democratically organized as the trade unions. It cannot be built merely upon the resentment of men for individual specific acts of governmental tyranny. It cannot depend on the "mob spirit" which produces the enthusiasm of political campaigns. It cannot rely on one leader or any number of leaders for its inspiration. The political party of labor cannot spring full armed into the arena. It must grow. It must be builded. Its foundation must be sunk deep in some great principle underlying the whole fabric of political activity. To be enduring it must have for its basis the class, so that move they never so far they cannot get beyond it. It must be builded strong, the top part depending absolutely on the support of the fundament. The officers must always be subject to removal and instruction by the rank and file. The political party of labor must be composed not of a single committee, but of an organized mass, the organized working class. It must educate and organize continually and thoroughly. The rank and file must rule so that they may not be betrayed by leaders. They must be educated and made intelligent that they may not be betrayed by their own folly or indifference.

Enthusiasm for the party must not spring from resentment of single specific wrongs. There must be solid determination founded on conviction of the necessity and nobility of the party's aim. Enthusiasm must spring not from the personality of a popular leader, but well out from the people's hearts inspired by some glorious ideal. This is the meaning of the maxim phrase: "The emancipation of the working class must be the work of that class itself." The same laborious work, with its multiplicity of details and seeming pettiness of concerns, that goes into the organization of the unions, must be put into the upbuilding of the party of labor. Campaign activity is only an incident. The interim between elections must be well filled in by educational and organization meetings. The working class must be taught everything possible in regard to sociology, economics, history, and politics and must be organized thoroughly to decide its wants and enforce its will. This it must do itself. Gold is a constant menace if the work is left to a few leaders.

The Socialist Party is a working class revolutionary party, contesting the political field for the greatest prize—the earth. Its battle will be such as try men's souls. Conflicts of heroic proportions are inevitable. The capitalists will defend their privileges to the last extremity. The Socialist Party must be so thoroughly organized as to meet the ferocity of their attacks with the calm of security, the immovable assurance of triumphant strength. If, then, you are a Socialist, join the organization. Support it with your dues. Assist it with your counsel and active co-operation. We need every man. The cause expects each one to do his duty.—Advance.

NATURE OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

A labor party to be of any force must be governed by its membership, we have too many machine parties as it is, and in order to govern wisely that membership must understand the obligations which rest upon it.

Victory is not alone the thing to be desired, but a victory supported by a rank and file which cannot be shaken. This requires patient work and years of it. The trade union movement has grown upon the same basis; neither did it grow up in a night, but only after many sacrifices on the part of those who toiled for its success.

The mere refusal on the part of the Socialists to consider the formation of an office hunting party shows that they are engaged in the same strife which surrounded the early trade unionists.

The temptations are many, but the class-conscious rank and file of the Socialist Party, controlling its organization, stand in the way of any foolish or headstrong policy.—Missouri Socialist.

LABOR POLITICS.

A New Plan Launched by Milwaukee Unions.

All Central Labor Bodies Invited to Form a "National Municipal Labor League" for Political Action.

Central labor bodies all over the country have received and are now considering a communication from the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council, outlining a plan for the formation of a national federation of central labor bodies for the purpose of organizing a political labor movement.

The matter will be of considerable interest to Socialists and we present the circular in full:

The Milwaukee Circular.

"To the Officers and Members of the Subordinate Central Bodies Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"Greeting:—It is becoming clear, as time goes on, that in our industrial struggle for a decent livelihood, the strike and the boycott only serve, where successful, in regaining for the workers (who produce all wealth) only a small portion of what is their due. Through many years of bitter experience labor is forced to the conclusion that the policy of strike and boycott alone will never bring us to the goal of industrial freedom. Permanent relief and true justice can only be secured by inaugurating a policy of independent political action in conjunction with the trade union movement. In this way alone can we as toilers assert our manhood and common sense and do successful battle to the system that is degrading us and robbing us of our rightful station among men. As the same conclusion is being reached in all localities, as recent events show, we submit to you that the time is now opportune for a concerted advance along the line of conscious independent political action. As nothing can give us the full fruit of our toil while the present competitive wage system continues we must unitedly identify ourselves, both organized and unorganized workers alike, with such political party as advocates the abolition of the present capitalist-breeding wage system, together with a co-operative system or society to take its place.

For Municipal Politics.

"Our municipal governments concern our welfare as workers most directly. Before we can hope to do much on a national scale, we must obtain the control of city and state governments. The proper course is for the toilers to use their trade union strength—that is, the local central organization, as the guiding spirit and rallying point for their municipal campaigns. This being true, it is also important that these city and town movements work along uniform lines and in full knowledge of what each other is doing, each getting benefit from the experience of the others and strength and mutual sympathy and comradeship therefrom. Only by such united action can we hope to burst the fetters that bind us and establish the rights of man.

Convention to Be Called.

"All this being so, therefore, the undersigned committee has been appointed by the Federated Trades Council of the city of Milwaukee, representing the trade unions of the city, to communicate with the other leading and progressive central labor bodies of the United States and Canada and to urge the formation of a federation of all central bodies for the purposes above set forth, and to cause to be issued a call for a general convention of these central bodies at such time and place as may be selected after due correspondence. The convention would be held for the purpose of planning a concerted and class-conscious war of political extermination against the hosts of capitalism, and to be conducted in such manner as to help and not retard unionism and the interests of the American Federation of Labor.

"We propose that at this convention the labor question shall be discussed in its entirety and the international interdependence of labor made clear.

"The above is our plan. We submit it to you for careful and respectful consideration. Kindly appoint a committee to communicate with us as to time and place for the convention. If you do not wish to act in the matter also kindly acquaint us of the fact, as we wish to get a correct idea of the position of labor organizations throughout the land on this important matter. We hope that your action will be favorable and if we receive enough favorable reports, we shall at once prepare to call the national gathering.

"Awaiting an early reply and with fraternal greetings, we remain,

Yours truly,

FEDERATED TRADES COUNCIL OF MILWAUKEE AND VICINITY.

KEPT OUT.

The application of the Brotherhood of Railway Employees to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor was rejected. In the "Coast Seamen's Journal" President Gompers is quoted as giving this reason for the refusal of recognition:

"In fact, the new organization appeared to be simply another edition of the American Railway Union, which had such a disastrous ending. The application for a charter was therefore denied."

The Brotherhood of Railway Employees has a great many Socialists among its members.

—Our experience of non-unionists, with few exceptions, is that they are a class of men ready to reap all the advantages gained by their fellows, but too mean to pay subscriptions and too cowardly to stand up for their rights. Employers secretly hold them in utter contempt, but openly patronize them to suit their purpose.—Adelaide Herald.

The two old political parties this fall will resemble very much the grasshopper. Their jumps will be right and left, sidewise and otherwise. The Socialist Party is the commotioner. Calculations are no good. Havoc exists and the sugar barrel brigade is on the run and knows not whither to turn. The working people know what they want, and they see it in Socialism.

The Statesman, Williamsport, Pa.

Isn't it queer that when workingmen strike they are "anarchists and criminals," but when they submit like whipped dogs to the conditions of the masters they are loyal patriotic Americans? Another thing that sounds strange—that in places where nothing but Democratic and Republican votes are cast the men are lawless and Anarchists when they strike.

The Socialist, Seattle, Wash.

There are about a hundred federal judges in the United States. Every one of them is an absolute ruler in his own jurisdiction. The local judges are now nearly everywhere elective and responsive to public opinion. They fear votes. But the federal judges are appointed by the president, and for life. It is practically impossible to remove one of them, and they can assume all sorts of independence.

By means of the injunction, these judges become supreme dictators. If you don't do as they order you, they will commit you for "contempt." You have no trial by jury. It is the prerogative of the court to arrest you, try you, judge you, commit you, and you have absolutely no redress. Habeas corpus proceedings may be had, but, unless the federal judge had no jurisdiction in your case, no habeas corpus will avail. There is no statute law to direct him, no common law to restrain him. You are completely in his power. This whole injunction power was originally a function of the sovereign, and was subsequently assumed by the courts, as kings lost their supreme powers. English judicial custom was adopted by our constitution makers, and hence our judges are able to expand their powers back to those the old kings exercised.

Dayton Picket.

The "American Federationist," official organ of the American Federation of Labor, on the sixth page of the July number, carries a warning to advertisers not to advertise any souvenir, books, or other unfair publications that are not endorsed by it.

On the third page of the cover of the July issue is the advertisement of the Singer Manufacturing Company, and on page 401, under the "We Don't Patronize" list is the name of the Singer Company, at both Elizabeth, N. J., and South Bend, Ind.

What manner of consistency is it for the A. F. of L. to carry the ads. of such firms, and at the same time calling on organizations all over the United States and Canada to let them severely alone?

Right opposite the boycott of the Singer advertisement is a line which reads: "The publishers reserve the right to revoke or reject advertising contracts at any time." If all advertisers in the "Federationist" are acquainted with this fact, the A. F. of L. officials know it, there is double collusion on the part of both parties to deceive union men and their sympathizers by inserting advertisements of unfair firms, which is understood to be a bid for the patronage of union men.

The idea of accepting money from a firm for advertising under such conditions is of the same cloth as the action of Gompers in playing hide and seek with the Civic Federation. Both acts subjects the A. F. of L. to well-grounded suspicion, and places the organization in position to be ridiculed by our enemies and made fun of as we should be.

AMERICAN FEDERATIONIST" ON AMERICAN LABOR UNION.

The "American Federationist" for July has the following editorial comment on the action of the Denver conventions:

"At its recent convention at Denver the Western Labor Union changed its name to the American Labor Union, and adopted a declaration of its 'principles' which simply demonstrates it to be a second edition of DeLeon's Socialist Trade and Labor Alliance, without the candor to acknowledge its desire to destroy the trade union movement; and it will be just as abortive as to its older but criminal prototype.

"The trade unions are the naturally historically developed organization of the wage-earners. They were not born in the brain of any particular man. They are the growth of our industrial conditions, and they will continue to grow and gain in strength, fight the battles for labor's rights and secure labor's final emancipation, and this, too, in spite of the antagonism of the capitalist class, or the false and the foolish in the ranks of labor."

STRENGTH OF THE FEDERATION.

The income of the American Federation of Labor for the year ending April 30 was $131,000, and the amount of per capita tax paid into that body from national and international unions is but one-third of a cent per member per month. At the end of last April 1,100,000 members were paying per capita tax into the American Federation of Labor, and it is estimated that at least 20 per cent. more might be added from the fact that many unions do not pay on their full membership. In addition there are 370 city central bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and as most of them have unattached unions it can be seen that the membership of the American Federation of Labor is much larger than is shown in the amount of per capita tax paid.

PARTY NOTES.

Comrade James Hughes of Summit Hill, Pa., writes: "The Worker is doing much good towards building up the Socialist Party. Since I have been distributing the paper there has been a club organized here with one hundred and sixty members. After the strike is over I expect to get a number of subscriptions."

The "White Rats," the famous theatrical organization, will soon hold a convention in Chicago. The president is a Socialist, and H. Gaylord Wilshire has been invited to address the delegates.

Louis N. B. Anderson, candidate of the Socialist Party for lieutenant-governor of Idaho, was state superintendent of public instruction in 1896 and 1897, and the Populist nominee for governor of Idaho in 1898.

Harry McKee, manager of the San Diego, Cal., Title & Trust Company, has resigned his position to join the work of Comrade Mills. He will become the business manager of the Mills School of Socialism on September 15. He was offered a 25 per cent. increase of salary and a fourth interest in the company to remain in San Diego, but prefers to work for Socialism. Comrade Mills will hereafter have all of his time for the correspondence work and for teaching and speaking. There are now over 1,700 students in the correspondence course. The comrades in Los Angeles, Cal., have raised a subscription of nearly $300 to aid in extending the work of the school. Comrade Mills is in Kansas City looking for accommodations for the next term of the training school. Oregon will send two students, California seven, Colorado six, Iowa four, North Dakota three, Missouri twenty-seven, and nearly every state in the union will be represented.

Comrade E. P. Jennings, Jr., has become part proprietor and editor of a weekly paper, the "Democratic Times," of Cuba, N. Y., and is inserting Socialistic articles.

"The Comrade" has in preparation a year book of International Socialism. Articles upon all phases of Socialism will be given by Socialists qualified to do so. It will contain a complete list of all Socialist papers, of some two hundred prominent Socialists at home and abroad, and as far as possible a list of speakers in the different states. State secretaries are urged to send in their lists of speakers promptly.

John C. Chase spoke this week before party locals at Warren, Crookston, Thief River Falls, Minnesota, and Osnabrook, North Dakota.

Local Hartford, Conn., meets at 284 Asylum street. The next meeting will be on Thursday evening, August 28. It is desired that every member be present, as campaign work must be begun.

Contributions to the Miners' Strike Fund have been received by the National Executive Committee as follows: Amount reported to July 19, $225.35; Local Astoria, Oregon, $10.25; Local Chula Vista, Cal., $2.00; Mt. Olive, Ill., $10; Fairhaven, Wash., $4.75; Local New Rochelle, N. Y., $1; Geo. Melnek, Alameda, Cal., $2; Central Socialist Club, Haverhill, Mass. (Brewery Workers' Fund), $5; ditto, $4; total, $264.35. Donations to the General Propaganda Fund have been received as follows: Central Socialist Club, Haverhill, Mass., $3; New Jersey State Committee, $15; Local Yuma, Arizona, $2.50; Local Norwood, Colo., C. E. Williams, secretary, $6; Social Democratic Frauen Verein, Brooklyn, N. Y., $3; Socialist Club, Adams, Mass., $5; Frank P. O'Hare, Winfield, Kan., $1; total, $35.50.

The American Branch, New Haven, meets Saturday evening, August 23, at 746 Chapel street. All members should attend.

The Painters' Union of Montclair, N. J., holds a meeting on Friday evening, August 22, and has invited Comrade Neben to make the address of the evening. This is the first time a Socialist speaker has been invited by a trade union in Montclair.

New York City.

Six very successful open-air meetings were addressed last week by Comrade Sol Fieldman.—On Monday evening, August 11, at Sixth street and Avenue C, over two hundred people listened to the speaker's exposition of Socialism and the demands of the Social Democratic Party. Many questions were asked, three applications for membership were made, and $2.10 worth of literature was sold.—In the 31st A. D., Tuesday evening, at One Hundred and Nineteenth street and Fifth avenue, a large crowd which had turned out to hear a band concert in Mt. Morris Park remained to hear a Socialist speech. Their enthusiasm surprised the speaker. One man who refused to give his name bought fifty copies of The Worker and distributed them among the listeners. Six applications for membership were made and $4.20 worth of literature—all the speaker had with him—was bought, and much more could have been sold had there been a larger supply.—On Wednesday evening, at Fourteenth street and Fifth avenue, an unusual corner for a Socialist meeting, four applications for membership and the sale of $3.80 worth of literature were the results of a very good meeting, which was enlivened by a little debate with a man from the audience who thought that drinking was the cause of the poverty of the working class, but could not explain why the rich, who drink so much more, continue to amass wealth.—In the 34th A. D., Thursday evening at One Hundred and Forty-third street and Willis avenue, three applications for membership were received and $1.80 worth of literature sold at a good meeting.—The meeting on Friday evening at Fiftieth street and Eighth avenue was characterized by the enthusiasm which seems to greet all Socialist meetings on Eighth avenue nowadays. Eight applications for membership were received, one of which was from an M. D., and one from a policeman. Two subscriptions for The Worker were taken and $3.10 worth of literature was sold.—On Saturday, at Twentieth street and Eighth avenue, a great audience broke into cheers as the many questions were answered. One man who subscribed to The Worker and bought a copy of Vandervelde's "Collectivism" declared to the audience: "I have been a Democrat from boyhood and never knew why. I became a Socialist only to-night and already know the reason why. I shall not only vote for the Social Democratic Party, but work for it with all my heart." Fifteen applications for membership were received and $3.60 worth of literature sold.

The Socialist Educational League, which has done such excellent work in the 22d and 24th A. D., has changed its headquarters from 215 E. Fifty-ninth street to 503 Second avenue, near Fiftieth street. All friends are invited to call.

The General Committee of Local New York meets at the Labor Lyceum, Saturday, August 23, at 8 p. m.

The County Committee of Local Kings County meets Saturday evening, August 23, at the Socialist Club, near Ralph avenue and Fulton street. Every delegate should be present.

The 30th A. D. met at 206 East Eighty-sixth street on August 13, with Comrade Behnke in the chair. Henry Ortland was elected as Campaign Secretary, and Comrade Benhke was added to the Yorkville Agitation Committee. Comrades Edelman and Wagner were chosen as platform committee, and Paul Krueger as delegate to the party picnic conference. Various matters of routine business were acted upon and satisfactory reports were received of the beginning of the campaign in the district with an open-air meeting addressed by Comrades Pankin and Fieldman. The District voted to recommend to the conventions the following candidates: For Congress, Herman Walter; for Senator, Henry Stahl; for Assembly, Algernon Lee.

Local Long Island City appropriated $2.50 for subscriptions to The Worker. Comrade Wm. Conrad is the Literature Agent and promises to give The Worker an extra push in Long Island City. Comrade C. Barge expects something to happen. He noticed the Long Islanders rubbing their eyes, which is a sure sign that they are awake.

The Organizer of Local New York acknowledges the receipt of the following sums for the striking miners, which will be promptly transmitted: 18th and 20th A. D., $5; Polish Branch, collection, $2.10; J. Berliner, 25 cents; total, $7.35.

A general meeting of the 2d, 4th, 6th, 8th, and 10th A. D. will be held at 414 Grand street on Monday evening, August 25. Comrades Hillquit, Halpern, Edlin, and Boudin will be the speakers.

New York State.

Comrade Reich has mailed copies of The Worker for free distribution at the meetings to be addressed by Ben Hanford, our candidate for Governor, to the following locals: Peekskill, Cold Springs, Highland Falls, Newburgh and Catskill. The secretaries of these locals are requested to attend to the distribution of the papers at the meetings.

Subscription lists have also been mailed to every local secretary in the state, together with a circular explaining the plan decided upon at the last state convention: Namely, that one-half the monies collected by the locals on these lists may be retained by them for local agitation, and one-half to be forwarded to the Financial Secretary of the State Committee, J. N. Wood, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

If any of the locals desire more of these lists or any individual member of the S. D. P. would like to collect money for our campaign fund, blank subscription lists will be supplied by H. Reich, Secretary of the Literature Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

Comrade Hagerty of New Rochelle writes: "On last Wednesday evening Ben Hanford addressed the largest open-air meeting ever held in New Rochelle. The trade unionists turned out in good force and there was quite a large sprinkling of business men present. He was listened to with close attention from start to finish, and when through his hearers stood around in groups, long after he had departed, conversing of the new gospel which most of them had heard for the first time. One hundred copies of The Worker, and one hundred of the "Appeal to Reason" were distributed.—Recent disclosures of the criminal depravity of New Rochelle officials and the total ineffectiveness of the courts to bring them to justice have so disgusted the decent thinking people of this community that they are ready to listen to our remedy and act, and I believe they will prove it next November."

Comrade Max B. Schreiber, secretary of Local Newburgh, writes that they held two open-air meetings on August 2 and 9 with Comrade Robert Paine of Hoboken as the speaker. The local meets in the Labor Hall every Sunday at 10 a. m.

Comrade H. Vitalius, secretary of Local Troy, sends us a Socialist resolution adopted by the Carpenters' Union No. 78 of Troy. Theobald M. Guerin is a member of Local Troy. We are beginning to see light, comrades.

Comrade John J. Heleker of Peekskill writes: "Comrade Hanford's meeting is the talk of the town."

Comrade Ben Hanford's meeting Saturday, August 16, at White Plains was a complete success. There was an audience of at least three hundred and the speaker held the crowd for about two hours. The audience applauded often and all seemed satisfied with his speech. They asked a number of questions on Socialism, covering points on which they were not quite clear, and the crowd was pleased at the able manner in which Comrade Hanford answered. The meeting was advertised in the three weekly papers, and also by three hundred cards. Comrades from New Rochelle, Port Chester, Mt. Vernon, Wakefield, Williamsbridge and Peekskill were in attendance at the meeting. Two hundred copies of The Worker were distributed, and there were not enough to go around. The people here are eager for Socialism and our literature.

Peekskill held a meeting on Park and Division, Monday evening, with Comrade Hanford as the speaker. There was a crowd of about four hundred persons, who paid close atention to his remarks. Applause was frequent and vigorous, and there is no doubt that Hanford has created a good impression here for the cause of Socialism and the trade union movement, and for the Social Democratic Party. The comrades of the local turned out well. We gave out two hundred and fifty copies of The Worker—which proved to not near enough to supply the demand. Twenty 5-cent pamphlets were sold. After the meeting was over a number of people wished to know when Comrade Hanford would come again to deliver another speech to them.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

FROM ORGANIZER SPRING.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., August 17.—The boys in Rochester have opened the campaign in a most enthusiastic and encouraging manner. We held several meetings last week, and those in attendance manifested their interest in our program by giving the closest attention to what we had to say. The meeting on Saturday evening was a rousing one. We had a large audience and for two hours we bombarded their minds with shot and shell from the Socialist philosophy. We distributed several hundred copies of The Worker during the week, besides leaflets and other literature.

On Monday evening I will hold my last meeting in Rochester; this meeting will be for the purpose of organizing an English branch in the Seventeenth Ward, the ward which gave the Social Democratic Party such a large vote in the last municipal election. At the last meeting of the American branch, nine members were taken in.

I sent in a list of sixteen three-month subscriptions and three yearly for The Worker last week, and have another list of fifteen taken at the last meeting.

On Tuesday, August 19, I will speak at Batavia and try to organize a local. From there I will go to Buffalo and remain there for several days and help the boys get ready for active campaign work.

Say to the comrades that we must make this the hottest campaign ever waged for Socialism. Tell them to push The Worker and keep as many speakers in the field as possible. We must work hard in order to make a good increase in our vote this fall.

My address will be General Delivery, Buffalo. Any one wishing to communicate with me will reach me at that point until otherwise notified.

F. J. SPRING,
Organizer.

AGITATION MEETINGS IN NEW YORK CITY.

Meetings will be held at the points named in the following list, on the dates given. Comrades in the assembly districts where meetings are held should not fail to be present and use the opportunity to assist the speakers by agitating among bystanders and aiding in the distribution of literature.

OPEN-AIR MEETINGS.

Thursday, August 21—Division and Grand streets, 4th A. D. Speaker: Mayes.

Friday, August 22—East Broadway and Clinton streets, 4th A. D. Speaker: Nicholson.

Friday, August 22—One Hundred and Sixty-ninth street and Boston Road, 35th A. D. Speakers: Reichenthal and Mayes.

Saturday, August 23—Rutger Square, 4th A. D. Speaker: Sackin.

Saturday, August 23—One Hundred and Sixty-first street and Forest avenue. Speaker: Fox.

INDOOR MEETING.

A general meeting of the 2d, 4th, 6th, 8th, and 12th Assembly Districts will be held at 414 Grand street on Monday evening, August 25. Comrades Hillquit, Edlin, Halpern, and Boudin will speak, and Organizer Wood will be present.

FIELDMAN'S MEETINGS.

Meetings will be addressed by Comrade Sol Fieldman as follows:

Monday, August 25—Fourth street and Avenue B, 16th A. D.

Tuesday, August 26—One Hundred and Twentieth street and Fifth avenue, 31st A. D.

Wednesday, August 27—Circle, 8th avenue and Fifty-ninth street, 17th A. D.

Thursday, August 28—Madison avenue and Twenty-third street, 25th A.D.

Friday, August 29—Fifty-fifth street and Third avenue, 24th A. D.

Saturday, August 30—Thirty-third street and Eighth avenue, 11th A. D.

Monday, September 1—Third street and Avenue C, 16th A. D.

Tuesday, September 2—Madison avenue and One Hundred and Twentieth street, 31st A. D.

Wednesday, September 3—Eighteenth street and Eighth avenue, 7th A. D.

Thursday, September 4—Thirty-eighth street and Eighth avenue, 13th A. D.

Friday, September 5—Second avenue and Houston street, 6th A. D.

Saturday, September 6—Thirtieth street and Eighth avenue, 11th A. D.

GENERAL COMMITTEE, LOCAL NEW YORK.

At the last meeting of the General Committee of Local New York six new members were admitted. The recommendation of the Executive Committee that each assembly district elect an organizer was concurred in. It was also proposed that a moving picture machine and stereopticon be purchased. The resignation of Comrade Kilgus from the Executive Committee was accepted and Comrade Wilkins of the 31st A. D. elected in his place. The salary of the organizer was raised to $18 per week. The controller reported that the total liabilities of the party were $1,392.38. It was decided to hold the county convention on August 28, and the congressional, senatorial and assembly district conventions before September 20, at the call of the organizer. The Entertainment Committee was given instructions to arrange for a masque ball not later than February 1.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

The County Convention of the Social Democratic Party of New York County will meet in adjourned session at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, on Saturday, August 23, at 8 p. m., under call of the Executive Committee, as authorized by the Convention at its session of June 28. The Convention will nominate candidates for all offices to be filled in New York County at the coming election and transact such other business as may come before it.

MASSACHUSETTS.

To Massachusetts Socialists:

Many comrades have asked me about the change made in the manner of nominating representatives to the legislature, in what is termed the Luce bill, passed by the last legislature. In towns there is no change. Nominations to be the same as last year; by district conventions. Also in cities where a representative district extends outside of one city to one or more towns, the same. Also, where one ward of a city is a complete district there is no change from last year. The change is made where there are two or more wards of a city in a single representative district entirely within one city limit. In such district the voters vote at caucus direct for a nomination; the candidate having the largest number of votes being the nominee; no representative convention being held. Two ballots will be necessary. One for representative, one, two, or three candidates as the case may be, and a second ballot for delegates to the several conventions. The ballots for representative and returns for same are to be sealed and forwarded to the city clerk. As there is a contradiction between the general election laws and the Luce bill, the details will in a measure be at the option of the city clerks. It would be well, therefore, for the officials of city committees to have a thorough understanding with the city clerks as to how they propose to proceed in the matter.

S. E. PUTNEY,
Secretary State Committee.

THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally as the Socialist Party, and such is its designation in most of the states. In New York, however, it keeps the former name of Social Democratic Party, for reasons concerning the election laws. It has no connection with the Socialist Labor Party and does not approve of the "union smashing" tactics or the abusive methods used by that party. The Socialist—or Social Democratic—Party works in harmony with the trade unions, though without any organic connection. It holds itself free to criticise their policy when necessary, but it approves of the principle of trade unionism. It does not attempt to dictate to the unions nor is it dictated to by them. It calls upon all workingmen to join the unions of their respective trades as a means of fighting the daily battle against the capitalist class and to join and work and vote for the Socialist Party as a means of putting an end to capitalism.

THE PARABLE OF A MANGLE.

(For Party Members.)

Three Socialists once got into a tangle,
The subject of discussion being a mangle,
An ancient box all filled with stones called cobble,
And thus these geese proceeded with their gobble.

Goose A.

You must conduct your Socialist campaign
By words, and thoughts, and deeds that shall no pain
Impart unto the feudal state-religious lady
Who runs a mangle in our lane so shady.

Goose B.

To wound a feudal feeling were a pity
And therefore I suggest that steps be ta'en
To have one priest on every branch committee,
And thus o'er Warsaw peace once more shall reign.

Goose C.

And let us, to make sure, send all our papers
To have them smoothened out in meekest sense
Accompanied, of course, with lighted tapers
In case they give the mangle woman offense.

A, B, C.

Our clubs should nothing have more Socialistic
Than beer and fun and billiard ball and cue stick,
And we should send Lassalle and Marx and Engels
Once every day to turn the church's mangles.

For four years I had been troubled with constipation, which brought on piles. I was induced to try Ripans Tabules. The results were better than I expected. As a regulator of the bowels I believe Ripans are without an equal, and I am never without them now.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,500 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $2.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00 respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE RULING CLASS.

Father McGrady Compares the Attitude of his Church towards Capitalist Governments with its Attitude towards the Socialist Party.

The following letter is from Father Thomas McGrady, a Catholic priest of Bellevue, Ky., who is also, like Father Hagerty, an ardent Socialist.

Editor of The Worker.

The Socialist movement has been formed to relieve the oppressed masses from economic serfdom and the despotism of capitalistic production; and it does not propose to interfere with the right of conscience and the freedom of worship. The world has ever been composed of two classes, the workers and the parasites. The former have always been servants and the latter have always been masters. The former are called the proletariat, and the latter the ruling class. The Catholic press stands for the domination and the usurpation of the ruling class; and the Socialists champion the rights of the proletariat, the right of the toilers to possess and enjoy the fruit of their labor.

Now let us see which class has been the enemy of the Catholic church. The ruling class crucified the Lowly Nazarene. The ruling class, in the person of Roman emperors, Roman senators and Roman soldiers, and the long catalogue of high officials in every part of that vast empire swept by the wings of the Roman eagles, persecuted the Apostles and the martyrs and disciples of the early Church from the day that the Fisherman entered the gates of the eternal city till Constantine built his throne on the shores of the Bosphorus. Henry the Fourth of Germany, who usurped the high prerogatives of the Supreme Pontiff, represented the ruling class. All the kings and nobles of the middle ages who defied the authority of the Lateran and the Vatican, and repudiated the decrees of councils and the regulations of synods, and the decisions of popes and bishops, belonged to the ruling class. Luther, Calvin, Melanethon, and their associates, who banished the church from the dark cloistered cells and the vast cathedral aisles of Germany, and persecuted the disciples of the Cross amid the Alpine billows and the snow-clad plains of the Netherlands, represented the ruling class. Henry the Eighth of England and his daughter Elizabeth, who reduced the ancient altars to ruins, expropriated the religious orders, usurped the ecclesiastical lands and closed the monasteries, represented the ruling class. The men who bounded the Catholic Celt for three hundred years, and crimsoned every hill in Erin with the blood of her martyred hosts, represented the ruling class. The men who expatriated the Jesuits from Catholic Portugal, Catholic Spain and Protestant Germany, represented the ruling class. When I refer to Germany, I wish to state a fact that reflects credit on the broad spirit of Socialism, and proves conclusively to every honest mind that the movement is entirely free from prejudice, and is the embodiment of justice and liberty. Since the expulsion of the Jesuits, the Centre Party has introduced a resolution for their restoration at every sitting of the German parliament, and the Socialists have voted unanimously for the adoption of the resolution, not that the Socialists love the sons of Loyola, but they acted on the principle that there should be no discrimination against a citizen of the empire because he accepted a certain creed, or was affiliated with a certain religious organization. I do not think that the Centre Party would have been so impartial with the Socialists, for history proves the fact that Catholics, as a class, have unjustly, unmercifully, without the least provocation, maligned, calumniated and persecuted the disciples of Marx in every country, and it was partially through the influence of the pulpit that the apostle of Socialism was incarcerated and ultimately driven from his Fatherland. Napoleon, who imprisoned the Pope and persecuted the church and Victor Emanuel, who is called by Catholic writers the Robber King, represented the ruling class. The French revolution, which abolished the Christian worship and enthroned the Goddess of Reason on the high altar of Notre Dame, represented the bourgeoisie, who were then fighting for supremacy, and have developed into the great capitalists of the twentieth century, and now constitute the ruling class. There were no Socialists in those days and the atrocities that characterized the Reign of Terror cannot be fathered on the defenders of economic freedom and justice, who repudiate the divine right of exploitation and legalized methods of expropriation.

Many a time the ancient creed has been proscribed in the "land of the free and the home of the brave," but the Socialists had no voice in the passage of these penal enactments, for the movement was not yet born. In 1654 the ruling class in Maryland revoked the Toleration Act, denounced the Church of Rome, and denied the protection of the law to its adherents. With the inauguration of the Orange dynasty in England, a wave of persecution swept over the realm of the Briton, and, in 1692, the ruling class established the Anglican Church in Maryland, and enacted a penal code against the Catholics on the shores of the Potomac. In 1704 the ruling class renewed its proscriptive legislation, and forbade priests and bishops to say mass or exercise the functions of the ministry, disfranchised Catholics, prohibited them to teach, forced them to support the Anglican Church, and compelled them to pay a double tax, and passed many other decrees of a similar character. The ruling class in New York in 1691, in 1700 and 1741, anathematized "Romanism" and proscribed its adherents. The ruling class, in the Massachusetts legislature, in 1647, decreed that Jesuits "entering the colony should be expelled, and if they returned, hanged." The "blue laws" of New England were passed by the ruling class. In Virginia the ruling class enacted that "Papists shall be incapable to be [illegible] in any cause whatsoever; no Papist can keep arms; no Papist can possess any horse above five pounds." The members of the Native American Party, the Knownothings and the American Protective Association, were all of the same economic school as those who asperse the character of Socialism. The men who burned Catholic churches and convents and mobbed Catholic laymen and hounded priests and bishops in this country during the last century, believed in capitalistic domination and voted for the old parties. The men who endeavored to exclude the statue of Pere Marquette from the national hall because he was a priest were Democrats and Republicans. The men who took away from Catholics the appropriations for the education of the Indians were Democrats and Republicans. The men who entered the A. P. A. movement and swore to extirpate the Catholic from the land of Columbus were Democrats and Republicans. The people who are responsible for the desecration of Catholic churches in the Philippine Islands are Democrats and Republicans. President Roosevelt, Secretary Root and Governor Taft, who insist on the expulsion of the friars from our Spanish possessions in the Pacific are Republicans, and the people who demand this action on the part of the administration are Democrats and Republicans.

And now I have merely referred in a cursory manner to the hostility of the ruling class, and the Democratic and Republicans parties, which represent that class, to the Catholic church; and yet this infinitesimally small percentage of the historical facts illustrating the enmity of the ruling class and the Democratic and Republican parties that represent that class is infinitely greater and more numerous than all the inimical acts of the Socialist Party towards the Catholic church. Still our Catholic editors have never stated that the ruling class and the Democratic and Republican parties, which represent that class, have formed a combination to extirpate the Catholic creed. Moreover they have never warned Catholics to shun the ruling class, and the Democratic and Republican parties that represent that class; and I have failed to read in a Catholic paper that a Catholic cannot affiliate with the ruling class or support the Democratic or Republican party which represent that class. Why is it that our Catholic editors condemn the Socialist Party for the individual acts of its members and does not condemn the ruling class and the Democratic and Republican parties which represent that class for the individual acts of its members? Because they dare not condemn the ruling class, for their bread and butter depends on the whim of that class; and they dare not condemn the Democratic and Republican parties, because they represent the ruling class. They persecute the Socialists because they are weak, and they think that they can serve their masters, the capitalists, without imperilling their safety, and increase their comforts at the expense of justice, honesty and veracity. They gladly mock the cry of the oppressed, ridicule the pretentions of the weak for the sublime prerogative of fawning at the throne of Mammon and licking the feet of the plutocrats. Wherever the Socialists have attacked the Catholics it has always been in self-defense; but the same excuse cannot be offered in palliation of Democratic and Republican hostility to Rome and the adherents of her doctrines. Whenever bigots criminate the church for the Ecclesiastical and Spanish Inquisition, the burning of Huss and Jerome of Prague, the butchery of the Waldenses, Albienses and the massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, our Catholic editors claim that the church is not responsible for those atrocities, which were the personal acts of individuals and governments; and whenever the Democrats and Republicans manifest their hostility to the ancient creed, our editors say that we should not censure a party for the opinions and conduct of its adherents. Why are they not as just to the Socialist Party? Because it does not pay so well. They are determined to defend their masters, the capitalists, and any excuse is better than none; and hence they resort to calumny, hatred and prejudice to accomplish their purpose. But the Socialist movement is here to stay; it is the product of industrial evolution, and all the powers on earth cannot prevent its growth or retard its progress.

Fraternally,

T. McGRADY.

WOMEN AID STRIKING MINERS AND WEAVERS.

ELIZABETH, N. J.—The Central Committee of the Social Democratic Women's Society, at its last regular meeting, appropriated $20 for the United Mine Workers and the same sum for the silk weavers of Hudson County.

The Central Committee takes this opportunity to express its sympathy and admiration for the striking mine workers for their courage and endurance in the struggle against their capitalistic exploiters and their hirelings, police, militia, and arbitrary, law-contemning courts, in spite of all distress and privations.

We hope this struggle will convince them that only the transformation of the present dominating capitalistic system into the Socialist Commonwealth will emancipate Labor from the bondage of Capital.

We furthermore express our esteem and appreciation to our sister and coworker Mary Jones, known by the honorable name of "Mother" Jones, who advises and defends the cause of the downtrodden and exploited workers, men, women, and children, in spite of all troubles, privations and danger. May she, the "Mother" of the oppressed, succeed in her benefcent agitation and live to see the emancipation of the working class!

IN THE STRIKE FIELD.

Morrison Swift Writes of the Opportunities and Needs of the Movement There.

Comrade Morrison I. Swift writes from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to the Seattle "Socialist," under date of July 31, in the following words:

"Last evening at a little mining village near West Pittston a Socialist local was organized with seventy-six members. It was the first time that Socialism had been brought before the community and such was the response.

"It is the same everywhere in the strike region. The coal miners are falling into a condition of actual horror and hate of the two old parties, which have left a track of swindle in the mine workers' history. The last Pennsylvania legislature has voted down every labor and mining measure in favor of the worker, of any consequence. It has taken steps toward disfranchising the people by its infamous ripper bills. It is a Republican body. It is controlled by the most unscrupulous pirate in political life, Matt Quay. And his minions are now out again asking the mining vote. He has nominated a relative of his own for governor, Pennypacker by name.

"The Democrats of the state have nominated Pattison for governor, the one who held that post in the Homestead strike and sent troops there to slaughter the workers in that foul massacre. Now he asks the labor vote. He asks the children of those whom he murdered at Homestead to elect him governor that he may have a chance to murder them if they strike. This is what the Democrats offer the working class of this state.

"The working class is revolting. Wherever a Socialist speaker goes he receives the deepest attention. The miners are swinging over to Socialism in shoals. The serious thing is that there are not a fraction enough Socialist speakers to work while the fields are white—while the strike lasts and the men are idle and can listen. They want speakers. Each little town complains, we are being neglected, no one comes to talk to us and keep us warmed up. They said this yesterday at Parsons, and at Miners Mills. So it is everywhere.

"Fifty Socialist speakers would not be too many for the Socialists of the country to send here now. To-day there can be more Socialist converts made in a week here than can be gained by perhaps months of labor in the whole country with the same amount of work. This is because the 150,000 miners are battered into receptivity by this strike and the treatment they are receiving.

"* * * Judge Keller says the strikers may not be fed by others. This is a little worse than taxing tea. It is a case where the judge assumes the right to kill the strikers by commanding their starvation. It is a revolutionary Czar-like injunction and of course will not be obeyed, but it means jail for those who scorn it. This judicial savagery opens the miners' eyes politically.

"It is a crisis when great things can be accomplished by rapid and decisive action. The most imposing Socialist movement that the country has seen can be organized in the strike section by a few weeks' work. The instructiveness of it to the nation will be tremendous. It will be the most ominous blow at plutocracy that has yet been struck. It will encourage Socialists everywhere to double their efforts. It will cause thousands and thousands who are wavering to turn over to Socialism. It will swell the movement to such importance that in the next national campaign it will be recognized and adopted generally as the workingman's movement by the workingmen of the United States. It is far the greatest opportunity Socialism has so far had in this country.

"All that is needed to accomplish this is a corps of Socialist speakers in the coal belt, fifty in number."

Those who are willing to help in supplying the funds for this work should send their contributions to the Miners' Socialist Propaganda Fund, 1022 Arch street, Philadelphia. Whether you can spare five cents or five dollars, it will be gladly received and put to good use.

LABOR MARKET GLUTTED IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A Durban correspondent writes: "Now that the irregular corps are disbanded the labor market is glutted, and in Durban alone some hundreds of carpenters are on the unemployed list. Notwithstanding this the capitalist papers—and Africa has no others—are puffing South Africa and its high wages all over the world with a view to having such an unemployed glut that Kaffir wages will prevail, and up to now success attends their efforts, for on the Rand, where Kaffirs got from $15 to $30 a month, a uniform wage of $7.50 and rations (maize meal) has been introduced. The Zulus and East Coast Portuguese blacks were astounded on receiving their first month's wages, and no wonder, for had not the slave dealer who engaged them pictured the Rand as a veritable El Dorado where in a few years they could earn as much money as would permit of their basking in the sun, pipe in mouth, with wives galore tilling the mealie patch round the kraal. Poor devil, he will find when everything is settled with regard to the Boer war it is his turn next to bite the dust.

"One cannot conjecture what position the workers of this country may yet take up. Those from the United Kingdom are more or less lickspittles or 'big belly' worshippers, but with the infusion of new blood from all parts of the empire, with cattle thieves from Mexico and Texas, 'cowboys' and 'rough riders' from the slums of London, and the disinherited Dutch 'rebels,' fatherless and motherless young Boers, bitter Dutch widows—how things will turn out is a mystery."

Local Globe, Arizona, is steadily gaining in membership and the members are working hard. Some of the women are getting interested and will do their share for the good cause. Among the local comrades are eight members of the miners' union, and others are coming, in spite of the opposition of a number of "leaders."

TROY CARPENTERS FOR SOCIALISM.

Brotherhood Local No. 78 So Instructs its Delegate to the Atlanta Convention.

TROY, N. Y.—Carpenters' Union No. 78 of this city, which has a membership of over two hundred, last week formally adopted the following resolution:

"The elevation of the working class must be inaugurated by the working classes."—Karl Marx.

"Whereas, The struggles of the working class are daily growing more acute in their efforts to obtain better conditions of life, and, although every effort of trade unions is being energetically put forth to secure the rewards which are so justly due those engaged in the production and distribution of the means of life, yet on every hand the effectiveness of our efforts are being assailed by our inability to respond to every call for financial aid, and by the capitalistic weapons of lockouts and injunctions and the conscienceless use of federal courts and troops against those quietly and justly asking for the enjoyment of a small part of that which is their due; and

"Whereas, These struggles are surely and steadily resolving themselves into a struggle between those who control the machinery of government and those who do not, and, therefore, although it may not be to our liking and choosing, has resolved itself into a political question, so that the time has arrived to declare our position in no uncertain sound; therefore be it

"Resolved, That Carpenters' Union No. 78 hereby declares for the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, and recommends to its members to unite with the international Socialist movement in conquering the political powers now controlled almost exclusively by the capitalist class; be it further

"Resolved, That our delegate to the national convention of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners to be assembled at Atlanta, Ga., in September of this year, be and is hereby instructed to advocate and vote for a declaration at the convention in favor of the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution, and political action in the Socialist Party; and be it

"Resolved, That we commend the action of the Executive Board, the Secretary and the Editor of the 'Carpenter' in printing articles on Socialism, and request that such articles be continued and the principles of Socialism be fully presented in our paper; be it further

"Resolved, That the delegates from our convention to the convention of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to work and vote for a declaration in line with the foregoing."

Comrade Theobald M. Guerin, who is the delegate of No. 78 to the Atlanta convention, is also First Vice-President of the Brotherhood.

The movement of which this resolution forms a part, was inaugurated by Carpenters' Union No. 90 of Evansville, Ind., and already a number of sister unions have taken similar action, thus ensuring a full discussion of the question in the Brotherhood convention.

LABOR POLITICS IN HIGHLAND FALLS.

The Socialists of Highland Falls, N. Y., are also confronted with an independent labor movement. The recently organized Union League issued the following statement:

"It is becoming clear, as time goes on, that in our industrial struggle for a decent livelihood and recognition as fellow citizens, we are compelled to believe that the workingman's vote is solicited and secured for private gains by members of both political parties; and as the same conclusion is being reached in all localities, as recent events show, we submit to you that the time is now opportune for a concerted advance along the lines of conscious, independent political action.

"As nothing can give us the full fruit of our toil while the present competitive wage system continues, we must unitedly identify ourselves, both organized and unorganized workers, with such political party as advocates the abolition of the present capitalist breeding wage system, together with a co-operative system of society to take its place.

"Our municipal government concerns our welfare as workers most directly, and in view of this it is important that the ward movements work along uniform lines and in full knowledge of what each other is doing, each getting benefit from the experiences of the others, thereby uniting all wage-workers as a balance of power, and thus insuring the recognition which we are entitled to.

"The object of this organization is not to form a new political party but to assist in the election of candidates (regardless of politics) who are in sympathy with our movement and to whom we can look for justice and equality."

The action of the Union League is in direct conflict with the very sound sentiment expressed in the second paragraph of its statement. If the Union League really wanted to suit deed to word, after declaring that "we must identify ourselves, both organized and unorganized workers, with such political party as advocates the abolition of the present wage system, together with a co-operative system of society to take its place"—it should have endorsed the platform of the Social Democratic Party and declared for its candidates. Non-partisan? The Union League should be partizan for the workingmen and against the capitalists every day of the year and on Election Day particularly. After taking one step in the right direction, the workingmen of the Union League turned again to the ancient path of defeat and humiliation. Cut loose, comrades, from all politicians and political parties of the capitalist class and identify yourselves with the only true Labor Union League in this state—the Social Democratic Party.

LOCAL PASSAIC'S PICNIC.

PATERSON, N. J., August 17.—Local Passaic County of the Socialist Party will hold its annual picnic at Belmont Park, Haledon, on the outskirts of Paterson, on Labor Day, Monday, September 1, afternoon and evening, for the purpose of raising funds to carry on the work of education and organization among the working class. This being an annual event, should be sufficient to make every loyal comrade and every person who sympathizes with the aims of the Socialist Party, whether he lives in Passaic or in one of the adjoining counties, take off his coat and work hard to make this picnic a grand success.

From all over the state—in fact, from all over the country—we hear the cry of the working class to be organized. Who is to heed the appeal, if not we who know the historic mission of the working class, and who know the need and value of organization and class-conscious political action? As we look around us and scan the horizon of the industrial field with the skilled eye of the Socialist, we see the "captain of industry" and the Civic Federation led by the notorious Mark Hanna, trying to run the working-class movement into the ground. It should not be necessary to say more to make all Socialists do their utmost to make this picnic a financial success. In regard to numbers it should surpass any of our former efforts to entertain our friends. Come and bring your wives and children, sweethearts and sisters, and all of your friends and your friends' friends. There will be a good list of sports—tug-of-war, contests for prizes, etc., between teams selected from the local turn societies, and between teams from the local singing societies. There will be bowling for prizes, singing, dancing, and amusements of every description. Refreshments will be furnished by Prof. J. W. Grish and full union orchestra. Dancing will begin at 2:30 p. m. The price of admission to the park is ten cents. Trolley cars leave Newark for Paterson every fifteen minutes; connections can be made at City Hall, Paterson, for Belmont Park, Haledon, every ten minutes.

IN ESSEX COUNTY.

NEWARK, N. J., August 17.—The Socialist Party of Essex County opened new headquarters at 124 Market street, third floor, last evening. A large number of comrades and sympathizers of the party assembled in honor of the event and passed a most enjoyable evening. John Spargo of New York was the speaker of the occasion. He eloquently pictured the slavery of little children in the workshops of New Jersey, by which are piled up the great fortunes of the "captains of industry," and appealed to the workingmen to lay aside all minor differences and unite to use their political power to put an end to the system which creates such conditions. He spoke of the power of the trusts, as shown, among other things, in the present coal strike, and pointed out that the Democratic party is as unable as the Republican party is unwilling to destroy or curb this power, and that Socialism alone will solve the trust problem.

The orator was applauded by the many women present when he said that the Socialist Party stood for the emancipation of woman, and that it believed in exact equality between the sexes. He was applauded more when he expressed the hope that the day will not be long coming when from the halls of the legislative bodies of state and nation the red banner of Socialism will float, signifying emancipation from industrial and social slavery.

It was announced that the rooms of the county committee would be always open for the entertainment of the workingmen, and that they would be provided with true information regarding the industrial condition of the country in general and of the principles and aims of the Socialist Party in particular.

The committee elected by Local Essex County to maintain headquarters consts of Comrades Fred McIntosh, James E. Billings, N. Zwart, Hugo Wester and David Rubinow, and that their work was well done was testified to by the many expressions of surprise at the tasteful decorations and the smoothness with which every detail of the opening was carried out.

Hudson County sent over a splendid delegation. Every branch in Essex County was represented, and the various trade unions by about fifty members.

The Miners' Defense Committee of the Essex Trades Council has arranged a great public meeting at Welcker's Park, Springfield and Fairmont avenues, to be addressed by President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers and Comrade John Spargo. This meeting should be a great success and ensure valuable moral and financial aid to the miners.

ORGANIZED LABOR AND THE REFORM ADMINISTRATION.

The Worker has frequently called attention to the treatment accorded to organized labor by the reform administration in New York City, which has been of the nature predicted by all Socialists before the election. The following statement of the Bronx Borough District Council of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America sets forth the typical attitude of the reformers towards the unions. This is what was voted for by every workingman who voted the ticket of a capitalistic party, and the only remedy is a Socialist ballot.

NEW YORK, August 4, 1902.

Editor The Worker.

Dear Sir:—The above organization desires the following statement published in your valuable paper for the benefit of organized labor:

In compliance with instructions from the Bronx Borough District Council, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, their two representatives visited His Eminence, Park Commission Eustis (of Bronx Borough) in reference to the non-union carpenters in his department, asking him whether he would not use his endeavors to have the carpenters join the organization. He not only refused, but the reception accorded was far from even respectful, and all this coming from a so highly respectable Reform Official.

The representatives having scarcely stated their errand, the commissioner requested them to leave his office immediately.

As citizens and tax payers thought they had, or at least should have the right, to present a grievance of fifteen hundred carpenters of this borough, and upon reminding the commissioner of this fact, the representatives were forthwith ordered from the building under threat of dire punishment. They withdrew, at the same time informing this would-be Czar that the Brotherhood of Carpenters would not let an insult of this description go by unnoticed.

The council then protested to the mayor regarding this matter. He informed us that the city government was not allowed by law to make any distinction between union and non-union men; but he failed to mention the arbitrary conduct of the commissioner towards Organized Labor in general. The council then resolved that the conduct and the actions of the so-called Reformers be given the publicity it demands.

CALDWELL IN CONNECTICUT.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., August 18.—Four excellent meetings were addressed by Comrade Caldwell during the past week, at Stamford, South Norwalk, Danbury, and Bridgeport. At Stamford seventy-five books were sold and several applications for membership taken; at South Norwalk forty books were sold; at Danbury ninety-eight and at Bridgeport fifty-two. Stamford and South Norwalk had not been visited by speakers of our party since the last presidential campaign.

Comrade Caldwell's engagement ended Thursday, and he has returned to Philadelphia. He spent thirty-two days in the state and addressed twenty-eight meetings, at a total average cost of $5.20 per meeting.

Other speakers will go over the same route again soon. John W. Brown, our candidate for governor, will make a two weeks' agitation trip before election, and Charles H. Vail will spend a week in Connecticut about the beginning of October.

Nominations for representatives in congress from each district should be sent in as soon as possible, so that the ticket can be completed.

A leaflet addressed to the voters of Connecticut is prepared and will be printed by the time this paper reaches its readers. This leaflet will contain the list of nominations and should be circulated freely.

Branch secretaries should try to collect the campaign assessment soon, and members holding subscription lists should not neglect them.

For the State Committee,

W. E. WHITE.

IN MIDDLESEX COUNTY.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., August 17.—Comrade Neben of Local Essex County has been doing some hard work for the Socialist Party in Perth Amboy, Woodbridge, Kearsley, and other towns along the Raritan river. A meeting for the organization of a branch has been arranged for Saturday evening, August 30, at H. Gundlach's Hall, 127 New Brunswick avenue, in this place. A member of the State Committee will be elected for the county, putting it in line with other organized counties in the state, and it is hoped that a full ticket will be put in the field.

This part of the state has a dense and very mixed population—Americans, Irish, Germans, Danes, Swedes, Poles, Slavs, Hungarians, and Italians—a large part of them being employed in the fireproof tile and brick works. They do the hardest kind of work, ten hours a day, for which they receive an average wage of not over $1.15. They surely have every reason to hope and vote for Socialism and all that is needed is to supply them with Socialist speakers and literature in their various languages.

BLOOMFIELD LABOR LYCEUM.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—The Labor Lyceum at 90 Myrtle street is now an assured success and everything is being done to make it the headquarters of organized labor in this vicinity. The building is owned by the Workingmen's Educational Association, of which Comrade E. T. Neben is President. The members of the Association are pledged to vote the ticket of the Socialist Party and the officers and members of the Board of Managers must be party members.

Bloomfield Branch 8 of the Socialist Party holds its meetings at the Labor Lyceum on the first and third Mondays of each month, and lecture meetings are held there every Thursday evening, at which the labor question in all its phases is discussed. Comrades should bring their wives and children to these meetings and invite all their friends to do likewise.

The Labor Lyceum is open every evening and Sunday and visitors and friends are always welcome.

RAT-TA-TAT!

Said Sam, "Will you go to the war?"
Said I, "Not a bit!"
What is the nonsense all for?
Are we cocks in a pit?"

"For the maudlin princes to gawp at—
These lordlings of boodle and blood—
To gamble upon, and yawp at,
As though we were mud?"

Said Sam, "Will you join the militia?
You can march and have fun,
Just around at the drill room—
And carry a gun!

"You needn't go off to Manila,
But march out on sprees—
You can sleep at your home on a pillow
And never need freeze?"

"Go to!" said I, "foolish parader!
Will you kill fellow toilers on strike?
If our country needs yeomen to aid her
'Tis such honest workmen they're like!"

Said Sam, "You'll get glory and pension!"
Said I, "Very fine!
But the bullet wounds gory don't mention!
I decline!"

SAMUEL AVUNCULUS MANN.

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing, and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their interest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

The grand parade and mass meeting of the Socialist Party of St. Louis last Saturday surpassed all expectations. The parade was large and enthusiastic and the Exposition Music Hall was jammed to the doors with workingmen and women eager to hear Comrades Thomas J. Morgan and Father Hagerty. James S. Roche presided. In every respect the demonstration was a great success.

Washington Socialists have five organizers at work in that state.

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK STATE.

Social Democratic Party Will Reach More Voters Than Ever Before.

Unprecedented Demand for Party Literature.—Hanford Greeted by Friendly Audiences and Spring Kept Busy by Calls for Speakers—Up with the Arm and Torch.

The campaign of the Social Democratic Party (known nationally as the Socialist Party) in the state of New York this year promises to be the best ever made. There is a great demand for Socialist literature and the State Committee has already printed or ordered over two hundred and fifty thousand pieces for special campaign purposes, besides circulating pamphlets already out. Comrade Hanford, our candidate for Governor, is everywhere greeted by attentive and friendly audiences, and those who hear him are sure to read and to talk Socialism to their fellow workingmen who failed to attend his meetings. State Organizer Spring is kept busy, and it would take two men to meet all the demands made upon him.

We print below the report of the last meeting of the State Committee, with other important matter relating o he campaign, and would urge upon all readers of The Worker in this state to make the greatest efforts to take advantage of all opportunities offered so as to roll up a great increase in the vote for the Social Democratic Party under the Arm and Torch.

THE STATE COMMITTEE.

Report of Last Session Shows the New York State Campaign Well Under Way.

Comrade Reich presided in the last meeting of the New York State Committee, there being also present Comrades Wood, Slobodin, Phillips, and Bowerman; Neppel and Furman were excused, and Lehner, Bub and Abbott absent without excuse.

The Financial Secretary reported receipts for the week, $60.50; expenses, $103.75; received on subscription for campaign fund, $50.75; previously reported, $96.54; total for campaign fund, $147.29. Local Syracuse ordered due stamps. Local Queens County sent $20 for due stamps and $1 for the campaign fund, contributed by a friend before the subscription blanks arrived.

The Corresponding Secretary reported that party work was being seriously neglected in Queens County. It was voted that Comrade Gerber be requested to represent the State Committee in this work, to call a special meeting of the local and call the primaries and county convention.

Comrade Caspar of Local Fort Edward wrote that the trade unionists of that town insist upon having Comrade Hanford as the principal speaker for the demonstration on Labor Day to be held by Central Labor Union. The Committee on Speakers and Tours reported that arrangements had been completed some time ago for Hanford to speak at Utica on Labor Day, while on his tour of the state, but that some other Socialist speaker would be secured for our trade union friends of Fort Edward.

Corresponding Secretary Slobodin reported the vote on the new state party constitution as follows:

Article I: Section 1—for, 387; against, 1; Sec. 2—for, 387; against, 1; Sec. 3—for, 387; against, 1; Sec. 4—for, 378; against, 1; Sec. 5—for, 384; against, 2; Sec. 6—for, 390; against, 1; Sec. 7—for, 384; against, 3; Sec. 8—for, 390; against, 2; Sec. 9—for, 377; against, 7; Sec. 10—for, 388; Sec. 11—for, 391; Sec. 12—for, 386; against, 9; Sec. 13—for, 395; Sec. 14—for, 382; against, 15; Sec. 15—for, 386; Sec. 16—for, 397; Sec. 17—for, 355; against, 17.

Art. II: Sec. 1—for, 384; Sec. 2—for, 378; against, 4; Sec. 3—for, 346; against, 24; Sec. 4—for, 386; against, 8; Sec. 5—for, 387; Sec. 6—for, 370; against, 17; Sec. 7—for, 385; Sec. 8—for, 385; Sec. 9—for, 386; Sec. 10—for, 387; Sec. 11—for, 385; Sec. 12—for, 370; against, 7; Sec. 13—for, 379; against, 7; Sec. 14—for, 387.

Art. III: Sec. 1—for, 361; Sec. 2—for, 361; Sec. 3—for, 341; against, 10.

Art. IV: Sec. 1—for, 319; against, 1. Resolution—for, 280; against, 21.

The full text of the draft of constitution and resolution on which this vote was taken was printed in The Worker of July 20.

The Secretary also reported that a light vote had been polled for fraternal delegate to the Socialist convention of Canada, as follows: James F. Carey, 80; Josephine R. Cole, 5; T. J. Hagerty, 12; G. R. Hammond, 1; Max Hayes, 18; Frederick Krafft, 7; A. M. Simons, 4; Moses Smith, 1; John Spargo, 135; A. F. Strambach, 1; H. Gaylord Wilshire, 105; total, 369.

Communications were read and filed from Middletown, Watertown, Rochester, and Buffalo, all of which showed that this campaign was to be the most active and interesting one ever held in this state and announced that extraordinary exertions were being made to build up campaign fund; also from Mt. Vernon, which especially reported great success in this matter.

Two reports of vote were received from Buffalo, one of which gave no figures, and consequently could not be considered. The report sent by Comrade Shaffer, giving definite results, was accepted by the State Committee.

Middletown reported arrangements for a large meeting when our candidate for Governor speaks there.

State Organizer Spring reported great opportunities for work in the western part of state. He will be in New York City for a few days about October 1 to help along that campaign, but the locals up the state are insisting upon his devoting much time to them. Syracuse has asked his services for one full week during October, as have also Buffalo, Watertown, and Rochester. Comrade Spring reported that he had held two large public meetings recently in Rochester, and spoke also in Batavia, Lockport, and Niagara Falls. He expects to organize a local in Hudson in a few days. He will probably speak every night during September. He has also made all arrangements for Comrade Vail's tour of the state.

A letter from Watertown was received regarding the campaign fund.

Comrade Warren Atkinson, candidate for State Comptroller, submitted his letter of acceptance, which was referred to the Committee on Literature.

Local Gloversville reported they had received campaign literature. A telegram was received from Comrade Hanford, calling for more literature up the state, as there is a great demand for it. Newburgh sent a request for literature.

A report received from Kings County stated that their local nominated Comrade Hillquit as candidate for National Committeeman. A communication was received from National Secretary Greenbaum.

The Committe on Literature reported that the campaign booklet will be ready for distribution in a very few days. The State Committee requests all organizations throughout the state to order this booklet, as it will contain really what is sought by all who are becoming interested in the Social Democratic Party and wish to know something of our candidates and principles. It will contain portraits of candidates, biographies of Hanford and Brown, full list of state candidates, state platform, extracts from the letters of acceptance received from our candidates, and quotations from some of their speeches, Socialist articles on the Beef Trust, the Coal Miners' Strike, and other subjects, together with an article on "The Tragedy of the Workingmen's Vote," by Spargo, also cuts illustrating the class struggle. This booklet is, without doubt, one of the finest campaign documents ever issued, as well as a great means for spreading Socialism. It will be of pocket size, thirty-two pages, with handsome title-page and transparent waterproof paper cover. It will be sold to locals at $5.50 per thousand copies.

The Committe also reported that the 100,000 leaflets by Hanford had been received and were being distributed throughout the state.

On motion, the Literature Committee was instructed to have printed 50,000 copies of another leaflet, to be ready for distribution within ten days; also to have printed immediately 25,000 copies of the German leaflet written by Comrade Jonas.

The Literature Agent reported that 100,000 throwaway cards had been printed and were now on hand for distribution to locals; that campaign subscription lists have been sent to every local in the state, and that Local New York had made request for a second supply; that samples of the leaflet had been sent to all secretaries and a large number had already sent orders for large quantities. He requests all comrades to collect money on subscription lists and states that more may be had by applying to H. Reich, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City. These lists will be sent to all progressive organization.

The State Committee will meet again next Monday, September 1.

H. C. BOWERMAN,
Recording Secretary.

IMPORTANT INSTRUCTIONS.

The New York State Committee of the Social Democratic Party requests all the comrades, and especially the officers of the locals, to pay particular attention in the agitation during the ensuing campaign to the following points:

1. Every piece of printed matter—card, handbill, leaflet, or poster—issued for agitation purposes by any comrade or local belonging to the Social Democratic Party should have the emblem of the party—the Arm and Torch—displayed on it in prominent form, and the name—Social Democratic Party—printed on it in large type. Reason: If you advocate Socialism without mentioning the party, the Socialist Labor Party—an organization existing to satisfy the petty malignity of a few individuals—may get the benefit of your agitation. If you do not further identify the Social Democratic Party by mentioning its emblem on the ballot—the Arm and Torch—the Liberal Democratic party (a Republican makeshift which is likely to appear on the ballot this year) may reap the result of your work. The burden of your placards should be: Vote for the Social Democratic Party under the Arm and Torch! Vote for the candidate of the Social Democratic Party for Governor—Benjamin Hanford!

2. In addressing an audience or in introducing a speaker, do not fail to impress upon the audience by reasonably frequent reiteration that the meeting is held under the auspices of the Social Democratic Party, an official party having for its emblem the Arm and Torch, and whose place on the ballot is in the fifth column. Reason: The so-called Socialist Labor Party's place on the ballot will be on the left side of the Social Democratic Party. If the Liberal Democratic Party has its ticket on the ballot it will be on the right side of the Social Democratic Party. You will see how important it is to inform the voter how he should vote, if he desires to vote for the Social Democratic Party.

3. Locals which are unable to arrange meetings often should concentrate their efforts on the distribution of Social Democratic Party literature. The locals and comrades are especially warned not to handle from now until election any literature which does not bear the name of the Social Democratic Party and its emblem—the Arm and Torch, in a conspicuous place. If you have such literature on hand put the stamp of your local on its cover before giving it out. Order your literature from New York.

STATE COMMITTEE.
SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

ORGANIZER SPRING'S WORK.

State Organizer Spring is working away in his characteristic quiet and effective fashion. We give some account of his doings of last week.

On Monday, August 18, he held a good meeting in the Seventeenth Ward of Rochester. Heretofore, although there was a large Socialist vote, there was only a German branch of the Social Democratic Party in the ward. Spring's meetings resulted in the formation of a branch composed of English-speaking members, and other similar branches are to follow.

On Tuesday, Spring visited Batavia, where he got in touch with a large number of trade unionists and distributed a hundred copies of The Worker. He has arranged for some of the Rochester comrades to visit Batavia soon, to hold a meeting and distribute more Socialist literature.

Wednesday found the State Organizer at Buffalo, in which city and vicinity he spent several days. With local comrades he spoke at Turner Hall on Wednesday evening, where two new members were gained for the party and two new subscribers for The Worker. Tuesday was spent in consultation with Buffalo comrades and planning of future work.

The following day Comrade Spring visited Niagara Falls. This local is a newly organized one, but it is getting on well and will make a showing at the polls. The comrades have arranged to have H. Gaylord Wilshire address a public meeting there in the near future. Comrade Hursh, who is a local speaker, will address meetings in several neighboring towns. An active campaign in the way of distribution of literature will also be carried on.

On Saturday, Comrade Spring went to Lockport and met some unionists, in whose company he visited one of the largest machine shops in the place and distributed fifty copies of The Worker and other literature, getting two subscriptions besides. He was cordially invited to return and address the Carpenters' Union at an early date.

Monday and Tuesday of this week were spent in organization work and planning for the campaign in Buffalo, and a mass meeting was arranged for Wednesday evening at the Grand Opera House, on Genesee and Elicott streets. There are three branches of the party in Buffalo, and a central committee will be organized. In spite of opposition from the clergy and interference by the police, propaganda is being carried on and recruits are joining the party. The picnic last Sunday was a success, financially and socially. Comrades Allman, Spear, and Spring spoke at the partk.

Reports from every point that Comrade Spring has visited show that he is a good speaker and a good organizer. Comrades or sympathizers of the Social Democratic Party who live in cities or towns where the party has as yet no local organization should communicate with the State Committee with a view to getting him to visit them and help organize.

PARTY LITERATURE FOR NEW YORK STATE.

To the Socialists of the State of New York.

Comrades:—As the time for gubernatorial and congressional elections draws nearer, the contest between the Social Democratic Party and the two old parties of Capital grows sharper. In order that the workers' side of the political question may be seen in its true light, the State Committee proposed to organize in every locality and set the Socialists to work. The principles of our party must be explained to the workingmen throughout the state. One important thing that we have to do, in which every comrade or sympathizer can help, is to put our party literature into the hands of every wage-worker in the state before Election Day—and the sooner the better.

HANFORD'S LEAFLET.

The State Committee has issued a leaflet written by Ben Hanford, our candidate for Governor, for especial use during the campaign. It contains the following headings:

1. What Workingmen's Votes Can Do.
2. Benefits and Limitations of Trade Unionism.
3. How to Spend Five Thousand a Year and Keep It.
4. What to Do About It.
5. How to Do It.
6. Vote for Your Own Class.
7. What the Social Democratic Party Would Do.

The leaflet also bears the party name and emblem and the state ticket and platform.

Locals are requested to send in their orders immediately for a supply of this leaflet, which will be sent postpaid at the following rates: Two thousand copies, $2.75; one thousand, $1.50; five hundred, $1. Smaller quantities will

BROWN FOR LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.

Personal Sketch of the Man Chosen for Second Place on Social Democratic Ticket.

William Thurston Brown was born in Medusa, N. Y., in 1851. His early education was received in the common schools. He was prepared for college at Starkey Seminary and was graduated from Yale University in 1880 and from Yale Theological Seminary in 1895.

His life has been spent thus far in teaching, preaching and writing. As a student of history and affairs, he early became convinced that the thing of supreme importance is life. As a preacher it has been the unvarying purpose of his efforts to emphasize the sanctity of human life here and now. That purpose compelled a gradual departure from accepted theological standards, and in 1886 he was the subject of a trial for heresy, at Madison, Connecticut. Further study and reflection convinced him of the truth of the materialistic conception of history, and that industrial, social and political forms and institutions, as well as personal character, are very largely the product of a system of economic mastership and slavery, which system maintains its existence because of the private ownership of the land and of the machinery of production. He has, therefore, cast in his lot with those who would bring about the emancipation of Labor.

In 1898 he became pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church in Rochester. Of his work there the Rochester "Herald," which has no leaning to Socialism, but which was compelled to require the manly worth of the man, said, at the time of his resignation:

"No Rochester pastor has been more before the public in the last three years, subject both to criticism and eulogy, than the pastor of Plymouth Church. As a preacher, scholar, and thinker, Mr. Brown has taken high rank in this city. At the outset of his ministerial career in Rochester, four years ago, he attracted attention as one of the most liberal thinkers and most fearless preachers this city has seen or heard. The 'Herald' has printed Mr. Brown's sermons each Monday morning almost from the first year of his ministry here, so that the public generally has become more familiar with his ideas than with those of any other local preacher. In the early days Mr. Brown devoted himself mainly to theological subjects, treating them with a liberality of view not known in this city before. His sermons were couched in most eloquent language, far removed from the sugestion of sensationalism. Those who disagreed radically with the preacher's conclusions could not but be impressed with his earnestness of purpose, his sincerity of aim, and the scholarly training of the man.

"Here was no charlatan straining after effects, seeking notoriety through sensational preaching, but a fearless, eloquent, brilliant student of men and of books, proclaiming in the clearest and most forcible language possible the result of his independent investigations in the field of theology.

"For the last year or more Mr. Brown has been devoting himself in his pulpit utterances almost exclusively to the treatment of social and economic problems in their various phases. Oftentimes his evening sermon has been divorced entirely from theology and directed to labor questions that were suggested by current events."

Some two years ago Mr. Brown formally identified himself with the Socialist movement and joined the local organization of the Social Democratic Party in his city. He has proven himself a devoted worker for the cause and has won the love of his comrades and the respect of all workingmen and all progressive people who came in contact with him.

His fearless treatment of the labor question from his pulpit alienated not a few of the wealthier members of his church. They could approve a great deal of liberality on purely other-world questions and would have supported their pastor warmly had he limited his discussions of the labor problem to counsels of moderation and abstract brotherly love, enjoining contentment on the workers and pleading with the capitalists to be generous and grant their employees a living wage. But he was no compromiser; he insisted on the right of the workers to the full product of their labor and the absolute wrong of class rule, and this was too much for the aristocrats. In their places, as they withdrew, workingmen thronged to hear him and learned to trust him as a comrade and a friend.

In May last, Comrade Brown came to the conclusion that he could do better work for the cause of the workers by resigning his position. He was influenced partly by the consideration that his presence, by depriving the church of the support of its wealthier members, put too heavy a burden on those who remained loyal, and perhaps still more by a feeling that the traditions of the pulpit made it difficult for him to utter his sincere thoughts and feelings. His parting with the church society was without any bitterness and he carried with him the respect even of his opponents.

William Thurston Brown is a remarkable man—remarkable chiefly, perhaps, in this: That living the life of a student and a clergyman, he has yet been able to see the condition and, what is more difficult, to enter into the thoughts and feelings of the wage-working class. It is one of the hardest things in the world for a man to think and feel with a class in which he has not actually been born and bred. Even with the best of intentions, the liberal minded clergyman or lawyer or teacher or business man who tries to work with and for the labor movement seldom really succeeds in entering into its spirit. Comrade Brown is one of the few men who has done this difficult thing.

If there is a trait in his character more remarkable and more valuable than this, it is—not untiring energy, not intellectual keenness, not breadth of view, not even sterling honesty, all of which he has and all of which are good—but a gift rarer than these, that of rigid intellectual honesty, which will not let him remain undecided where decision is possible, will not let him compromise or "trim" to gain applause or avoid censure, will not let him suppress any part of the truth any more than it will let him lie outright.

He is a man who will fight unceasingly for the cause he believes in till victory is won and made secure or till he dies in arms. That is the sort of man that the working class needs.

This is the estimate of a friend, it is true, but of a friend who puts the party above all men and who is not given to undue praise of individuals.

William Thurston Brown is a man who, in the office of Lieutenant-Governor of this great state, would as fully deserve the implicit confidence of the working class as would Benjamin Hanford in the office of Governor. More than that could not be said in his praise.

Ernest H. Crosby has said of Comrade Brown: "Clear, concise, forcible, in dead earnest, I know of few speakers as telling as William Thurston Brown when he is standing up for the rights of man. It is the intensity with which he feels that gives him the power of expression."

Edwin Markham, after reading Brown's little pamphlet, "The Real Religion of To-day," wrote: "It is a remarkable utterance—one of the greatest sermons of modern times. In its thirty small pages are crammed more truth than some preachers pour into the sermons of a lifetime."

Franklin H. Wentworth says of him: "I regard William Thurston Brown as one of the ablest and noblest apostles of the new day. As a lecturer and as a man he must bring power and genuineness and nobility to any pulpit or any platform."

HANFORD'S TOUR.

Ben Hanford, Social Democratic candidate for Governor of New York, will speak at the following cities on dates named:

Schenectady, Thursday evening, August 28.

Gloversville, Friday evening, August 29.

Johnstown, Saturday, evening, August 30.

Utica, Monday evening, September 1.

Rome, Tuesday evening, September 2.

Watertown, Wednesday evening, September 3.

Dexter, Thursday evening, September 4.

Corning, Saturday evening, September 6.

Local comrades should spare no effort to make Hanford's meetings successful from their side—he will attend to his side. Advertise the meetings in advance by careful distribution of cards or handbills, by signs in public places, by notices in the local papers, by talking to neighbors and fellow workmen, and by handing around copies of The Worker and other Social Democratic literature with the statement that the head of the Social Democratic ticket is to speak at such and such a time and place.

—Tickets for the party picnic may be had at the office of The Worker, 184 William street; the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street; the W. E. A. Club Houses, 206 E. Eighty-sixth street, and 3309 Third avenue, and other party headquarters. Tickets, 25 cents; admission at the gate, 15 cents.

ROCHESTER NOMINATES.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., August 26.—A nominating convention of the Social Democratic Party of the Seventh Judicial District of New York will convene at 95 Main street, Rochester, on Saturday, September 6, at 8 p. m. sharp. Locals in the district are asked to make note of this and be sure to be represented. The district includes, besides Rochester, Locals Newark, Corning, and Hornellsville.

The Rochester Social Democrats held a very enthusiastic convention to nominate Congressional, county, and legislative candidates, with the following result:

For Congress—Charles R. Bach.
For Assembly, Second District—K. Kennon.
For Senate, Forty-third District—M. Michaels.
For Sheriff—William Hammen.
For Treasurer—Charles Zarrener.
For County Purchasing Agent—Gad Martindale.
For School Commissioners—Mrs. Mabel Kenyon and A. Blutau.

Rochester will have a red-hot Social Democratic campaign this year, as usual—only hotter than usual.

CAN'T SHAKE HIM.

Comrade Dugan of Cleveland writes to the editor: "I just noticed that my sub for The Worker has run out. Say, you just tell them they can't shake me. Send her right along. Inclosed you will find a money order for the next year."

—New York comrades, come and bring your friends to Sulzer's Westchester Park on Sunday, September 7.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Five New Locals Formed Last Week.

Comrades Collins, Slick, Swift, Fischer, Barkowski, Ufert, Mother Jones, and Others Do Good Work in Coal Field—Sharp Murder and Baer's Cant Rouse Indignation—Swift Arrested.

PHILADELPHIA, August 25.—Comrade Felder presided at to-night's meeting of the State Committee. Charters were granted to new locals at Honey Brook, McAdoo, New Boston, and Gilberton, in Schuylkill County, and Hacklebarnie, Carbon County.

Comrade Slick returned from the coal fields to-day and submitted a report of work done in conjunction with Comrade Collins. Interest and enthusiasm are constantly on the increase and it is altogether impossible to meet the demands for speakers at meetings. Some good local talent is appearing and taking part in the work.

Comrade Collins spoke to an immense audience in Shenandoah, within fifty feet of the headquarters of General Gobin of the state militia, and the dressing down those "Sunday soldiers" got neither the soldiers that squirmed nor the citizens who cheered and applauded will ever forget.

Mother Jones, by a few speeches, pointing the workers to the ballot-box as the place of their greatest power, has had a wonderful effect.

Comrade Charles Ufert of New Jersey returns home after two weeks in the Lackawanna district, and reports that no "alliance" ticket of any kind that gives comfort to capitalism has or will have any footing there. The Socialist ticket is recognized as the workingmen's and union men's ticket.

Fischer of Philadelphia and Barkowski of Chicago have more meetings of Polish-speaking people than they can cover in Luzerne County for the present, but they will shortly visit the other counties. That Polish speakers were needed and are appreciated is demonstrated by the fact that before a speaker came among them five hundred and fifty striking miners in one town assessed themselves one cent each and had the Socialist platform translated and printed in the Polish and Lithuanian languages.

More County Tickets.

The Lycoming County convention was held at Williamsport on August 18 and the following ticket was nominated: Congress—Dr. C. A. Reese, Coudersport; State Senator—Dr. Jacob Stickel, Williamsport; Assembly—Dr. W. P. Logue and John Wurster, Williamsport, and Alex. Decker, Clinton; Register—Samuel Hirst, Williamsport; Treasurer—Daniel Romig, Williamsport; County Commissioners—Wm. H. Hoffman, Clinton and Peter B. Zechman, Williamsport; Auditors—David M. Strauss, Williamsport, and R. P. Eger, Clinton.

Montgomery County has also held its convention and the ticket stands as follows: Assembly—M. G. Brey, Sumneytown; Harry Welser, Pottstown; Harry Brook, Beyersford; Harry Miller, Linfield; J. Bartholomew, Red Hill; Senator—E. H. Young, Pottstown; Congress—Wm. Jaques, Royersford; Recorder—Hugh G. Ayers, Royersford; Register—Eugene Strohl, Pottstown; Clerk of Court—Josiah Frederick, Pottstown; County Commissioners—C. F. Wein and John Boyle, Royersford; Director of Poor—L. H. Sheaffer, Lansdale. The County Committee is composed of E. H. Young, Wm. Jaques, and Hugh G. Ayers.

Swift Arrested.

The comrades of Hazleton were denied the right of speaking on the streets. Comrade Morrison I. Swift announced by posters that he would defy the orders of the mayor and speak on Saturday, August 23. The whole police force of the town turned out. Comrade Swift was arrested and fined $2, which he refused to pay, and will stay ni jail as long as they want him till the case is brought to trial. Able legal counsel has been secured. A newspaper reports that when Swift was arrested a thousand people followed him to the City Hall, cheering for Socialism.

Comrade J. W. Slayton, candidate for Governor, will speak at the following places: September 4, New Brighton; 5, Butler; 6, West Newton; 7, Charleroi; 8, Connellsville; 9, Cokeville; 10, Black Lick.

The Murder of Sharp.

Patrick Sharp was murdered at Nesquehoning, Monday, August 18. He was a comrade and an active member of Local Mahanoy City. Ten thousand people attended his funeral. Father McCannon in his funeral oration said: "He was shot down like a dog without a chance to defend himself. Ie was a cold-blooded murder." He character Baird Snyder, Superintendent of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, as an anarchist for trying to justify the murder.

George F. Baer, in a signed letter, claims that God is his infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interests of this country to him and a few Christian friends.

Two very taking texts are now used by our speakers in the field:

1. Comrade Patrick Sharp was murdered in the interest of the perpetuation of capitalism and the best way to avenge his death is for the workers to vote as he would have voted had he been spared, against the murderous system of capitalism.

2. Not God, as Mr. Baer says, but political power in the hands of the capitalist class, has given Messrs. Morgan and Baer the mines and railroads; and the same power controlled by the working class will make the mines and the railroads and all other means of industry the property of the working class who have produced them.

Assistant Secretary.

PERSECUTING LABOR EDITORS.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa.—Chas. Thain and J. R. Mullery, editors of the "Courier-Herald," the local labor paper, have again been arrested on twenty-four charges of criminal libel and each held in bail of $12,000. They are already under bail of $11,000 each on twenty-two charges brought against them about a month ago by the same prosecutors, who are tools of the "operators."

CRUEL MURDER AND PIOUS CANT.

"The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church," said Tertullian, in the days when the giant power of the Roman Empire was trying, by ruthless persecution, to crush the rising power of Christianity.

Again and again, tyrants have had the chance to learn by experience that persecution only weakens the persecutors and strengthens the hands of their opponents. But tyrants never learn.

The tyrants of the coal fields have not learned. The blood of our brave comrade, Patrick Sharp, murdered by their hirelings and in their evil cause, cries out against them from the ground.

They will not learn; they have no ears to harken;
They turn their faces from the eyes of Fate.
Their gay-lit halls shut out the skies
that darken—
But lo! This dead man, knocking at the gate!

But the blood of Patrick Sharp has not been shed in vain. The memory of him, true to his class in word and deed, in life and death, will live as an inspiration and an incentive to his brothers; and the Coal Kings will yet rue the day of their seeming triumph.

Before the body of their victim was yet borne to the grave, the leader of this murderous gang, President Baer, had the effrontery to say that he and his accomplices had been especially delegated by Almighty God to control the mines and the lives of the men who work them.

It is a most notable fact, all through history, that the time when the insolence of tyrants reaches its highest pitch marks the beginning of their speedy fall. We may take Baer's astounding assumption of divine authority as a happy omen.

More than that, we may almost thank him for it. He has done more for Socialism than any of our own speakers could do. He has set the question clearly before the workers:

Do the mines belong to Baer and his friends by special gift of the Almighty? Or do they, by God's gift, by Nature's bounty, or by the necessities of human welfare, rightfully belong to the men who work them?

It is for the working class to answer. If God has given the mines to Baer, then this strike is a wicked revolt against God's will. If not, it is high time we ousted the impudent usurper and restored them to the producers.

There can be no lasting compromise between these two positions. If the mines rightfully belong to the capitalists, by divine right or whatever other title, then strikes are wrong and the use of injunctions and deputies and militia is right. If we say these things are wrong, then it must be because we claim that the miners have a right to the wealth they produce and to the means of producing it, and that the capitalists have no right to control them.

Abram S. Hewitt is a "most eminent citizen" of New York. He is the idol of the self-styled "respectable elements" of both old parties. In an interview last Monday he, too, put the question clearly. From the standpoint of a capitalist—Mr. Hewitt being himself a large stockholder of the Erie, and therefore qualified to give an impartial opinion—he declared that the miners were fundamentally wrong.

The claims of the union, he says, "are in contravention of the principles of free government. * * * It is notorious that the real object of the strike is to secure recognition of the miners' union as an authority entitled to decide upon the rates of wages and the conditions of labor in the coal fields. * * * The concession of this demand will make Mr. Mitchell the dictator of the coal business."

Miners, which would you rather have as the "dictator of the coal business"—Baer, claiming power by the grace of God and enforcing it with deputies' rifles, or Mitchell, elected by your votes and administering your affairs by the simple power of intelligence and unquestioned integrity?

You have opened and worked the mines. You have done all the useful labor in them. Do you not think you are competent to own the mines and to choose men from your own ranks to manage them in place of the capitalists who now mismanage them?

That is the simple question before you, and the time is approaching when you will be called upon to answer it.

A vote for Republican Pennypacker, the political associate of Stone, who commissioned the murderers, will be an endorsement of the words and deeds of Baer and Hewitt.

A vote for Democrat Pattison, the man who sent similar murderers against the steel workers at Homestead will be an endorsement of the words and deeds of Baer and Hewitt.

A vote for Slayton and the Socialist ticket will be a vote for yourselves.

And this question does not concern the coal miners alone. Virtually the same conditions exist in every industry and in every part of the land. A vote for Hanford in New York State will be a vote against Morgan, against Baer, against Hewitt, against injunctions and legalized murder, a vote for industrial freedom and industrial peace.

MORE CARPENTERS FOR SOCIALISM.

Brotherhood Local No. 493 of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Endorses Evansville Resolutions.

MT. VERNON, N. Y., August 23—At the last meeting of Local Union No. 493 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of this place, the resolution received from Local Union No. 90 of Evansville, Ind., were taken up and discussed and a motion to endorse them and declare sympathy with the movement was carried by a majority vote.

This union has over two hundred members and sends two delegates to the national convention of the Brotherhood at Atlanta. One of the delegates is a Socialist, as are also several of the local officers.

J. B.

The Evansville resolutions, declaring for Socialism were printed in The Worker of August 17 and the resolution of Troy Local No. 78 in last week's issue.

NEW YORK COUNTY.

The County Convention of the Social Democratic Party of New York County was held at the Labor Lyceum last Saturday. Sixty-four delegates were present, representing nearly every assembly district in the county.

L. D. Mayes, our candidate for Attorney-General, was chosen chairman, with H. R. Wallace as vice-chairman and Arthur Kahn as secretary.

The convention proceeded to make nominations for three Judges of the Supreme Court, the choice falling to Leon Malkiel, Henry L. Slobodin, and Jacob Hillquit.

Comrades Ph. H. Schmidt, L. D. Mayes, and H. C. Bowerman were chosen as a committee to fill possible vacancies, as provided by the law, after which the convention adjourned sine die.

McGRADY IN BOSTON.

The well known Socialist orator of Kentucky, Father Thomas McGrady, will lecture under the auspices of the East Boston Socialist Club at Lyceum Hall, Sumner and Maverick Square, East Boston, on Monday evening, September 15. His subject will be, "The Solution of the Labor Problem." An admission of 15 cents will be charged, to defray expenses. For tickets address Jos. Spero, 346 Saratoga street, East Boston.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

Comrades, it costs money to run even a Socialist campaign, and for a Socialist campaign the money must be provided by the rank and file. Make your contributions to the campaign fund. Give early and often and liberally—but early, by all means; better a dollar now than two in October.

The only Power that will ever succeed in overcoming the Railway Trust will be the political power of the working class organized in the Socialist Party. Peter is too transparent a sham.

Every comrade should be present, with his family and his friends, at the picnic of Local New York, at Sulzer's Westchester Park, on Sunday, September 7. Tickets can be had at the office of The Worker, the Labor Lyceum, the Workingmen's Educational Association's clubhouses, and other party headquarters. The purpose of the picnic is to raise funds for the campaign. We shall need a great deal of money, and this picnic should therefore be made to surpass all previous ones.

With the railway trainman it is a case of "be damned if you do and be damned if you don't." If he refuses to run his train at a dangerous rate of speed or under dangerous conditions, he is "fired" and blacklisted. If he obeys and an "accident" results, he is "fired" and blacklisted, with the chance of being prosecuted, in the bargain. Naturally, he can do nothing but take the risk, while the capitalists take the profit or the insurance, as the case may be—giving a share to the old parties' campaign funds for keeping quiet. Socialist workingmen as district attorneys and judges would change all this.

President Baer asks us to trust in "himself and God." Our faith would be stronger if Baer would withdraw from the firm. A vote for the Socialist ticket would, in the opinion of the Coal Kings, prove the voter a rank atheist. The Cotton Kings talked the same way about anti-slavery voters, half a century ago.

This and following issues of The Worker will go, singly or in bundles, to many persons throughout the country who have not ordered it and who have not even seen it before, having been sent to them by comrades and friends of the cause. To these new readers we would say: We ask you to read The Worker with an open mind and consider the principles it advocates; if you approve of the principles and like the paper, we ask you to pass it on among your friends and get them interested; and if you feel that you can afford a quarter or a half-dollar for a six-months' or a year's subscription, you many know that in so doing you are not only securing the paper for yourself, but are helping us to introduce it to still other readers.

The Republican party is the agent of the trusts, and the Democratic party would like to get the job. That is the whole difference between them.

Russell Says trusts are bad for the country. He must have got "frozen out" recently.—A vote for Ben Hanford is a vote in favor of the workers owning the trusts.

The "operators" say Morgan won't interfere in the coal strike. Why should he? Neither will his good friend Roosevelt. Two years from now the workers will have a chance to elect a president who won't love Morgan so well.

Before Millionaire Fair's body was cold, his nearest relatives began quarreling over his fortune and exposing all sorts of closet skeletons. How capitalism does foster domestic virtue and family affection! Wicked Socialists, who would overthrow this lovely ideal!

The Arm and Torch is the official emblem of the Social Democratic Party on the ballot in New York—the Arm of Labor, upholding the Torch of Enlightenment.

Poor Schwab! Aren't you sorry he had to work so hard managing the Steal Trust? Let's give him a long vacation by voting for Socialism.

Common mechanics and laborers in the steel mills break down, too, at an early age. And they don't get a million a year when they are at work nor leave of absence with pay when they are sick. They voted to give these little advantages to Schwab.

The defenders of capitalism profess to think it "unwomanly" of Mother Jones to act as a union organizer and strike leader. Maybe they think it is womanly for a woman meekly to assent to a system which takes her children from school and sends them into the mine or the factory.

The Democratic "Journal" wants to "suppress" the "criminal trusts" and to protect the "honest" ones. When the "Journal" can show us one solitary trust that is not criminal, one solitary capitalist organization that is not a "thieving association," then we will be ready to discuss the advisability of voting the Democratic ticket. Till then, we stand equally against big and little robbers and against both the old parties which play the part of "fence" for the thieves.

Do YOU realize that someone else is waiting for YOU to set a good example by contributing a dollar or more to the campaign fund. He may not know it, himself; but it is the fact, and YOUR contribution will hurry his in.

Too bad that United States Attorney-General Knox of the Steel Trust is called away to Paris just now. He would so have liked to stay and smash the Railway Trust. But duty calls, and Knox obeys.

TELL THE TRUTH AND SHAME THE DEVIL!

Under the headline, "A Chance for Socialists," the "Catholic Union and Times" of Buffalo, Bishop Quigley's organ, editorially notes and commends the action of the "Catholic Telegraph" of Cincinnati in opening a fund for the benefit of the striking miners and quotes extensively from a letter of Father Curran of Wilkes Barre in the strikers' favor. The editorial continues:

"The purpose we have in view, however, is to direct the attention of Socialists here in Buffalo to the fact that it is a Catholic priest who is making this struggle for justice for men who work. According to the Pittsburg 'Observer,' Socialists are endeavoring to profit by the strike, a number now being in the mining region distributing tons of literature and organizing groups and clubs and the like where possible. NOT ONE OF THOSE PROPAGANDISTS IS HELPING THE MINE-WORKERS by striving to get the mine-operators to do right. * * * The 'Telegraph's' miners' fund is still in progress. How many Buffalo Socialists will contribute to it? How many will in Cincinnati?"

Let us say right here that we give all credit to Father Curran and several other priests in the mining region for bravely speaking the truth about this strike, in spite of the influence of the mine-owners; and further, that we give all credit to the Cincinnati "Catholic Telegraph" for raising funds to help the strikers.

But for the editor of the Buffalo "Catholic Union and Times" we have quite another feeling. If this gentleman is intellectually qualified to fill an editorial chair—and we do not doubt that—he must, before writing on the coal strike and the Socialist movement, prepare himself by reading the various organs of the United Mine Workers and of the Socialist Party and the local labor papers in the coal field. If he has done this he knows:

1. That the National Committee of the Socialist Party began raising money for the strike fund of the U. M. W. of A. long before the Cincinnati "Catholic Telegraph" announced its intention of doing so;

2. That the Pennsylvania State Committee of the Socialist Party is dividing its funds equally, sending half to the union and spending half for Socialist propaganda;

3. That many individuals and local organizations of the Socialist Party have made appropriations or collected money and sent it directly to Secretary Wilson;

4. That the great majority of the members of the Socialist Party are also members of the unions of their respective trades and are contributing and actively working in these unions for the relief of the strikers.

The Socialists of Buffalo and Cincinnati and elsewhere will continue to contribute through the agencies of their own party and their own unions, not through that of the "Catholic Telegraph"—just as Bishop Quigley, if he contributes at all, will assuredly not do it through our organization. We hope these church agencies will raise even more for this cause than we do. They should do so, for the Catholic Church is a larger and infinitely richer body than the Socialist Party.

But no amount of liberality in the giving of money can atone for wanton and unblushing lying. We commend to the editor of the Buffalo "Catholic Union and Times" a careful and prayerful reading of the fifth chapter and twentieth verse of the book of Deuteronomy: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Get out your Bible, sir. Commit that verse to memory. Then, tell the truth and shame the Devil.

The suit against the Northern Securities Company—the Railway Trust—is to be pressed vigorously, say the Administration papers. Certainly—until Election Day. Teddy knows his business and Morgan and Hill are not scared.

NATIONALIZATION AND SOCIALIZATION.

The trust problem is up for discussion. It will not be downed again, because the logic of events will force it upon us irresistibly. There will be a great deal of well meaning, but confused talk, of phrase-mongery, of demagogic platitudes, and of sincere quest for the truth and the way out.

From the Socialist point of view it is important to guard against ill-digested statements as well as against loose and misleading definitions. While general ideas about the doctrines of Socialism have become widely diffused, close and correct definitions of its aims and methods become necessary to head off errors and misstatements.

No error is met with more frequently than the assumption that government ownership of the trusts is Socialism pure and undefiled, as if nationalization and socialization meant one and the same thing.

It is timely, therefore, clearly and repeatedly to restate the Socialist position.

The fundamental proposition of Socialism is that the workers, now separated from their tools, must regain possession of them in order to secure the full fruits of their toil. The ownership of the tools and means of production by a non-working class is the means by which that class takes from the worker so large a share of his product as to leave him only a bare subsistence.

Once in possession and full control of their tools, the workers can easily arrange the system of production and distribution of commodities to satisfy every want.

Starting from these simple premises, it will at once become plain that government ownership or nationalization may be a state of affairs very far removed from the Socialist ideal.

Let us examine what would happen if, by any chance, our present government should successfully undertake the nationalization of the railroads, the telegraphs, telephones, and mines.

It would acquire those properties from their present so-called owners, on a more or less fair valuation, paying them in United States bonds. Those bonds would bear interest and be guaranteed by the credit of the whole country.

The present shareholders, instead of drawing dividends, more or less subject to chance, would then draw fixed interest regularly disbursed by United States officials. So would also the holders of industrial bonds of such enterprises. This interest would come from the same source from which dividends and bond interests are derived at present, namely, from the product of the workers. There would be a change in name only, and the present share and bondholders would be safer in the enjoyment of their unearned pensions.

Socialism abhors the creation of a class of drones and their fattening upon society. It abhors it not merely in the interest of the workers at whose expense such a class must subsist, but likewise in the interest of that very class itself. And yet, such a permanent do-nothing and good-for-nothing-class would be the outcome of any scheme of nationalization along the vulgar lines indicated.

Such a do-nothing class would work positive injury to society. Not performing any useful function, it must inevitably deteriorate and degenerate, scattering its vices and its poison even among the workers themselves.

Socialism, therefore, would not nor could it sanction a system of perennial large incomes without equivalent of effort. It might and probably would grant liberal, even generous, life pensions to victims of the change who are physically and mentally unfit to take part in the process of work. But such generosity would not extend beyond one generation. The second generation would have to step into the ranks like the rest and learn to be useful. Thus would aristocracy and idleness vanish.

Another vital point is that under government ownership, as commonly understood, the workers have little or no voice in the management of the enterprise in which they are employed. Under Socialism they themselves would become the managers. There could be no extraneous dictation from above.

From these few points it will appear that our present Post Office, although owned and operated by the government, is by no means a fair example of socialistic enterprise. The same is true of the many municipal railways, gas or water supplies, and all similar enterprises where the workers are neither in control nor in the enjoyment of all the fruits of their labor.

These few points suffice for any thinking Socialist in order to check misleading and confusing statements.

M. O.

The Southern cotton capitalists have started a press bureau to contradict the evidence given by a number of trustworthy investigators in regard to the horrors of child labor in the cotton mills—just as the rival rings of sugar capitalists run their press bureaus on Cuban affairs and the coal capitalists their factory for grinding out lies about the strikers. We may now expect to see the Northern dailies filling column after column with rhapsodies on the light and amusing work of the Southern children, the little fortunes they are laying up, and the tender solicitude of the mill owners about their health, their education, and their morals. For the Southern mills, be it remembered, are owned by virtually the same men who own those in New England, and they have abundant influence with the newspapers of both old parties.

THE PRIVATE STANDING ARMIES.

In another column we print an article on the private standing armies of capitalism in the United States and the denial to the workingmen of the constitutional right to bear arms. It is a subject which deserves the attention of workingmen everywhere, especially now that the fact of an irrespressible conflict between Labor and Capital is coming to be generally recognized. The recognition of this fact and of the systematic and unscrupulous use of military power by the capitalists in it has been forcibly demonstrated by the rules adopted by many trade unions, forbidding their members to join the militia.

We could, perhaps, have wished that a directly opposite policy had been found practicable—that of requiring all union men to enter the militia. The strength of the labor movement in Europe is greatly increased and the tyranny of the governments is considerably restrained by the fact that practically all the people have a military training and that the standing armies themselves are largely made up of workingmen conscious of the wrongs of their class and in full sympathy with the labor movement. History teaches us that the ruling classes are always willing to use force when necessary to maintain their power and that only the fear of resistance is able to restrain them from the most brutal excesses. If it be true, as statesmen allege, that the maintenance of great standing armies by all nations is the surest guarantee of international peace, it must be equally true that the possession of arms and the knowledge of their use by the masses of the people would be the surest guarantee against a bloody settlement of the class struggle.

The decision of the organized workers of the United States, however, is taken, for the present; and, for the present, at least, it was the only practicable one.

We do not pretend to know whether the settlement of the labor question in this country will be by peaceful methods or by the arbitrament of arms. We—the Socialists and the workingmen at large—desire it to be peaceful. If it is otherwise, the responsibility will rest upon the capitalist class—just as the blood shed in the Civil War is upon the heads of the slave-owners and their political tools, just as the blood shed in the American Revolution is upon the heads of the English merchants and their agents in Parliament.

But whatever the form of the final conflict—whether the capitalist class bow to the legally expressed will of the toiling majority or whether they resist that will and force a violent conflict—the issue cannot be doubtful, even though all the organized military force be upon the capitalist side. If history teaches us that the ruling class never scruples to use force when it dares, it teaches us also that no superiority of military power avails, in the long run, to protect a ruling class against a revolting class once aroused and intelligently organized and economically justified in its demands. In 1640, in 1776, in 1789, in 1861, the military advantage was on the side or the dominant class; but Charles I and Louis XVI lost their heads, George III lost his colonies and the Cotton Kings lost their slaves.

Speaking of the conference of central labor bodies proposed by the Milwaukee unionists, to consider the question of political action, President Gompers says:

"It may be asked whether a different policy or different conclusion would necessarily result from the formation of this projected 'new federation.' The answer to it is, if the same policy is to be pursued as is decided upon by the American Federation of Labor, then where is the necessity for this new move? In fact, the Milwaukee Trades Council bases its entire project upon the assumption of pursuing different policies than those pursued by the American Federation of Labor.

"If we are to be at all effective in securing the success for which our movement stands, when the convention of the American Federation of Labor has rendered a decision upon any given question, it should receive the acquiescence of all true trade unionists."

This reminds us of the alleged saying of the Arabian conqueror of Alexandria, in regard to the great library there: "If those books agree with the Koran, they are superfluous. If they disagree with the Koran, they are pernicious. In either case, burn them."

FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS. By Peter Kropotkin. New York. G. P. Putnam's Sons. Cloth, 250 pages.

This book deals with a phase of political economy which has, as yet, received but inadequate attention. We may quote from the preface to indicate its scope:

"Under the name of profits, rent, interest upon capital, surplus value, and the like, economists have eagerly discussed the benefits which the owners of land or capital, or some privileged nations, can derive, either from the underpaid work of the wage-laborer, or from the inferior position of one class of the community toward another class, or from the inferior economical development of one nation toward another. These profits being shared in a very unequal proportion between the different individuals, classes, and nations engaged in production, considerable pains were taken to study the present apportionment of the benefits, and its economical and moral consequences, as well as the changes in the present economical organization of society which might bring about a more equitable distribution of a rapidly accumulating wealth. It is upon questions relating to the right to that increment of wealth that the hottest battles are now fought between economists of different schools.

"In the meantime, the great question —What have we to produce, and how?' necessarily remained in the background. Political economy, as it gradually emerges from its semi-scientific stage, tends more and more to become a science devoted to the study of the needs of men and of the means of satisfying them with the least possible waste of energy—that is, a sort of physiology of society. But few economists, as yet have recognized that this is the proper domain of economists, and have attempted to treat their science from this point of view. The main subject of social economy, i. e., the economy of energy required for the satisfaction of human needs, is consequently the last subject which one expects to find treated in a concrete form in economical treatises.

"The following pages are a contribution to a portion of this vast subject. They contain a discussion of the advantages which civilized societies could derive from a combination of industrial pursuits with intensive agriculture, and of brain work with manual work."

The first two chapters of the book are devoted to "The Decentralization of Industries," the next three to "The Possibilities of Agriculture," the two following to "Small Industries and Industrial Villages," and one to "Brain Work and Manual Work," with a ninth chapter of "Conclusions." Several illustrative appendices and a fairly copious index occupy the last fifty pages of the book.

The general lines of the author's argument are indicated in the final paragraph of the passage we have quoted. He maintains, first, that industry is actually being decentralized, in the sense that industries formerly confined to certain countries or parts of countries are now being developed in various parts of the world and that the distinction between manufacturing and agricultural nations is disappearing and that this change is a desirable one, tending to the satisfaction of human needs with a less expenditure of labor.

In the second portion of the book he brings a great amount of evidence to show that agriculture is yet in its infancy, that, with the application of the results of modern science to this branch of industry, differences of soil and climate may be practically eliminated and the product enormously increased. The general introduction of intensive farming would, of course, tend to hasten the disappearance of the distinction between manufacturing and agricultural nations; the British Isles, which now import for the greater portion of their foodstuffs, paying for them by the exportation of manufactured goods, could, the author argues, by the use of intensive methods of cultivation, produce ample food for many times its present population.

The third portion, that dealing with small industries, is perhaps the most questionable part of the book. The author has a strong sentimental prejudice, quite in keeping with his Anarchist doctrines, against the factory system. Surely none of us would quarrel with him in defense of the factory system as it exists to-day; but we can hardly follow him, either in the belief that small shops, handicraft, and domestic industry are actually tending to displace the great factory in most branches of production, or in the opinion that such a change would be desirable. The persistence—even the temporary or local increase—of such small industry at the present stage of capitalist development by no means proves its general economic superiority; too often it proves nothing but the wretched poverty of the workers, the existence of a large surplus labor supply on the margin of starvation, the odious petty tyranny of bosses which drives many workers to set up small shops of their own even though they might command a better income as factory employees; and sometimes it proves only sluggish conservatism of thoroughly monopolized or "protected" capitalist industry. In the absence of restrictive laws, the clothing industry, to take one instance, shows a tendency to the development of the small sweatshop, rather than of the great factory; but, whether from a moral or a coldly economic point of view, while the great clothing factory as it now exists is far from being our ideal, the small sweatshop is infinitely worse. We can hardly believe that the revival of small industry under capitalism will be general or is a normal tendency, nor does it seem to us at all desirable; and when capitalism shall be done away with, whether the system that succeeds it should be collectivist or communist, it does not appear to us probable that such a revival of small industry would be found economically advantageous. It is, by the way, curious to observe how thoroughly the Anarchists and the reactionary individualists agree in their apotheosis of the "great middle class."

In the eighth chapter the author severely but judiciously criticizes the present system of education, which divorces science and handicraft, training a part of the people into unpractical theorists and another part into practically skilful workers with little theoretical knowledge, thus entailing great waste of both knowledge and skill, preventing the co-ordination of the two forces, and accentuating the class division from which it springs. With the judgments expressed in this chapter we can more fully agree than with anything else in the book.

Kropotkin's ideal—and he seems to believe that it will be realized by the normal development of capitalist society, if only the power of oppressive government is broken down—is of a world composed of small self-supporting communities, all of whose members are trained in the use of both brain and hand, in each of which intensive agriculture and manufacture by the methods of small industry are carried on hand in hand—not only in the same community, but by the same persons, all the people taking part in agriculture and in manufacture.

Much as we disagree with his conclusions, his methods, and some of his premises, we find this work of the versatile if somewhat superficial Kropotkin a very suggestive study and full of material which other students may put to better use.

THE BOER FIGHT FOR FREEDOM. By Michael Davitt. New York. Funk & Wagnalls Company. 1902. Cloth, 633 pages, with maps and illustrations. Price, $2.00.

"The Boer Fight for Freedom" is far from being an impartial work of history. Such a hater of English rule as Michael Davitt, especially after close association with the Boers in the field, could hardly be expected to write without bias. But an impartial account of the South African war is not to be expected for some years; for the present, we have to weigh the judgment and veracity of such writers as Davitt against such as Doyle, and make them balance as best we may.

Mr. Davitt had good opportunities for getting information, on his favorite side, at least, during the war; and his long political experience has given him a pretty thorough knowledge of the devious ways of English politics.

The book is not so well arranged as might be wished. In fact, it has obviously been "rushed" to the press. But it contains a large amount of more or less undigested information and will prove useful to the student of the Boer war and interesting to the sympathizers with the Republic.

After William Mailly had spent five weeks in the coal-strike field, he wrote:

"I consider 'Labor Politics and Socialist Politics' one of the best pamphlets to be put into the hands of the honest trade union official just coming to the front. I had a few and wherever I placed it (and I was particular about this) it did good. It is so clear and logical, and yet written in such a friendly, intimate, honest way, that it appeals directly to every intelligent and sincere labor official (especially one near the workers) with much force. I should like to have it put into the hands of all such men throughout the coal region."

The first edition having been exhausted, this pamphlet has been revised and somewhat enlarged, and the second edition is now for sale by the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York. The prices are the same as for the first edition: Single copy, 3 cents; ten copies, 20 cents; fifty, 85 cents; one hundred, $1.50.

We are assured that the Labor Day edition of the Erie "People" will be the best for propaganda work ever issued. It will have eight or twelve pages, printed on good paper, with excellent illustrations, and will contain, among other special articles, the following: "Catholics Can Be Socialists," by Father McGrady; "Men of the Mines," by Leonard D. Abbott; "A Street Car Strike and Its Lessons," by James Oneal; "The Gospel of Organization," by Peter E. Burrowes; "The Effective Worker," by D. Burgess; "The Spirit of Independence," by Ernest Unterman; "The Individual and the Movement," by Courtenay Lemon. The price will be $1.20 for one hundred copies. Cash must accompany orders. Our Esteemed Contemporaries

(and OTHERS)

Colorado Courier.

The "Courier" takes note that the authorities of Chicago are arresting the child beggars. That's right. Why cannot the little paupers crawl into some alley and starve to death quietly instead of coming out openly and flaunting their misery in the faces of their betters? We would suggest as a solution of the matter that a Coliseum be built after the pattern of the old one of Rome, and the beggar brats be fed to the circus animals that winter in or near Chicago. They would be of some use then and the spectacle would furnish a new sensation to the residents of Chicago palaces who are so hard put to it to find some way to pass the time and then, too, it would serve to make the animals fierce, so that they would get up a respectable roar occasionally. Think of the plan, gentlemen. It surely has so many merits that it deserves your earnest consideration. A subscription could be quickly raised among Chicago's snobocracy for so meritorious a cause, or a charity ball could be given and the proceeds given to erect the building. Of course the killing could be done by placing the children in your sweatshops or the Southern cotton mills, but the process would be slower, and then, too, they are already full.

The Public.

John W. Gates is one of the most "successful" men of the time. He is, therefore, worth listening to when he talks about success, as he did one day last week in a special newspaper interview given out at Saratoga. The airy way in which he scouts the growing idea that there is less chance for a boy now than formerly, rises almost to the plane of certain kinds of high art. It is delicious. Greater successes than were ever dreamed of are yet to be made, he says, but there will not be "so great a chance for success per man!" What can young men ask better than that? If the successes of the successful are sufficiently spectacular, who cares if the chance per man is worse? Yet Mr. Gates is making dangerous concessions when he thus confirms the idea that however roomy the top may be in business life, things are getting more and more crowded at the bottom. It is the chance per man that counts with all but gamblers.

Lancaster Labor Leader.

The Civic Federation is not very much in evidence in the great coal strike. Mr. Hanna recently sent out a signed statement, among other things saying: "The operators have absolutely refused to make concessions. I can do no more." Since that time he has been using his efforts to get the miners to accept the crumbs offered by the coal company.

Mine Workers' Journal.

There was a civil war in Pittsburg, Pa., last week. Two rival railroads desired a piece of ground. One wanted it so that it could enter the city, the other desired possession so that it could keep its rival out of that city. Did the officers of these roads let an orderly process of law settle the affair? No. They erected barricades, armed their employees with murderous weapons and proceeded vi et armis to settle the title of ownership. The sheriff did not even think it worth while to go to the scene. No appeal was made to the governor for troops. There were no "scare-heads" in boxcar letters in the papers about "mob violence." There were no "pointed, plain condemnation" editorials in the papers which have so profusely volunteered advice to striking miners about "lawlessness." You see it was two big corporations which were doing the "violation of the law," which, in effect under the present order, means that they can "make or break" the law at their own sweet will. Now if it had been strikers who erected barricades, and had armed themselves with murderous weapons, they would have been quickly and rightly punished. But as it was only two scions of the Trust Kingdom disputing about vested rights it excites no official wrath or editorial surprise. It was a "contention of an aggregation of interests" and such terms as law, order, property, security are not in the vocabulary.

Colorado Chronicle.

We have heard or read somewhere of a great struggle—the sacrifice of thousands of lives, millions of dollars and the arousing of much bitterness between countrymen—to make the negro free. That was forty years ago. To-day, under modern industrial conditions, as exemplified by the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, Victor Coal Company, Northern Coal Company, and other industrial corporations, these "free" negroes and white workmen are worse slaves than the black man was before 1860. Will the black and white workingmen have the intelligence to truly free themselves, or is it going to require another bloody revolution to abolish wage-slavery? This is the problem up for solution.

Philadelphia North American.

That is a dreadful revelation from South Carolina, where a negro was killed for trying to escape from the bondage into which he had sold himself. He, like hundreds of others, signed a contract which provided that in return for the privilege of earning his living he should confer on his employer the right to chase him if he ran away, and to imprison and fine him when caught.

That is slavery, and no one who does not believe in slavery can read of it without horror and anger. The courts have been appealed to, and every lover of human freedom will hope that these new slaveholders of the South will be brought to justice.

Yet there are other forms of slavery almost as bad in which we acquiesce without any thrill of horror. We are so used to them that we are blind to their real nature. The overworked and underpaid white factory hand, for instance. In some localities he and his wife and children must toil in order to keep the poor family roof over their heads and the bare necessaries of life in the cupboard. The employer cannot pursue and shoot down, or capture and jail his slave, but the fear of starvation is quite as effective a deterrent to flight as the shotgun and handcuffs would be. The miner in the grip of the cheating measurements, company store and company-owned habitation, who seldom handles a dollar of money in return for his labor—what can he do when he is moved to rebel against his slavery? Poverty shackles him and the bloodhound of hunger menaces.

There are multitudes of white men and women and children in this new and rich and free country whose material lot is not appreciably better than that of the negro contract slaves of South Carolina. The whip of want is as terrible to them as the whip of the overseer is to the black bondman. Is a Northern sweatshop any more the home of freedom than the South Carolina slave stockade?

And we sneer at and cough down and boycott the men who arise and declare that poverty is a curable social disease as if they were public enemies.

New York Times.

Now that there is no immediate prospect of food becoming cheaper, housewives are comparing their accounts of this year with those of previous years. It is estimated that the cost of living among all classes is from 30 to 40 per cent. higher this summer than it was three years ago. The advance in the price of breadstuffs in everyday use has been general in all parts of the country. Not only is the housekeeper affected by the rise in prices, but the hotelkeeper, the restaurant proprietor, the baker, and many others feel it keenly.

The hotel men and restaurant keepers cannot raise their prices in proportion to the increased amounts they are obliged to pay for foods for their tables. There are many articles which they are obliged to give away, and cannot charge for, such as butter, bread, and condiments. These have all advanced in price, and cause a proportionate falling off in the restaurant keeper's profits.

Among those who are loud in their complaints are the Newark bakers, whose margin of profit has been cut down o ver 20 per cent.; but, says the Newark "Sunday News," probably the man most seriously affected by the steady advance in prices in the last three years is the laborer, who earns from $9 to $12 week. When 30 per cent. is deducted from his earnings it is a serious matter. Although the present year is regarded as a prosperous one, the cost of living has increased in a greater proportion than the wages.

Here are some of the percentages of advance in prices in meats and foodstuffs during the last three years: Tea, 20 per cent.; starch, 40; cinnamon, 50; mackerel, 10; kitchen soaps, 10; cereals, 40; canned peas, 20; canned tomatoes, 50; condensed milk, 20; butter, 40; eggs, 25; cheese, 40; pickles, 15. In all the grocery list there are but two articles in everyday use that have declined in price. They are coffee and flour, which have gone down 10 per cent. each.

The percentage of advance in meats is remarkable. The averages are as follows: Lamb, 25 per cent.; corned beef, 75; rump beef, 30; roast beef, 30; sirloin steaks, 25; porterhouse steaks, 30; beef liver, 10; ham, 30; bacon, 30; corned bellies, 30; pork chops, 30.

TO ALL SOCIALIST TRADE UNIONISTS.

It is important that all trade unionists should be given an opportunity to learn what the Socialist Party—in New York the Social Democratic Party—stands for.

YOU can help—each one of you. For 75 cents you can get 100 copies of THE WORKER sent to your address; for $1.20 you can get 200 copies. Three hundred or more will be supplied to you at 50 cents a hundred.

Two or three times between now and election you should get enough copies of THE WORKER to supply all the members of your local union.

We want Socialism in our time.

BAD YEAR FOR POLITICIANS.

The "Plain Speaker" of Hazleton, Pa., quotes "one of the best known politicians" of that town as saying: "This will be a bad year to get into politics. The labor and the socialistic movements, while ridiculed by the politicians, are bound to have an effect on the election and these two elements will draw votes away from both the predominating parties."

READ THIS AND PASS IT ON.

PARTY NOTES.

The Socialist Party has thus far remitted $880.69 to W. B. Wilson, secretary and treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, on account of the Miners' Strike Fund.

Comrade Debs will speak on Labor Day at Davenport, Ia.; Comrade Morgan at Janesville, Wis.; Comrade McGrady at Milwaukee; Comrade Hayes at Clinton and Comrade Hagerty at Van Horn, both in Iowa; Comrade Spargo at Pittston, Pa.; and Comrade Mills at Denver. This is only a partial list of well known Socialists invited as Labor Day orators.

The Labor Bureau of the National Committee has filled calls for Labor Day speakers as follows: Pana, Ill., E. Val Putnam; Worden, M. Ballard Dunn; Taylorville, Wm. Brandt; Streator, James S. Roche; Peru, Leon Greenbaum; Barre, Vt., Chas. R. Bach.

Comrade Chas. E. Lowell of Whitman, Mass., is a candidate from the National Boot and Shoe Workers' Union to the American Federation of Labor, and as he is an old worker for the cause in Massachusetts it would be a good thing if he was elected on the referendum vote.

A new local with ten charter members at Naugatuck, Conn., is a result of the work of Comrade Caldwell in that town. Who is next?—W. E. White of New Haven starts this week on a tour of the state, visiting the places where Comrade Caldwell held successful meetings. He begins on Thursday, August 28, at Wallingford. He will then visit Meriden, Southing, Hartford, Windsor Locks, Enfield, East Windsor, South Manchester, Middeltown, and Willimantic.—The Central Committee of Local New Haven has arranged for a series of open-air meetings with local speakers, beginning on the Green, Saturday evening, August 30, with Comrades Bearhalter, Toomey, and White.—New Haven Socialists held a convention Monday and made these nominations: For State Senator, John Senberg; for Judge of Probate, Joseph Bearhalter; for Representatives, Julius Paecht and Albert Somers. The following nominations were presented to all branches in the Second Congressional District for referendum: For Congress, Cornelius Mahoney of New Haven; for County Sheriff, A. E. Babin of Waterbury.

The County Committee of Passaic County, N. J., has invited E. T. Neben as orator for their great Labor Day picnic, which will be held at Belmont Park, Haledon, on Monday. Every Socialist and sympathizer in the county should attend and bring as many friends as he can. This picnic should mark the beginning of a strong campaign in Paterson and throughout Passaic County.

Though a misunderstanding we stated, last week, that the Social Democratic Women's Society of Elizabeth, N. J., had donated money to the striking miners and weavers and passed certain resolutions which we printed. The money was actually voted and the resolutions adopted by the Central Committee of the Society, which is located in New York City.

J. Mahlon Barnes and Edward Kuppinger of Philadelphia will be the orator at the Labor Day demonstration under the auspices of the Central Labor Union of Easton, Pa. Edward Moore, editor of the Philadelphia "New Era," will speak at Newport News, Va. Fred Long will speak for the Central Labor Union at Lebanon, Pa.

Comrade Harris of Edwardsdale, Pa., acknowledges the receipt of bundles of literature from Comrade Reich of New York and gives his thanks.

Union miners at Shamokin, Pa., want to organize a local of the Socialist Party.

The Kentucky comrades will hold a great picnic on Sunday, September 21, at Clark's Grove, Dayton, Ky., for the purpose of raising funds to put a state organizer in the field. Tickets, admitting lady and gentleman, will be 25 cents. For tickets and information address F. J. Lavanier, Jr., 63 W. Tenth street, Covington. The aid of all Socialists in the state is desired.—The Kentucky comrades order a hundred copies each of three successive issues of The Worker for distribution.

Dr. J. S. Pyle, our candidate for Congress in the Toledo, O., district, continues to attract attention by his clear exposition of Socialist principles, both in speeches and articles.

The comrades of Dayton, O., appreciate the value of The Worker as a maker of Socialist votes. Local Dayton has sent in about five hundred three-month subscriptions, in order that the aims of the Socialist Party and the news of the movement may become well known in their city.

Howard H. Caldwell, who spent the last month in organizing work in Connecitcut, is now giving a month to similar work in Ohio. His first week, spent in Cleveland, is reported very successful, noon metings being held with an average attendance of over five hundred. Thirty-three trial subscriptions for The Worker were secured. After four more days in Cleveland, Comrade Caldwell is to start out to the smaller cities.

Frederick G. Strickland will close his work in Colorado, October 6, and return to Ohio for the last three weeks of the campaign. He will speak a few times on his return through Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, and Indiana.

James S. Roche of St. Louis addressed the miners of Glen Carbon, Ill., on August 22.

Comrade Franklin H. Wentworth of Chicago and Rev. Frank Dixon debated on Socialism at the Chautauqua assembly at Danville Ill., last week. The discussion seems to have aroused much interest.

At Imlay City, Mich., on August 20 were held the Congressional, county, and legislative conventions of the Socialist Party of the Seventh District and Lapear County. J. Merritt Lamb of Dryden was chosen as our candidate for Congress, J. C. Oatman of Clifford for State Senator from the Lapeer-Tuscola district, and Ernest D. Lamb for Representative from Lapeer County. A full county ticket was also put up in Lapeer. A collection was taken up for the benefit of the striking miners. Comrade Walters will spend ten days in Lapeer County, organizing.

The Central Labor Union of Flint, Mich., has invited the Democratic and the Socialist candidates for Governor to speak at the Labor Day picnic.

The "New Era" of Sargent, Neb., reports the holding of Socialist conventions to nominate congressional, legislative, and county tickets in that state.

John C. Chase addressed meetings last week in Aldridge, Jardine, Helena, Winston, Butte, and Anaconda, Montana.

The Denver "Alliance of the Rockies" notes a pleasant visit from Comrade Harriman and extends best wishes to him as he goes on to California.

Comrade Wentworth and his wife are now making a twelve days' speaking tour for the Socialist Party in Colorado. Walter Thomas Mills also begins a tour of the state on September 1. Other Socialist speakers at work in Colorado, besides Debs, who has addressed many large meetings, are Comrades Wise, Strickland, Thompson, and Ben Wilson.

Comrade John M. O'Neill, editor of the "Miner's Magazine," speaks at Park City, Utah, on Labor Day. The Utah town will get some hot stuff. Comrade O'Neill calls a spade a spade, and his hearers will understand what Socialism is when he closes his address, says the "Alliance of the Rockies."

Both Republican and Democratic politicians in Idaho are trying to work fusion deals with the Socialist Party; and, failing in that, they attempt to confuse the minds of the voters by representing such fusion deals as actually accomplished or about to be accomplished. But the game will not work, for our Idaho comrades are both active and honest.—Chase will be in Idaho next week.

New York State.

Comrades Lindboe, Dennis, and Breichbiel are working hard for the Social Democratic Party up in Highland Falls. The local there has established a headquarters and reading room, and all hands are working actively.

"Peekskill is as wide awake a section as any," writes Comrade Hanford. "Everybody does something, but Comrades Simmonds, Heleker, Taber, and Holmes are simply hustlers."

Benjamin Hanford of Typographical Union No. 6, candidate of the Social Democratic Party for Governor of New York, will probably be the orator at the Labor Day picnic at Utica.

The Social Democrats of Cold Spring had a public meeting last week with Comrade Hanford as the speaker. He acquitted himself well and the large audience showed the greatest interest. A number of questions were asked and answered, showing that the hearers were thinking seriously of Socialism as presented so ably by our standard-bearer. Many expressed a hope that he would visit the town again. The Cold Spring comrades "have a hard row to hoe" for the present, but they are faithful workers and will do their duty.

Local Rochester will distribute a thousand copies of this issue of The Worker at the Labor Day demonstration.

H. Reich, Literature Agent of the State Committee, has during the last week mailed bundles of The Worker and a thousand copies of Hanford's leaflet to the following locals: Albany, Watertown, Gloversville, Schenectady, and Johnstown. Local Newburg bought three dollars' worth of literature, and Local Buffalo bought a hundred copies of Comrade Feigenbaum's Jewish pamphlet. Local Rochester ordered twenty thousand copies of Hanford's leaflet; the Bronx Borough Committee took ten thousand, and the Yorkville Agitation Committee twenty-five thousand.

Readers of The Worker who live in places in the state of New York where we have as yet no local organization and who are willing to distribute party literature are requested to write to that effect to H. Reich, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City, who will supply them.

New York City.

Comrades who are members of Electrical Workers' Union No. 3 are requested to send name and address to the office of The Worker.

The 24th A. D., Br. 2, now meets at the new rooms of the Socialist Educational League, 953 Second avenue, on the first and third Monday of each month.

At last Saturday's meeting of the Kings County Committee, Comrade Julius Gerber was elected Campaign Secretary.

We have not heard of any activity on the part of the Queens County comrades in the way of getting their local tickets in the field. The time is passing and it will soon be too late to act.

Some time ago a general meeting of the members of the four S. D. P. branches in Bronx Borough was held and by-laws adopted providing for the election of three delegates from each branch in the borough to a central committee which is to collect all money for agitation and campaign purposes and to arrange and supervise all agitation in the Bronx. The following delegates were elected to the Committee: From the 34th A. D., Comrades Weiss, Harter, and Brandt; from the 35th A. D., Branch 1, Comrades Alexander, Linke, and Wolf; from the 35th A. D., Branch 2, Comrades Elges, Burgwald, and Spranger; from the Williamsbridge Branch, Comrades Schmeichel, Swenson and Hass. At the first meeting of the Committee it was decided to call it the Bronx Borough Agitation Committee. Comrade Spranger was elected secretary and organizer; Comrade Alexander, financial secretary; Comrade Wolf, treasurer. The Committee has arranged a number of open-air meetings and has ordered 25,000 copies of the state platform. About $125 was received from the Workingmen's Progressive Association of Bronx Borough. About $50 of this has been used in paying the debts of last year's campaign. Comrade Leo Silke donated $5 to the campaign fund and Comrade Ackerman $1. Five dollars has been donated to the 34th A. D. to help pay its expenses.

The Brooklyn Socialist Club passed a resolution urging all members to attend the outing of the 21st A. D., Brooklyn, to be held Sunday, August 31, at S. Hotz' (Lohman's) Park, corner of Liberty avenue and Wyona street.

All comrades who are nominated for office on the Social Democratic ticket in Manhattan or Bronx boroughs are requested to send to the chairman of the Campaign Literature Committee, Wm. Edlin, 197 Clinton street, a statement giving full name, age and place of birth, occupation, trade union or other important organizations to which the candidate belongs, sketch of his activity in the labor movement, and when and how he became interested in Socialism and the party, with previous political beliefs. These data are desired for use in campaign literature.

Last Thursday's meeting of the Young People's Social Democratic Club of Yorkville was very well attended. It was decided to attend the party picnic of September 7 in a body and delegates were elected to the arrangements committee. The Club voted in favor of having a parade in Yorkville. Of the fifty tickets accepted for the W. E. A. picnic, seventeen were sold; the Club voted $25 to the Association for the building fund. It was voted to invite the Young Men's Social Democratic Club of Brooklyn or a delegation thereof to visit the Club at an early date. Teh next meeting will occur at 206 E. Eighty-sixth street on September 4, after which the Club will meet every Thursday evening.

The Voice of Labor holds a picnic on Saturday, August 30, beginning at 2 p. m., at Liberty Park, L. I., for the benefit of the Jewish paper, "Forward." To reach the park, from all ferries or the bridge take cars to Ridgewood, transfer to Cypress avenue car, and get off at Cooper avenue. Gentlemen's tickets, 25 cents; ladies' tickets, 15 cents.

The Russian Social Democratic Society held a mass meeting in New Irving Hall last Friday evening to discuss the condition and policy of the Russian revolutionary movement. Comrade Napoloff presided and Comrades Lee, Jonas, and Ingermann spoke in English, German, and Russian, respectively. All the speakers protested against the threatened recrudescence of the terrorits policy and urged active support for the Russian Social Democratic movement, whose work of educating and organizing the working class and the peasants has already produced such splendid results.

be supplied at as near proportional prices as cost of sending will allow.

"LABOR POLITICS."

Algernon Lee's pamphlet, "Socialist Politics and Labor Politics," has been issued in a second edition, revised and improved. This little book will make friends and converts, for it is written in a plain style, easily understood by all who read it. It is sold at 3 cents a copy; ten copies for 20 cents; fifty for 85 cents; one hundred for $1.50.

THROWAWAY CARDS.

We have also a throwaway card, containing the pictures of our state candidates, the emblem and party name, and some comments, with a cartoon of the man who will never be a Socialist. These will be supplied at $1 a thousand or 50 cents for five hundred.

JEWISH PAMPHLET.

"What Does the Social Democratic Party Want?" a 32-page pamphlet, written in the Jewish language by Comrade B. Feigenbaum, is a good means of agitation among Jewish-speaking workers. It goes to the root of existing evils and shows how they can be eradicated by the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. The Social Democratic Club "Fackl" has already taken five hundred copies and the 4th, 8th, and 12th A. D. have sold another five hundred. The price of this pamphlet is 5 cents a copy; one hundred copies, $2.25.

GERMAN PAMPHLETS.

The State Committee can also supply the following German pamphlets:

"Ein Wort an die Arbeiter Amerikas." Price, 5 cents; ten or more copies, at 2½ cents each.

"Municipal Forderungen der Social Demokratie." Price, 5 cents; ten for 25 cents; fifty for $1; one hundred for $1.50.

"Die Mission der Arbeitenden Klasse," by Charles H. Vail. Price, 5 cents; one hundred for $2.

Send orders, with cash, to the Literature Agent of the State Committee, H. Reich, 64 E. Fourth street, New York.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

GENERAL COMMITEE.

Last Saturday's meeting of the General Committee of Local New York was well attended, only a few delegates being absent. Comrades Bowerman and Bartholomew presided.

Twenty applicants were admitted to membership in the party.

The Executive Committee recommended that each assembly district find a place where a large banner could be put up across the street to advertise the party. This was concurred in.

The Committee on Literature recommended the printing of a number of special campaign leaflets, which was approved.

The Entertainment Committee reported that everything was in readiness for the picnic at Sulzer's Westchester Park on September 7 and that the conference to make final arrangements of details will be held at the Labor Lyceum on September 2.

The Executive Committee was instructed to prepare another circular letter to be sent out to all Social Democratic, S. L. P., and independent voters.

The Executive Committe urges all comrades who can speak to send in their names and the nights on which they are willing to give their services. The party needs a large number of spkaeres and all who have its success at heart should do what they can to help. Speakers are needed at once, for good audiences listen to the few we now have and there are not enough to fill the demand.

FOR KINGS COUNTY.

The attention of all Socialists in Kings County is called to the following notices:

PRIMARIES.

Primaries of the Social Democratic Party of Kings County for the election of delegates to the County, Congressional, Senatorial, and Assembly District conventions will be held in all assembly districts of Kings County on Saturday, September 6.

CONVENTIONS.

The County Convention of Kings County, to nominate candidates for county officers to be filled at the ensuing election, will be held on Saturday, September 13.

Congressional and Senatorial conventions to nominate candidates for Representatives in Congress and State Senate will be held on Friday, September 19.

Assembly District conventions, to nominate candidates for members of the Assembly, will be held on Saturday, September 20.

The addresses for all the above primaries and conventions will be advertised in the next issue of The Worker. Comrades are requested to watch for them.

MODE OF REPRESENTATION.

The mode of representation is as follows:

To County convention, three delegates for each Assembly District;

To Congressional conventions, five delegates for each Assembly District;

To Senatorial conventions, five delegates for each Assembly District;

To Assembly District conventions, ten delegates for each Assembly District;

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.

The Congressional districts of Kings County are as follows:

Second—comprising the 13th, 14th, and 15th Assembly Districts and Election Districts 1 to 18 and 15 and 16 of the 19th A. D.

Third—comprising the 5th, 6th, and 17th Assembly Districts, Election Districts 1 to 6 and 28 and 29 of the 4th A. D., Election Districts 14 and 17 to 20 of the 19th A. D., and Election Districts 1 to 7 of the 20th A. D.

Fourth—comprising Election Districts 30 to 35 of the 7th A. D., Election Districts 7 to 14 and 21 of the 16th A. D., 21 to 24 of the 18th A. D., 21 of the 19th A. D., 8 to 30 of the 20th A. D., and the whole of the 21st A. D.

Fifth—comprising Election Districts 1 to 29 of the 7th A. D., 1 to 3 of the 9th A. D., 1 to 6, 15 to 20, and 22 to 26 of the 16th A. D., and 1 to 30 of the 18thA. D.

Sixth—comprising Election Districts 7 to 27 of the 4th A. D., 1, 3 to 7, and 11 to 25 of the 10th A. D., and the whole of the 11th and 12th A. D.

Seventh—comprising the 1st, 2d, 3d, and 8th A. D., and Election Districts 4 to 18 of the 9th A. D., and 2, 8, 9, and 10 of the 10th A. D.

SENATORIAL DISTRICTS.

The Senatorial Districts are as follows:

Third—comprising the 1st, 2d, and 3d A. D.

Fourth—the 4th, 5th, and 6th A. D.

Fifth—the 7th, 8th, and 9th A. D.

Sixth—the 10th, 11th, and 12th A. D.

Seventh—the 13th, 14th, and 15th A. D.

Eighth—the 16th, 17th, and 18th A.D.

Ninth—the 19th, 20th, and 21st A. D.

Full instructions will be sent to every assembly district organization, as delegates to conventions must be residents of the district they represent.

For the County Committee of the Social Democratic Party of Kings County.

JULIUS GERBER,
Campaign Secretary.

NOTICE TO SUBDIVISIONS.

To the Subdivisions and Members of Local Kings County, Social Democratic Party:

Please take notice that the primaries for the election of delegates to all political conventions will be held on Saturday, September 6, in all the Assembly Districts in Kings County. Secretaries of subdivisions are requested to secure places in which to hold said primaries in their respective assembly districts on that evening, and to notify the undersigned at once of the places secured. Comrades residing in unorganized districts, and who have received a communication from the undersigned in regard to primaries, are requested to give this communication prompt attention and answer immediately.

Comrades, this is important, as we want to have a full ticket in every assembly district in Kings County, and as the time is very short it is necessary that every comrade gives his assistance, without which it will be impossible for me to accomplish the work before me. It is to be hoped therefore that everyone will do his full share and help us get our nominations complete in due time.

Address all communications to J. Gerber, 888 Flushing avenue, Brooklyn.

AGITATION MEETINGS IN NEW YORK CITY.

Meetings will be held at the points named in the following list, on the dates given. Comrades in the assembly districts where meetings are held should not fail to be present and use the opportunity to assist the speakers by agitating among by-standers and aiding in the distribution of literature.

WORKING GIRLS AT PEEKSKILL STRIKE.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., August 25.—The girls employed in the Baker underwear factory here are on strike against most oppressive conditions of many years standing. They first went out on Monday, August 18. Having no organization, they were misled into patching up a truce by which they gained nothing. On Thursday they came out again and started this time on the right track. A meeting was held at which Comrade Heleker spoke to them, explaining the objects and methods of labor organization. The result was that they were formed into a federal labor union, to be affiliated with the A. F. of L., and over 250 have signed the roll. Miss Mary Maloney of the Newburg Garment Workers' Union assisted them in organizing. Only twenty or thirty girls are working and the rest show the right spirit. All trade unionists are heartily with them.

WORKMEN'S Sick and Death Benefit Fund of the United States of America.
The above society was founded in the year 1884 by Workingmen imbued with the spirit of solidarity and Socialist thought. Its numerical strength (at present composed of 190 local branches with 23,000 male and 4,000 female members) is rapidly increasing among workingmen who believe in the principles of the modern labor movement. Workingmen between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to membership in any of the branches upon payment of an initiation fee of $4.00 for the first class and $3.00 for the second class. Members belonging to the first class are entitled to a sick benefit of $9.00 for 40 weeks and of $4.50 for another 40 weeks, whether continuous or with interruption. Members belonging to the second class receive under the same circumstances and length of time $6.00 and $3.00, respectively. A burial benefit of $250.00 is guaranteed for every member, and the wives and unmarried daughters of members between 18 and 45 years of age may be admitted to the third class upon payment of an initiation fee of $1.00. Monthly assessments are levied for the three different classes of members of $1, 75 cents and 22 cents respectively. Members at large are not accepted, but all candidates have to join existing branches. In cities and towns where no branch exists, a new branch can be formed by 15 workingmen in good health, and men adhering to the above principles are invited to do so.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE DEVIL.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

Commercial society men are all interested in warding off harm from the banker. The interest of one banker is the interest of all the bankers and has therefore become the interest of the state; for the traders, owning as they do the means necessary for the livelihood of the majority of the people, necessarily own the state. They, controlling labor, control victuals and therefore control law.

In other days men who owned the lands owned to some extent the men who lived by land-labor or owned sheep and cattle, and in agricultural or pastoral times the land-owner and sheep-owner was the favored type of man, and his interest in a general way was the interest of the community; because all who were not land-owners or sheep-owners were employed in these industries or hoped to be themselves such owners. And when, owing to the number of independent nations and rulers, the people's property in land or cattle was rendered precarious by the incursions of armed bands from other states, the great necessity for self-defense became apparent and the man of arms became the living man, the favored type of man. And when the whole life of the people, owing to the turmoil of ambitious and greedy aristocrats, became only an agony of fear and uncertainty, so that the world was called a vale of tears, the type of man who offered consolations boundless here, and a bliss eternal hereafter, for a small consideration, became a very desirable type of man. Or when, at last, the lesser turbulent barons were all merged into one state, one court, and one king, the king and his dynasty became the selected type because, as things were then, the fall of the king meant the desolation by fire and sword of town and county. And as the king could be in but one part of all his great dominions, a few persons only had access to him; and these few courtiers, patrons, advocates, and lawyers at last became very favored classes or types of men; because in their hands lay so much of the people's means of salvation. Some parts of the population of those times struggled to get into those directly or indirectly dominating economic classes; and all were interested in what they alone had right and privilege to do. In turn the fortunes of these several classes varied, but the onward growth of the world was identified with the issue of their struggles as classes. A great king and a great nobility and a great religious hierarchy at last learned to unite their common interest, and by their union the life of the masses of the people was correspondingly depressed.

The religious factor in this triple alliance of classes soon obtained mental dominion over the others because they alone were possessors of the basic element of wealth and power—time. So the kings and the nobles threw themselves against the walls of Saracen cities for the sake of the Holy Sepulchre. Then and there they discovered that while, as stay-at-homes, their property and their name gave them all the power they needed, abroad they required some portable and duly appreciated equivalent. In this emergency the reign of ready money began to be generally acknowledged by potentates who formerly only recognized the sword's point or a point of what they called honor. Some inferior persons now began to lend them money on their estates at home, in order that they might buy what they lacked abroad; and others began to make for them what they desired to buy. It was not so much war as an enlarged intercourse that now multiplied the wants of the owning classes and to multiply and vary the pursuits of the men who had no fields or who found more benefit in making things in the towns than raising crops in the fields. Thus came the artizan, the trader, and the money-lender, contending for a share in supplying the great lords first and other folk thereafter.

It was not for a long time clear which of these was the master class until the smoke of the French Revolution having cleared away, the profit-monger arose, the giant spectre of the nineteenth century; and with him appeared the world's most important acquisition since mankind began to sweat—the machine.

With the appearance of the machine a strangely hellish sort of mastery became possible. The new class had learned the secret of getting rich by selling things for more value than really existed in the things sold—they put a plus price upon the exchange value of their commodity according to what they observed to be its use value to the buyers—a state of exchanging which could not last long; could, in fact, last only while there were few sellers and many needy buyers; and that would surely not be very long, while there was gain in it for other traders. When natural wanters came out, exchanging commodities for symbols or other commodities, the normal condition of value for value, neither more nor less, would be bound to prevail. Use value being always equally assumed in every exchange, it would have no eccentric action in lowering or raising the price. All buying and selling would be merely a convenient exchange of so many days' socially necessary labor as embodied in one equally useful article for the same number embodied in another; and it is evident that no separate class could ever come into existence, as the white horse and its rider, between such a natural supply and demand. There was nothing in the world for them to fatten on—nothing but the simple positive values created in the quantity of social labor passed from the social workman into existing useables, and as everybody had gradually learned the equivalents of these values, either in money or other ordinary commodities, prices would always be values only.

This profit-phantom class were really the meanest and unworthiest people of the age they subverted. They could never have outlived the trying conditions of siege, extremity, and famine to which other lives were exposed. But they found their fields of fortune in money; and having dowered those above them, they at last found themselves surrounded by a population of mere workers, unable to possess themselves of the new machine-tools. The middle class took possession of them by taking possession of the world tools; and then appeared for the first time the monstrosity of surplus value and the capitalist man.

The men who had no tools to work could only sell their power to work the tools; and as that power was really worth nothing of itself now, they gave the men bread for it; and all the time passed into the making of the tools and passed out of the tools into the commodities and returned again through the human worker who, with his iron partner, had now so greatly multiplied his power to create value. The new creation appears on the earth—called Surplus Value, and with it appears as a slave class the proletariat who, creating all, gets only bread.

As everybody acquainted with diabolical history knows, the Devil's love for gambling has always been third only to his other two loves—the love of what he wins, and the love of the power brought by his winnings. But instead of playing a petty game with a Doctor Faust, here and there, for one miserable soul, which he could have had anyway by getting the key of the larder, he began to play only for the key of the larder, all over the world, to play for economic control.

There used to be many larders. But under the good management of His Sinister Majesty the highways to and from the world markets have been reduced to a small number and securely placed under infernal control; so that he knows within an ace what is the natural and industrial wealth crop of the world; what the wages of the world; and how much of both it is tain the two orders of society, democracy and aristocracy, in their respective places of slaves and masters.

But even the Devil cannot always have things his own way. Like all gamblers, he has been going it at such a terrible pace that "fast and faster" has now become the spur of his divinity. He cannot pull up. He cannot ease off. He must forever on! Swifter and faster yet, for ever on!

He is now playing with the whirlwind that he himself set in motion; he is playing for more and yet for the impossible space necessary to the increasing demands of his all-impelling greed.

He holds his last card in his hand, the golden key of the world market he has won. But that which seemed much yesterday is nothing to him to-day. He wants more.

A. C. E. spells ace, and this is what he is now playing against the democratic life of humanity, against the organization and manhood of the human race as they have historically come to-day to be embodied in the cause of Labor.

A stands for Acceleration. Remember, capitalism falls when it fails in acceleration. It is a mad, abnormal, self-compelling, more-demanding speed. It is not a star controlled, but a star falling away from control. And so long thus falling that the intoxication of descent has become its joy and its demand. To keep so falling, capitalism demands, as fuel, a holocaust of human lives. In this fearful craze of acceleration, therefore, he must burn out all mankind or burn himself out. A also stands for Aggression, of which His Militant Majesty has a tremendous stock; all of which is now directed against the gospel of organization, whether it be preached in the camp of the Socialists or in the halls of the labor unions.

C stands for Centralization, the centralization of control over the states of the world, its money, its credit and its markets. And E stands for Extension—that is, Benevolent Dissimulation, as Mr. McKinley would have called it had he not been Mr. McKinley.

This is the last stage of capitalism. Speed or perish, extend or die! The trust, gospel imperialism, increased armies, and the water cure against Organized Labor on behalf of humanity. Which wins, the devil or we?

TRUST SANCTIMONY.

My name is "Baer," and here I stand
With thumbscrews and my "church" brass band.
Whene'er I hear a poor man squeal
I take a fe wtwists on his heel.

From 'way back through the ages old
My "holy rights" I've always told.
"Almighty wisdo m" gave me grace
To smite the Christ upon the face;

To plant the thorns upon his brow;
And rob his poor—I'll show you how
It only takes a little wit
And a few slick lawyers from the pit.

The parasites who sit in pews
Always gulp our garbled news
And think, poor tools, we're gilded saints,
By the whitewash with which Baer paints.
Oh, I'm the prince of hypocrites,
The peach of sanctimonious wits,
I can blaspheme the lord on high
While all his power must bleed and die!

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

——The "soap-box orators" of the Socialist Party get no gold and little fame; but they are rewarded by the consciousness that they are working for a good cause.

FOR THE DAILY.

Second Session of Conference of Labor Organizations.

Eighteen Additional Unions Send Delegates—Report on Collection of Funds—Notes and Notices.

The second conference of trade unions and other labor organizations for the establishment of a Socialist and trade union daily newspaper was held on Thursday evening, August 14, at Labor Lyceum. The publication of this report was delayed by the sickness of Secretary Butscher.

Delegate Geo. McVey of the Central Federated Union, was elected chairman for the evening.

The Credentials Committee reported that credentials were received and passed upon from eighteen additional organizations, making the total number represented about sixty. The delegates attending this conference showed by their interest that they had come prepared to do their share in the work of establishing the daily paper, and in order to facilitate the work of the Conference the following committees were elected:

Executive Committee: B. J. Steiner of Cigar Makers' Union No. 90; James Trainor of the Standard Engineers'; Geo. McVey of the Central Federated Union; Otto Karge of the Arcghitectural Iron Workers; John Spengler of Branch 3, 21st A. D., Brooklyn; and E. P. Clarke of the 21st A. D., New York.

A By-laws Committee was also elected, consisting of Wm. Schmalzbach of Branch 25, W. S. & D. B. F.; John Roescheisen of the Brotherhood of Painters No. 499; Adolph Loewenthal of Branch 24, W. S. & D. B. F.; M. Hillquit of the Workingman's Co-operative Association; and Jos. Schuffay of Branch 1, W. S. & D. B. F.

The Committee on Ways and Means elected is made up of Kalman Edelman of Cigar Packers' No. 251; Wm. Butscher of the W. C. P. A.; William Merz of the Franz Gerau Maennerchor; Louis Meyer of the United Upholsters' Union; and E. E. Gloss of Jewelry Workers' Union No. 1.

The Committe on Organization was then added to by calling for volunteers. A number of delegates offered their services on this committee, whose duty it will be to visit the unrepresented unions of this city and urge them to participate in the work of the Conference and in the movement for the establishment of a daily labor paper.

The session as a whole was very satisfactory and the interest shown by the delegates gives renewed hope that the daily paper will be a potent factor in this city and vicinity in the near future.

Trade unions and other labor organizations which have as yet not elected any delegates to the Conference are urged to do so and join hands with us in this most important step for the education of the working masses. The next session will be held on Thursday, September 11, at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street. Comrades, work for the daily. Take advantage of every opportunity of presenting this proposition before all men you may come in contact with, so that when the paper is published, it will be a success with the first issue.

Board of Management.

On account of the first Monday in September being Labor Day, the Board of Management of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association has voted to change the night of its meeting to September 8. Members of the Association are requested to take notice of this change.

Members of the Association who have not yet paid their instalments for the second quarter on membership cards are requested to do so at once, as the Association needs the money collected from this source for the payment of all expenses connected with the raising of the fund and the establishing of the paper. Comrades may bring their cards and dues to Comrade Butscher, at 64 E. Fourth street, who will give them credit for the amount paid. Members in arrears for six months or over are liable to suspension according to the constitution of the Association.

THE PRIVATE STANDING ARMIES.

Armed Bodies Under Capitalist Influence Encouraged, while the Constitutional Right of the Workers to Bear Arms Is Denied.

The San Francisco "Examiner" has issued a special supplement in honor of the convention of the Knights of Pythias at that city. From an elaborate article on the "Uniform Rank" of the order we quote these paragraphs:

"The importance of the Uniform Rank may be better appreciated when we learn that there are no less than 60,000 men bearing arms and drilling in this country in the Knights of Pythias. These are divided into nine hundred companies. They form twenty-four brigades, and as the state is organized as a brigade it follows that twenty-four states have a full organization of the military department of the Pythians'. Besides these there are twelve other states in which there are no brigades, but which possess independent regiments.

"This military department is recognized by the United States government and the members of the Uniform Rank are listed by the military authorities as forming a valuable auxiliary to the military resources of the nation in case of need. The Knights of Pythias is the only order so listed.

"In California the drill is confined to the infantry tactics, but this is by no means universally the case. There are many companies of artillery and cavalry."

It is a well known fact that several of the so-called fraternal orders—notably some marching under the cross of him whom they call the Prince of Peace—maintain large and well organized forces.

These fraternal orders, while they include many workingmen among their numbers, are more largely recruited from the self-styled "upper classes" and are commonly dominated by capitalist influences.

Again, it is well known that in many of the schools and colleges of the country—as well as in many Sunday schools—military drill is regularly established, in connection with the inculcation of blind and unreasoning "patriotism" and a sort of economic and social teaching which trains college students to serve as scabs and deputies in time of strike.

It is equally well known that the railroad companies, mining companies, steel and iron companies, and other capitalist corporations are allowed to maintain private standing armies, such as the Coal and Iron Police, who have made such an odious record for themselves in Pennsylvania this summer.

Finally, it is an equally well known fact that—in spite of the provision of the Constitution of the United States (Amendments, Article II) guaranteeing "the right of the people to keep and bear arms"—most of the states have laws forbidding the bearing of arms without a special permit; and also that armed societies of workingmen have been suppressed in various states.

It was for simply calling attention to these facts that Professor Richard T. Ely nearly lost his chair in the University of Wisconsin some eight years ago. But the facts stand, nevertheless, and workingmen may easily draw their own inferences from them.

ESSEX COUNTY TRADES COUNCIL.

New Jersey State Federation of Labor Denounced as Being an Annex to the Democratic Party.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 24—The liveliest meeting in the history of the Essex Trades Council took place last Friday evening when the time arrived for Delegate McCrisken to make his report from the State Federation of Labor Convention. Never before has the central body of Newark witnessed such inspiring scenes. When the report was read it was very frigidly received. Delegate Waller of the Pattern Makers' Association asked the delegate for the reports of Executive Board and the Committee on Law and State Legislation. It was the same old report that has become so familar under the Gompers regime—failure. Delegate Gallieu, President of the Allied Printing Trades Council, then took the floor, and he sarcastically arariged the State Federation for incompetency, servile truckling to politicians, dishonesty, and a hungry appetite for political jobs. "Name one single measure that has ever been accomplished by the New Jersey State Federation of Labor in the interest of the working class," cried Delegate Gallieu. "You can't do it and you know it. You have simply gone down to Trenton and the result of your deliberations is a lot of 'Resolves' and 'Whereases' which mean nothing, as there is no honesty, nor no definite movement behind them. Therefore I denounce the State Federation of Labor as being a traitor to organized labor in the state." When Mr. Gallieu concluded there was a salvo of applause and cries of "Good" came from all parts of the house.

Then came Delegate Crane of the Stationary Engineers; Coffee of the Printing Pressmen; Turner, of the Wire Weavers; Ostertag, of the Feeders and Assistant Pressmen; Gessler, of the Brewers; Gaestel, of the Beer Drivers; Morton, of the Machinists; and Werhle, of the Hat Finishers, all of whom denounced in unmeasured terms the clique of political pluggers who have made the State Federation the laughing stock of the capitalists in this state.

Delegate Fred McIntosh then called the attention of the Council to the hypocrisy of the State Federation in trying to lay the blame of child slavery upon the back of the Republican party alone, in order to gather in a few votes for their Democratic masters. "The Executive Board know very well," said Delegate McIntosh, "that child slavery has reached its lowest depths of degradation in the Democratic states of the South. Yet they are deliberately prostituting the labor movement in order to make this topic of child labor a theme for Democratic spellbinders." Delegate McIntosh concluded by saying that there was only one party in the world that was safe for a worker to be connected with, and that in the coming state election fifteen thousand votes cast for Socialism will be more effective in bringing both the Republican and Democratic parties to their knees and forcing them to ask Labor what it requires than by electing so-called "Good men" to office on a capitalistic ticket.

The one discordant note from the badly demoralized conservatives came from Delegate Meade, who represents the Hatters in the Council, but who represented the Musical Union of Orange at the convention—a most singular circumstance. Delegate Meade made a sorry attempt to justify the conduct of the "gang," but his excuses only served to intensify the disgust of all honest trade unionists in the Council.

It was the sense of the Council that Delegate McCrisken was in no way to blame for the miserable report of failure that he was compelled to make, so by a unanimous vote it was sent to the graveyard of all puerile documents—the file.

FRANK TREMAINE.

AMONG THE FARMERS.

Comrade Chase, Writing from the Northwest, Says Their Minds Are Open to Socialist Argument.

Under date of August 20, National Organizer John C. Chase reports as follows to the National Secretary:

"The past three or four weeks I have been in the farming region of the Northwest, and I now have a few minutes to spare in which to let you know how things have been running. I have had some very good meetings in South and North Dakota and Minnesota, notwithstanding the fact that it has been the busy season among the farmers. At Oldham, Aberdeen, and Clark, South Dakota, the meetings were largely attended and locals were formed in Oldham and Clark. At Aberdeen we had about 2,500 people present. In Minnesota meetings at Brainard, Garfield, Ada and Angus were all well attended. The farmers came in from the country for miles to hear something about Socialism. In one place where I alighted from the train about the only thing to be seen was the railroad station; but there was an audience of at least two hundred people, who came in from all directions far over the prairie. Socialism is growing fast among the farmers of the Northwest. They are in about the same condition as the mill and factory hands of the East, and they are beginning to realize it. Many farmers have told me that they considered themselves lucky if they made fifty cents per day for themselves by their long hours of labor. When we think of this remuneration and their isolated lives, we can see that their lot is not to be envied or desired even by the mill hand. There is no trouble in presenting Socialism to the farmer to-day, for he is hungering for it. I have followed the policy of presenting the subject to them in such manner as will show them that their condition as exploited workers is identical with the condition of the wage-earners of the city.

"The very same development that has taken place in industry in the mill, mine, and factory is now going on in the farming industry. Machinery is being introduced more and more every year. The trusts are regulating, more and more every day, the price for which the farmer shall sell his product and the price he shall pay for the things he buys to use or consume.

"Tenant farmers are increasing in number in the Northwest. I have found case after case where a farmer who has toiled on his farm for years has steadily gone behind, until now he finds himself toiling away on the same farm where he has toiled so long—now merely a renter from someone who has got possession by foreclosure.

"I was out on the prairie last Sunday at a farmhouse several miles from any towns, and there were at least one hundred and fifty people gathered there to attend a Socialist picnic and listen to a Socialist lecture. This part of the country will show a big increase in the vote for Socialism this fall. The farmers can be brought to Socialism more easily than the mill or factory hands, if we can only get to them to deliver the message. They are so scattered that to reach them is the difficulty. I would like to say more upon this ubject, but I have no time to do this just now."

BEN HANFORD FOR GOVERNOR.

The Social Democrats have nominated Benjamin Hanford for Governor of the Empire State. Such an honor is second only to that for the Presidency of the United States. But Mr. Hanford can carry the honor with dignity and without pomposity. He has been through political battles and he is a trained veteran. He will make his fight on the ticket with able men, and should the fates decree that he is to occupy the governor's mansion at Albany he will show that he has the brains to meet all requirements of the office. Mr. Hanford needs no introduction to our readers. Who in No. 6 does not know the gentleman? He is well known to all as a clear thinker and an orator of more than ordinary ability. They know him as one who hits a question right from the shoulder. He does not talk with bated breath lest he disturb the dry bones of conservatives.

He strikes to arouse, and his words, when speaking on a question of importance, are like the drumbeat that calls to battle. He is incorruptible. He has no itching palm. He strikes for right, as he understands it. His reputation is national. He is known from the Kennebec to the Golden Gate and from Winnipeg to the everglades of Florida. He is an author and an orator; an advocate and a counsellor; a man of the people and for the people. If elected he will make Platt and his gang take to the woods, and the whang-doodles will mourn. We may not accept the principles for which he stands, but as a man we wish the world had more of his like.—The Unionist, New York.

AN OFFER FOR AGITATION.

We would like to inform you that The Worker will be mailed for four consecutive weeks to any address at four cents per name. If you are not a Socialist you should read The Worker. If a Socialist, circulate The Worker and get your friends to do likewise. This kind of work means many more votes for Socialism next November. Try it!

FUNDS FOR MINERS.

The Socialistic Co-operative Publishing Association has received the following donations for agitation purposes among the striking coal miners:

W. C. Wagner, St. Louis, Mo.	$1.00
J. Abeles, Sea Cliff, L. I.	1.00
R. Geilfuss	5.00
Louis Kummle, Philadelphia	1.00
H. Bearman	1.00
L. Beheim	1.00
Total	$10.00

There has also been received for the Miners' Strike Fund:

A. Meyer, collected in shop	$2.00
Behning's piano shop	5.00
Hanauer Socialist Club	5.00
H. Rieth, Patchogue, L. I.	1.00
Arbeiter Liedertafel, L. I. City	5.00
Bing's cigar shop	2.40
Bricklayers' Union No. 11	25.00
Total	$45.40

Contributions for either of these two purposes may be addressed to the Socialistic Co-operative Publishing Association, 184 William street, New York.

MACHINIST'S PICNIC.

Manhattan Lodge No. 402 of the International Association of Machinists holds its annual picnic and games at Sulzer's Westchester Partk on Saturday afternoon and evening, August 30. Tickets, admitting gentleman and lady, are 25 cents.

A BAD PRECEDENT.

Once upon a time, 'tis stated,
Lived a philosophic mule,
Who in his own mulish manner
Was much wiser than the rule.

Now his master was a farmer,
Of an economic mind,
Who demanded much for little,
Like the rest of humankind.

When the mule was given thistles
In the place of fragrant hay,
He protested with a vigor
In his own peculiar way.

Quoth the farmer, "Why, your father
Would eat this instead of grass."
"That may be," the mule made answer,
"But my father was an ass!"

We who labor for a master,
And receive a slave's reward,
Bow in trembling obedience
To the dictate of a lord.

We are thankful for the thistles,
Never asking for the hay;
Giving maximum of labor,
Getting minimum of pay.

When our sons, to freedom waking,
Scorn a wage, and ask a right,
Their industrial oppressors
Will exclaim in their affright,

"Why, your fathers were contented
Just to labor with our tools."
"You are right," our sons will answer,
"But our fathers have been fools!"

WOMAN'S NATIONAL SOCIALIST UNION.

Mrs. Wenonah Stevens Abbott, Oak, Shasta County, Cal., President; Mrs. Mary E. Garbutt, Los Angeles, Cal., Vice-President; Mrs. Marion H. Dunham, Burlington, Iowa, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Annie W. Clark, Columbus, O., Recording Secretary; Mrs. E. M. Mason, Providence, R. I., Treasurer.

All communications in relation to this department should be addressed to the Department Editor, Josephine R. Cole, San Jose, Cal.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

We stand for a new order of society based upon the principles of justice and equality as applied to economics.

We declare that the rapid concentration of capital and its control over the government has forced the issue; and that, while the trust represents the most advanced stage of present economic progress, yet because it is based upon the private ownership of the means of production, it is opposed to freedom and fatal to the future welfare of the republic; therefore the next step in social advancement must be taken, which is a change from capitalism to Socialism, from competition to co-operation, from the private ownership of the means of production to the ownership and administration by the people.

Therefore, we stand pledged to teach the principles of this higher industrial system called the co-operative commonwealth; to enlist women in the advancement of these principles in every practical way that may present itself; to educate the young in these truths; to form a better public sentiment; and, finally, we pledge ourselves to do all in our power, individually and collectively, to bring about that universal co-operation founded upon the Golden Rule of Love and Justice, which shall take the place of competitive strife and discord.

Notice.

Socialist women of California are invited to meet in convention in the city of San Francisco on the 7th day of September next. A suitable hall will be secured, and its location advertised in the Socialist papers of California prior to the time of convention. The purposes of the convention are to accomplish state organization of the local unions affiliated with the Woman's National Socialist Union, to acquaint ourselves with the extent and conditions of Socialist propaganda among the women of this state, and to devise methods for carrying out the objects for which we are organized.

All women present at the convention, who are members in good standing of any organization, whether political or educational, which is working to advance the cause of Socialism, shall be entitled to discuss freely all questions which may come before the convention, and their rights in this respect shall not be inferior to those of the members of the union, but no one shall be entitled to vote except authorized delegates from local unions, or (as we shall hereafter specify) individual members of the Woman's National Socialist Union, who are not affiliated with any local union.

Also, any woman who proclaims herself a Socialist, but who is not a member of any Socialist organization, may take part in discussion, at the discretion of the chair.

No man, except such as are honorary members of the Woman's National Socialist Union, shall take any part in the discussion or other proceedings of the convention. In explanation of this apparent injustice we would say that we consider it best to throw our women entirely upon their own resources, and that we believe them perfectly capable of meeting the questions which will arise, with wisdom and fairness. Women have so long been accustomed to consider themselves inferior to men, that the influence and advice of men carries undue weight, and the presence of men has a tendency to check free discussion. Therefore we consider that it is more conducive to self-development to exclude from the floor all men except such as are honorary members and entitled to a voice.

Representation for voting shall be as follows: Each local union, with the exception of Los Angeles, shall be entitled to one delegate and one vote in convention. Los Angeles, on account of its large membership, shall be entitled to two votes, and may at its own pleasure send two authorized delegates or may send one delegate empowered to cast two votes. If there shall be present at convention more than five women who are members of the Woman's National Socialist Union, but who are not affiliated with any local union, such women shall collectively cast one vote, either by means of a delegate to be elected at convention from among themselves, or through a chairman who shall announce the will of the majority on each question separately.

It is desired that as many women as possible shall be present at convention. The opinions and experience of each individual are of value to the whole. The greater the number of women present the larger the amount of collective wisdom. A good attendance is hoped for.

J. R. COLE,
Representative for California.

In Los Angeles.

The Los Angeles Woman's Socialist Union was organized nearly a year ago with twenty-six charter members. We were enthusiastic and eager to do something, but we were not very "scientific." Only a few of us were at all proficient in parliamentary usage and so we appointed one of our number to prepare beforehand and drill us for ten minutes at the opening of each meeting. Many a woman feels very strongly on the subject being discussed, but is unable to express herself in public, and one thing we are learning is to think and talk at our best. We have had some very interesting and instructive papers prepared and read by members of the union and at other times articles have been read that were taken from the world's best Socialist writings.

We have had two large public meetings. The first was addressed by J. Stitt Wilson and was a splendid success in point of numbers and interest. We made a special effort to interest women throughout the city in Socialism and in our union, and many came out that night to hear the first Socialist speech they ever heard.

Mr. Walter Thomas Mills spoke to a large audience at another meeting held under our auspices and we feel that he did a very great deal to help to the true understanding of the economic situation, especially in regard to the position of women.

We have distributed between two and three thousand leaflets. Our president is a very active earnest woman and we owe a great deal to her hopefulness and enthusiasm. She has had little cards printed with a plain definition of Socialism and what we stand for upon one side, and the names and addresses of our officers on the other. They are a convenient size to put in a letter or carry in the pocketbook or card case, and there is often a chance to drop one as a little seed.

Our membership is now over sixty. We are just about to take up the study of "Britain for the British," by Robt. Blatchford, and hope to be more able after having mastered it to "give a reason for the hope that is in us." Several of our members have formed a class for the study of the Mills lessons with Mr. Backus for teacher. Not all members of the union felt that they could spare the time.

During the summer we are meeting only twice a month. We will probably meet every week after the vacation time is over.

I am sure we all feel that our union is very helpful to us. It keeps us ever mindful of our duty as Socialists and widens the horizon for many of us who are apt to forget the rest of the world within the narrow limits of our daily routine. May there be many new unions, till every town in our country has its band of women working besides their brothers to bring the day of freedom!

ROSE WEBSTER SNELL,
Corresponding Secretary Los Angeles W. S. U.

Note by the Editor: It "widens the horizon." That is the universal testimony of the women who take up the study of Socialist principle.

The Woman's Socialist Club of Santa Barbara, containing twelve members, hast come into our union in a body. Mrs. J. Boyd of Sheridan, Placer County, sends in her dues as an individual member, together with fifty cents. Chula Vista, Ventura and Oakland have applied for constitutions and information with regard to organizing. An organization is being formed at Oak, Shasta County. We hope to have eight local unions represented at our state convention in September.

Send for "Socialist Songs, by Emma E. Hunt, and Dialogues, by Josephine R. Cole." Arranged for children's use. Price five cents; twenty copies for fifty cents. Published by the Woman's Socialist Union of San Jose. Address, J. R. Cole, San Jose, Cal.

Correspondence from all quarters solicited. Send us information with regard to your Woman's Union or your local surroundings.

SOCIALISM AT PEACE MEETING.

MYSTIC, Conn., August 25.—Industrial peace, industrial conditions, the warfare between capitalist and laborer—this was the dominant theme in the Conference of the Universal Peace Union held inthis place, August 20 to 25.

Dr. H. A. Gibbs of Worcester, Mass., delivered a powerful address on Thursday afternoon, showing convincingly that Socialism is the only basis of universal peace. Another opportunity was given to Dr. Gibbs on Friday, and it was well improved by him in discussing the ethics of Socialism.

The social spirit of the Conference found expression in the resolution having to do with the relations of Capital and Labor, which read as follows:

"That the frequency and continuance of strikes show that discord that is inimical to peace, we re-affirm our confidence in the rules laid down by the Universal Peace Union, comprehending the right of the laborer to appeal to, but not to prevent another laborer from obtaining work, and the duty of employers to heed the appeal and to exercise justice and, when difficulties cannot be amicably adjusted, to refer them to wise and impartial arbitration. We believe that the cause of this discord should be removed by the adoption of a just system in the production and distribution of wealth, under which every man shall be guaranteed the full product of his toil."

Thursday evening, at a street meeting, the citizens of Mystic had their first opportunity to hear the principles of Socialism discussed. Comrade Gibbs spoke and much interest was aroused. A hundred and fifty men gave the speaker their undivided attention, and many asked questions of the speaker at the close of his address. Comrade E. P. Clarke of New York was the chairman of the meeting. Comrades from Stonington had been in Mystic a few days before and distributed literature and agitated for the meeting, and on Thursday evening sixteen members of Local Stonington came over to cooperate.

On Friday evening Dr. Gibbs spoke to two hundred people on the streets of Stonington, Comrade Edgerist of that place and Comrade Clarke presiding. Now people on all sides are asking for literature and Socialist speakers in these towns in the future will receive a cordial welcome.

THE HAND OF CAPITAL.

It Takes the Child from the Cradle, the Mother from the Home, and the Job from the Father—Wields the Editorial Pen and Writes the Laws—Child-Hunting in the South

The mills of the cotton duck trust at New Hartford, Conn., are to be moved to Alabama on account of the Connecticut law against child labor. The plant is to be removed to Tallahassee, Ala., and the dismantling will shortly begin.

The capitalist not only suffers the little children to come unto him. He goes out hunting for the little ones. He pursues them across the country, rounds up the little slaves in his mills and out of their tender lives grinds a fat profit. In the South child-hunting is particularly good. The woods are full of poor children and there are no game laws.

Not that it is only in the South that the labor and lives of the children of the working class are coined into profit. In Pennsylvania the boys in the coal breakers fill their lungs with coal dust, in California the little girls in the canning factories have a finger cut off now and then by the steel blade of the machines they operate, in the packing-houses of Illinois the boy workers stand in the blood and refuse of the animals which they help to cut up. And everywhere the hand of Capital reaches out for the child. For children are cheap and unable to rebel.

So the hand of Capital reaches out across the country to take the child from the cradle and place it in the factory.

Some soft-hearted, sentimental people have been carrying on an agitation against child-labor in the South which has attracted so much attention that the mill-owners are beginning to reply. And now articles are appearing which set forth the beneficial effects of factory-labor on the child and dwell upon the tender solicitude for the child-workers displayed by their benevolent employers.

For the dirty fingers of the hand of Capital hold the editorial pen.

The Chattanooga "Tradesman" publishes some thirty or forty letters on the subject from Southern mill-owners, remarking that their "dispassionate statements" will give the reader more truth than "the statements of irresponsible writers and unbalanced enthusiasts!" The "Tradesman's" symposium leaves about 750 Southern textile mills to be heard from.

The superintendent of the Granite Falls (N. C.) Manufacturing Company, 30 per cent. of whose employees are under twelve years of age, writes: "Discipline is the most important lesson in life, and the lack of it is the cause of so many failures in every walk of life. In the mill the child is taught discipline as well as at school."

Yes, there is no doubt that the child is taught discipline in the mill, for in some of the mills the owners demand a permit from the parents to whip the child when it is disobedient. A child who has to work on its feet twelve hours a day or night is likely to get tired and refractory and must be taught to obey—teach them to obey, damn them, to work and obey, that is their portion.

The president of the Pelzer (S. C.) and the Belton (S. C.) mills writes in the "Tradesman:"

"While I try to prevent the employment of children under twelve years of age in the mills which I manage, I am very much opposed to a child-labor law, because it is the mudsill of labor legislation and the beginning of organized labor tyranny and labor troubles. In other states and countries now under the despotism of labor-leaders the troubles always began with the child-labor agitation, which was adroitly used as an appeal to the humanitarian sentiment of good people.

"The poverty of our Southern people should be remembered, also their need, above all things, of the opportunity to work, their lack of education, and that the mill employees of the Southern mills to-day are the first generation in that employment. The improvement in their condition and their environment is slow, but in looking back over my twenty years' connection with cotton-milling I can realize the great progress that has been made, but we have no compulsory school laws, and only an apology for a public school system. Banish the children from the mills, where their fathers, and in some cases their mothers, are employed, and the children will run wild, uncontrolled, become vicious, and in after-life uncontrollable."

This mill-owner sees clearly enough that if men were employed instead of children, unions would be organized and "labor legislation," "humanitarian sentiment," and other horrible things would follow. He pleads the lack of education of the Southerners as good reason for working their children twelve hours a day at a wage of pennies. Can it be that child-labor in the mill has any connection with lack of education? Perhaps the next generation will have more education if they go to work at an earlier age. Many of the mills have established schools which give the little tots a grand opportunity to become learned scholars in the evening after the twelve hours on their feet at the work in the mill. To realize the awful effects which would follow if the children were allowed to play re-read the following passage this mill-owner's "dispassionate statement:" "Banish the children from the mills, where their fathers, and in some cases their mothers, are employed, and the children will run wild, uncontrolled, become vicious, and in after-life uncontrollable." Perhaps the reason of the capitalists for maintaining their lobby to prevent legislation against child-labor is that they would not like to see the children grow vicious through play in the open-air and sunshine.

The facts about child-labor in the South are notorious. "Mother" Jones has described how she saw little children awakened by throwing cold water in their faces that they might go to their work in the mills; Miss Irene Ashby has described how she found children who had "forgotten how to play" working for ten cents a day; the matter formed one of the main topics for consideration at the annual meeting, last April, of the American Academy of Political and Social Science; Edgar Gardner Murphy has dealt with it in his pamphlet, "The Case Against Child-Labor;" Elbert Hubbard has written a most illuminating and powerful article about it in the "Philistine;" E. J. Lister has been investigating for the "Dry Goods Economist" and the following is an extract from his conservative article in that journal:

"Before being shown through the various mills I generally had a chat with the president, as well as with the superintendent. Both assured me that though they endeavored to keep children under twelve years of age out of the mill some were admitted because their mother was a widow or their father an invalid, their help consequently being essential to the support of the family.

"But there was another feature, they added, from which, without explanation, a wrong inference would likely be drawn. Quite a number of small children would be seen in the spinning rooms who are not on the pay rolls of the mill. They were there, merely on sufferance—that is, at the request of mothers employed in the rooms, who wanted their children near them while at work.

"So, in making the rounds of the mills whenever a tiny tot was noticed tying broken threads or otherwise busy around the spindles the foregoing explanation was invariably forthcoming—'not on the pay roll.' In one instance after the superintendent had made this stereotyped comment he was called away a few moments—an intermission which, true to reportorial instincts, I employed to good advantage by asking the tot 'merely there on sufferance.'

"'Do you work here regularly?' 'Yes,' was the reply.

"'How much do you get?' I asked.

"'Ten cents a day,' was the reply.

The facts are notorious and have been fully aired in the press. The result has been a good deal of sentimental indignation and agitation which has accomplished nothing.

For the hand of Capital is in the legislature, in the editorial room and on the preacher's collar. It is the same hand that takes the child from the cradle and the mother from the home and closes the factory to the father whose work they are doing. And every time a workingman votes for any political party which recognizes the right of private ownership in mills, factories or other means of producing wealth he upholds the hand of Capital that slays him and his.

For if the capitalist has a right to own the mill at all, he has a right to run it as he chooses. Would you interfere with a child's "sacred right to work?" What would become of all the widows and invalid fathers whom the benevolent mill-owners say the children are supporting? Nobody would take care of them under the competitive system.

The trust monster is going down South to hunt for children to devour. But if you believe in private ownership and competition you have no right to denounce the Connecticut capitalist for reaching out his hand to grasp the children. For if other mills employ child-labor and the Connecticut capitalist does not, the other mills will undersell him and get the trade; consequently he has to go after the children. Under capitalism and competition the capitalist who would survive must reduce the cost of production—that is, get cheap labor. The only capitalist who can survive is the one who can get a larger share of the product of his workers than can his rivals, either by the introduction of more machinery, the forcing down of wages, or the employment of women and children.

The displacement of workingmen, first by machines, and then by women and children is logical and inevitable under competitive capitalism and the political parties of the capitalist class will not make any sincere attempt to restrict the operation of this tendency. The only remedy is the collective ownership by the people of all the means of production. That is Socialism. And until we get it, the only party that will pass and strictly enforce adequate state laws against child-labor is the Socialist Party, the party of the working class. And when the ultimate victory of that party is won and we have Socialism a way will be found to take care of all those "widowed mothers and invalid fathers" without sending their little children to labor long hours at work which wrecks their lives. And in those days the mill-owner will not have to "find employment" for the children. He will be looking for it himself.

COURTENAY LEMON.

CAPITALIST LAW.

A Typical Instance in California, Parallel to That of the New York Central Murder.

Under the headlines, "Tried and Convicted by the Santa Fe Railroad—Coroner's Verdict 'Cuts No Ice'—Trainmen Deprived of Their Living while Capitalists Go Free," the Los Angeles "Socialist" tells an instructive story in regard to railway accidents. We quote in part:

"The following news item appears in Wednesday morning's 'Herald:'

"'Geo. Speltz, night yardmaster at the Santa Fe yards, and Bert Walbridge, foreman of the train which was wrecked a week ago last Sunday evening at Coombs siding, have been discharged by the company, as a result of the finding of the company's investigation. The investigation is not yet finished and possibly some of the other employees may also lose their places.'

"It will be remembered how the Coroner's jury, in this case, brought in a verdict severely condemning the 'executive officers of the Santa Fe Railroad Company, together with the night yardmaster of the Santa Fe yards at Los Angeles, the foreman of the Santa Fe switching crew then working at Coombs siding, and the engineer of the Santa Fe engine No. 0213.'

"The 'executive officers' of the company made no appearance at the trial, but the yardmaster, foreman and engineer testified that they were compelled to run the risks, which finally caused the accident, by the orders of those in authority above them—it was up to these poor devils of trainmen to 'do the work or lose their jobs.'

"The coroner's verdict passed lightly over the heads of the 'executive officers'—they had nothing to fear from the law, but the men who risked their lives to increase the dividends of those officials and stockholders are about to be 'broken' by the company. The company can punish—the law cannot. The company can deprive men of 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,' by taking away their jobs, but the United States government is powerless to jail the real criminals. The capitalists of the Santa Fe Company own their men just as they do their shops and rolling stock, and just as they throw on the scrap heap a worn out piece of machinery so they throw on the highway the men who have been chosen to act as scapegoats for the criminal acts of the corporation.

"The Santa Fe Company is an open, every-day breaker of the law. Daily, trains are run at the rate of twenty or thirty miles an hour across the city's streets in the center of town, when the law says that eight miles an hour shall be the limit. Months ago a warrant was sworn out by a representative of the 'Socialist' against the breakers of this law, and the city police have never been able to find the guilty parties.

"They can find workingmen to arrest for every conceivable offense, from being out of work and money to carrying banners, but the Santa Fe Railroad Company is sacred from the strong arm of the law as wielded by Elton and Chambers."

It is the story of our New York Central tunnel horror over again—Vanderbilt going free and Wisker discharged, blacklisted, and even indicted for manslaughter.

The "Socialist" well concludes its comment with the words: "Workingmen, there is no scab trick worse than electing a member of the capitalist class to office."

THE PARTY NAME.

The party which this paper represents is known nationally and in most of the states as the SOCIALIST PARTY. In New York, on account of certain provisions of the Election Law, this name cannot be used on the ballot, and the official designation of the party in this state is SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY. The official emblem of the Social Democratic Party in New York is the Arm and Torch, which appears at the head of the editorial column of this paper. On the official ballot this emblem, reduced in size, will be placed at the head of the Social Democratic column, and a cross in the circle under it will indicate a straight vote for the ticket of the Social Democratic Party, headed by Benjamin Hanford.

Reports of Socialist Activity in Pennsylvania.

Swift Wins Fight for Free Speech—Six New Locals Formed—Socialist Speakers Greeted with Enthusiasm—Nominations in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—As this is Labor Day, the regular meeting of the State Committee is postponed till to-morrow. Six applications for local charters, recived this week, are awaiting action.

The reports from the coal field each day bring more assurance of victory. Massachusetts will not stand alone in the list of states having Socialist members in the legislature. Pennsylvania will surely be the next.

Swift Wins His Fight.

Comrade Morrison I. Swift has won his fight for free speech in the Hazleton District and street meetings will be continued. The capitalist authorities, in this as in many other cases, have made the double blunder of first taking rashly arbitrary action and then, realizing their mistake, betraying their cowardice by "taking backwater." The fact is, the miners are so determined and the "operators" so greedily stubborn, the workingmen are becoming so thoroughly imbued with Socialism and the old-party politicians are so conscious of their own bad records, that the political tools of capitalism are at their wits' ends and vacillate between brazen insolence and half-hearted conciliation.

Work in Coal Field.

Comrade Collins leaves the field to visit his home for a few weeks and then will return till the end of the campaign. Comrades Swift, Fischer, Barkowsky, and L. Goazlou are now in the coal field, and Comrades N. P. Geiger of Cleveland and W. J. White of New Castle will report to Elmer Smoyer, Chairman of Carbon County, within a few days. Comrade J. L. Franz of Brooklyn did good work among the Germans in the Shenandoah Valley for two weeks, and has now returned home. Comrade J. W. James next week will go into Schuylkill County.

Socialist meetings exceeding in size and enthusiasm any political meetings ever seen are being held at all points where we have speakers. The miners' bands are at the disposal of the Socialists for every meeting. Many locals are being organized in territory where a speaker of our party has never yet appeared.

The Nanticoke Valley "News" has the following: "We would advise the Democratic and Republican statesmen not to think too lightly of the Socialist ticket in Luzerne County this year, as the vote on Election Day may surprise them very much." The "News" is getting "wise."

Campaign headquarters have been opened on South Wyoming street, Hazleton, where the comrades will hold daily meeitgs and all kinds of Socialist literature can be procured.

Slayton's Tour.

Councilman J. W. Slayton of New Castle, Socialist candidate for Governor, is billed to speak at the following places during the next ten days; September 4, New Brighton; 5, Butler; 6, West Newton; 7, Charleroi; 8, Connellsville; 9, Cokerville; 10, Black Lick. Correspondence from all these places gives assurance that good meetings will be held.

Philadelphia Conventions.

A most successful Congressional and legislative convention was held in Washington Hall, Eighth and Christian streets, Philadelphia, Comrade Barnes presiding. Comrade Gilles, Atkinson, and Moore listed to speak and Comrade Collins came in at the opportune time and delivered an address that raised the utmost enthusiasm. W. W. Atkinson was chosen as candidate for Congress and Meyer Gilles, Mason Gill, and I. Revnes were nominated for the Legislature.

A convention for the Twenty-second Legislative District will be held at Kensington Labor Lyceum on Thursday, September 4.

A Critical Moment.

If the Socialists of the nation could but realize the great uplift that would be given to the movement of the whole country by a vigorous campaign in the coal field, we know that we would not be calling in vain either for speakers or funds wherewith to maintain them, and literature so much needed would flood the region.

In the Erie "People," Comrade Swift sets forth the needs and the situation as follows: "To-day, in not concentrating Socialist troops of speakers and hurling them into the mining region while the strike battle is hot, the Socialists are committing the great tactical error of dividing and spreading their forces over the whole country, and carrying on thousands of little skirmishes and neglecting the vital point and the stupendous opportunity. Funds are being comparatively wasted in sending speakers about in localities where nothing has happened to open men's minds and where few converts can be made, while here the greatest of the world's strikes is in progress and the miners are begging for Socialist speakers and the whole anthracite region has but six. The situation is unparalleled; the spreading out policy means loss of the opportunity to create a tremendous Socialist impression on the country. The infamous self-assurance of the Coal Barons has aroused the nation. The cause is plain to be seen, it is unbridled private property in matters of public concern. Now if there instantly followed on this a mighty broadside of Socialist votes from the mining population, what a shock and shaking up of the country from Maine to California there would be. All men would know that the Socialist revolution had begun. What enthusiasm would spread from it over the workers of the continent. This unspeakable advantage is rapidly slipping away. Socialist speakers, at least thirty of them, could be sent here and they are not here. Let me most urgently solicit action before it is too late. Note this: If thirty speakers are sent instantly by various state committees, as soon as the strike is over and the newly-made Socialists of the mining belt begin to earn money they will contribute to aid in the support of these speakers and they can be kept here until election. These speakers will bring the miners to register the greatest strike in American history, the strike of the bullied, oppressed anthracite coal workers at the ballot-box this fall."

Donations for the two weeks will be credited in next week's report. The Special Committee in Philadelphia is doing splendid work and meting with generous responses. Send all funds to J. Edelmann, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

Organizer.

IS NOT THIS PRACTICAL?

Immediate Demands of the Social Democratic Party.

Socialists Elected in this State Would Fight for Strict Factory Inspection, Employers' Liability, Prohibition of Child Labor, Limitation of Workday, and Other Important Measures.

By authority of the State Convention of the Social Democratic Party of New York a special committee elected for the purpose has formulated the following statement, supplementary to the state platform:

"As measures of immediate relief and as steps toward our ultimate end, we pledge ourselves to the following measures:

"1. More stringent legislation for the guarding of dangerous machinery and for the sanitation of factories and workshops; absolute responsibility of employers for injuries sustained by employees at their work.—So long as the capitalists receive profits from other men's labor they must be held to strict accountability for accidents occurring in their service.

"2. Reorganization of the system of factory inspection; inspectors to be elected by the workingmen in the various trades, and to have ample powers to enforce the law.—So long as inspectors are appointed by political favor there is danger that they will cater to capitalist interests. They should be responsible only to the class for whose service they exist.

"3. Absolute prehibition of child labor and prohibition of female labor in dangerous and unhealthy occupations.

"4. A compulsory maximum working day of eight hours for all wage workers.—The reduction of working hours will increase the chances of employment, and will thus reduce the competition for work and make it easier for workingmen to secure increased wages.

"5. Pensions for superannuated workers.—We deem that those who have spent their lives in useful labor are far more deserving of public care than those who have been employed in the destruction of life and property, and that it is not charity, but simple justice for the state to assure them of comfort in their old age.

"6. Public ownership of all industries that shall take the form of monopolies.

"7. Work to be provided for the unemployed; the state and the municipalities to undertake whatever sort of industry shall be necessary or proper for this purpose; all public work to be done on public account, without the intervention of contractors; union wages and conditions to prevail on all public work.

"8. The resources of the public treasury to be available for the assistance of striking or locked-out workingmen struggling for a better share of the product of their labor.—At present the powers of the state are used to help capitalists in their controversies with Labor. We propose to turn their own weapons against them.

"9. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituencies, and equal civil and political rights for men and women."

BLOOMFIELD LABOR LYCEUM OPENING.

To Take Place Saturday Evening, September 13, with Good Speakers and Music.

For several weeks the members of the Workingmen's Educational Association of Bloomfield and Watsessing, N. J., have been working hard in preparation for the opening of the Labor Lyceum at 90 Myrtle street. The formal opening will be held Saturday evening, September 13, and will be made the occasion for a great celebration.

H. Gaylord Wilshire of Toronto and Miss Johanna Dahme of New York City have been secured as speakers, and E. T. Neben, President of the Association, will also deliver an address.

The Montclair Singing Society, the Socialist Liedertafel of Newark, the Passaic Falls Maennerchor, and the Lassalle Maennerchor of aPterson will sing, and the Socialist Drum and Fife Corps of Hudson County will also take part.

The program of speeches and music will be followed by dancing. Refreshments will be served by the Socialist Women's Society of Newark.

Trade unions all over the country have been invited to attend and the affair will be extensively advertised in other ways. Every comrade should be present to assist in the demonstration.

THE ONLY HOPE FOR IRELAND.

The farmers of Ireland fear another famine. The potato crop has been attacked by insects which promises its ruination. A great many potatoes will of course be raised, but this must go to pay the landlords who have staked off the farms, called them theirs and demanded tribute for their use.

The landlord has no fear of a famine. Wonder what harm it would do for the farmers of Ireland to unite under the banner of the Socialist Party of that country, capture the powers of government, and declare the land, machinery and all other means of production and distribution to be the collective property of all, each to receive the full product of his labor?—Missouri Socialist.

FOR THE DAILY.

Meetings of Publishing Association and Delegate Conference Next Week.

The third session of the conference of delegates from trade unions and other labor organizations for the establishment of a daily Socialist and trade union paper will be held at the Labor Lyceum, 64 E. Fourth street, on Thursday, Sept. 11, at 8 o'clock sharp. All delegates are requested to attend, as important matters will be submitted by the various committees for final action. Each labor organization which has not yet sent delegates to the conference is invited to elect and send two.

The Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association will hold its September meeting at the Labor Lyceum on Monday, Sept. 8, at 8 o'clock. All members of the Association and members of the Social Democratic Party desiring to join the Association are requested to attend.

CAREY RENOMINATED.

Socialist Candidates Chosen at Haverhill and Neigbboring Points—Carey's Election Considered Sure.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Sept. 1.—Haverhill and the neighboring cities and towns of Newburyport, Amesbury, and Georgetown held caucuses on Friday and chose delegates to the Congressional, county, and councillor and senatorial district conventions, all of which will be held at Socialist Headquarters in Haverhill, at 2 Gilman Place.

Haverhill has renominated James F. Carey for a fifth term in the Legislature, and his record as a champion of the working class is so strong that there seems no doubt of his re-election. James C. Strayton and George A. Keene are Haverhill's other Socialist candidates for the Legislature.

In Amesbury Charles S. Grieves was nominated for the Legislature and Jason Spofford, C. S. Grieves, H. Miller, Paul Shivell, and Jeremiah Reardon for Town Committee.

Georgetown nominated John J. Malloy, David C. Buckley, and J. E. Hughes for Town Committee. A convention will be held to chose a legislative candidate, as also in Newburyport.

The Socialist movement in Haverhill has recently slustained a severe loss in the death of Miss Marie R. Dupont, one of the most active members of the Women's Socialist Club. She was a patient and untiring worker for the cause, never failing to respond when called upon by either the Women's Club, the Central Socialist Club, or any other branch of local Socialist activities. Her death has cast a gloom over her comrades and she has left a place which will be hard to fill.

Dr. H. A. Gibbs of Worcester and Rev. Geo. E. Littlefield of Haverhill addressed a large open-air meeting on our principal square on Labor Day. Dr. Gibbs also gave an excellent Socialist Labor Day address at the picnic of the Haverhill C. L. U. held at Canoble Lake Park, Salem, N. H. The picnic was attended by about fifteen thousand people from Havernill, Lawrence, Lowell, Nashua, and other places. Band concerts were given by the Commonwealth (Socialist) Band of Haverhill, formerly the Social Democratic Band.

Assistant Assessor Morrill of Ward Five (Carey's district) won out in his controversy with the Republican assessors. The assessors backed down completely, accepting the names of the Socialists which had been dropped by the Republican illegally selected by them to canvass part of the Ward. Comrade Morrill was paid in ful without the necessity of a law suit.

AL TRUIST.

THEY HELP STRIKERS.

MASSACHUSETTS SOCIALISTS RAISING MONEY FOR MINERS STIKE FUND.

The Socialist Party of Massachusetts is helping the striking miners. The Rockland miners alone have collected fifty dollars, Brockton has nearly one hundred dollars, while Haverhill, Adams, Clinton, Milford, and other clubs have already sent in various sums. In other places lists are being actively ciculated. The Boston Central Committee is arranging, through a committee composed of Comrades Cutting, Coyne, Worcester, Mailly, and Touvin, for a mass meeting to be held on Sunday, Sept. 14, 3 p. m. at Apollo Garden, Roxbury, for the benefit of the strikers. The proprietors of the garden have given free use of it. Prominent trade unionists have been invited to speak, while Representative Carey and William Mailly will represent the Socialist Party. The entire proceeds of the meting, taken up by collection, will go to hte strikers. It is confidently expected that the meeting will be a success and a large sum realized. There will be no admission fee. Socialists of Boston and vicinity should do all they can for the meeting.

"NO POLITICS."

"Keep out of politics!" yells the sharper in the trade union movement, and then the sharper gets the union to pass a resolution endorsing some so-called friend of labor on an old party ticket for some political office. Result: The sharper gets a political job and the rest of the members of the union get it in the neck. This is the operation which goes on year after year and the interests of labor are bertayed.—Colorado Chronicle.

—The election of a few Socialist legislators, judges, and sheriffs in the coal fields would ensure a quicker and easier success in the next strike, because it would encourage the workers and frighten the capitalists.

FRATERNIZE WITH STRIKERS.

West Virginia Militia Favor Strikers.

Men Sent to "Protect" Mines Urge Scabs to Quit Work—Share Their Rations with Hungry Strikers—Capitalists Alarmed.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 1.—An unexpected situation has resulted from the ordering out of the National Guard to preserve order in the coal fields. The soldiers, whose sympathies were all with the strikers, have used their influence with the men who are at work, and have persuaded so many of them to join in the strike that the detachment stationed at Rush Run had to be recalled and sent to another point to keep it from emptying the mine.

Hundreds of families are sleeping out of doors. It is estimated that over 1,000 families have been evicted in the New River Valley, and most of them had no place to go. Some had friends and secured shelter, but the majority are homeless without even so much as a tent to shelter them, and there is talk of a subscription to buy tents for them. Food is scarce with them, and the condition of the men is pitiable in the extreme. Some of the soldiers have even shared their food provided by the state with the families of the men who are in the strike.—Press dispatches.

Nothing could be more pleasing to Socialists or more disquieting to the minds of the tyrants of industry than the dispatch here given. It furnishes a parallel to the conditions already reached in several of the European countries, where the governments, wholly devoted to the protection of economic privilege, are kept in constant fear by the rapid spread of Socialist ideas and working-class feeling in their large standing armies.

It may be, of course, that this is only a local symptom, and that no similar popular tendency will be observed in the militia of more advanced industrial states of the Union. It may be that the capitalists of West Virginia and their political tools have been careless in picking and training their militiamen. In this case we may expect to hear of companies or regiments being dissolved, and to see the "organs of public opinion" making frantic appeals to the sons and nephews of "eminent and respectable citizens" to enroll themselves in the militia.

But in any case, the news is cheering and indicates the growth of true class-consciousness among the workers of the South.

IS STILL A PRIEST.

Father Hagerty Denies Report That His Socialist Opinions Have Forced Him to Withdraw from Catholic Church.

Rev. Thomas J. Hagerty writes us from Van Buren, Ark., under date August 25:

"The Editor of The Worker.

"My Dear Comrade:—The Cincinnati 'Enquirer' of August 22, publishes a scare-head article anent my so-called resignation from the Catholic priesthood, with the purpose, doubtless, of discrediting my work for Socialism. Among other things, it asserts that 'the reason assigned for his withdrawal from the ministry and communion of the Catholic Church, Father Hagerty states, is the Church's stand against Socialism and the incompatibility of her teachings with the doctrines of his economic creed.' I have never made such a statement. It is true that I have withdrawn from the technical work of the ministry; but the withdrawal implies no derogation of my sacerdotal character. I am as much a priest to-day as I ever was. I have not separated from the communion of the Catholic Church, and I hold myself as much a member thereof as the Pope himself.

"Moreover, I do not find any incompatibility between the doctrines of Catholicism and the philosophy of Socialism. I do not BELIEVE in any economic creed; but I KNOW a definite economic philosophy. Socialism is an economic science, not a system of dogmatic beliefs; and the Church, as such, can have no quarrel with Socialism any more than she can come into conflict with the Roentgen rays or the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy.

"The current misunderstandings of Socialism among Catholics arise from the political bigotry and ignorance of the real philosophy of Socialism on the part of the few bishops and priests who wage unjust warfare against a movement whose highest purpose is the industrial emancipation of the world's toilers, and whose ultimate effect will be 'To make earth's desert glad,

In its Eden greenness clad;
And to level manhood bring
Lord and peasant, serf and king;
And the Christ of God to find
In the humblest of our kind.'

"Trusting that you will give this letter as wide a circulation as you can, I am,

'Fraternally yours,
"THOS. J. HAGERTY."

AN OFFER FOR AGITATION.

We would like to inform you that The Worker will be mailed for four consecutive weeks to any address at four cents per name. If you are not a Socialist you should read The Worker. THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

A WORD TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The amount of space at our disposal is so small in proportion to the demands made upon it that we find ourselves compelled, every week, to refuse publication of many notices, communications, articles, poems, and other matter which we should like to use, as well as to let many important events go by without comment which should be given. The party work has grown to such enormous proportions, compared with its condition three years ago, that it has become quite impracticable to depend upon The Worker as a means of presenting matters of party routine to the comrades. As a matter of fact, printed or mimeographed circulars sent out to members or locals are, through necessity, coming into general use for this purpose. We have, therefore, to request all local secretaries, committees, and others acting for the party, to make their official communications as brief as possible and not to expect us to publish long documents, each of which is of interest to only a few of our readers, at the expense of news and propaganda matter. We desire just as much party news—as distinguished from official routine—as we can get, and in the most condensed form. We are fallible. Like the Episcopalians, as alleged in the church service, "We have done the things we ought not to have done and left undone the things we ought to have done." But we do the best we can to make The Worker a good party newspaper and a good propaganda paper and we ask all comrades to help us.

Socialist desiring to contribute to the strike fund of the United Mine Workers should send to Leon Greenbaum, National Secretary of the Socialist Party, Emilie Building, St. Louis. Contributions intended for Socialist agitation in the strike field should be sent to Jos. Edelman, Treasurer of the Pennsylvania State Committee, 807 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia. Considerable time and trouble will be saved if moneys are sent directly to these centers, instead of coming to this office and then having to be forwarded. National Secretary Greenbaum makes remittances weekly or oftener to the headquarters of the United Mine Workers.

THE APPEAL TO CONSUMERS.

From a little "freak" magazine called the "Whim," of which, we regret to say, Ernest Crosby is one of the editors, we take these lines:

THE COAL STRIKE.

The miners and the owners
May think their fight is fun,
But I don't quite see where the joke comes in
At seven dollars a ton.

This quatrain is intended to be funny, of course. But it is not because of its failure in the matter of wit that we comment upon it. There is a more serious fault in it—the utter heartlessness of its sentiment and the utter fallacy of its argument.

It is perfectly characteristic of the middle class, this quatrain—of the struggling small business men, exploiters of the workers and exploited by the trusts, who form the backbone of the Democratic party (if it still has a backbone), and to whose most sordid individual self-interest the demagogic appeals of the anti-trust advocates are made. These petty parasites still feel themselves to be capitalists. They think themselves vastly superior to the wage-workers. They are willing to patronize them and give them abundant advice and assurances of sympathy, so long as it costs them nothing. They would like to have the workers accept them as leaders against the trusts. But their minds cannot rise above individual and immediate interests. Even in defense of their own class privileges, they are incapable of making a tithe of the sacrifices that workingmen cheerfully make in the labor movement. They talk loud against the monopolists and condole with the downtrodden workers in time of peace. But at the crack of the monopolists' whip they cringe and crawl; at the least offer of personal gain they fly even at each other's throats; and when the workers are engaged in a life-and-death struggle with the industrial despots, these blatant anti-monopolists forget all their promises and array themselves on the despots' side, in order to guard their own purses—as they did last year in the steel strike and have done this year in the coal strike. And even where they have power, they still do not dare to use it against the monopolists, but only against the workers who helped them to gain it; their political representatives—the Clevelands and Steunenbergs and Pattisons—have been even more cruel in their treatment of strikers than the political agents of the great capitalists.

Of this grovelingly selfish, bombastically timid, and shamelessly false class the author of this quatrain from the "Whim" is quite typical in sentiment—as when he coolly speaks of the strike as "fun" for the miners and puts the extra dollar or two he has to pay for coal above the question of the miners' rights and wrongs.

And he is as false in argument as he is cruel in sentiment. His "smart" quatrain is a contribution to the stupid economics of the reactionary party—a version of that appeal to and for "the consumers" which the Hearst papers have been harping on so long.

"The consumers have rights," we are told; "the consumers are robbed; the consumers should unite to protect their interests."

But who are the consumers? Are they a separate class, with a common interest in opposition to some other interest? Not at all. All the people are consumers. Unfortunately, the capitalists are the chief consumers. At a single ball or supper, a Vanderbilt or an Astor often consumes more than the average working-class family consumes in a year. If the consumers are robbed through the exorbitant prices of the things they consume, those who consume the most must be the most deeply wronged of all.

And if the consumers, being the whole people, are robbed by someone else and must unite to protect their interests as consumers, against whom are they to combine? Against non-consumers? The only non-consumers are in the graveyards. They are not robbing anyone.

It takes but a little careful thought to see that an appeal to the interests of the consumers is economically false. It is a convenient fallacy, for it masks the real appeal of the reactionists—an appeal to the petty capitalists who (like the great capitalists) consume without producing, and who, as non-producers rob the workers while, as purchasers, they are robbed by the trusts.

The true division of society, the actual antagonism of interest, is not between consumers and someone else unspecified, but between producers and non-producers, between producers and appropriators or exploiters. And the effective majority of the producers are the wage-workers, who are already organized to fight the capitalists, and who show in this ceaseless struggle a degree of patience, of courage, of generosity, of susceptibility to discipline, and of devotion to an ideal above personal comfort, such as no propertied class has ever shown.

When the organs of public misinformation whine about the sufferings of the consumers in consequence of this strike, when they clamor for a settlement of the strike—not for a final settlement, not for a just settlement, but for any settlement that can be patched up, anything that will get the miners back to work—no matter what the words in which they do it, no matter whether they denounce the miners or the "operators"—when they take this position, they play directly (and, for the most part, consciously) into the hands of the operators and of the capitalist class at large.

For us, we say: Let the strike go on, as long as the miners can stand it, with the aid of other workers—and let that aid be prompt and liberal; if the capitalist consumers suffer, we are not sorry; if the working-class consumers suffer, they have their remedy at the ballot-box; let there be no settlement except a victory for the strikers; and let all who, on whatever pretense, counsel the strikers to surrender or to compromise be branded as open or disguised allies of the mine-owners—and all the more dangerous if disguised.

The day after the foregoing article went to the printer, the editor received from a friend visiting in Scranton a personal letter, from which some sentences may well be quoted:

Many think that the strikers will win in their grand struggle for their rights. But I find, alas! that most people are far less interested in the miners' welfare than in the prosperity of their own business and the price they must pay for coal. They count it a greater calamity to pay a dollar a ton extra for coal than that a hundred thousand workingmen should be defrauded of half or three-quarters of their honest product. So—better to 'vote as we always have' than to vote for the rights of the workingmen. * * *

Everyone here says there never was such a strike before—so quiet, so law-abiding, so peaceful and unobtrusive, so perfectly sober, and yet so firm. I have been told many times, and even by enemies of the miners, that there have been far fewer arrests for disorderly conduct, less drunkenness, less liquor sold, since the strike began, than ever before in this city. * * *

"I do not know whether I've seen any miners or not. I know I've seen no riot.

"I heard one man say, with a sneer, 'I've been in the houses of a good many strikers and not seen a bit of butter on their tables; poor devils, I don't believe any of them have a pound of butter in the house.' Well, I just boiled over."

It is unfortunately a fact that the narrowly selfish spirit to which this correspondent refers, which thinks more of the price of coal than of the justice of the miners' cause, is to be found even in many workingmen. Yet this is hardly to be wondered at, since the education of these men, though school, church, and newspaper, has been controlled by the capitalist class. The encouraging feature is that this strike commands wider and more effective sympathy than any in the past, that a far greater number of workingmen in other trades feel their unity of interest with the miners and are ready to make sacrifices to help them.

IS NOT THIS PRACTICAL?

The statement of immediate demands for the state of New York, presented in another column, indicates some of the measures for the amelioration of present conditions for which Socialists strive, pending the downfall of capitalism and the rise of the Co-operative Commonwealth. These are some of the measures for which Social Democratic members in the Legislature would fight, and which a vigorous and uncompromising delegation of Social Democrats, even though constituting but a small minority, would be able to carry through.

For such measures as these the Socialist members of the Massachusetts Legislature—James F. Carey and Frederick O. MacCartney—have made unceasing agitation. Those two men, because they have a radical and growing party behind them, because they have consistently championed the interests of the working class, and because they absolutely reject every suggestion of compromise, have been able repeatedly to force the old-party politicians on record, compelling their leaders to "hedge" and apologize, and have shown such steadily increasing influence that there can be no doubt that the election of even one or two more Socialists to join them in the Massachusetts State House next November will be sufficient to put the old parties' leaders "on the run" and scare them into making the most liberal concessions to Labor's demands.

What they have done in Massachusetts would, with the added impetus of an increasing Socialist vote all over the country, be done far more quickly now in New York by the election of even two Social Democrats to the Assembly at Albany and by the registering of a large and solid vote for all the candidates of the Social Democratic Party, from Governor down, on November 4. The bosses of the old parties, the paid agents of the great corporations, know that they can always either control or politically kill individual "good men" in the own parties or "independents," however sincere, elected on merely personal grounds or by merely local and temporary movements. The only political movement of the working class that they really respect, because the only one that they have cause to fear, is a disciplined workingmen's party, radical in its aims—demanding for Labor its whole product, through the collective ownership of the means of production and the elimination of profit, interest and rent—and strict in its methods—refusing all offers of endorsement or deals, appealing to the working class for its votes, depending on the working class for its financial support, and casting its vote straight for all its candidates and for no others.

There is only one such party. In the nation at large it is known as the Socialist, in the state of New York as the Social Democratic Party. There is room for only one such party, and for its candidates, from head to foot of the ticket, every workingman should cast his vote.

In New York the ticket of the Social Democratic Party will appear in the fifth column of the official ballot, under the emblem of the Arm and Torch, and headed by the name of Benjamin Hanford as candidate for Governor. A cross in the circle at the top of that column means an intelligent workingman's vote—not only for ameliorative measures, now, but for the complete emancipation of Labor at the earliest possible moment.

If you want labor laws honestly drawn and speedily enacted, vote for the Congressional and legislative candidates of a party pledged solely to the interests of the working class. If you want these laws honestly and vigorously enforced, vote for the candidates of such a party for executive positions—as governors, sheriffs, mayors, district attorneys, etc. If you want these laws plainly construed and held constitutional, vote for the candidates of the same party for judges of all courts. Such a political organization is the Socialist Party, known in New York as the Social Democratic Party.

HOW TO FIGHT CHILD LABOR.

Two unions in North Carolina—printers and street-car employees, respectively—have each adopted a child-slave from the cotton mills and provided funds for its proper education. This is good, so far as it goes, and the members of the unions deserve all honor for their generosity. But how very little it does to relieve the frightful abuse of child labor! Even if every local union in the land were to adopt and provide for one of the poor little victims, but a part of those now in the mills would be saved, and others would immediately be forced into their places.

The union men can do something far more effective if they wish to put an end to child slavery, and not merely to salve their consciences, capitalist fashion, by the methods of charity. They can boycott all merchants employing children and, so far as ascertainable, all products of mills and factories in which children are employed. Through their central bodies they can set committees at work, with legal counsel when needed, to compel the enforcement of such laws as exist (sadly inadequate they are, indeed) against child labor and for compulsory education, and can push the prosecution of capitalists who violate or connive at the violation of these laws. Finally—and most effective of all, in the long run—they can cast their votes solidly for the only party which declares everywhere against child labor, as a matter of fundamental principle rather than of temporary policy, and which proves its good faith by nominating workingmen for office and depending on the working class for its support—the Socialist Party, called in New York the Social Democratic Party.

These measures may require more patient and active effort than that of saving here and there one victim. But they will remove the evil as a whole, instead of only partly alleviating it—the first two as immediate restrictive measures, and the last as a means of striking at the root. It is good to save a few brands from the burning now. It is better to work for the overthrow of a system that coins children's lives into profit. "This ought ye to have done, and not left the other undone."

THIS ARTICLE IS UNPLEASANT, BUT IMPORTANT.

The fact that the assistance of the New York "Sun"—the invetesate enemy of the working class—has been enlisted on behalf of the so-called Socialist Labor Party in the state of New York, together with the necessity of guarding against confusion in the minds of new Socialist voters between the two parties, justify us in departing from our usual and declared policy so far as again to make editorial mention of the S. L. P.

That Daniel DeLeon, professional disrupter, should be the candidate of the S. L. P. for Governor was a foregone conclusion—for there remains in that organization not one other man, of all the tried leaders who have worked with and suffered for DeLeon, who could be considered for the position.

A month ago Lucien Sanial—an old war-horse, in 1897 the Mayoralty candidate of the S. L. P.—tendered his resignation from membership in the S. L. P. He was disgusted, he said, with purely personal bickerings and with "a burlesque reign of terror." Emissaries were sent from headquarters to "explain things" to him, but he persisted in his determination to quit.

Simultaneously, Benjamin P. Kennard, last year's candidate for Mayor, also offered his resignation. Instead of accepting it, the faithful "brought charges" against him. Thus goes, practically the last and one of the ablest of the American-born Socialists who remained with DeLeon after the split in 1899.

Of those already expelled, suspended, or forced to resign during the few preceding months, it is sufficient to mention Hugo Vogt, editor of "Vorwaerts" before the split; Dalton, an able speaker in English; William Wherry, a tireless worker; Julian Pierce, for some time manager of the S. L. P. daily, who alleges that the circulation of that paper is not over 2,700; Max Forker, Peter Fiebiger, Th. Crimmins, Frank McDonald, and Robert Hunt; Peter Damm, formerly prominent in the S. T. & L. A.; H. Simpson, for some time editor of the Jewish daily which was killed in order to save the "People" from ruin; Stephen Cooper; Ephraim Siff—but why etcend the list?

In the three strongholds of the S. L. P. outside of New York City things are in a similar condition. In Syracuse the "faithful" are few and far between; Pittsburg is in revolt against DeLeonism, and so are the Rhode Island sections, led by Thomas Curran.

All these are "fakirs" according to the man who now heads the S. L. P. ticket. It is pertinent to ask: WHAT ARE WE TO THINK OF A LEADER EVERY ONE OF WHOSE PROMINENT FOLLOWERS DEVELOPS INTO A "FAKIR" AND HAS TO BE DRIVEN OUT?

In the face of all this, the "Sun" gives the greater part of a column to recording the "growth" of the S. L. P.—illustrated by a series of election returns with the most important figures omitted—and to advertising its ticket. According to the "Sun," the S. L. P. is the "American" Socialist movement, while the Social Democratic Party is "foreign."

The purpose of this is plain. The Social Democratic Party stands plainly for the trade unions, which the "Sun" hates; the S. L. P. says the unions must be "smashed." The Social Democratic Party is making an aggressive, constructive, and uncompromising educational campaign, showing the working class the political lessons of the Beef Trust and the Coal Strike; the S. L. P. devotes itself to the work of disruption and abuse. Nothing could suit the purposes of the "Sun" and its backers better than to see the new Socialist votes in the state cast for the S. L. P.

The article in the "Sun" is sure to be copied or quoted by many newspapers in the smaller cities and towns and thus its malicious misinformation will be disseminated and, it is hoped, many votes intended for Hanford and the Social Democratic Party will be cast for the union-wrecker DeLeon.

It is the business of our comrades to counteract this sinister design—not only by carrying on a vigorous campaign for Socialism, with speakers and literature, but by taking particular care to see that every new voter knows that the Social Democratic Party is the party for which he wishes to vote, that Benjamin Hanford heads its ticket, and that the Arm and Torch is its emblem.

We regret to obtrude this echo of old controversies upon readers in localities no longer plagued with DeLeonism. But it is unavoidable. "We have scotched the snake, not killed it." eW shall have killed it when—as will surely happen two months from now if our comrades do their full duty—the S. L. P. loses its place on the official ballot. That done, the power of DeLeonism will be dead and the real Socialists who still support it in various states will join in the real fight for Socialism.

The authorities of New York did not see their way to stop the running of the street cars on Labor Day where the workers paraded; that is only done when the capitalists are out on show. But the great war game in which the navy and army of the capitalists are engaged around Newport, R. I., and which the workers are paying for, could be suspended for hours while Her Grace of Marlborough, formerly Vanderbilt, went on board the flagship of Admiral Higginson to a tea reception.

And right here the question may be asked, How is it that the naval manœuvres each year are timed to take place at Newport just at the season when the givers of monkey dinner and equally intellectual entertainments are disporting themselves in all the riot and extravagance of unearned wealth? The answer is easy. The army and navy are the property of the millionaires, to contribute to their entertainment as well as to serve for the defense of them and their property.

THE FITTEST THOUGHTS TO SURVIVE.

By Peter E. Burrowes.

Behold the potentiality of thoughts to linger, and prepare yourself for a long period of useful service burying the dead. See the dry skeleton thoughts that still resist our progress that are standing to-day, obstructionists amid the wrecks of historic states of which they were once the logic!

Because, in the childhood of society it fell out that nearly all men must work, in order that a few might think, or have the leisure to do so, it followed that truth has come to be a mere leisurely meditation, like unto a man walking around the garden with his hands under the tails of his coat, marvelling at the moon.

The greatest benefaction to be given to mankind by Socialism will be its reunion of thought and labor. The Socialist, for the first time in the world's history, harnesses the world's thinking to the world's use. And, although he does not say to the philosopher and the priest, "Go to work," he says, "Let your thoughts be turned in natural order to the work of the world."

Let the world's best thoughts meditate on property; for the property question is the true thermometer of intellectual courage, of moral perception and social progress. It is on the field of property, and upon that field alone, that we can to-day discover our strength. It is the appointed question for the trial of men's souls. Around this question first clustered the world's necessities and hence around it grew the human intellect, called conscience, which is now crystallizing into the morality of collective living. When property is no more a danger to the masses of humanity, mind may return to its garden-walking without guilt.

With the property agony gone out of life what may we not expect from the intellect of the future!

Democracy, blindly undertaken and insincerely planted in France and America, shall then become a fact, giving work back to thought and thought back to work. The intellect, imperially human, shall then enable men to rise out of the ashes of dead selves. It shall beam broadly and freely as the sunshine, and with a like lustre, upon the sea of joyful upturned faces—redeemed humanity.

Through the Socialist movement of to-day, the proletarian's spurning of capitalism, is the way out from the money mastership of the mind, the dry rot of ages, to the mastership of money by the mind.

In the economic mission of the lowest man to be the man that leads us out, we have ingermed the principle of the democratic mental restoration of mine to man for all men—the intellect of the new time.

But the vitally radical principle of the new departure thus ingermed is this: That the source from whence the revolt comes shall also be the source of its philosophy. Not only is the thought to be collectivist, as outlined by the conditions which cradled it into a revolt and nursed it into an evolution, but the dutiful business life of the common people shall supply the characteristics of the new intellect. The dead backward proclivities of the present lettered classes, sordid, mistaken, or involuntary (it matters not which) have made them unfit to lead the new thought. By a sort of evolutionary providence they have thus cast themselves out of the advancing humanity, and thereby have left room for a more thoroughly clean and plenary revolution.

We start with a firmly grounded democratic faith in the all sufficiency of democracy. We start, recognizing no stability but the stability of the last wrong, the hard spot from which we spring like Antæus, into the next vital experience. We start, having no program of heaven before us, but a solid hell behind us. This circuit of wrong or the memory of it, at our heels shall be the hand on the helm for the new society; not running a race with one another, not pressing forward for any prize, but working our way out from that which we call and have alone known for ages as public stability by property, into the next untried intellectual stability, a vast, profound and sublime faith in the stability of that state which is the product of wrong spurned, a fait h in the mental habits of the race, rather than in the documents that bear official seals upon them, but especially in the habits acquired by the race in spurning its wrongs, the habit of a social conscience, the habit of organizing, the habit of voting, doing, paying together—social habitarianism.

Let us think of a few of the present mind-habits that may be turned over by this common thought.

There have surely been some calamitous barriers between such an intellect as was reflected on the brain of Aristotle and the minds which produce the little mutual admiration biographies of our literary lions. The shrivelling down from a cosmic interest and vision, from the universal genius of that far back thinker (older than our era) to our atomic excellence, marks exactly the way the future will not go and the sort of admiration the enthusiasms of the future will not culminate in. Let us see.

Shall we have little rat biographies in those days, and autobiographies redential? Those charming compositions wherein the reader fondly fancies he can see entire pages just like his own sweet feelings, his own dear self in print? Shall scholars spend years and years writing the life of a public character, or rather that part of it which was not public? Shall twenty volumes be devoted to the narrative of one little episode of modern history, which shall be almost forgotten before the last volume appears? Shall the same personages' lives be written over and over again; and shall the same episode be the subject of years of labor by a hundred different and sometimes differing authors, at different times? Shall this tremendous claim upon the brevity, as well as the unity, of the human life and mind be a crime likely to recur in an age of collectivist civilization? Shall the seedtime of young life be ploughed, harrowed, and harrassed, only to put Latin, Greek, Hebrew, and other foreign, if not dead, roots into it? Will the exercises of the schools be the same exercises, or an effort to be like them, which the dead childhood of Herculaneum and Pompeii, tripped over? Is it likely that in a live, fully contactual, present-day-sensitive society the population would be found spending the hours devoted by its laws to best intents, reciting creeds that are ancient, dead and meaningless; or approaching their greatest good in a set of words, the same words every day, every year, and for many centuries; and these words in a language no longer understood by those who are addressing their concept of the greatest good? Is it likely that art will devote itself to the picturing forth of creatures that never could exist; of men and women with huge wings on them or with rings standing out on nothing around their heads or men driving horses and chariots through the air or walking upon water and all that? Shall the music of that time be turned to utterly out-of-the-way times long past; to things that never were, to subjects incomprehensible and to sensations which are to be experienced never until after death?

The common thought will be too rich in resources of its own to need this far-off hunting. That age will lack all motive for making such false arrests of the human mind. There will be no need to hire mental officers to keep the people still ever turning their eyes away. No one will be interested in any mind remoting itself from the present to some desert island subject. For we shall want every energy of every mind for the whole life of the people now; and we shall not hire nor organize any body of teachers or writers to lose the minds of the common people in any wilderness. There shall be no pied pipers, editors or authors, then to beguile one childhood away into any cavern of darkness. The law of that time will be, "There is need for everything that is."

But now, what would remain of the contents of your mind, John Doe, if Shakspere had not lived? Or of yours, Richard Roe, if Longfellow had not written? Look over your mind and see what a chapter of accidents it is. Now, your mind should not be a little reflex of one Shakspere's, John Doe.

What, then, shall we do for sources of intellect when the personal accident is to be avoided? We will seek direct our wisdom from organized sources. The state shall consider the brevity and value of its every thinker, and it will have as great a care then for its mental as now it has for its political economy. We shall understand, through practical organization, the thoughts that are fittest to survive.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries

(and OTHERS)

New York Times.

Our neighbor, the "Sun," has ingeniously grouped together a series of extracts from speeches made by Mr. Bryan two years ago in regard to the trusts and from recent speeches by President Roosevelt upon the same subject. It invites his readers "to perfrom the easy intellectual feat" of separating the thoughts of Bryan from the thoughts of Roosevelt. The feat is not at all easy. Save in respect to one or two of the utterances quoted, and without the aid of memory, which easily identifies expressions used during the past week by the President, it would be impossible for the ordinary newspaper reader or even for the student of public affairs to say with certainty which is Roosevelt's and which is Bryan's. The arguments used and the policies advocated are in the main identical.

Philadelphia North American.

Carroll D. Wright is United States Commissioner of Labor. He draws a good salary from the public treasury for performing some mysterious function supposed to be beneficial to people who work for a living—probably thinking about their affairs. Incidentally he writes as an expert about labor for the newspapers. Mr. Wright is especially expert in making it appear that the trusts are beneficent institutions; that the workingman has no good ground for complaint; that the poor are growing rich at a tremendous pace and that everything is lovely in this best of all possible worlds. * * *

Of some things Mr. Wright is certain enough to be positive in assertion, among them that "machinery has not helped to create new and tremendous inequalities of society or turned thousands into tramps and vagabonds, or hardened the natural selfishness of men in any way, as is so often asserted." The Commissioner, whose "years of investigation into the social, moral and industrial condition of the people" have made him a joyous optimist, is convinced that poverty is usually an optical illusion, caused by the glitter of wealth, just as red and blue spots are seemingly produced by gazing too long at the sun. It is wealth, he says, that makes the community seem poor. If he is correct, people who think they are poor can cure themselves of the hallucination by withdrawing their attention from the Rockefeller and Morgan millions and watching their own wealth increase in the statistics of the United States Bureau of Sociology, Morals and Labor. This may be termed the mind cure for poverty, and Labor Commissioner Wright may become famous as the Mother Eddy of the economic world.

TOLSTOI ON SCABBING.

Whether a workman who has lowered the price of his comrade's labor, or has accepted the service of the wealthy, or has entered the army, will better his position, is as doubtful as the success of the gambler. There may be a thousand events owing to which his position will remain the same or become even worse than before. This fact, however, is certain, that his consent to work cheaper or to serve the capitalists and the government will aggravate, to some extent at all events, the position of the workers, and his own together with theirs—as certain as the fact that the gambler loses control over the sum he stakes.—Tolstoi.

THE BREAKER BOY.

By Caroline H. Pemberton.

Where earth is bare and roads are tracked
With coal-dust, and the hills are cracked
With many a seam as tho' hard racked
The earth had been in agony—
High painted on the silvery sky
A black thing stands—it looks to me
Like some great gallows shaped awry!
O pale faced boy—canst tell me why
That awful shape so mockingly
Invites me with its evil eye?

—"It is the breaker that you see:
Its evil eye doth beckon me
To come and sift the bits of coal
That swiftly down the incline roll.
A common breaker boy am I!
O Lady, shall I tell you why
That breaker looks so threateningly?
No longer work I—with the men
I've gone upon a strike again!
And now we say
We'd rather stay
And starve to death in misery—
That work again
In yonder pen
As slaves of serdid tyranny!"

O Breaker Boy! O Breaker Boy!
What shocking language you employ!
Your cheek is pale—your eye is wild—
Come hither—let me see you, child!
The lines of hunger in your face
Bring sharply into view your race—
Of alien blood you stand accused!
Pray, tell me why such toil is used
To bring our coal mines to disgrace!

—"The masters brought my father here
When native labor was too dear
To swell their heavy dividends.
It was to further their own ends
They brought him—thinking he would work
For smaller wage and never shirk
The largest hours that could be laid
On starving men who ne'er were paid
Enough to keep their families
From want and shameful miseries!

"My alien blood has not denied
My privilege to work beside
The rushing coal—I separate
That coal from all the worthless slate
My little fingers better do
Than bigger ones—they're cheaper too!
The black soot serves me well to hide
The blood of ancestors denied
Across the sea
Their liberty!
Deep in my heart I am as mild
As any other little child;
But in my eyes
That tell no lies
You see the love that makes them wild——
The love of liberty!"

O Breaker Boy!—O Breaker Boy!
This shocking language you employ—
This talk of liberty—you've learned
In union session! It has turned
Your foolish brain with fancies wild—
Go back to work like a good child!
Obey your masters cheerfully,
And then no longer tearfully
You'll stand and starve—and long to be Something I'd never care to see!

—"In union session, I have learned
The moral lesson that has turned
My foolish brain! Ay, it will teach
All workers that within their reach
Lies brotherhood! Long may it preach
That love of comrade each for each—
And all for all—holds greater power
Than banker's gold or prince's dower!
Now, all we make
Our masters take—
But in the future we shall stake
Our brotherhood against the few
Who long have robbed us! And our due
Is mountain high! Not all the coal
In yonder hills
Against our ills
Can measured be!
My father says that our pay-roll
Should absolutely be the whole
Fair product of our industry!"

O Breaker Boy! O Breaker Boy!
This shocking language you employ
Is plain result of public school
And too much liberty! We rule
Too lightly o'er this ign'rant crowd!
Like blasphemy
It seems to me
That this pale child should be allowed
To picture rich men as deprived
Of that from which their wealth is derived!
O woe is me!
That I should——
This m——ery
Of liberty!
But on those hills I see the tents
Of soldiers! And the sight contents
My soul! Now, Breaker Boy, see there
The might that guards our gold!
Beware
Those rifles pointed straight at men
Who say they'll never work again
Until their wage is raised by ten Per cent!—and then—
They'll work just when—
And how—it pleases them as men!

—"I see the tents—and far beyond
I see the graves of men too fond
Of liberty! And every grave
Is monument
To discontent
With misery!
Our cry goes to the dead so low
My father says the wings of doves
Bear further than the human voice
The message that the world holds dear!
At Lattimer,
Far oftener
These graves remind us we are men
Than bid us go be slaves again!
Back to the world
My father hurled
This message in the list'ning ear
Of our new century!
Now I—
A breaker boy—have told you why
You breaker looks so threat'ningly
On every little boy like me."

IT IS AN EYE-OPENER.

"Railroading in the United States" is not a dry book of statistics, as may be inferred from the subheads of the chapters:

"A Heart-to-Heart Talk between Two Captains of Industry."

"The Dull Brakeman and His Bright Lantern."

It is JUST THE THING—an eye-opener. Five cents a copy; 5 copies, 20 cents; 10 copies, 30 cents; postpaid.

PARTY NOTES.

National Secretary Greenbaum reports that up to August 30 there had been received, in response to his appeal for contributions to the strike fund of the United Mine Workers, a total of $1,534.79, of which sum $1,496.30 had been remitted in several instalments to National Secretary Wilson. Last week's list, amounting to $615.94, included donations from fifty locals of the Socialist Party.—In response to an appeal from the United Gold Beaters' Union the National Committee has donated $25 towards the support of the members who are on strike.

State Secretary Critchlow of Ohio writes: "Work in this state is progressing as never before. Max S. Hayes is speaking as much as his time will allow. Nic Geiger and Howard H. Caldwell are on the road. Wilshire is added for a tour next month. Dr. Miller is speaking throughout the Eighteenth Congressional District. Cincinnati has several local speakers constantly on the go. Dr. Pyle is doing great work in Toledo. Three new locals have been formed this month and more are promised soon. Organizers are making a demand for more free literature and supplies than our funds will allow us to furnish. Literature and campaign material is in demand everywhere and we are nearly rushed to death with the office work. The field workers think that we need no rest. The outlook in general is most promising. The campaign for official standing gives promise of being successful. Comrades are working hard on state petitions. Look out for Ohio this fall."

Comrade Tepper of Lawrence, Mass., who called at this office last week, says that The Worker is gaining greatly in popularity in that city. Until recently the local took twenty copies weekly; then the demand became so great that the order was raised to fifty a week; and now this number is hardly sufficient, and the order will soon be raised again. He says further that, if things continue in their present course, it will not be long till Lawrence sends a man to join Carey and MacCartney in the Legislature. Why not this fall? The election of another Socialist member would put the millowners of Lawrence in a humor to grant a shorter workday and better wages.

"In renewing his subscription, Comrade Turner of Danbury, Conn., writes: "Thanks to The Worker, Socialism is growing in Danbury. I would not like to be without The Worker every week. Comrade Caldwell spoke to a large and attentive audience here the other night with good results, for his arguments had their effect on some with whom I have talked since."

Comrade Hascher writes from Bridgeport, Conn.: "As we have plenty of work on hand before election, I would suggest that all members of the Kranken Kasse join the party. Have the majority of them forgotten the pledge they made on joining that organization that they would do their best for the cause of Socialism? I think it is about time to fulfil that pledge." While very many members of the Kranken Kasse are good party members, there are also many to whom Comrade Hascher's words apply.

A Dayton comrade writes: "The work in this city is progressing well, despite all rumors to the contrary. A meeting was held at the corner of Fifth and Main streets Saturday evening, with Nic Geiger as speaker. We have sent in five hundred subscriptions to The Worker and will expect some results from this propaganda. Howard H. Caldwell, the well-known Socialist agitator, spoke in Dayton on Labor Day at the fair grounds. Following this he remains here for five days, speaking in various sections of the city. Saturday night, Sept. 6, he will speak uptown again. Other nights he will hold ward meetings. It is probable that he will speak at noon on the main streets uptown. The comrades are getting together again in good shape. County agitation meetings are being arranged. Three local comrades spoke at Vandalia last Saturday. Next Saturday at Xenia. This will be kept up till several meetings are in progress each week. We will surely give our share towards getting official standing in the state this fall."

Comrade Mills has secured a splendid location for his training school work and for a permanent headquarters for his correspondence teaching. It is on a high bluff overlooking both the Kansas and Missouri River valleys. Kansas City is in plain view and only a thirty-five minutes' ride to Union Depot on the Argentine street railway, with cars every five minutes. The public library and the active industrial life of a great city will be among the advantages of the place. While the buildings are large, light, modern, and beautifully located. After Oct. 1 he will keep open house for all Socialists who come that way. Remember, whenever a hundred miles from Kansas City don't stop, but go on and visit the school—only half the usual hotel rates and a hundred times the satisfaction. The largest available hall in Kansas City will be used for Sunday meetings after the plan of the Metropolitan Temple meetings which Comrade Mills held in San Francisco. The Kansas City comrades contributed five hundred dollars toward the equipment of the new headquarters.

"Uncompromising Socialism is on the march, bright-eyed and full of hope, down in the Florida everglades," writes Comrade Resler of West Palm Beach. "If we had a good public speaker in Dade County we could undoubtedly send a man to the Legislature in two years." Comrade Resler loses no opportunity to get subscribers for The Worker and circulate our Socialist literature.

The Massachusetts state convention of the Socialist Party will be held in Paine Memorial Hall, Boston, on Monday, September 8, beginning at 10:30 a. m. Conventions in the various districts to nominate candidates for Congress, Council, and Legislature, as well as county conventions, will be held during the two weeks following.

Financial Secretary Goldstein of the Massachusetts State Committee, Socialist Party, reports receipts for August as follows: Balance, August 1, $61.37; Dues—New Bedford, $5; Reading, $2; Boston, $16.50; Ridgewater, $2.10; Salem, $3; Quincy, $3; Walpole, $5; Fitchburg, $2.50; Natick, $2.50; Brockton, $5; Adams, $10; Milford, $2; Whitman, $2; Beverly, $5; Somerville, $1; Hyde Park, $1.70; total for dues, $68.30; buttons, cards, constitutions, etc., $1.25; Subscription lists and donations—Dr. Geo. W. Galvin, $250; David Goldstein, List 148, $3.55; Edw. McDonald, 30 cents; Chas. V. Lawler, 25 cents; total, $388.02. Expenses include: Dues, $44.47 ;National Committee, buttons and supplies, $1.50; Postage and telegrams, $19.22; Political State Committee, postage, $9; Mimeographing, stationery, folding and mailing, $9.93; Printing, $36.75; Socialist Literature Company, thirty thousand "Beef Trust" leaflets, $38.14; Wm. Mailly, organizing and other expenses, $17; car fares, $2.50; total, $178.51. The balance on hand is $209.51. On August 1 the Committee had on hand 202 due-stamps; 880 were bought during the month and 683 sold, leaving 399 on hand on September 1.

A state charter has been granted to the Socialist Party of Florida.

Local charters of the Socialist Party were granted last week to Coalgate, I. T., and Sheridan, Wyo.

John C. Chase addressed meetings last week at Great Falls, Missoula, St. Regis, and Quartz, Mont.

Local Chicago's picnic last month was the greatest ever held. So should be that of Local New York on Sunday, September 7.

Comrades Franklin and Marion Wentworth are speaking in the Colorado campaign, with large and enthusiastic meetings. They have so far spoken at Buena Vista, Carbondale, Aspen, Grand Junction, Delta, Montrose, Silverton (on Labor Day and the day following), Ouray, Telluride, Smuggler Mine, and Lake City. Their future dates are: September 7, Gunnison; 8, Salida; 9, Pueblo.

On August 25 Comrade Debs spoke at Deadwood, S. D., and judging from a copy of a local daily which has reached our desk, he must have made a deep impression. The day before, he was the orator at a monster picnic arranged by the Socialists of Denver.

The Oklahoma Socialists keep things moving. Several county tickets have been put up.

Carl D. Thompson spent twelve days days in the latter part of August in Kansas City, speaking every evening and Sunday morning in a large tent at Fourteenth street and Baltimore avenue. Although the weather was very bad, the meetings were very successful, with large and friendly audiences, and a number of recruits were gained for the Socialist Party. The Agitation Committee is looking for other speakers to continue Comrade Thompson's work.

Comrade Holtt of Exeter, N. H., finds The Worker a good means of propaganda. In his last letter he notes having just sent National Secretary Greenbaum $24.50 as the contribution of Exeter Socialists to help the striking miners.

Comrade Kelly of Cokeville, Pa., in sending in a list of seven new subscribers for The Worker, encloses an extra quarter "to pay for a bundle to some place in the strike field." The papers were promptly sent to Comrade Swift, who will see to distributing as much Socialist literature as he can get.

The excursion of Local Hudson County, N. J., to Empire Grove, near Peekskill, N. Y., was a howling success. Last year one barge was crowded, and to be prepared for overcrowding, two barges were secured this year; but these proved insufficient to carry the crowd fully five thousand, with any degree of comfort. The bar and lunch counter were completely sold out three hours before the termination, although an immense stock had been provided for. The net proceeds will amount to about $450, fully $100 less than might have been obtained if more refreshments had been available. The Riker Post Drum Corps vied with the Hudson County Drum and Fife Corps to amuse the vast assemblage, together with an excellent band of music which rendered excellent music for the dancing youth, of which there was a vast contingent. Next year this success must be doubled and no doubt will be. The comrades are jubilant and a vigorous campaign can now be carried on.

The last lessons of the International School of Social Economy have been given out and at the next meeting of the class, on September 11, the questions for examination will be submitted. On September 25 will be the last meeting of the class; six test questions will be asked, such as are likely to be asked of Socialists by strangers. A full attendance is desired, at this meeting. The class still meets at the headquarters of the Socialist Educational League, which are now located at 953 Second avenue.

A short tour in Massachusetts during September for William Thurston Brown of Rochester, Socialist (or Social Democratic) candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of New York, has been arranged as follows: Sept. 11, Springfield; 12, Worcester; 14, Fitchburg; 15, Amesbury; 16, Rockland; 18, Haverhill; 21, Lynn; 22, Brockton. The dates between September 18 and 21 will probably be filled in New Hampshire.

Folder Lodge No. 467, International Association of Machinists, of Pearl River, N. Y., has adopted a resolution endorsing Socialist principles.

William Mailly of Massachusetts was speaker at the Labor Day picnic of the Brockton Central Labor Union. He was engaged especially to present the true situation in the anthracite region and to make a plea for support for the striking miners.

The Socialists of Somerville, Mass., have nominated for the Legislature Comrades Charles W. Sounders, Squire E. Putney, John L. Mulholland, and David L. Flannery.

Representative Carey has visited Skowhegan, Me., and his speeches, backed by the unceasing activity of the Skowhegan Socialists, have caused such an awakening there that the politicians are scared. They have sent for Republican District Attorney Peters and Clerk of Court Sargent of Haverhill to come quickly and explain how awfully Socialism worked there—although, in fact, the Socialists have never had full control in Haverhill. The Massachusetts papers stat that Socialism has "broken out" in Skowhegan.

H. Gaylord Wilshire will speak in Noble's Opera House, Tiffin, O., on Saturday, Sept. 6, and a good audience is assured by the method used by the comrades to advertise the meeting. On Friday, Comrade Wilshire speaks at Fostoria and on Sunday at Bucyrus.

A handsome Labor Day souvenir program, from the Trades and Labor Assembly of Massillon, O., has reached our desk. Among the portraits we note those of John T. Jenkins, Corresponding Secretary of the Assembly, and John Evans, Treasurer, both of whom are active members of the Socialist Party. Comrade Jenkins is our candidate in the Eighteenth Congressional District, and a page is given to his brief and clear declaration on the stand to be taken by Labor in regard to the trusts.

Wyoming will hold a state convention of the Socialist Party at the city of Laramie, and place in nomination a full state ticket on September 8.

Comrade Jos. P. Keating will read a paper on "Socialism and Trade Unions" at the meeting of Branch 1, Local Toledo, O., Tuesday, Sep t.9, at Harmonia Hall. All members and other readers of The Worker are requested to be present. Comrades having money collected for miners' relief are requested to bring it that evening. A notary public will be present and all having nomination petitions are requested to be present and swear to them, so that petitions can be sent to the State Secretary.—Comrade Caldwell addressed four street meetings in Toledo during the past week and the comrades are wel satisfied with his work. Comrade Geiger is to spend five days in the city in the near future. Comrade Strickland promises to return from Colorado in time to spend two weeks in Ohio before election and will be in Toledo two days previous to election.

New York State.

Organizer Moses of Local Rochester never writes to this office without enclosing subscribers for The Worker—and he writes often, too.—In his last communication he notes the formation of a branch in the Fifth Ward, with John Frank as Organizer, J. Drexler as Recording Secretary, Wm. Frank as Financial Secretary, and Wm. Boehm as Treasurer. The Branch meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at Petz Hall in Lowell street. All wage-workers in the ward are invited to attend on Tuesday evening, September 9, when Comrade Bach, our candidate for Congress, will be one of the speakers.—From now till Election Day, the Central Committee will meet every Sunday at 9:30 in the Social Democratic Reading Room, 95 Main street, room 9.

Comrade Nugent, of Troy, is a worker and a promising young speaker.

Local Albany promises to get out a good vote this year.

We will have a new local in Rensselaer in the near future.

Comrade Joe Doll and the rest keep things on the move in Catskill.

Schenectady comrades are very active and are sure to see a big increase in the vote this year.

Local Yonkers at its last meeting decided to subscribe for a copy of The Worker for three months for every trade-union man in the city. The newly elected Campaign Committee—Comrades Lehner, Wilson, and Bauerberg—are going to attend to it. The first installment of one hundred copies is ordered this week. Five thousand copies of Hanford's leaflet were ordered. The committee is in for a hot campaign. The little city will be loaded w4ith literature and open-air meetings. Good results are expected.

The Social Democrats of Fulton County, N. Y.—Locals Johnstown and Gloversville—have held their convention and nominated F. B. Stone of Gloversville for Assemblyman and E. S. Timmerman for State Senator. The county candidates are: For Treasurer, Geo. W. Knowles; School Commissioner, W. R. Howe; Coroners, Henry Lux and Leo Grinnell.

New York City.

Comrades in the 21st A. D. are hard at work, and from present indications the almost invisible vote of last year will this fall be increased by such numbers as will make this one of the banner Socialist districts of the city. All the comrades have their shoulders to the wheel and are doing good and effective work. Preparations for the grand concert and entertainment at Colonial Hall, on Saturday evening, October 4, are nearly completed, and the affair promises to be a huge success. Comrades from other districts are invited to attend and aid in the success of the affair. The Sunday evening lectures in Colonial Hall were resumed on Sunday evening last. The lecturer scheduled was unable to be present and Comrade McNabb of Washington gave an interesting half-hour's talk, followed by Comrade Sackett. The audience was a good-sized one, and the committee in charge were keenly disappointed that the first of the series resulted in the non-appearance of the lecturer. Next Sunday Algernon Lee is scheduled to talk on "Capitalist Production." Admission is free and the public is invited. On Saturday, October 18, a grand rally and mass meeting, with brass bands and fireworks will be held at Colonial Hall, with Comrades Hanford, Abbott, and other candidates and Organizer Wood as the speakers. Readers of The Worker, enrolled voters, and others resident in the district have received by mail invitations to join the party, and it is hoped that this move will be productive of results. Readers of The Worker especially, it is hoped, will respond to the invitation, and are requested to address James G. Kanely, Financial and Corresponding Secretary, 279 W. One Hundred and Thirteenth street. Two new members were enrolled at the last meeting.

Branches 1 and 2 of the 24th A. D. met in joint session on Mondya, with Comrade Volkmar in the chair and Comrade Goldbarth as Secretary. After the reading of a communication from Organizer Wood on the duties of district organizers, Comrade N. S. Reichenthal was nominated and elected to that office. His request that he be excused from his other duties as secretary and delegate to the General Committee was referred to Branch 2. It was voted to present the names of Comrades Wallace and Maier to the next joint meeting for consideration as candidates for Assembly. The election of a literature committee will also be held at the next joint meeting, Tuesday, September 9.

The comrades of the 18th A. D., Brooklyn, and of the Brooklyn Socialist Club mourn the loss of Miss Katie Hayes, an active member of both organizations, who died last Sunday, and to the members of her family they extend their earnest sympathy. The funeral occurred on Wednesday.

Comrade Fieldman's meetings are more successful than ever. He is holding six open-air meetings a week, selling on an average $3 worth of literature and bringing in on an average thirty applications for membership at every meeting. Eighth avenue is a regular harvest-field for Socialism. Last Saturday, on Thirty-third street and Eighth avenue, seventy persons applied for membership, out of whom three are women and one a negro author and lecturer. Comrade Gordon, while passing on a street car, noticed the large audience listening to Fieldman. He got off the car and bought a dollar's worth of literature. The speaker, on being informed of his presence, introduced Gordon, with, with literature in hand, delivered a talk which took the audience by storm.

Organizer Wood of Local New York acknowledges the receipt of $1.60 from A. Meyer to be forwarded for the miners' fund.

Sulzer's Westchester Park is the place for every Social Democrat in New York City on Sunday. Come and bring your friends. Have a good time and swell the campaign fund.

NEW YORK STATE CAMPAIGN FUND.

Comrades:

Your attention is called to the State Campaign Fund which is opened with the amounts attached hereto.

The campaign is now on and it depends upon your energy and the sacrifices made by you whether we shall attain the results we expect on Election Day. The situation was never before better for us than at present and we must this year carry on a more vigorous and systematic campaign than the Social Democratic Party has ever done in the past.

With the constant encroachments of capitalism upon the working class and the arrogance of the officials representing the Republican and Democratic parties, the time was never more favorable for our agitation. The working class is fast learning that Socialism is the only remedy that will emancipate them, and we must see to it that these men are reached with our literature and by our speakers.

In order to do this the State Committee needs money and every party member and sympathizer is urged to forward at once to Comrade James N. Wood, Financial Secretary of the State Committee, 64 E. Fourth street, New York, his or her contribution to the State Campaign Fund.

Comrades, send in your contributions at once, as the State Committee needs every dollar it can get to make this campaign the biggest and strongest ever carried on. Don't delay, as every dollar now invested in literature will do much more good than later on when the old parties have their candidates in the field and are using every dastardly method to lead the workers from the straight and narrow path to Socialism. If you cannot give all you would like to give at one time, send in part now and the balance when you can. All contributions will be acknowledged in The Worker from week to week.

In accordance with the result of this referendum, Comrade George D. Herron has been elected as Secretary to the International Socialist Bureau. Comrade Walter Thomas Mills, having received the next highest number of votes, has also been elected as a delegate, provided that the International Bureau decides that the Socialist Party is entitled to two delegates.

DELEGATE TO CANADA.

The National Secretary announces the result of the vote for fraternal delegate from the Social Democratic Party of the United States to the convention of the Canadian Socialists, the vote being as follows:

For H. Gaylord Wilshire, 854; James F. Carey, 570; John Spargo, 374; Max Hayes, 265; A. M. Simons, 142; Thos. J. Hagerty, 139; G. R. Hammond, 74; H. F. Strambach, 69; Moses Smith, 67; Frederick Krafft, 40; Josephine R. Cole, 18; total vote cast, 2,621.

Comrade Wilshire is thus elected; but he fears that he cannot serve; in that event credentials will be issued to Jas. F. Carey, second choice, or John Spargo, third choice, of the party.

Campaign Secretary.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY.

If we were to print all the kind words that our readers say of The Worker in correspondence with the editorial or business departments, we should encroach unduly upon news and propaganda matter. But we like, now and then, not to blow our own horn, but to let our readers do it for us. Here are a few samples, showing how The Worker is appreciated:

"Enclosed you will find $2, for which please send me by return mail ten half-yearly subscription cards. The best way to make a Socialist, in my opinion, is to get a subscriber for The Worker, and I am desirous of making Socialists." So writes Comrade Bateman of Philadelphia.

Comrade Ringler of Reading, Pa., in renewing, says: "Can't keep house without The Worker and should have sent the money before. Wishing you success and assuring you of my sympathy, I am," etc.

Comrade Calder of Butte says: "I borrowed a copy of The Worker of August 17 from Comrade Pierce, who was showing it around among the comrades, and I am a subscriber from this on. Enclosed find," etc.

Comrade Goss of Portland, Me., in renewing, remarks: "I consider your paper the best political newspaper we have for Socialism." And his request for certain back numbers to use for special purposes shows that he reads it carefully and knows how to use it in propaganda.

THE LABOR SECRETARIAT.

The New York Labor Secretariat has been in existence just one year and a half, and during that short period it has amply demonstrated its great importance as a factor in the struggle between Capital and Labor.

The policy of the capitalist class has been of late to transfer the brunt of their battles with the working class from the economic field more and more to the field of the legislature and judiciary.

The few laws on our statute books which had been ostensibly enacted for the benefit of Labor have been declared unconstitutional and void by our courts of highest resort. The new Employers' Liability Law, while apparently more liberal towards the injured workingman, contains a rider which is calculated to do them incalculable harm. By providing that no action for personal injuries should be maintained unless formal notice in writing of the time, place, and manner of accident has been given to the employer within four months after the accident, it will leave thousands of workingmen, maimed and crippled in the service of their employers, without any redress or remedy, on account of their ignorance of the law, and their consequent failure to give the required notice.

At the same time the practice of tying the hands of striking workingmen by injunctions is spreading with alarming rapidity. Strike injunctions are issued by the judges of our courts in the most reckless and inconsiderate manner, and, although in many cases they surpass the limit permitted by law, and are eventually set aside by the higher courts, still the damage is done—the strikers are prevented from picketing or conducting their affairs in any other way at the most critical moment of the struggle, and many a strike has been lost on that account of late.

Workingmen have neither the time nor training to familiarize themselves with the intricacies of laws which affect their welfare every day, nor can they keep abreast of all the frequent changes of those laws. They can also not afford to retain expensive counsel whenever their interests or struggles bring them in contact with the law. An institution like the Secretariat, a legal department maintained by organized workingmen for their special protection, and open to them at all times without charge, is therefore a most necessary accompaniment of their industrial and political organization.

Moreover, there is a wide field of activity for the Secretariat outside of its purely legal work. The enactment and enforcement of proper factory laws, for instance, is a matter of the greatest importance to organized Labor. The Secretariat has so far not been strong enough to cope adequately with that problem or any other problem of general interest to Labor. But the institution has been growing steadily, and the time is fast approaching when it will be a potent factor in public life and a mighty weapon in labor struggles. To hasten this moment is the duty of all progressive labor organizations, and there is but one way of doing it—to join the Secretariat, and elect intelligent and energetic representatives to its councils.

BUT MORGAN WON'T SETTLE THE STRIKE.

By J. S. Corbin.

Seven men in this city can settle the strike any moment and J. P. Morgan controls them all.—New York World.

Oh, why do the people shed copious tears,
When Morgan can settle the strike?
He scuttled for home when Republican fears
Said "Morgan must settle the strike."
He's been buccaneering for nautical "stuff,"
Got "liners" and "coalers" and mud-scows enough
To start his new rôle as a salt water tough—
But Morgan won't settle the strike.

With tide-water coal at twelve dollars a ton,
Old Morgan don't settle the strike;
He says the high prices have barely begun,
So Morgan won't settle the strike.
With Ted at his elbow and Knox at his back,
He'll twist the consumer upon his trust rack—
Yet Morgan won't settle the strike.

The miner may starve and his children grow thin,
Yet Morgan won't settle the strike;
The railroads meanwhile are absorbing the "tin,"
So Morgan won't settle the strike.
The miner contends for his birthright to live,
The plutocrat says no more wages he'll give,
But his argument's fuller of holes than a seive—
Still, Morgan won't settle the strike.

The poor may implore while the Coal Baron grins,
But Morgan won't settle the strike;
When Hell freezes over and skating begins,
THEN Morgan SHALL settle the strike;
For when the freeze comes and the footing gets nice,
And every coal-user is pinched for the price,
We'll fight the damned robbers right there on the ice
AND THE PEOPLE WILL SETTLE THE STRIKE!

THE GUILLOTINE IN CALIFORNIA.

We worship the gold dollar, and when the new empire was inaugurated we made it possible to pay our ruler all that was ever paid to any, and more than was ever paid. We have all the adjuncts of that worship, and among them is the guillotine. It is at work this moment in California. It is more dainty and works with less ponderousness, because, as inventive genius develops, the machine is more intricate and less repulsive. There is no jar and no rumble in the modern guillotine. But it falls with a keen blade, and it never makes a mistake.

The axe fell upon the necks of men and women in France who were said to be guilty of crimes. Sometimes murder, sometimes theft, sometimes a vague undefined charge, "conspiracy," was all. But at least there was an alleged excuse for cutting off a man's head. When the people cheered the head held up to their fascinated gaze as it was severed from the body, they felt that at least there was some justice or some vengeance in it all.

Who are the victims in our fair state? Our children. Of what crime are they guilty? They are the offspring of working people. Why are they butchered and maimed for life, if they happen to escape immediate death? Because they are of tender years and their judgment is not developed, and they are willing to work for less money than grown people. Who is responsible for it all? The working people, because they are in the majority. They have a vote, but they too are worshipping the God of the Gold Dollar, and they believe if they are faithful they will be rewarded in kind.

Is the editor of this department excited or hysterical? Is this an overdrawn picture? Is it possible that in this day babies are actually cut into pieces by a machine, built exactly as the guillotine in France was constructed? Is this all figurative or is it real? Alas, that it should be possible! It is reality. If tender baby fingers, lying on the table where they have been severed from the quivering hand are real. If the shining steel blade which does its work cruelly and with inexorable precision of which alone an instrument of man's inventive genius can be capable is real.

In California we have canning factories. The people of the East enjoy the golden apricots and luscious peaches in the winter and they are canned in several factories all over the state. It costs too much to employ men to do all the work. The profits would be so small that it would be better to let the fruit go to waste. The little child is therefore pressed into service. They can feed the machines which cut the covers for the cans almost as well as a grown person could. The machine is a most powerful cutter, and it does not quiver nor get nervous nor make a mistake, not so much as a hair's variation in an entire day. The child is before it, perhaps the baby eyes are tired and a blur comes before the vision. Perhaps the strength and alertness lessens for a second. Perhaps the attention is distracted by the sweet voice of another little one who has made a mistake and whose finger is gone forever, if not the entire hand. Even the typewriter, which is putting this on paper, rebels with horror at the picture; but it is true, true! There have been as many as three children taken from a single factory in one day, with fingers missing and hearts broken, by this guillotine of California. It is so common that if there is but one in a day maimed and ruined for life there is hardly any attention paid to the circumstance.

Afterward, through all the life of the poor, tortured and deficient little baby he will be called on to work for less wages because he is unable to do all the things things that a man or woman with both hands can do.—Mary Fairbrother, in Advance.

BEER DRIVERS' UNION NO. 23.

Beer Drivers' Union No. 23, at its regular meeting of August 24, adopted the following resolution:

"1. That, inasmuch as Wm. Trautmann, the editor of the 'Brauer-Zeitung,' has used the columns of the 'Brauer-Zeitung' to publish slanderous and libelous articles concerning the New York locals, and that the publishing of the same is a direct violation of the constitution, L. U. No. 23 votes that Wm. Trautman be suspended from office as editor until the next convention of the National Union of United Brewery Workers.

"2. L. U. No. 23 has voted in favor of a special convention as per request of Local Union No. 6.

"3. In view of the fact that the National Secretaries have made and permitted to be made false and misleading statements concerning the state of affairs in New York, a motion that a committee of each local union of Greater New York—Nos. 1, 23, 31, 24, and 69, respectively—be empowered to draw up such facts and statements as will permit of charges being made against the National Secretaries.

"4. That Local Unions Nos. 1, 23, and 31—delegate committees to make arrangements for a monster ball."

LABOR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Natal's Prime Minister, a gentleman of the pothouse persuasion, on being asked his policy, smilingly retorted, "What's good enough for Lord Milner is good enough for me." The Mayor of Durban (Natal's seaport and chief town) when informed by the Plasterers' secretary that as a corporation job was being finished by non-union men, he (the secretary) called upon the mayor to dispense with the services of non-unionists, or he would call out the unionists, on which the mayor requested the support of the council in crushing the union. He further stated that should the plasterers take any action he would wire Kitchener to send him men to complete the job. This is not class-war of course!

We have a labor man in parliament—one HenryAnketill—who has rigged up a new religion with Henry George as the god. We presume it was he who advised the Plasterers' secretary to send an apology to the mayor for his letter, which was done.—Durban Correspondence.

READ THIS AND PASS IT ON.

THIS IS "PROSPERITY."

The census reports show that, from 1890 to 1900, the population increased less than 21 per cent. and the number of wage-workers in the manufacturing industries increased 25 per cent.; that is, a larger proportion of the people are wage-workers now than in 1890.

While the number of wage-workers increased 25 per cent., the total wages paid increased only 23 per cent.; that is, the average money wages are lower now than in 1890—to say nothing of increased cost of living.

While the number of men over sixteen working for wages increased less than 24 per cent., the number of women wage-workers increased over 28 per cent. and the number of child workers increased almost 40 per cent.; that is, a much larger proportion of women and children have been driven from the home and schoolroom to the factory than were there in 1890.

While the total wages increased only 23 per cent., total profits—value of product minus cost of materials, wages and salaries, and other expenses of production—increased 45 per cent.

This is "posperity," the result of four years under Democratic Cleveland and six years under Republican Harrison and McKinley. If workingmen like a kind of prosperity which reduces their wages and increases the prices of food and clothing, compels their wives and children to go to work in order to help support the family, and compels them all to work harder and faster in order to increase the capitalists' profits—if workingmen like this sort of "prosperity," they should divide their votes between the Republican and Democratic parties.

If they do not like it, they should vote for Socialism.

VACATION TIME.

These hot summer days the "captains of industry" and their families are enjoying themselves at the sea shore and summer resorts. How often do the slaves of the working class and their families enjoy a summer vacation? They must slave away at their irksome tasks, for the aforesaid captains of industry take away from them all of the proceeds of their toil except enough to keep them going if they work all the time. The toilers are alone to blame, for they have it in their power by voting the Socialist ticket, to abolish such a system. Under Socialism no worker will have to put in over six months' work, with an eight-hour day, in a year, and it will probably be less. Under Socialism all will have vacations, all will have an abundance of the necessaries and luxuries of life, the children will not be forced into the fields, mines, and factories to have their tender lives ground up into profit for an exploiting class, the daughters of the working class will not be compelled to sell themselves for bread. Consider these things a little and you will realize why Socialists prefer heaven to hell and why they vote the Socialist ticket in preference to voting the ticket of a party which upholds the capitalist system.—The New Era.

CALL FOR SPEAKERS.

Comrades:—In view of the growing demand for speakers throughout the assembly districts of Manhattan and the Bronx it is essential to a proper response on the part of the Organizer that a complete list of those ready to speak should be in his hands. This is a matter of great importance. I request that all party speakers communicate with me at once giving a list of the nights or particular dates they can fill. The number upon whom I am now forced to depend is absurdly inadequate to the calls coming in daily. With a reasonable number of speakers it will also be possible to map out a systematic agitation throughout the city.

JAMES N. WOOD,
Organizer, Local New York.

HARMONY, AT LAST.

There was a politician in a prehistoric age
Who said the other fellows filled his soul with righteous rage,
He vowed the man who strove against his party was a dunce;
He said he wanted harmony and wanted it at once.

So he made his little program, which he pointed to with pride.
He said that its advantages could never be denied.
And when somebody hinted that its lines were too severe,
By way of discipline he plugged the critic with a spear.

He said he hoped they'd mention any flaws they chanced to find;
He was ready to debate them in a liberal frame of mind;
But loyalty complete he'd suffer no one to relax.
If any one objected, he was smitten with an axe.

And presently he looked about; and scattered o'er the plain
Were the remains of kickers who would never kick again.
He was the sole survivor of his party once so vast,
And he sighed with satisfaction, "Here is harmony at last!"

National Platform of the Socialist Party.

The Socialist Party of America in national convention assembled, reaffirms its adherence to the principles of International Socialism, and declares its aim to be the organization of the working class and those in sympathy with it, into a political party, with the object of conquering the powers of government and using them for the purpose of transforming the present system of private ownership of the means of production and distribution into collective ownership by the entire people.

Formerly the tools of production were simple and owned by the individual worker. To-day the machine, which is but an improved and more developed tool of production, is owned by the capitalists and not by the workers. This ownership enables the capitalists to control the product and keep the workers dependent upon them.

Private ownership of the means of production and distribution is responsible for the ever increasing uncertainty of livelihood and the poverty and misery of the working class, and it divides society into two hostile classes—the capitalists and wage-workers. The once powerful middle class is rapidly disappearing in the mill of competition. The struggle is now between the capitalist class and the working class. The possession of the means of livelihood gives to the capitalists the control of the government, the press, the pulpit, and the schools, and enables them to reduce the workingmen to a state of intellectual, physical and social inferiority, political subservience and virtual slavery.

The economic interests of the capitalist class dominate our entire social system; the lives of the working class are recklessly sacrificed for profit, wars are fomented between nations, indiscriminate slaughter is encouraged and the destruction of whole races is sanctioned in order that the capitalists may extend their commercial dominion abroad and enhance their supremacy at home.

But the same economic causes which developed capitalism are leading to Socialism, which will abolish both the capitalist class and the class of wage workers. And the active force in bringing about this new and higher order of society is the working class. All other classes, despite their apparent or actual conflicts, are alike interested in the upholding of the system of private ownership of the instruments of wealth production. The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois public ownership parties, and all other parties which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike political representatives of the capitalist class.

The workers can most effectively act as a class in their struggle against the collective powers of capitalism, by constituting themselves into a political party, distinct from and opposed to all parties formed by the propertied classes.

While we declare that the development of economic conditions tends to the overthrow of the capitalist system, we recognize that the time and manner of the transition to Socialism also depend upon the stage of development reached by the proletariat. We, therefore, consider it of the utmost importance for the Socialist Party to support all active efforts of the working class to better its condition and to elect Socialists to political offices, in order to facilitate the attainment of this end.

As such means we advocate:

1. The public ownership of all means of transportation and communication and all other public utilities, as well as of all industries controlled by monopolies, trusts, and combines. No part of the revenue of such industries to be applied to the reduction of taxes on property of the capitalist class, but to be applied wholly to the increase of wages and shortening of the hours of labor of the employees, to the improvement of the service and diminishing the rates to the consumers.

2. The progressive reduction of the hours of labor and the increase of wages in order to decrease the share of the capitalist and increase the share of the worker in the product of labor.

3. State or national insurance of working people in case of accidents, lack of employment, sickness and want in old age; the funds for this purpose to be collected from the revenue of the capitalist class, and to be administered under the control of the working class.

4. The inauguration of a system of public industries, public credit to be used for that purpose in order that the workers be secured the full product of their labor.

5. The education of all children up to the age of eighteen years, and state and municipal aid for books, clothing and food.

6. Equal civil and political rights for men and women.

7. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall of representatives by their constituents.

But in advocating these measures as steps in the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth, we warn the working class against the so-called public ownership movements as an attempt of the capitalist class to secure governmental control of public utilities for the purpose of obtaining greater security in the exploitation of other industries and not for the amelioration of the conditions of the working class.

STATE PLATFORM OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The Social Democratic Party of the state of New York, in convention assembled, declares its allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, having for its object the overthrow of the system of exploitation of the mass of the workers by the few idlers who own the means of production and the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth. This convention declares the allegiance of the Social Democratic Party of the state of New York to the national Socialist platform adopted at the Indianapolis convention.

Labor of brain or brawn produces all wealth; therefore we hold that those who labor should possess all wealth produced. This cannot be while one class in society owns the means of production and another class performs the work of production. The production of wealth having changed from an individual to a social character, we therefore hold that land, mines, mills, and other means of production should be owned socially and not individually. Only when those who work become the owners of the land on which and the raw material and means with which their labor is performed will they receive the wealth which is their product, and only through the control of the political powers can they secure possession of these essentials.

The Social Democratic Party therefore holds that the capture of the powers of government by the working class is the supreme issue of the hour.

Legislative, judicial and executive offices should be filled by those who place the good of the working class above all else, working to the end that laws should be passed, judged and enforced in their inferest. And that social or government ownership may conserve their welfare, the working class must control the government, must BE the government. This we ask them to accomplish by voting for Socialism and the candidates of the Social Democratic Party.

A Social Democratic Legislature would pass measures changing private ownership of the means of production into social ownership; Socialist Judges would favorably construe such measures; and a Socialist Governor and Socialists in all other executive positions would enforce such laws.

Many if not all of our great corporations and captains of industry have violated every legal and constitutional provision which stood in the way of their profits, placing themselves liable to a forfeiture of their charter and property rights, and wherever this has been done their charters should be confiscated and the property they hold should revert to the government.

Coporations have committed or stand ready to commit every crime in furtherance of their profits; they have bought and sold injunctions and judges, laws and legislatures, prosecuting and executive officials; they have compelled police and detective forces to act as their thugs and ruffians, and have used the state militia as their private standing army to force submission upon protesting or striking workers; and they have availed themselves of their economic power to stop production as a means of further exploiting the toilers both as producers and consumers. Society cannot save itself from the abuses, extortions, and crimes inseparable from private ownership of the trusts except by placing them under government ownership, operation and control.

The condition of the thousands of men, women, and children employed as wage-earners in the state of New York will not be bettered by Republican, Democratic, or Reform parties, for these parties are owned and controlled by corporations and capitalists. So long as the workingmen of New York place Republicans and Democrats in political power by voting for them on Election Day, that long they will be compelled to beg for legislative favors after Election Day; and as long as they remain beggars they will receive the beggar's share of crumbs and bare bones. Only after years of petition to Republicans and Democrats in office will they pass laws ostensibly in the interest of the Working Class, and laws so passed will be found inefficient, declared unconstitutional, or remain unenforced.

Workingmen of New York, you have a majority of the votes in this state. Only you and those who cast their lot with you and wish to be of you do or can know what laws are needed by your class, can or will judge those laws honestly or are capable of enforcing them in your interest.

Workingmen of New York, we call upon you, regardless of race, nationality or religion, to unite in the political field as you do in the trade union. As you would not allow capitalists to select your trade union officers, do not allow them to select your political officers. As you strike against capitalists, so cast your ballot against capitalists. As workingmen of every nationality and all religions must work together, so vote together.

Socialism is your only salvation, and in the triumph of the Working Class slavery will cease and class wars disappear in a nation of free men among free men. As you workingmen labor and prosper, hunger and suffer together, so shall you achieve your freedom together—by uniting on the political field as you do on the economic field, and working and voting for the success of the Social Democratic Party.

We urge the workingmen of New York to join the unions of their respective callings, build up their labor organizations, and stand shoulder to shoulder in strike, lockout, and demand. And we also urge them to join the Social Democratic Party, to vote its ticket, and to see that every public office is manned by a Socialist, that we may have a government of, by, and for the Working Class.

——The Socialist Party or Social Democratic Party has no connection with any other political organization. It never fuses or compromises, and it fights the Republican and Democratic forces of capitalism with equal zeal.

CHASE FOR GOVERNOR.

Massachusetts Socialists Nominate State Ticket.

Well Attended Conventions Held in Boston on Monday—Separation of Politics and Religion Insisted Upon—Ex-Mayor of Haverhil. Heads a Strong Ticket.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 9.—John C. Chase of Haverhill, the first Socialist mayor ever elected in the United States, is the choice of the Socialist Party's state convention as candidate for Governor. Comrade Chase is a strong candidate, for his record commands respect and inspires confidence. He is distinctly a man of the working class and well fitted to fill the place for which he has been nominated:

The other candidates chosen by the convention yesterday are:

For Lieutenant-Governor — John Quincy Adams of Amesbury.

For Secretary—Edward A. Buckland of Holyoke.

For Treasurer—David Taylor of Boston.

For Auditor—S. Fremont Packard of Brockton.

For Attorney-General—Charles F. Fenner of Worcester.

On Sunday, at Paine Memorial Hall, was held the convention of the Massachusetts Socialist Clubs, the propaganda organization, while the legal political convention, consisting of delegates chosen by caucuses, met in the same hall on Monday. One hundred and ten delegates were in attendance, representing thirty-four cities and towns.

Sunday's convention was called to order by Representative Carey. Ex-Mayor Coulter of Brockton presided, with Charles W. Lowell as vice-chairman and John Weaver Sherman and Wm. H. Hitchcock as secretaries.

The most important debate was on the revision of the constitution. Drafts were presented by State Organizer Mailly and by Secretary David Goldstein and were exhaustively discussed. The former draft was adopted.

Comrade Goldstein's propositions included the following resolution:

"Speakers who attack theological doctrines or dogmas, who advocate violence, free love or other doctrines in opposition to the principles of Socialism, shall be, by the Executive Committee, disqualified for the Socialist platform."

This resolution, after long discussion, was voted down, the sentiment being that the party cannot in any way take cognizance of the religious beliefs or disbelief of its members, and can no more proscribe members for disbelieving certain dogmas than for believing them.

The name of the propaganda organization was changed to "Massachusetts Socialist Party Clubs." A temporary executive committee was chosen to act until January, consisting of the officers of the legal State Committee—Chairman J. F. Carey, Vice-Chairman F. S. Schmidt, Secretary Squire E. Putney, and Treasurer, M. J. Konikow—together with Carlton S. Beals, J. Harry Page, Geo. W. Galvin, John Weaver Sherman, and Wm. Mailly. Under the new constitution there will be a General Committee, composed of the members of the legal State Committee who are members of the clubs. The General Committee will in January (when the new State Committee comes into existence), elect the permanent Executive Committee of nine members, to take charge of the club organization.

The legal convention on Monday was called to order by Secretary Putney, and Comrade Carey was chosen as chairman, with Geo. A. Keene of Haverhill and ex-Councilman David S. Brodeur of Brockton as secretaries.

A committee on resolutions was appointed as follows: Patrick Mahoney, Dr. Antoinette Konikow, and Rev. John Ellis of Boston, Rev. C. E. Littlefield, and L. B. Talbot of Lawrence.

The committee on platform was composed of Hon. Charles H. Coulter of Brockton, A. H. Gillen of Haverhill, Joseph Spero of Brockton, Richard Brooks of Springfield and Mr. Fenner of Worcester.

On motion of Representative F. O. MacCartney the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the Socialist Party disclaims any attempt to regulate the religious or other private opinions of its members, on the ground that the Socialist movement is a political movement, whose aim is to usher in by peaceful and constitutional methods an equitable economic system, based upon the collective ownership of the means of production and distribution."

The platform adopted reaffirms the allegiance of the Socialists of Massachusetts to the Socialist Party of the United States and the International Socialist movement, and clearly sets forth its object, the establishment of collective ownership of the means of production and the substition of the Co-operative Commonwealth for the present system of wage-slavery. As immediate demands the platform includes reduction of hours of labor in proportion to increasing facilities of production; abolition of child labor; raising of school-age; state insurance for workers in case of accident, death, lack of employment or old age; state and municipal assistance in clothing and food; extension of municipal and town powers to permit public ownership of all public utilites; equal right for men and women and abolition of capital punishment.

A fuller report of the conventions will be supplied The Worker next week.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Eleven New Locals of Socialist Party Formed.

Active Agitation Continues Throughout the State, but Party Cannot Supply Enough Men for Strike Field.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—At tonight's meeting of the State Committee charters were granted to new locals of the Socialist Party as follows: Schuylkill Haven, Girardville, Mahanoy Plane, Minersville, Minersville (Lithuanian), New Philadelphia, Eckley, Evervale, Forrest City, Packerton, and Shamokin.

Comrade Swift continues street meetings at Hazleton and Comrade Goazlou has been doing good work around Carbondale.

Local Spring Forge, York County, will open headquarters. Comrade Toole of Baltimore has been engaged for four meetings in that county.

Comrade Moore, editor of the "New Era," has been nominated for the Legislature in the Twenty-second district, Philadelphia.

Comrade Wilshire is booked to speak at Wilkes Barre on September 11.

Delaware County holds a convention at Media to put up a county ticket on September 14.

Pittsburg comrades will open headquarters and reading room.

Comrade East spoke at Royersford on Labor Day; Comrade Long at Lebanon; Comrade Cuppinger at Easton; Comrade Spargo at Pittston; Comrade White at New Brighton. At present the following comrades are in the coal field: Swift, Fisher, Barkowski, Geiger, and White. Comrades Swift, Barkowski, Parker, and Barnes will speak at Latrimer, September 10, on the fifth anniversary of the massacre at that place. Comrades Swift, Parker, and Barnes will attend a meeting of the county nominees and the County Committee of Schuylkill on Sept. 11, at Mahanoy City.

The need for speakers in the coal field becomes daily more urgent, the more so from the fact that the Democratic and Republican parties are not even making a pretense of a fight. Their newspapers are constantly advising the miners to independent action, and the formation of a "workingman's party." Socialists know what this means. It is the only weapon they have at hand to try to divide the workers and prevent them voting for the Socialist candidates. Democratic and Republican politicians alike have forsaken their platforms and advise the workers to vote for "good men." We should have ten times the number of speakers and we are in a financial position at the present that prevents us sending an additional man.

Contributions for agitation among the miners have been received as follows: Previously acknowledged, $793.55; Philadelphia Special Committee, $161.70; Yonkers, N. Y., $5; Local Kings County, N. Y., C. Marks, $1; employees of Snyder's cigar shop, $1; Chattanooga Local, J. Harman, Camden, $3; William Adamosyk, Philadelphia, $15.35; J. H. Hart, King Fisher, O. T., $5.50; W. L. Altman, Elderton, Pa., $5; Bandon, Oregon, $5; W. E. Leonard, 50 cents; 35th A. D., New York, $2.25; The Worker, $20; August Droste, New York, 50 cents; total, $1,026.35.

Send all contributions to J. Edelmann, 607 W. Cambria street, Philadelphia.

J. MAHLON BARNES,
Secretary.
CAROLINE PEMBERTON,
Assistant Secretary.

FREE LECTURES ON SOCIALISM.

Beginning on Sunday evening, September 7, Algernon Lee will give a series of three lectures at Colonial Hall, One Hundred and First street and Columbus avenue, under the auspices of the 21st A. D. "Social Evolution," "Capitalist Production," and "Tendencies of Capitalism" are the subjects of the three lectures, and the object is, so far as it can be done within such limits, to give a systematic statement of the Socialist view of the development of society and especially of the existing system and the future to which it points.

The three following Sundays—Sept. 21 and 28 and Oct. 5—will be devoted to addresses by John Franklin Clark, candidate of the Social Democratic Party for Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals, on "Co-operation as the Basis of All Progress;" by Warren Atkinson, our candidate for Comptroller, on "The Immediate Responsibilities of the Voter;" and James N. Wood, Organizer of Local New York, on "The Coming Crisis."

On the next three Sundays—October 12, 19 and 26—John Spargo will give a course of lectures on special phases of the economic question—"Socialism and the Trusts," "Socialism and the "Child," and "Socialism and the Problems of Trade Unionism."

On November 2, Leonard D. Abbott, candidate for Secretary of State, will discuss the question, "What Socialism Would Do for New York."

Admission is free and all comers are welcome.

McGRADY IN BOSTON.

The well known Socialist orator of Kentucky, Father Thomas McGrady, will lecture under the auspices of the East Boston Socialist Club at Lyceum Hall, Sumner and Maverick Square, East Boston, on Monday evening, September 15. His subject will be, "The Solution of the Labor Problem." An admission of 15 cents will be charged, to defray expenses. For tickets address Jos. Spero, 346 Saratoga street, East Boston.

FOR THE DAILY.

Active Work Suspended Until After Election.

Report of New Pledges for the Daily Fund and of Moneys Collected.

The regular monthly meeting of the Workingmen's Co-operative Publishing Association was held on last Monday evening at Labor Lyceum with Comrade J. Halpern in the chair. On account of many of the comrades being busy with campaign work no important business was transacted. As the campaign will not occupy all of our comrades until election, the Association decided to discontinue its regular meetings until the middle of November, with instructions to the Board of Management to call same and present a plan which will immediately set all wheels in motion for an early and successful issue of the daily.

MASS MEETING FOR MINERS

The Miners' Defense Committee of the Central Federated Union has recommended and the C. F. U. has concurred in the holding of a great mass meeting at Madison Square on Saturday evening, Sept. 13, to express the sympathy of the workingmen of New York with the striking miners.

It was decided to invite the following members of labor organizations to speak: Benjamin Hanford, John Mitchell, Samuel Gompers, Jos. Wm. Dooley, Michael Fitzgerald, Edward Hanna, B. Hatch, M. Barr, Ernest Bohm, Samuel Donnelly, James Archibald, Jas. Fitzgerald, Daniel Harris, August Waldinger, and J. McConville.

Every wrokingman in New York should be present at this meeting, to add strength to the demonstration of solidarity of the working class.

LESSONS FOR STEEL WORKERS.

Union Mills Closed and Wage-Cut Insisted On

Curious Workings of "Prosperity" in Iron and Steel Industry—Men Must Take Lower Wages in Order That Trust May Get Foreign Trade—Conservative Union Commands No Respect.

It is announced from Pittsburg that "the American Tin Plate Company" (a constituent company of the Steel Trust) "has ordered the Lisbon (Ohio) plant to be closed. That is the last of the plants operated by members of the Amalgamated Association. None of those operated by non-union men has been ordered disturbed.

"The Amalgamated Association is taking a second vote on the proposition to reduce wages, so as to permit the company to obtain the Welsh contracts in this coultry. It is said that the second vote is overwhelmingly against the proposition. The union workmen argue that the non-union mills are kept running because the workmen receive less pay."

There are two or three significant points to be noted in this bit of news:

Conservative Union Commands No Respect.

First, in regard to trade unionism: Since the labor movement has begun to show a really formidable tendency toward Socialism, the "captains of industry" have, almost with one accord, begun to sing the praises of "wise and conservative" trade unionism, and to cultivate the friendship of "safe and practical" labor leaders; and the conservative leaders, on the other hand, are never tired of telling us that there is no essential conflict or interest between the workers and the capitalists and that trade unionism, of their brand, works to the advantage of the employers as well as of the employees.

Now the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers is a distinctly conservative body and President Shaffer is a very "safe" leader. Yet, within the year following the failure of the great steel strike, we have seen one after another of the union mills closed—in spite of the boasted prosperity and rush of orders—while the "open" mills have been run full blast. This shows how much the capitalists love even a "safe and conservative" union. It shows, too, how much they care about keeping faith, since, at the time of the strike, they repeatedly pledged their word not to discriminate against union men.

On the other hand, it must be assumed that the union workmen are right when they "argue that the non-union mills are kept running because the workmen receive less pay."

Even a "safe and conservative" union, if it is of any use to the workingmen, is injurious to the capitalists, and the capitalists hate it and seek to destroy it—even while they are professing love for it, in the hope of deterring the men from more radical courses.

Prosperity and Foreign Trade.

Second, in regard to the foreign orders: The defenders of capitalism, from Hanna down, warmly congratulate the working class that, under their beneficent management, "we" are constantly extending our foreign trade, and exhorting the workingmen to be moderate in their demands, in order that "we" may get more and still more contracts from abroad, upon which "we" make such good profits.

In view of the vote now being taken by the Amalgamated in the matter of the Welsh contracts, it is evident that "we" who get the profits are quite a different set of persons from the "we" who do the work. "We," the workers, are advised to be content with lower wages—and, incidentally, to work at higher speed, too—in order that "we," the capitalists, may successfully compete with foreign capitalists and get orders from abroad for hard and dangerous work which "we," the workers, will be permitted to perform, and upon which "we," the capitalists, will grow fabulously rich.

"We" are a wise people—some of us.

HANFORD ON LABOR DAY.

Speaks at Picnic of Utica Trade Unions.

Explains What the Social Democratic Party Is in the Field for—Let the Government Own the Things with Which the People Work and Let the Workers Own the Government.

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Benjamin Hanford, our candidate for Governor, had an attentive hearing from a large gathering of organized workingmen at the Labor Day picnic yesterday.

Comrade Hanford was introduced by Rev. A. L. Byron Curtiss, pastor of St. Joseph's Church at Rome and a member of the Social Democratic local in that city. Hanford said in part:

"I can best define Socialism by saying that it means that the government should own, operate and control the means of producing and transporting wealth. It means that in place of the present individual and corporate ownership of mines, mills, and factories we should have government ownership. Consider for a moment what things are carried on by the government to-day. This public street on which we stand is government property. Every man, woman and child in this city owns a share of stock in this street. If a child is born in this city to-night, it comes into the world as a part owner of this street as its birthright.

Street and Street Railway.

"But you will notice that your shares of stock in this street differ from shares of stock in a street railway in this respect—you cannot sell them. If you could sell your share of stock in the street, you know what would happen. As soon as you were out of a job, you would have to dispose of your share, and the result of that would be that some smart man would gradually buy up shares of stock in the streets, and as soon as he had a controlling interest in a street he would place a toll gatherer at each corner and every time you walked a block you would have to pay toll.

"Now, do you not think that if the city can successfully lay out and keep in repair the public streets, which produce no revenue, that it could also build and operate with success a street railway, which does produce a revenue? Don't you think that if you can trust the government with the public schools, with the fire department, with the police power, with the power to make laws and to execute and judge the laws, that you might also trust the government to operate a coal mine, a mill, factory or railway?

How About the Coal Mines?

"Take the question of the coal mines. Which one of you in this audience would be injured by government ownership of the coal mines? Not one, I venture to say. And do you suppose that any of the miners would be injured thereby? Not one. If we had government ownership of the coal mines there would be no starving coal miners out on strike; they would be getting good wages for short hours of labor, and all of the people in this city would be getting coal at the cost of production.

Tribute to Vanderbilt.

"Look at the railways. Do you know that every man in this city must pay daily tribute to the New York Central Railway? One-third of the revenues of that road go to the bond and stockholders in the form of interest and dividends and rentals. You may walk from here to New York in order to avoid paying profits to the New York Central, but those bond and stockholders will get their profits from you just the same, for every time you buy a sandwich on the way you will have to pay the freight on the flour and meat of which it is made. Every time a farmer sends a bushel of wheat to market he must pay tribute to the railway, every merchant that buys a case of shoes must do the same, and so with every business.

"Do not misunderstand me. We Social Democrats do not propose to take the New York Central from the Vanderbilts and give it to some other man. What we propose is that it be taken from its present owners and made the property of all the people, instead of a part of the people, and that it be run in the interest and for the BENEFIT of all the people, instead of being run as it now is—to get all it can OUT of the people.

Who Shall Own the Government?

"We Social Democrats also propose THAT THE GOVERNMENT SHALL BE IN THE HANDS OF THOSE WHO WORK. I know that many of you think that governments could not go on unless they were in the hands of smart lawyers, bankers, and aristocrats of wealth.

"With that notion we Socialists take issue. We hold that so long as the government is left in the hands of lawyers, aristocrats, bankers, and gin-mill keepers, as it is now, so long will it be a GOOD government for that class of people and a BAD government for the people who do the world's work. We Socialists hold that the people who work and raise the world's food supply, that the people who build the world's houses, the people who weave cloth and make clothing—in short, the people who do the world's work are entirely competent to run the world's government.

"No honest man, no man who loves freedom, no man who is not looking to get the best of his fellow man, has anything to fear from Socialism."

BIG GAIN IN MAINE'S VOTE.

Socialist Party Makes Good Advance at the Polls.

Although the Movement Is Young There, It Is Clear and Vigorous and Promises Great Strength in Future.

The state and congressional elections held in Maine last Tuesday show a large increase in the vote of the Socialist Party. Definite figures are not yet at hand, but the press reports credit the party with about 1,500 votes in the state for Charles L. Fox of Portland, candidate for Governor.

Our party entered the field for the first time in Maine in the state election of September, 1900, polling 652 votes for Governor. In the presidential election in November of the same year the vote rose to 878.

Since that time active work has been done by the comrades in various parts of the state and local elections have shown the results. During the present summer, Representative Carey of Massachusetts made a tour of the state, speaking to large audiences.

COLORADO TICKET.

Ex-President Boyce of the W. F. of M. Is Cand.date for Governor.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 27.—The general vote of members of the Socialist Party in this state on names submitted by the state convention for the various places on the ticket resulted in the choice of the following candidates:

For Congress (at large)—Ida L. Howe of Denver.

For Governor—Edward C. Boyce of Denver.

For Lieutenant-Governor—R. A. Southworth of Denver.

For Secretary of State—C. H. Norris of Buena Vista.

For Attorney-General—Carl Whitehead of Denver.

For Treasurer—George B. Arnold of Golden.

For Auditor—William N. Nash of Delta.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Anna P. Parrott of Goldfield.

ORGANIZER SPRING'S WORK.

Reports of State Organizer Spring's work show that the Social Democratic Party is making steady progress throughout New York.

On Sunday, Sept. 1, Comrade Spring visited Local Corning, which was well attended and at which the situation was discussed and campaign plans perfected. Two new members were admitted.

On the afternoon of Labor Day, Comrade Spring spoke on the public square, with the approval of the committee of the unions, which had control of the square for the day. A large crowd listened to his address and showed considerable enthusiasm. The interest may be measured by the fact that Comrade Spring quickly secured twenty-three three-month subscriptions for The Worker after his speech.

Tuesday evening a street meeting was held at Painted Post, with an audience of about a hundred. The smallness of the number was more than made up by the interest displayed. After concluding his speech Comrade Spring invited all who wished to know more about the party to gather in a hall near by, where a local was formed with seven charter members. They are all good men, Spring reports, and will keep the work going from now on. Several subscriptions for The Worker were taken.

On Wednesday Comrade Spring addressed the Carpenters' Union at Ithaca after their business meeting. He spoke for an hour and received assurances of support from a number of the members. He announced a street meeting for Friday evening and spent Thursday in making preparations and getting acquainted.

Friday's meeting, in spite of the uncomfortably low temperature, was a complete success. Sixteen subscriptions attested the interest the speaker aroused. The use of the Trades Council's hall had been tendered for an organization meeting to follow the street speaking, and here a local was organized with eight enthusiastic workingmen as charter members. Comrade Furlong is the Secretary and Comrade Schultz the Organizer, and Spring says they are both hustlers and that there will be "something doing" about Ithaca in the Social Democratic line.

Comrade Spring also visited Auburn and Seneca Falls and more will be heard from those places. This week he is working in Syracuse and vicinity. As a result of his observations throughout the state he writes that "everything points to a successful campaign, an increase of the Social Democratic vote in the state, a growth of the membership in numbers and enthusiasm, and a more effective propaganda in the interim between this and the next election."

—The only entirely reliable "friend of labor" is labor itself.—Colorado Chronicle.

WILL THE POLITICIANS "SETTLE" THE STRIKE?

And now they say the Republican Senators and Governors are going to settle the strike! President Roosevelt, they say, would have tried his hand at settling it long ago, only he has so much power that he was afraid to use it, for fear something might happen. An intimate friend of the President says, according to Wednesday's dispatches:

"No man deplores the present condition more than the President does, but he does not see clearly how he could take any part in adjusting the differences.

"Any interference on his part, except by request of both the parties, would be construed into a threat to use the great power of his office to coerce one side or the other. If that were really so, the action would be interference, and not arbitration."

It would be too bad for the President to "interfere" with the business of Mr. Baer, alleged vicegerent of the Omnipotent God, so by a strenuous effort Roosevelt has controlled himself, and, instead of trying to help the miners, has gone out electioneering.

The New York "Evening Post"—as thoroughly class-conscious a capitalist paper as exists in the world, speaks clearly and truly about the proposed settlement by the Republican Senators. The "Post" can afford to talk plainly, because only "respectable" people—not workingmen—read it. The "Post" says:

"Quay and Penrose threatening the railroad presidents with the power of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, if the coal strike continues, are a pair of ridiculous mice at the foot of a mountain in labor. The calmness of the aforesaid presidents in the face of such danger is easily accounted for. Quay and Penrose belong to them and to the capitalists affiliated with them. They can put both of them out of office as easily as they put them in—more easily, in fact, than they put Quay in the last time. Quay would never think of passing a law in Harrisburg without their consent. If anybody should attempt to pass such a law, Quay and Penrose would compass its defeat in some way. The Republican party in Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and in the state at large, is the subservient tool and instrument of a corrupt ring of which Quay and Penrose are the figureheads, but not the motive power. The real parties in interest are the corporations that furnish the money by which the springs of government are polluted, and the state made a hissing and a by-word to mankind. No wonder the railroad presidents snap their fingers when their two Senators talk about the Republican party and the power of the state in connection with the coal strike."

The Worker does not pretend to know what will happen next week, nor exactly what the Republican politicians may have up their sleeves.

It may be that the operators will make some concessions, in the hope of starting a break in the miners' ranks, and will let their faithful servants, the Republican politicians of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, have the credit of making the "settlement." It may even be, though the operators positively deny this, that the union will be recognized.

Just what will happen remains to be seen. But whatever happens in this connection, there are a few things which we can say positively:

First, any "settlement" that does not include RECOGNITION of the United Mine Workers would be A VICTORY FOR THE "OPERATORS," and any such offer should be unanimously rejected by the miners; and in rejecting any such offer they will have the support, not of Socialists alone, but of all intelligent trade unionists.

Second, if any offer worthy of consideration is made by the "operators," it will NOT be due to the efforts of Quay, Penrose, Stone, Platt, and Odell, but SOLELY TO THE COURAGE AND WISDOM OF THE STRIKERS and the loyalty of their fellow workingmen who have helped them in the strike.

If the Republican politicians can settle the strike now, they could have settled it three months ago. Granting that they had and have the power to settle it, what follows from the fact that they have waited so long? Simply this: That they hoped the strike would be settled by the defeat of the strikers, that they have waited till the last moment in that hope, and that now their only reason for acting is, not sympathy with the miners, but fear that their political interests and those of their masters, the mine-owners, will be injured by continuance of the struggle.

Governor Stone sent militia and deputies to intimidate the strikers and try to break the strike. Stone is Quay's man and Quay is Baer's man. Their efforts to break the strike have failed; and if they propose a "settlement" now, the miners will understand the situation too well to give them any credit for good intentions.

The New York Central Federated Union has sounded the right note. The C. F. U. represents the trade unions of the city, who have shown their practical sympathy with the miners from the start, by sending many thousands of dollars to the strike fund. Their advice is worth listening to, because it is the advice of fellow workingmen, just as the advice of Quay and Penrose is to be distrusted, because it is the advice of the mine-owners' tools.

At its last meeting, after full discussion, the Central Federated Union adopted a resolution advising the miners and other workingmen of Pennsylvania to take independent political action as wage-workers, to take the power of the state out of the hands of such men as Quay and Penrose and Stone and put it into the hands of workingmen chosen by workingmen.

The C. F. U. did not express itself definitely in favor of the Socialist Party. That was not necessary. The Socialist Party of Pennsylvania, with such workingmen as Slayton, Barnes, and Gould on its ticket, represents exactly the policy which the C. F. U. endorsed; and two members of the Social Democratic Party were chosen on the committee to communicate the views of the C. F. U. to President Mitchell.

The resolution of the C. F. U. sets forth the great lesson of the coal strike, and no action of the Republican politicians at this late day can detract from its effect. THIS STRIKE IS ONLY ONE SKIRMISH IN THE GREAT BATTLE BETWEEN THE WORKING CLASS AND THE EXPLOITING CLASS. AND THE WORKING CLASS WILL FIGHT AT A FATAL DISADVANTAGE UNTIL IT WRESTS FROM THE HANDS OF ITS OPPONENTS THEIR MOST FORMIDABLE WEAPON—THE POLITICAL AND MILITARY POWER OF THE STATE. The workers of Pennsylvania will give a ready hearing to the advice from their brothers in New York, and will act upon it—to the sad disappointment of Baer and his tools, whether of the Quay-Stone-Pennypacker gang or of the Pattison type.

And this advice does not apply to Pennsylvania alone.

The coal strike does not concern only the workers and the capitalists of that state. It concerns the workers and the capitalists of the whole country, of the whole civilized world.

The workingmen of the city and state of New York have already shared the burden of the strike with their Pennsylvania brothers, in a double sense—they have freely given what they could spare to help the strikers, and THEY ARE BEING COMPELLED TO GIVE STILL MORE TO HELP THE COAL KINGS WHENEVER THEY BUY A BUCKET OF COAL. They will feel this burden still more heavily when the frost comes.

Workingmen of New York, what are YOU going to do about it? How are you going to defend YOUR interests?

There is only one way.

The same party that has nominated Slayton in Pennsylvania has nominated Ben Hanford for Governor of New York. In this state it is called the Social Democratic Party and its emblem is the Arm and Torch.

Every cross under that emblem on the ballots in November will be a vote for GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF THE MINES AND WORKING-CLASS OWNERSHIP OF THE GOVERNMENT.

You will have strikes in New York, too—on the railroads, on the trolley lines, in the machine shops. You have to fight the same battle they are fighting now in Pennsylvania.

Every vote for the ticket headed by Ben Hanford will be a vote to put the power of the state on your side in this battle, instead of leaving it in the hands of your enemies.

Choose a workingman as Governor. Send workingmen to Albany and to Washington to make the laws. Put workingmen on the bench to see that those laws are rightly applied.

That is the purpose of the Social Democratic Party. That is the meaning of a vote for the Arm and Torch. That is the way to victory.

TO SPEAK TO CARPENTERS.

On Thursday evening, Sept. 11, Comrades Lee and Pankin speak before the Carpenters' Union in Masonic Hall, Main street, Westchester, the party having been invited to send speakers to explain Socialism as a political movement.

THE PARTY'S EMBLEM.

THIS MEANS YOU.

Comrade Hanford, who is in the field, writes that the demand for our party literature was never so eager or so general as now. We would remind the comrades that it takes money to print and mail literature. If any reader of The Worker will, within one week after the receipt of this paper, send a dollar—or, if he cannot afford a dollar, than a quarter or a dime—to the state campaign fund, the State Committee will be in a position to print and circulate leaflets by the hundred thousand without delay and to put more speakers in the field. This does not apply only to members of the Social Democratic Party. If you are a Socialist, intending to vote the ticket, but are not a member of the party organization, that is all the more reason why you should contribute to its support, since you are not bearing other burdens that the party members bear.

This means YOU.

Send moneys to James N. Wood, Financial Secretary, 64 E. Fourth street, New York City.

P. S.—If you can spare more than a dollar, it will be welcome.

On Election Day, and on that day only, each workingman is as powerful as Morgan or Rockefeller—if he only understands his political interests as well.

The Socialist sharpshooters are "loaded for Baer." Don't let the ammunition run short, boys. Fill up the campaign and agitation funds, to pay for literature and speakers' expenses.

The Chattanooga "Tradesman" says that the "dispassionate statements" of the mill-owners about child labor will the reader more truth than "the statements of irresponsible writers and unbalanced enthusiasts." It is on the same principle that Abram S. Hewitt, director of the Erie and member of the Coal Trust, is in a position to give an "unprejudiced opinion" on the strike.

The "Evening Post" is mightily indignant with ex-Chief Devery, and with what it calls Deveryism and its manifestations. But what made Devery and Deveryism possible, except the corrupting capitalistic system of which the "Evening Post" is so distinguished an exponent and against which it never has anything to say?

Some alleged "labor leaders" in Pennsylvania are advising the workingmen to rebuke Republican Governor Stone for sending the militia against the miners by voting for Democratic ex-Governor Pattison, who sent the militia against the steel workers when he was in office. The proposition reminds one of the poor eel in the fable, who jumped out of the frying-pan into the fire. Pennsylvania workingmen do not have to play such a foolish trick, since John W. Slayton, a workingman, heads the Socialist ticket.

Teddy says it's a "damnable outrage" for a trolley car to run into him, so it is. He and his party are not much concerned about the tens of thousands of railway and street-car workers who are crippled or killed every year in the service and for the pront of the law-breaking railway and trolley companies. No damnable outrage about that. It's business.

Republican Governor Stone of Pennsylvania says we must have compulsory arbitration. Considering that this same Stone worked overtime commissioning deputies for the coal companies and that he ordered out the militia under the command of Shoot-to-Kill Gobin, it is easy to guess what the result of his brand of compulsory arbitration would be, and that the miners want none of it. Let them put a Socialist workingman like Slayton in his place and there would follow some compulsion that the coal companies wouldn't like so well.

"LEST WE FORGET."

M. M. Garland, once president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, writes in the "American Federationist" a sweet Labor Day reverie. He says, among other things:

"While writing these few lines I am sitting in my home within one-half mile of the great Homestead Steel Works. It is the year of the tenth anniversary of the never-to-be-forgotten battle between the Steel Workers and the Pinkerton detectives at the same place. The mill is working, and the clang of the machinery, floating up the valley on the evening air, very much resembles the crash of Winchesters and as the immense ingots of heated steel passing through the rolls catch a few drops of water on their broad surface it is converted instantly into steam, which leaps from this imprisonment emitting a roar that is a very eloquent imitation of the brass cannon in the stirring scenes of that much-regretted occasion. Then comes the thought, the president of this company now lends his presence on the largest and most practical voluntary conciliation board that has been known to the world for the very purpose of making impossible a repetition of such a calamity in our country."

How charming! But does Brother Garland perhaps remember that five years after the time of which he speaks, the scenes of Homestead were repeated at Lattimer, in the same state? Does he remember that two years later still, even more infamous scenes were repeated in Idaho, by the authority of the Federal government? Does he remember that, even as he writes, the military forces of Pennsylvania are in the field, under the direction of the same general who commanded at Homestead, and prepared to re-enact such scenes in the coal-strike field? Does he remember how completely his union, following the timid policy which he practised and which he still advocates, was beaten in its great strike last summer? Does he remember that the great company, whose president is a member of the "conciliation board," is now systematically closing the union mills, one after another, in shameless violation of the pledges it gave when the men went back to work last year? Does he remember that this company is, at the present moment, insisting on reductions of wages in various departments? Does he forget that, through the criminal greed of this company, more iron and steel workers are being needlessly maimed or killed in so-called "accidents" every month than were shot at Homestead, at Lattimer, or in the Coeur d'Alenes?

Does Brother Garland forget all these things? Or does he think that the organized workingmen of this country are so dull of perception and so short of memory that they can forever be fooled into believing that the capitalists are their friends?

"God gives us great scoundrels as texts for anti-slavery sermons," said Wendell Phillips. In view of Mr. Baer's recent outbreaks we might add: "And He gives us great fools for the same purpose." Baer has done a great service for Socialism—but we owe him no thanks for it.

Comrades in the state of New York should lose no opportunity to advertise the name of the Social Democratic Party, its emblem, the Arm and Torch, and its candidates, Hanford and Brown. This is important, in order to avoid any possible confusion when our new voters come to mark their ballots. Any pamphlets used in this state which do not bear the name of the Social Democratic Party should be clearly marked with a rubber stamp with the party name and emblem before being given out. Signs bearing the name of the party and its candidates and the emblem should be displayed at all headquarters and at all meetings and every speaker should call attention to them.

"We are figting the battle of freedom for the individual and his right to labor on his own terms," says "Operator" Baer, self-constituted viceregent of God. The right of the individual to work long hours for low wages, whenever the "operator" will let him work at all, while other individuals stand unwillingly idle until they are hungry enough to offer to work still longer hours for still lower wages if the "operator" will give them the job—this is the sacred right in defense of which the Most Christian Baer is fighting. The issue is plain and clear between this and the demand of the Socialists that every man shall have the right and duty to do his full share of the world's useful work and shall receive his full share of the product, and that the hours of labor shall be reduced in proportion as the improvement of the methods of industry increase the productive powers of labor. It is for workingmen to choose in November. Any vote against Socialism is an endorsement of Baer.

DRAWS THE WRONG LESSON.

The "Boot and Shoe Workers' Journal" has a curious article on "The Illiterate"—curious on account of the way in which the lesson drawn from the facts cited is perverted to suit a preconceived idea in the editor's mind. We quote it in full.

First comes the statement of fact, as follows:

"The late census shows 2,231,336 males of voting age who are illiterate, and an examination proves that nearly all of these are wage-workers. More than one-half of all these voters are disfranchised by reason of educational disqualification on the one hand and the Southern states legislation of recent years which has disfranchised so many colored voters.

"In the South there are 1,301,803 illiterates, and outside of Virginia 795,- 6 are already disfranchised. Virginia has just passed an act which will undoubtedly, in one form or another, be declared constitutional, and will disfranchise forty or fifty thousand more. In addition to all this there are thousands who are unable to vote because of their inability to gain a residence, most states requiring several months continuous residence in order to gain a vote."

From these facts one would suppose that the editor would proceed to point out the necessity for workingmen to use the ballot unitedly at once, before it is too late, to check child labor, establish free and compusory education, and resist the disfranchisement process. But no; instead of a call to action, the editor of the "Boot and Shoe Workers' Journal" gives us a counsel despair. He proceeds:

"These facts ought to be known and fully analyzed by the trade unionists, for it proves beyond all question of doubt that the wage workers, unaided, could win only a dozen states in a political contest. Hence the vast importance of the economic trade union movement, for after all is said, no one really doubts that the trade union movement does mean progress, slow but sure, and it means more than that, it means that the trade union movement is the real and most important movement for the wage-working class now and for some years to come.

"Concentration of industry will further concentrate the workers into not more than a dozen states, and while this makes it impossible to win in the political field, yet this very concentration greatly aids the work of trade organization. Both the political and economic movements are important, and both should be used by the workers for their advancement, but don't run away with the idea that the working class can advance without the trade union movement."

In the closing sentence—added, apparently, as an after thought—the editor qualifies his expressions, and at the same time deprives them of all point—for of course he knows that no one is in any danger of "running away with the idea that the working class can advance without the trade union movement." Those who are most earnest in advocating independent political action of the working class—the members of the Socialist Party—are the very ones who most actively and loyally support the trade unions.

But let us ask the editor of the "Boot and Shoe Workers' Journal" a few questions and offer him a few suggestions:

First, he shows us the appalling extent of illiteracy among the wage-workers and the probability of progressive disfranchisement on this and other grounds. Does he think that illiterate workers are any more likely to succeed by the methods of pure and simple trade unionism than by those of political action? Does he think that education is less necessary to the successful workings of his union than to that of the Socialist Party? If so, he puts a low estimate on his union. And does he suppose that, after the disfranchisement of the workers has been completed, the state and national governments will listen with any more favor to the humble pleas of conservative union lobbyists than they do to-day? Or does he suppose that, while wholesale disfranchisement in the South has been effected simultaneously with a very rapid growth of pure and simple unionism in that region, yet the pure and simple union will be able to say to this tide of political reaction, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther!" and to prevent any further disfranchisement?

Again, he argues that political action of the working class is impracticable, because "the wage-workers, unassisted, could win only in a dozen states in a political contest," and because "concentration of industry will concentrate the workers into not more than a dozen states and * * * this makes it impossible to win in the political field."

We would remind this Doubting Thomas that, even granting his assertion, the "dozen states" of Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Missouri (to say nothing of the Far West)—all of which have a large and growing population of not yet disfranchised wage-workers, in several of which the wage-workers constitute a large majority of the voting population, and in which the Socialist Party has a large and rapidly growing vote—that these dozen states elect two hundred of the three hundred and eighty-six members of the next House of Representatives.

But it is not only in these dozen states that the wage-workers form a steadily increasing proportion of the people. The numerical strength of the working class is growing faster than any other section of the population in practically every state of the union. This is the actual present tendency—not to concentrate the wage-working population in certain parts of the country, but to force a larger and larger part of the people in every part of the country to become wage-workers in mill or factory or mine or railroad or field. And, as a natural result of this tendency, the Socialist Party, founded upon the interests of the wage-working class and guided by its experience, is growing, not alone in the great manufacturing states, but in mining states like Colorado, Idaho, and Montana and lumbering and agricultural states like Minnesota, Washington, Oregon, and California. Our comrade, John C. Chase, who learned Socialism in the ranks of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, who is a staunch trade unionist and a militant working-class Socialist, reports that the farmers of Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas give a ready and favorable hearing to the ideas of the Socialist Party in their strictest form; and the same testimony comes from many other sources.

The extent of illiteracy among the wage-workers and the rapid disfranchisement for which it is made a pretext, so far from giving us reason to neglect class-conscious political action and pin our faith on trade unionism alone, make it imperatively necessary, if we would not see the trade-union movement itself disabled by ignorance within and crushed by tyranny from without, that we should use our full power at the ballot-box and inspire our masters with fear and respect.

And now it is proposed that Congress repeal the tariff duty on paintings and other works of art, because J. Pierpont Morgan, Charles T. Yerkes, and other wealthy men have bought a great many valuable pictures in Europe and want to bring them home. By all means, gentlemen of the Republican party, having made asses of yourselves by imposing the duty, proceed to make monkeys of yourselves by taking it off at the dictate of Morgan and Yerkes. Why should these esthetic gentlemen be taxed for the enjoyment of the art treasures that have been put in their possession by the hard labor of steel workers in Pittsburg and street-car men in Chicago? Repeal the duty, gentlemen of the Republican party. Display your servility as often as you can. All the sooner will the workers learn to understand and to repudiate you.

Owners of cotton mills in the South are kept busy contradicting reports in regard to child labor. With one accord they say: First, we don't employ children; Second, we employ children only in order to discipline them, accustom them to hard work, and teach them to obey; Third, we employ children solely because they like working in the mills better than playing at home. Consistency is a virtue with which nature has not very liberally endowed those chivalric Southern gentlemen and pious New England citizens who jointly own the cotton mills.

A BIT OF KINDLY ADVICE.

From an editorial in the Scranton "Catholic Light" of September 5 we take the following words:

"Our working classes are exceedingly well behaved and, despite the efforts of anarchist and Socialist, they are almost free from the desire to burn or destroy which so frequently curses striking laborers on the continent of Europe."

Our purpose in quoting this passage is not to defend the oppressed workingmen of Europe from the slanderous charge brought against them. The misrepresentations of this Scranton rush-light will not do much harm to the toilers of Germany and France, of Russia and Italy, of Hungary or Spain, who have shown such heroism under the bitter persecutions heaped upon them.

Our purpose is not to deny the insinuation made by the "Catholic Light" that Socialists seek to incite striking workingmen to "burn and destroy." The "Catholic Light" knows what a n absolute falsehood that insinuation is; and, what is more important, the hundred and fifty thousand striking miners of Pennsylvania know that Socialism stands for peace and honesty as against force and fraud.

The only reason why we should quote or comment upon the passage in question is to give our contemporary, the "Catholic Light," a piece of friendly advice.

"Honesty is the best policy," not to put it on any higher moral grounds. A lie is sure to be detected—especially a lie about matters open to general observation, such as the policy of the Socialist Party. The majority of the striking miners are adherents of the Catholic Church, and the editor of the "Light" may think that, in the name of Catholicism, he can induce them to close their eyes to fact and to believe all that he chooses to say.

He will find himself mistaken. With but few exceptions these men, whatever their religious opinions or beliefs, are lovers of truth and uprightness; and they are men who have learned, by hard experience, to observe and to think for themselves.

As a simple matter of policy, we sincerely advise the "Catholic Light" to refrain at least from palpable falsehood and, if it must fight Socialism, to do so by manly argument. Its present policy can only discredit and injure the church it claims to represent.

In the newly established Children's Court of this city a little girl of ten years and a boy of nine were hauled up, charged with having been found devouring garbage in Gansevoort Market. Respectable society is embarassed, puzzled, dumbfounded in the face of such total depravity. Why children should eat from a garbage-barrel instead of going to Sherry's or the Waldorf is quite inexplicable. Respectable society will probably take the children from their parents and give them over to the tender mercies of a charitable institution—for respectable society has too great a horror of paternalism, too much regard for the sacredness of the home to think of adapting the Socialist program and guaranteeing to the parents the right to work and the full product of their labor.

ALL FOR BAER.

("The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in his infinite wisdom has given control of the property interests of the country."—Mr. Baer.)

In the prehistoric ages, when the world was a ball of mist—
A seething swirl of something unknown in the planets' list;
When the earth was vague with vapor and formless, and dark, and void—
The sport of the wayward comet—the jibe of the asteroid—
Then the singing stars of morning chanted soft: "Keep out of there!
Keep off that spot which is sizzling hot—it is making coal for Baer."

When the pterodactyl ambled, or fluttered, or swam, or jumped,
And the plesiosaurus rambled, all careless of what he bumped,
And the other old-time monsters that thrived on the land and sea,
And didn't know what their names were any more than to-day do we—
Wherever they went they heard it: "You fellows keep out of there—
That place which shakes and quivers and quakes—it is making coal for Baer."

The carboniferous era consumed but a million years;
It started when earth was shedding the last of her baby tears,
When still she was swaddled softly in clumsily tied-on clouds,
When stars from the shops of Nature were being turned out in crowds;
But high o'er the favored section this sign said to all: "Beware!
Stay back of the ropes that surround these slopes—they are making coal for Baer!"

We ought to be glad and joyous, we ought to be filled with glee
That aeons ago the placard was nailed to the ancient tree,
That millions and millions of ages—back farther than Adam and Eve—
The ichthyosaurus halted, and speedily took his leave,
And so it was all saved for us, the spot with the sign: "Beware!
This plant is run by the earth and sun and is making coal for Baer!"

—W. D. Nesbit, in Baltimore American.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

He said as he heeded the highwayman's threat
And straightway uplifted each hand,
"This gives me the best illustration I've met
Of the law of supply and demand."

Current Literature

All books and pamphlets mentioned in this column may be obtained through the Socialist Literature Company, 184 William street, New York.

The "Socialist" of Seattle is running a series of articles under the heading "The A B C of Socialism" by Simons, Harriman, Vail, Debs, and others of the best Socialist writers in the country. The "Socialist" is a bright and vigorous paper, and deserves the abundant success that seems to be assured to it.

The September number of the "Craftsman" creditably completes the first year of that admirable magazine; and it brings the promise of an improvement in the second year's work as well as the announcement of a considerable extension of the field of the United Crafts. Our good wishes and our hopes are certainly with this enterprise, which, better than any of the other attempts that have been made in this country, embodies the constructive application of Socialist principle and feeling to art and artizanship.

From J. W. Mackail's address on William Morris, delivered nearly two years ago before the Hammersmith Socialist Society and now reprinted by Mosher of Portland as the September number of the "Bibelot," we quote this most effective and, on the whole, truthful summing up of certain important phases of the social life of to-day:

"It was said to me lately, by one whose memory goes back with clearness over fifty years, that one great difference between that time and this is the general loss of high spirits, of laughter and the enjoyment of life. If that be so, it is not without reasons. We may see all around us how vainly people try to drown in increasing luxury and excitement the sense that joy and beauty are dwindling out of life; with what pitiful eagerness they dress themselves up in pretended enthusiasms, which seem to bring little joy to the maker or the user. The uneasy feeling is abroad that the Nineteenth Century, which has done such wonderful things, and from which things so much more wonderful were hoped, has been on the whole a failure. Fifty years ago men's minds were full of ideals. Some of them seem to have come to nothing. Others have received a strangely disenchanting fulfilment. Cinder heaps smoulder where there once were beacon fires. Everywhere is reaction triumphant. The chosen leaders of the people proclaim, not in England alone, that there is no more room left in public affairs for magnanimity. The strongest intellects range themselves on the side of force and riches. Religion has come to terms with the princes of this world. It was made a reproach, not without reason, against the revolutionarism of a century ago, that it went abroad with the cry, 'Be my brother, or I will kill you!' The modern spirit has substituted a more terrible gospel. What capitalism says now, to people all too ready to accept the command, is, 'Be my slave, and you shall kill your brother.' With a wider understanding of what a capitalist society involves, there seems to have come a dulling of men's consciences. Recent events have shown that even its more vivid and drastic methods of fire and sword are losing power to shock the careless cruelty of those who are at once its agents and its victims."

It would hardly be ingenuous for us to omit the sentences that follow:

"Even the movement to which Morris devoted the best part of his life has dwindled and darkened; it has lost its high hopes and seems tending, in France and Germany as well as in England, to the mere gas and water socialism which does not lie beyond the scope of an enlightened capitalism and can point with confidence to dividends as the test of its doctrines."

While, of course, much evidence could be cited to support this judgment as to the Socialist movement, we do not think that it is founded on a broad enough or a deep enough view. Assuredly it is not true of Socialism in America. New Zealandism, Tom L. Johnsonism, Golden Rule Jonesism—the American forms of business-like "gas and water socialism" of which Mackail speaks—are on the wane, relatively if not absolutely; the whole trend of working-class thought and feeling is toward revolutionary Socialism, not lost in the clouds, having its feet planted on the earth, but with its face lifted to the sun. Nor does it appear that the reactionary tendencies in the Socialist movement of Europe are so strong as some of its timid friends fear and its timid foes hope.

In the growth of Socialism—a growth both in numbers and in wisdom, and not accompanied by any general or lasting deterioration of ideals—lies the one consideration that tempers or overcomes the gloom of the first passage which we have quoted. The social conscience is not dead; it is only undergoing a rapid and violent transformation, which renders it partially and temporarily dull.

Ryan Walker, the noted cartoonist of New York, is preparing for the "Coming Nation" a remarkable series of cartoons, to be printed in booklet form, entitled "The Social Hell." They will picture as only a skillful pen can the horrors of our industrial system.

A VOICE FROM THE GRAVE.

The Populists of Illinois, in convention assembled, have issued a party declaration in which appears this dignified statement of an undoubted truth: "While the Republican party does something and raises hell, the Democratic party raises hell and does nothing." To which it might be added that the Pop. party has not even vitality enough left to make any infernal disturbance.

——Capitalists and Labor have no common interests. The interest of Capital is to swallow Labor. Yet it is labor that makes the capital, and labor ought to own it. Socialism will bring this to pass.—Morrison I. Swift.

Our Esteemed Contemporaries (and OTHERS)

Cincinnati Chronicle (labor paper.)

"We are here by divine order and to do you good." This is the language of tyranny since the Christian era. Jefferson Davis, speaking for the slave oligarchy of the South, said that "slavery was established by decree of Almighty God," and that "through the portal of slavery alone has the descendant of the graceless son of Noah ever entered the temple of civilization." And now has President Baer, one of the band of righteous who have inherited the hard-coal earth of Pennsylvania, in behalf of his God's trust, made this following assumption: * * *

This man evidently believes that most men come into the world with saddles on their backs and a few others booted and spurred to ride them.

Bay City Evening Record (labor paper.)

The order "Shoot to kill" issued to the soldiers by General Gobin in the anthracite coal strike regions sounds like military despotism. * * * "Shoot to kill is not a pleasant sentence in the ears of an enlightened liberty-loving people. It is especially aggravating when given in order to protect a little band of soulless robbers in possession of their loot which they have taken as spoils from the public generally. The workingmen of the Quaker State should remember that their vote elected the man who, when they ask for more bread and civilized conditions instead of using the authority so gained to compel the coal kings to come to reason, gives them a "Stone" in the shape of cold lead from the troops who are mustered, sworn, and paid to serve the people. * * *

Time has come when the voice of the toiling millions of this country should be heard at the pol's administering a rebuke to those who allow such orders as "Shoot to kill." When the sons of toil cannot make a struggle for the living, which by right of the sweat of their brow is theirs as an inherent possession, without fear of being shot down, liberty is dead and the ogre of greedy trusts may gloat over its grave.

The Standard (Baptist), Chicago.

It is too soon as yet to formulate in definite terms the attitude of "the Church" towards the labor question. Only within ten years or so have any large number of Christian leaders in this country emphasized the fact that there should be any attitude at all. Until that time it was the prevailing impression that the Church should welcome workingmen of all sorts to its services, politely ignoring real and imaginary "social classes" established by men who wear white collars every day, and should try to save their souls. Gradually the churches have awakened to the fact that the gulf between them and the manual workers in the great cities is wider and deeper than can be bridged either by a tactful toleration of overalls or by a tender solicitude for "souls." Same few churches have learned by this time that the workingmen are not half so thin-skinned about their clothes or their grammar as was supposed—that they wear the clothes that they prefer to wear, and are in no wise frightened or disconcerted when in company of "biled shirts" and patent leather. They don't worry about these things. The reason they don't come to church—the reason they would give if they analyzed their prejudice—is because, according to their observation, the Church represents a class of well-meaning people who know nothing at first hand about the rights and wrongs of modern industry; who are most oracular when they are most ignorant; who patronize when they would be sympathetic, and insult when they would advise.

This is what your Socialist means when he says that "the churches are run in the interests of the capitalist." Many have tried to refute him by showing that men of wealth are in a small minority in the churches. But a man does not need to be wealthy to side with the capitalist. It is true in our cities without a question, that the most of the men in the churches are either in mercantile business for themselves or are employees of mercantile establishments. Their interests—their immediate, selfish interests—are at variance in many cases with the interests of the man who works by the day. So long as industry moves smoothly the merchant's high prices and good profits are in no way interfered with by the laborer's good wages. But when the laborer begin to protest against the established order, to demand a larger share of the profits of his work, better conditions of labor, freedom from oppressive restrictions, and inequalities such as are now so conspicuous in the anthracite mines, then the man with the white collar turns capitalist—whether he has a dollar in bank or not. He turns capitalist in spirit, looks at the matter from the standpoint of the investor and the consumer to the exclusion of the standpoint of the producer, and begins to use hard words. The less he knows the more he talks. And the much-berated striker stays at home on Sunday and smokes his pipe.

Chicago Socialist.

Henry George, the younger, who writes on labor topics at so much per column in the "Record-Herald," reached a Single Tax climax last Sunday when he stated that "Labor deserves as much consideration as Capital." This is just about the limit of the Single Taxer, who always gets jumbled up on cause and effect. Capital being, according to the definition of economists, wealth used to produce profit, the Socialist contends is entitled to no consideration at all. Capital is a result of labor and is used by its possessors to keep in subjection and further exploit the wage worker. It may be deserving of consideration by the Single Taxer, but the Socialist has a different philosophy.

Bay City Record (labor paper.)

That sordid money king and gambling speculator, America's, if not the world's greatest bandit and looter of the people, could not be expected to side with the anthracite striking miners. Birds of his kind seek their own feather. His sympathies, quite naturally, were with the coal baron vultures who prey upon the homes and their inmates of this country in the cold and inclement winter weather. Either Morgan must be compelled to disgorge his dishonestly, through legally pilfered millions or the government must be given into his hand and a crown placed upon his head and the people forced at the point of steel and cold lead, to cry: "Live forever, oh, king of bandits!" Which will it be?

Union Picket, Dayton, O.

From Milwaukee comes a request that will, we predict, be taken up and seriously discussed in nine in ten organizations connected with labor bodies. It is a proposition to begin the formation of a national political action, based on the right of the wage-earners to the full measure of that which they create.

Such action is highly commendable provided the promoters take advantage of the class-conscious machinery already in operation in every state in the union. The Socialists have perfected an organization pledged to the emancipation of the wage-slave, and the thorough system they have adopted will quickly bring the desired results, if all wage-earners will accept their plans and vote to put in power the candidates of that party. To endorse any capitalistic party is suicidal, only puts back the movement to emancipate the workers of the world.

Columbus Trades Record.

Some labor leaders go into conniption fits about politics being in the labor press, but find no fault about being in partizan politics themselves. If they be so anxious to eliminate politics from a labor newspaper, they should set a good example by first eliminating partizan politics from themselves. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Consistency is a jewel.

Saginaw Exponent.

When the honorable General "Hell Roaring Jake" Smith issued his infamous order in the Philippines to "make Samar a wilderness" and to spare "no males over ten years of age," it was thought that the limit had been reached, but that there might possibly have been some excuse in the troublous conditions surrounding a soldier whose orders were to conquer at any cost.

What shall be said, however, of the "shoot-to-kill" order of Brigadier-General J. P. S. Gobin of Pennsylvania? In elaborating the order and explaining who are subject to arrest for taunting the soldiers or likely to be fired upon for assaulting them, Gobin writes to J. W. Maloy, chief burgess of Lansford:

"I mean this order to include everybody. Even women and children are not exempt."

And these people are not "insurrectos," not in rebellion against the authority of the United States, but are the mothers, wives and children of striking miners, fired by the spirit of just indignation at the exhibition of military force on behalf of the anthracite coal monopoly in the effort to beat down the resistance of the workers to unjust conditions.

And that is the sole object. If it were possible for the anthracite coal miners to move out of the territory en masse and secure other employment, the operators would throw every obstacle in their way; but knowing that this cannot be, they are content to goad the strikers to desperation in the hope of provoking such degree of violence as will call for military interference.

General Gobin, who issued the orders quoted, is the same genial gentleman who was in command during the massacre of miners by deputies at Lattimer, Pa. He is an appointee of Governor Stone, a tool of Boss Quay, Republican senator and politician. This year Stone retires and Quay has nominated Judge Pennypacker for governor, and the working people will be called upon to make choice between him and ex-Governor Pattison, who was the chief executive of Pennsylvania during the Homestead strike and sent in the troops that shot down Carnegie's striking steel workers.

Of course, there is J. W. Slayton, a carpenter, and brilliant student of the labor question, who is a candidate on the Socialist ticket; but it is too much to expect that either steel workers or miners will give him their undivided support.

New Castle Tribune (labor paper.)

President Roosevelt, in one of his much advertised speeches the other day, said that the state could not carry along the weak; that personally he felt much sympathy for the weak man, but that it would not benefit him any to carry such a man and it would not benefit the state; the weak will simply have to succumb and the inexorable law of the survival of the fittest will prevail.

President Roosevelt is a great man. The editor of the "Tribune" does not consider himself capable of debating with him, but this statement he does not think is entirely correct. Engineers tell us that a chain is just as strong as its weakest link. So a state is just as strong as its weakest citizen. The Chief Magistrate says the state cannot carry the weaklings. Whey then do we have a protective tariff? The party to which Mr. Roosevelt belongs has been preaching protective tariff since its birth in the interests of "our infant industries." They were weaklings, said the campaign orators, who had to be carried by the state.

The President said the state could not carry any man. Why are states constituted? It is not for the protection of the strong, for the strong need no protection. The fundamental idea of government is the protection of the weak. Any one man is weak and it is the union of its citizens which makes a nation strong. In the early days of society, just after our forefathers discovered that there was more to life than swinging in the limbs of a cocoanut tree, government was formed to protect the weaker members. It is upon this idea that all government rests, the idea that it is the duty of the state to carry the weaker ones.

READ THIS AND PASS IT ON.

PARTY NOTES.

State Organizer Mailly spoke on the streets at Brockton last week and had one of the best meetings held there this year.

Comrade Touvin of Boston is sending in subscriptions for The Worker regularly, these days.

Two men in Schuylkill County, Pa., who affiliated themselves with the Socialist Party either in bad faith or without knowing just what they were doing, and who were proposed as candidates on the county ticket, weakened and went to work in the mines. Their names were refused consideration in the county convention and they were turned down hard. "It was clearly demonstrated," says the Tamaqua "Recorder," "that scabbism and Socialism will not be permitted to mix." The "Recorder" adds that the party is growing rapidly in that county, its principles meeting with favor among all honest producers except the farmers, most of whom are too closely wedded to old traditions to accept the ideas of a new time. But even they will come in time, for the capitalists will force them to it.

Comrade Caldwell spoke in Dayton on Labor Day. After his speech he took up a collection, netting about $20, which was sent to the strike fund of the United Mine Workers.

The comrades of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., are getting out a little campaign paper called the "Laborer." In the September number Comrade Hirshfield writes both entertainingly and instructively on "The Political Circus." Reports from various parts of the state indicate that the growth of the vote of the Socialist Party (or, as it is officially entitled in Minnesota, the Social Democratic Party), will not be confined to the Twin Cities.

A fool mayor at Port Angeles, Wash., ordered the arrest of State Organizer Latimer the other day for speaking on the street. Comrade Latimer insisted on a trial and proved that the street was not blockaded and that he was within his rights under the law. The justice discharged him—and the mayor went on a fishing excursion, it is said, to escape ridicule.

Comrade Weiss of Mott, Cal., sends $2 to this office to pay for having copies of The Worker sent to the striking miners. Four hundred copies have accordingly been sent to four comrades in the strike field for distribution.

Two new party papers have come to our desk—the "Utah Socialist," an eight-page weekly, published at Salt Lake City, whose first number bears date August 20; and the "Cleveland County Socialist," from Norman, Okla., whose third number is dated September 2. The former costs 50 cents and the latter $1 a year.

Comrade Louis Gonzion of Charleroi, Pa., has been in the strike field at and around Carbondale. He says The Worker is well liked and that the miners' headquarters is "a regular Socialist reading room." The strikers, he reports, are so firm in their fight, so confident of winning, that they hardly discuss the strike itself, but talk eagerly of Socialism and of what the votes of the working class can accomplish. Comrade Gonzion spoke at Simpson, Archbald, Jermyn, Vandling, Forest City, and Throop, as well as in Carbondale. At the latter place he was arrested for speaking on the street; he insisted on trial, but the Mayor in his wisdom decided that he was "guilty" (though of what offense was not stated) and then ordered his discharge. When Comrade Gonzion came out from the Mayor's office he was greeted with cheers and was immediately offered the free use of two halls for meetings. "When the time comes," he writes, "'A Socialist Mayor' will be the slogan."

Socialists of the Sixth Congressional district of Nebraska have chosen J. C. L. Wisely of Custer County, editor of the "New Era," as their candidate. Legislative and county nominations were also made.

Comrade Mills has been in Idaho this week, speaking at Idaho Falls on Tuesday, Pocatello on Wednesday, and Boise City on Thursday. Comrade Chase spoke at Idaho Falls last Saturday and at Rigby on Sunday.—Bingham and Fremont Counties have put tickets in the field.

The Trades and Labor Council of Livingston, Mont., by an overwhelming vote, has endorsed the action of the A. L. U. convention at Denver and advised all members of affiliated organizations to vote the Socialist ticket.

Comrade H. Gaylord Wilshire addressed a street meeting at Fostoria, O., on Friday evening, September 5. The questions and answers caused many people to laugh until the tears came to their eyes. A "character" in the audience was the cause for the hilarity. The meeting was a success. On Saturday evening Comrade Wilshire spoke in Noble's Opera House at Tiffin, and it was a meeting long to be remembered. Among those who asked questions were a congressman and three lawyers. The congressmen seemed to be satisfied with the first round, but the egotism and persistency of a young lawyer caused no end of applause and laughter. The person who attempts to set down on Comrade Wilshire through asking questions has a job on his hands.

The Central Labor Union of Springfield, Mass., has adopted resolutions calling on all workingmen to vote the ticket of the Socialist Party.

Comrade W. J. White of New Castle writes from the strike field: "Carbon County is going to elect its entire Socialist ticket at the coming election. In fact it looks as if it had rained red buttons. Old men and young men, it is just the same; they are talking it and everywhere I can state with Comrade Swift that if the comrades throughout the county knew how enthusiastic the miners are they would throw their resources and speakers into the anthracite coal fields until after election, for here is where Socialism can make the greatest gains."

H. Gaylord Wilshire spoke at Fremont, O., on September 4, to the largest audience which has ever greeted a Socialist lecturer at this place.

"The Slogan" is the name of a new Socialist paper published at Grand Junction, Colo.

Comrade Geo. J. Alcott, of Bridgewater, Mass., writes: "Every issue of your paper makes me desire to do something." And while Comrade Alcott is possessed with this feeling he goes right out and gets some subscriptions.

F. O. MacCartney, Socialist representative in the Massachusetts Legislature, will speak in Bridgewater, Mass., Town Hall, on September 16.

Illinois comrades are active. New locals have recently been organized at Harvey and Aurora.—Many street meetings are being held in Chicago.

"La Hormiga De Oro" is one of the latest additions to the ever growing list of Socialist publications. It appears weekly, is printed partly in Spanish and partly in English and is published at Albuquerque, New Mexico. Straight, clearcut Socialism is advocated in its columns.

Toledo comrades are placarding the town with the following notice printed in large type on red paper: "WANTED, 25,000 workingmen and their wives to study SOCIALISM, and learn the cause of their own slavery!" This "painting the town red" is mostly done after nightfall.

Frank A. Sieverman of Rochester, N. Y., was the Labor Day speaker at St. Louis.

In Connecticut agitation is progressing. The branches in the First Congressional District met in Rockville on September 1 and nominated Robert W. Jamieson of Hartford for Congress and Carl H. Kretschmar for Sheriff of Tolland County. Nominations for State Senator will be made by Hartford, Stafford and, Rockville.—The State Organizer visited Southington and Wallingford during the past week. In the first named town a branch will be formed soon. An excellent open-air meeting was held in Wallingford Friday. About two hundred persons were present and ten subscriptions for party papers were secured.—The meetings on New Haven Green Saturday evenings will be continued until election. Comrade L. D. Mayes of New York will be the speaker on September 13.—American Branch, New Haven, meets at 746 Chapel street, Saturday, September 13. All members should try to attend this meeting.

The comrades of Local Greater Pittsburg have organized a Socialist literary society, whose purpose is to establish reading rooms for the propaganda of Socialism. The first reading room will be opened in the first legislative district in about two weeks.

A new Italian Socialist paper has appeared, "Il Movimento Sociale," published in Los Angeles, Cal., by Comrade Colombo.

The Los Angeles "Socialist" hired an automobile to carry its display in the Labor Day parade and placed the following placards upon it:

"THIS MACHINE WAS MADE BY WAGE-WORKERS. DO THEY OWN IT? WHY NOT? READ THE 'SOCIALIST' AND FIND OUT. THE WORKING CLASS WILL WALK, TILL IT VOTES TO RIDE. MORE MACHINERY! MORE CHLD LABOR! WHY? READ THE 'SOCIALIST' AND FIND OUT."

But the automobile only carried half the object lesson, the balance being placarded on the wheelbarrow that follows. The wheelbarrow's signs read:

"COMPETITION S THE LIFE OF TRADE.

" EVERY WAGE-WORKER CAN OWN A MACHINE LIKE THIS.

"CHEAP FREIGHT RATES TO NEW YORK BY THIS BARROW."

Howard H. Caldwell of Philadelphia is now working in the state of Ohio and has been very successful in holding good meetings. He made a tour taking in the cities of Cleveland, Toledo, Kenton, and Dayton, and is now on a return trip, in which he has so far covered Xenia, Springfield, Urbania, and Bellefontaine. His future dates are: Kenton, Sept. 12; Bucyrus, 13; Mansfield, 14 and 15; Findlay, 16; Fostoria, 17; Tiffin, 18; Fremont, 19; and Toledo, 20 and 21. Other dates to be made to continue the trip and visits will in all probability be made to Wauseon, Edgerton, and Montpelier. This route may be changed slightly, but not to any extent, and Comrade Caldwell will make all these dates unless something happens to prevent. A drawing feature of his meetings in Dayton resulted when the papers came out and accused him of all sorts of bad things, and he was supposed to be lynched upon arrival in the city. These reports were started by an A. F. of L. organizer, Thos. Flynn by name, who left the town just previous to Caldwell's arrival. The result of the whole affair was the gathering of an immense crowd on Labor Day at the fair grounds to hear him. He did fine work and gave one of the clearest expositions of Socialism ever heard here. He captured the crowd and for two hours he held their undivided attention, when Comrade Trautman of the Brewery Workers' International spoke for some time in German. He was in good trim and held the larger part of Caldwell's crowd for one hour longer. Socialism, as a result, has taken a boost here and the street meetings of Caldwell were well attended.

Comrade Neben is spending this week in the coal-strike field, speaking for the party.

The Socialist Party convention of the Second Congressional District of Kansas was held at Fort Scott on Monday, and nominated Francis A. Byrne of Kansas City.

The financial report of State Secretary Critchlow of Ohio for August shows receipts for the month of $137.76; balance on hand August 1, $28.76; expenses for the month, $162.43; balance Sept. 1, $4.09.—During the month of August the State Committee arranged about forty-five meetings for Hayes, Wilshire, Geiger, and Caldwell.—Four new locals were formed during the month—at Bellaire, Elmwood Place, Pomeroy, and Hamilton, with forty-four charter members. Locals Delaware and Cuyahoga Falls lapsed, but the latter will probably soon be revived.—The work of the State Secretary's office involved the sending out of 1,374 letters, postal cards, and packages.—Several locals failed to send in monthly reports and comrades are requested to see that this is not further neglected. Several locals complained of having to send a duplicate report to the National Secretary, and Secretary Critchlow states that both copies may be sent to him and he will forward duplicates.—Ten of the twenty-one Congressional districts in the state—the First, Second, Third, Seventh, Ninth, Thirteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-first—have so far reported nominations. If there are any who have nominated and not sent in the notification they are requested to do so at once. Nomination petitions for Congressmen must be filed not later than Oct. 9. Comrades should not wait till the last day, but should file papers as early as possible.—Ten counties have reported nominations — Cuyahoga, Clark, Hamilton, Lucas, Montgomery, Richland, Summit, Scioto, and Stark. Nomination petitions for county offices must be filed not later than twenty days previous to the election. Thus the last day for filing is October 14.

Comrade Carr of New Brighton, Pa., writes that John W. Slayton, our candidate for Governor of that state, spoke there and made a most favorable impression. After the street meeting he was invited up to the Trades Council, where he gave a strong and practical talk on unionism and politics. Comrade White of New Castle also spoke in New Brighton on Labor Day and "certainly scored a point—or several of them—for Socialism."

Local Philadelphia meets Sunday evening, Sept. 14, at headquarters, 1022 Arch street. Important business.

New York State.

Local Catskill is arranging a large ratification to be held later in the month and will have Charles H. Vail its speaker. Comrade Brown will speak there in October.

Many locals in this state are asking the State Committee to send Comrade Jonas to address German meetings.

A new local will soon be formed in Wells, N. Y.

Local Syracuse wents Mother Jones to speak there.

Alexander Jonas, Morris Hillquit, J. Schorr, and John Sparge have been nominated for National Committeeman from New York.

Comrade Hanford spoke before an audience of about seven hundred persons in Hornellsville last Monday. After he had concluded his speech questions were asked, showing a lively interest in the subject. His answers were quick and clear and gave great satisfaction to the hearers. The party will be greatly strengthened here by Comrade Hanford's visit.

Comrade Chas. Ufert of Jersey City addressed an open-air meeting at Cold Spring, N. Y., Tuesday evening, September 2. Although the meeting had not been advertised, a good sized audience soon gathered and even uniformed striker shooters from West Point stayed to the end of his address, which lasted about an hour and a half. Comrade Ufert presented the true situation in the coal strike region and the way he exposed capitalism met with applause which shows that the time is favorable for our agitation. If we had a local speaker to work up Putnam County there would be without doubt a good advance in the S. D. P. vote at the coming election. The next speaker to visit Cold Spring will be Comrade Vail and the local comrades should watch The Worker for future announcement of the date.
